Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1939-40 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

MEANWHILE the EXHIBITOR?

HOLLYWOOD has bought a truce with Labor for two and a half months. The face of the agreement would indicate that meanwhile Production will be engaged in compiling figures to prove to Labor on February 15 next that scales are too high to be consistent with the revenues of the industry. Specifically the agreement says "an opportunity to show that the condition of this industry makes a continuance of wage increases impossible".

That is going to be a lot of bookkeeping, a great array of statistics. It promises to toss into the balances of judgment, before a labor union tribunal, all components: payrolls, talent values, markets, budgets, costs.

This is a not so very indirect invitation to labor to become executive, a member of the directorate—with, it would appear, rather more weight and authority than directors often have.

In this is a special floration of a movement that has been underway generally with respect to industry throughout the career of the New Deal.

The motion picture industry can have no choice but to travel with the trends of its America.

Meanwhile, when February 15 arrives there will be at stake on the table something more than the apparent issue between Labor and Production. The Exhibitor will not be seen there in person, nor will the Stockholder, nor the Bondholder, nor some hundreds of thousands of unorganized workers and investors, but dollars and their futures will be there in the pot.

In theory it would all be quite simple. Labor, in the person, perhaps, of William Bioff, would represent the worker, and Production, as capitalist and employer, would represent all the rest. But in practice it is not quite that simple.

Production can only fractionally at best represent Exhibition.

The relations between Production and Exhibition, through Distribution, long have been and today continue acutely to be in the crucible of regulation.

Now, and forever, in the realms of "planned economy" obtrudes the issue of "whose plan?" and "whose economy?".

AS WE WERE SAYING

FROM time to time you may have noticed mention on this and related pages of some questioning of the organization now known as Film Audiences for Democracy, as to its stand on totalitarian causes, including communism. The questioning was oft reiterated, without response or answer, until at last Dr. Henry Pratt Fairchild, new president, sent a letter to Mr. Martin Quigley directing attention to a footnote on their letterhead.

Neither the publisher nor the editor of MOTION PICTURE HERALD were much impressed by the footnote, and remarks to that effect appeared here.

There seemed to be a remarkable, if not surprising, reluctance to make declaration that might offend "Red" components or sympathizers in the membership.

Now comes "Film Survey", organ of Film Audiences for Democracy, in its December issue, making a familiar sort of sally in saying: "It appears to us that both Mr. Ramsaye and Mr. Quigley are more interested in the fine aristocratic sport known as 'red baiting' than they are in veracity."

In our aristocratic judgment neither "red-baiting" nor "Kuhn-hunting" qualify as real sports. However, the opinion of social utility in such pursuits is likely to be colored by one's place in the chase—especially if up a tree or in a hole.

The discomfort of facing invitation to declare position on communism is interestingly, even naively, disclosed in this outgiving of "Film Survey" when it sets down :

> "The editors of Motion Picture Herald offer shopworn phrases, attempt to blanket the constructive force of Film Audiences for Democracy, cognizant of the fact that no membership organization can divide its strength either by defending individual members or by issuing statements in fields which are not its province."

So it is a question of "dividing its strength". That seems an admission that the organization is not much concerned where "its strength" comes from.

And as for the matter being "not its province"—how would one justify organization to honestly uphold democracy, along with a boast of indifference about the political beliefs of advisors, directors, members, supporters?

THE piece is not signed, but it was written by someone who has access to Dr. Fairchild's mail. And as for that taunt about "shopworn phrases" we have an aristocratic sense of literary warrant because of the persistently repetitive nature of the provocations. Our phrases that displease Dr. Fairchild are shopworn for the same reason that a musket gets hot. Those phrases will be worn some more.

If a position on communism is not to be taken, and emphatically, if Film Audiences for Democracy dare not offend the Reds, finds it must pussyfoot about them, let them "bore from within" (shopworn), lest it "divide its strength", they might have said so and saved the wear and tear on our phrases.

Reference is made to Mr. Quigley as "spawner of the Legion of Decency . . . and inspirer of the Production Code, an important barrier to full artistic expression".

The use of the word "spawn" and its derivatives for purposes of deprecation is shopworn and a device of "baiters". Aside from that Mr. Quigley didn't do it. He was indeed the father of the Production Code, a self-regulative device internal to the motion picture industry, and in the making considerably before the Legion took its rise externally and elsewhere as any casual examination of newspaper files will reveal.

Concerning the observation that the Code is "an important barrier to full artistic expression"—the motion picture has not found it so. A reading of it would disclose that it imposes upon its subscribers and the screen only that same set of mores that obtain in respectable American homes, in Dr. Fairchild's no doubt. If "full artistic expression" means the latrine language of some current literature of alleged social import, the Code is indeed a barrier.

An interesting and most objective consideration of the Production Code as a self-regulative instrument of the motion picture industry can be found by the scholarly Dr. Fairchild and his staff in the Yale Law Journal for November under the

"Wind" $18,571,428

SHAPES AND PROCEDURES in distribution of "Gone with the Wind" crystallized this week with a special sales conference of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer forces in Chicago—the first national sales convention ever held for a single picture.

Recognition of the revolutionary impact of this four-million-dollar-three-hours-and-forty-minutes production was manifest in arrangements for try-out in thirty-two key cities, with multiple concurrent presentations, a 70 per cent booking scale, fixed higher admissions.

M-G-M admits expectancy of a gross of $10,000,000 to $13,000,000.

That means, or would mean, box office admissions of from $14,285,714 to $18,571,428.

The estimated average admission price of $0.82 would require a total attendance of 17 to 22 million persons, or something like one in four of all the alleged 85,000,000 patrons.

Exhibition is tremendously interested. The long line of controls and specifications, based on assumptions of the power and authority of the product, raised questions of the autonomy of retail showmanship.

An intensification of trade questions now abundantly at issue was seen.

Meanwhile there was, to be sure, wide appreciation of the special problems arising from the extraordinary nature of the whole undertaking, its remarkable history of production and investment. Here appeared at last an exploration of the question of how big and how important a motion picture can be.

Out in Chicago, in an entirely unrelated discussion, Barney Balaban observed that when pictures are big enough "theatres have rubber walls".

Meanwhile, with the great adventures of "Gone with the Wind" in the market of public entertainment yet ahead, some consideration was had of what the influence of its success would be upon the production patterns of Hollywood. It is held, by observers, that such persons as Darryl Zanuck, the Brothers Warner, and Cecil DeMille will not sit idly by if they find a new trend to the stupendously stupendous.

Despite sundry off-stage declarations, all insisting that the "Wind" plan is entirely de novo, some with long memories were reminded that back yonder in May of 1932 Al Lichtman, then with United Artists, on the platform of the Motion Picture Club, enunciated a notion of exclusive runs and "raising admission prices to aid exhibitors". He and the late Felix Feist discussed "reclassification of theatres".

Among the cognoscenti of Broadway, entertainment was had from an editorial expression of John C. Flinn's in Variety, in which, after much discourse on the "Wind" campaign, he summed up: "Perhaps it is just a gag to stir up some interest in the premieres." This, you'll be knowing, from the same Mr. Flinn who once approached New York in a covered wagon. He is trusting, but suspicious.

Meanwhile, one thing is certain: "Gone with the Wind" will not be double billed, for a while, not even with "Hurricane". (See page 17.)

Leon D. Netter, vice-president of Paramount Theatres Service Corporation, corporate theatre subsidy, on Wednesday estimated that Paramount's Max Fleischer feature cartoon of "Gulliver's Travels", second feature cartoon in the history of motion pictures, will have a domestic gross of $3,000,000.

Paramount will require two weeks' playing time of every pre-release engagement but will not set any other special sales handling.

Television Cuts Price

TELEVISION progresses, notwithstanding assorted pessimists and even Federal Communications commissioners. Take RCA's word for it.

The Radio Corporation, largest manufacturer of radio sets in the world, reported this week that it had sold approximately 100 sets after a big two-months' campaign in Newburgh, Poughkeepsie, and Middletown, New York.

Prices on the sets had been reduced sharply. The apparent object was to ascertain if the public would react to price reduction.

The sponsors are reported to feel that the purchase of 100 or so sets in the area, in two months, conveys a message, when placed against the fact that only about 1,000 sets have been sold in all of the New York City area (with about 30 times the population) since May of this year.

They say that set prices will be much lower in 1940.

AS WE WERE SAYING [Continued]

title of "Censorship of Motion Pictures", in which will be found the observation: "By proving that morality was profitable, it [the Code] has made the producers feel a responsibility to the public which alone can bring about a satisfactory cinema."

"Film Survey's" piece closes with: "Editor Ramsaye, author of a history of the motion picture, should soon discover that a new chapter of film history is in the making."

There has been considerable evidence, here and elsewhere, from time to time that Editor Ramsaye has indeed observed that a new chapter of film history is being more talked about than made—and that he does not like it. Arrangements are being made to make that even more apparent.

THAT same issue of "Film Survey" in an article entitled "Propaganda Discovers the Movies" cites a production of First World War time, "The Price of Peace", which by context would be assumed to be a part of the output and program of the Creel Committee, otherwise the Committee on Public Information. "When the treasury needed money, 'The Price of Peace' was shown in which all good Americans were exhorted to pay another last installment on our debt to Lafayette by subscribing to the Victory loan. . . . To accomplish its aims the C.P.I. violated many laws. . . ."

"The Price of Peace" was made by the publicity office of the Treasury Department, then under the administration of Carter Glass, entirely independently of the Creel Committee and in fact without its knowledge or concern. The picture was avowed government loan propaganda, offered at bond selling rallies, not sold as entertainment. The basic negative was made available to the Treasury Department by the War Department from Signal Corps archives. The picture violated no laws, deceived no one as to its purpose. It was compiled, edited and titled by "Editor Ramsaye".

Labor Truce

PRODUCTION AND LABOR are at a truce in Hollywood, arrived at by an agreement to allow the 10 percent increase scale demands until February 15, at which time Production is to make a showing on how and why it cannot afford the raise. Figures much tossed about, saying that 23,000, sometimes 35,000, workers were involved, are grotesque. The ten local unions represented in last week's demands claimed only 3,267 members employed in the studios, and other sources alleged actually only 1,363. The fact is that only a fractional part of the unions concerned work in the studios.

There were expressions a-many in Hollywood to infer that many of the current labor statements and excitements bore on other matters including testimonies before grand juries and such. The labor issue was far from clear cut, and complications were abundant, esoteric.

At week end studio heads were to be in conference with Will Hays, just arrived again from the East, about such matters as "a basic agreement on labor," also "the government suit." Meetings were to be officially unofficial.

George Browne of IATSE was said to be "in the East." (See page 28)

The ramifications of unionism in Hollywood are growing. Now it's the Paperhangers of America who are about to arrive on the scene, to charter Hollywood's cartoonists.

Because the Screen Cartoon Guild is still awaiting a charter from the International Painters and Paperhangers of America—the painters and paperhangers of flats of America's families—the United States Government's National Labor Relations Board, sitting in Washington, has ordered a postponement until January of a secret ballot election among the animators of Hollywood's cartoons.

"Mr. Smith", again

SO CONCERNED are the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio over the possible impact of Columbia's "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" that they "suggest," in the November 21st issue of their service bulletin, that exhibitors use a special trailer, when showing the picture. The trailer reads:

"The management in common with all good Americans have confidence in the integrity of our chosen representatives, and the press. Consequently, we present this picture as entertainment, not fact. It in no sense reflects actual conditions in the capital of our nation."

The Ohio ITO has available a "quantity of these trailers."

Chaplin's "No. 6"

AS UNNAMED, but as definite, as a submarine a-building, Production No. 6 is now seriously underway under the usual cover of silence and endeavour at mystery at the Charles Chaplin studios in La Brea avenue, Hollywood, the street with the oil wells in it.

No. 6 is of course Mr. Chaplin's picture about Herr Hitler as a dictator. Just when it will be done or what will be in it no one, not even Mr. Chaplin, knows. From present indications it is a reasonable conjecture that No. 6 will be out before the war is over.

This is the picture that in the days of placation and appeasement was so frowned upon as a project by the British Government, and in turn by those American authorities responsive to Downing Street. It was alleged that it would never be made. Mr. Chaplin, presumably betting on the war, said it would.

The wall of secrecy—Douglas Churchill says he couldn't even get the studio press agent on the telephone—is standard Chaplin technique. Also so are the rumors of the production's content. It is to be remembered that much more was said and guessed about his "Modern Times" than there was in it. That picture proved to be a re-make of everything funny he had ever done before since 1913.

That makes it reasonable to expect him to evolve much new business for this one.

Fair Statistics

THE NEW YORK WORLD'S FAIR offices have revealed a mass of statistics including the following: 547,321,500 gallons of water were used, 8,520,000 telephone calls passed through the Fair's switchboards and 3,308,541 pieces of mail were delivered or sent at the exposition grounds.

The total paid admissions were 25,817,265 and the total attendance, including passes for employees and others, came to 32,786,521. The Administration Building was besieged by 303,438 business callers.

"Accident" Decisions

THEATRE OWNERS have just been given two more higher-court cases to cite in defense against patrons—and attorneys-at-law—attempting to turn mishaps in the theatre into cash. In both the decisions were handed down by the New York state court of appeals, reversing opinions of the lower courts.

In suing the Mordell Realty Corporation, New York City theatre operators, one Moe Nabson and his wife sought payment in damages for an "injury" suffered by the wife when, in changing her seat, a splinter from the chair stuck her in the leg. Moe asked for a judgment, too, on the grounds that the injury had deprived him of his wife's services for awhile. The lower court made an award to each.

It was on the basis of the lower court's charge to the jury, however, that the higher court reversed the decision, directing a new trial. The lower court had instructed that if a condition existed in the theatre which could injure a patron, then the theatre operator was liable whether he knew of the condition or not. [Such instructions would be entirely contrary to the law brought out in discussions of liability in BETTER THEATRES; see particularly the issue of August 19th.] The court of appeals held such instructions erroneous in that they did not consider whether the theatre operator could have been expected to know of the defective chair, or had had time to repair it.

The other suit was against the New York Strand, brought by Sol Duckowitz, Irving Zussman and Yetta Goldstein. Sol is an infant. The three were passing along the cross-aisle of the mezzanine, other patrons jostled them, and both Irving and Yetta fell over the rail into the main floor seats, taking Sol with them. They were awarded $28,000. Remanding this judgment, the court of appeals pointed out that the Strand construction had been approved by the building department, had been regularly inspected by city authorities, and that nobody previously had fallen over its mezzanine rail during its 23 years of operation prior to the mishaps which had come before the court.

THIS WEEK

THE CINEMA MARCHES ON. Now comes Lenwal Productions with "Pocomania", all-Negro film photographed in the Island of Jamaica, B.W.I., and starring Miss Nina Mae McKinney, above, of the Harlem art movement. Art progresses but certain motifs remain the same.

BUSY. Robert J. O'Donnell, below, vice-president and general manager of the Interstate circuit, chief barker for the Dallas Variety Club Tent 17, and executive chairman of the national convention of Variety Clubs to be held in Dallas next April, dictates advance plans to John Q. Adams, his secretary. The committee and Mr. O'Donnell warn that the advance publicity will be on a scale equivalent to the show to be staged for the convention guests.

223 OF 1939-40 FEATURES ALREADY "IN THE CAN"

116 Already Delivered, 107 Awaiting Release, and 41 More Are Before Cameras, Over Half of 512 on Commitments

There is no sign of any kind in Hollywood of a product shortage for exhibitors, now or for many months to come.

Two hundred and twenty-three features have been completed and 41 are in various stages of production under the 1939-40 commitments of 512 productions made by the ten large companies during last summer's pre-seasonal product and policy moulding period.

One hundred and sixteen have actually been delivered, as of Friday, December 1st.

One hundred and seven additional features are "in the can," for release after December 1st.

With the season only one-quarter through—September 1st is the starting date—44 per cent of the product promised has been completed, 23 per cent actually delivered, and 21 per cent is ready for delivery to meet schedules as far ahead as 10 weeks—and 41 more are before the cameras, with still others going into work daily.

All of the foregoing should answer for the exhibitor the conflicting statements and conclusions, opinions and observations of recent weeks pertaining to production curtailment, which, it had been predicted, would follow anticipated studio retrenchments growing out of "the international situation," cessation of American production activities abroad, closing of import channels, labor troubles, threatened strikes, etc., etc.

It may be that Hollywood in the pre-war period started to hurry along in anticipation of interferences, but the totals support its contention that its studios stand today as ready as ever before to continue uninterruptedly the normal flow of product to the screens of its exhibitor customers.

Labor's wage increase victory last week end is not expected to reduce the amount spent on actual picture quality, Barney Balaban said on Tuesday, leading Hollywood announcements to that effect.

The large inventory of pictures completed awaiting release—107 of them—is also attributed to the extension of playing time in some theatre quarters, particularly in the downtown de luxe theatres and circuit affiliates of producers, in line with pleas of the large companies, as expressed by Joseph M. Schenck, two months ago, to extend playing time on worthwhile product.

Outstanding of the current picture crop enjoying extended playings are "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," Columbia; "Babes in Arms," "Ninotchka," MGM; "Geronimo," Paramount; "Allegheny Uprising," RKO; "Drums Along the Mohawk," "Hollywood Cavalcade," "Twentieth Century-Fox; "Eternally Yours," United Artists; "Her First Love" (Durbin), "Under-Pup," Universal; "Roaring Twenties," Warners—to mention but a few.

An even larger list of extended playing time potentialities is just ahead, with releases or pre-releases set on such possibilities as "Gone with the Wind" and Nelson Eddy's "Balalaika," MGM; "The Great Victor Herbert," "Gulliver's Travels," Paramount; "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," "Pinocchio" (expected), RKO; "Swanee River," 20th-Fox and more.

Reissuance of outstanding features of previous date also is swelling the flood of total product available, some of the better known reissues now on the market including "The Champ," "Mutiny on the Bounty," "Rose Marie," "San Francisco," from Metro; "Riders of Destiny," "Sagebrush Trail," "The Lucky Texan" and "West of the Di-

AMKINO NOTES "ROCKY GOING" FOR RED FILMS

Changed Attitude by Subsequent-Runs Is Noted as Four Pictures Arrive via Oslo

by FLOYD STONE

"Rocky going" may be ahead for Russian films in this country, officials of Amkino, Soviet distributors in America, said this week at their New York home offices, despite a waiting line at the premiere of the first of four pictures to reach New York in the two months since the war began.

"Some change in the attitude of our exhibitor clients there definitely is," Nicola Napoli, in charge of Amkino's booking department, observed. "We've noticed the change most particularly in the subsequent runs; but, as yet, there is no change in the first-run situations."

How the American public, and exhibitors, would receive the Soviet films and the political system they reflect had been a question mark since the begininng of the war, and Russia's virtual alliance with Nazi Germany.

It has been a question, too, for the Amkino officials.

First Opens at the Cameo

"We will be able to tell more certainly, now," Mr. Napoli said. He added that he was heartened by the reception of "Shors," the first of the new releases, which opened at New York's Cameo Theatre, this week. He pointed to a standing line the first day.

How do the German-product theatres feel towards Russian films?

"I suppose it's a serious question," he replied. "Lots of people think there would be some such tie-up, but we haven't had a request for a picture yet, from a German house. That's the answer."

A possible decline in North American bookings for Russian films will be over-balanced by an already noticeably increased demand from South America, according to Amkino officials. Thurber Lewis, of the Russian company's publicity department, asserted that the shortage of French, British, and German product is responsible. The largest increase in bookings is from Brazil and Chile, he said.

The four new films came on a Norwegian ship, and there will be others, the distributor's office said. The port of embarkation is Oslo, Norway. It was claimed that American ships may be used, if they skirt the war zone in order to reach Norway. Italian ports also may be used some time in the future, but not now, they agreed.

Amkino prints its films, and records them, here. The four just arrived are "Shors," "They Wanted Peace," "Tractorists," and "The Little Golden Key." The last-named is a Russian version of "Pinocchio." It was started several years ago by Soyuzdetfilm, in Moscow, and completed at the beginning of this year. The Amkino men emphasized that it was an "adaptation" of the famed story.

"We do not intend to release it in competition to the Walt Disney picture," Mr. Napoli asserted, but added that Amkino was considering dubbing the film in English. "Several sound men have advised us that it would be a good thing to do."

Mr. Lewis noted that Pinocchio is called "Borotino" in the Russian film, a fact, he decided, which eliminates any charge that it is a copy of "Pinocchio." It was started before the Disney picture, he claimed.

The director is Ptushko, who made "The New Gulliver," a puppet version of "Gulliver's Travels."

"Shors" is the story of a Red general in the Ukraine. It was made by the Kiev Film Studios. The second film was made in the Georgian film studios, and is about that Red country's fight to stop war in 1917. The third film is about collective farming in the Ukraine, and is distinguished, according to Amkino, by a portrayal of Lenin by a new actor, K. Miuffke. Boris Schukin, famed portrayer of Lenin, is dead.

More Features Awaited

Expected from the Union of Soviet Socialistic Republics are the following other features:

"Minin and Pozharsky," a story of two Russian heroes of the medieval Polish Wars;

"Stenka Razin," based on the famed rerevolt on the Volga, led by Razin;

"Ferghana," about a recently completed canal in Middle Asia, a picture upon which Sergei Eisenstein is working;

"Teacher," with Boris Chirkov, from a prize scenario in an all-union contest;

"Courage," an aviation film.

Half of Season's Films Completed

vide" from Monogram; "Of Human Bondage," RKO; "The First World War," "The Road to Glory," Fox; "All Quiet on the Western Front" and "The Road Back," Universal, with a score or more dealing with military subjects.

One unique situation developing out of the nurturing by distributors of extended playing time on set releases that will stand holding over beyond the original booking dates is the growing tendency not to peg dates on future releases too far ahead, with the result that an unusually large number of the 107 pictures completed for release after December 1st have not been dated.

A perusal of MOTION PICTURE HERALD's release chart discloses that Columbia has but two features dated for release beyond December 1st; Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has but three; Monogram, four; RKO, nine; Twentieth Century-Fox, eight; United Artists, one; Universal, eight; Warner-First National, three, with Paramount apparently following a different policy, dating 22 beyond December 1st.

The ten large companies are likewise moving rapidly on 1939-40 sales, Warners and MGM being typical, reporting the closing of circuit possibilities 100 per cent and 85 per cent, respectively. This despite the unusually late start of selling to circuits and the holding up of contract discussion by independents while awaiting adoption of the trade practice code that never was adopted.

Interest of New York management and corporate officials in their sources of product supply was never before so high, labor and the international situation sending more executives from Broadway to Hollywood Boulevard than at any similar period.

Al Lichtman, MGM executive, was in New York this week. He was to fly west again on Friday.

Barney Balaban, president; Stanton Griffis, executive committee chairman; Neil Agnew, general sales manager, and John W. Hicks, Jr., foreign distribution chief, are on hand at Paramount's studio, with Russell Holman, eastern talent head, also arriving to participate in product discussions. Young Frank Freeman, studio general, is presiding.

James R. Grainger, president of Republic Pictures, leaves New York on a sales tour that will take him to the studio.

Twentieth Century-Fox executives will meet on the coast in January, led by Sidney Kent, president; Joseph M. Schenck, board chairman; Darryl F. Zanuck, in charge of production; Herman Wobber, sales chief, and William Goetz, executive producer.

J. Cheever Cowdin, Universal board chairman, arrived on the coast Sunday, to confer with Nate Blumberg, president, who got there earlier.

United Artists' Murray Silverstone and Jack Schlaifer are in the west.

Warners' S. Charles Einfeld is to meet with Harry M. Warner at Burbank.

No Short Cuts; A Short Query

MGM will maintain, fully, its shorts program next year, Fred Quimby, shorts sales manager, said in New York this week, after his arrival from the studios and attendance at the MGM sales meeting in Chicago over the weekend. "No budget reduction; no program reduction," Mr. Quimby said, in effect, adding that he regarded possible loss of foreign revenues as a challenge to shorts-makers. MGM has 79 shorts on the present schedule; 48 are completed.

Mr. Quimby is in New York in connection with a special series shortly to be announced.

Warner Brothers is questioning over 5,000 exhibitors on their short subject preferences, the questionnaire being pertinent to its shorts program for 1940-41. Norman Moray, shorts sales manager, is conducting the survey. Last year, he questioned 4,400 theatre operators.

Paramount Signs With Accessories

Paramount and Advertising Accessories, Inc., subsidiary of National Screen Service, this week signed a five-year contract under the terms of which Advertising Accessories will produce and distribute the majority of Paramount's advertising accessories.

The contract also renews the distributing agreement for Paramount trailers by National Screen Service. Paramount will produce its own trailers, utilizing the company's studio facilities under the supervision of the studio production staff.

WASHINGTON WHISPERS ARNOLD MAY BE PROMOTED "OUT OF THE WAY"

Appointment of Murphy or Jackson to Supreme Court with Arnold Promotion Might Make for Retreat from Present Stand

by FRANCIS L. BURT
in Washington

Appointment by President Roosevelt of either Frank Murphy, the United States Attorney General, or Robert Jackson, Solicitor General—mentioned as the two foremost candidates to succeed the late Pierce Butler as Associate Justice in the United States Supreme Court—might entail advancement of Thurman Arnold, Assistant Attorney General to Mr. Jackson's present post, and thereby pave the way for a gradual retreat by the Department of Justice from its present anti-trust enforcement policy in some industries, such as the motion picture, according to well informed sources in Washington.

While Mr. Murphy is considered the logical appointee for the Supreme Court vacancy, it is suggested that Mr. Jackson might get the position in the event that Mr. Murphy chose to remain in the President's Cabinet, with Mr. Jackson, on the other hand, becoming Attorney General in the event of Mr. Murphy's acceptance of the Supreme Court post. All of which would bring a new chief of the anti-trust division of the Department of Justice, on Mr. Arnold's elevation from anti-trust chief to a higher post in the Department.

Arnold Setting Film Policy

It has been Anti-Trust Chief Arnold who has been setting down policy in the prosecution of the film industry, principally in the so-called "key" case in New York in which he demands that the producer-distributors divorce themselves from exhibition, that certain prevailing trade practices be eliminated, that Hollywood's "talent pooling" practices be abolished. It was Mr. Arnold, who, in September, killed the trade practice program that had been formulated by the majors after two years of discussions with exhibitors, threatening further legal attacks if the distributors enforced the code as they had presented it to him for departmental approval. It was Mr. Arnold who frequently gave utterance in the public prints on policy and procedure in the film trust case, warning variously that more suits are coming.

Regardless of what, if anything, might happen to the anti-trust attacks on motion pictures, either pending or future, as a result of any executive personnel realignments in the Department of Justice, there appears no reason to believe that such changes will in any way affect the Department's Federal Grand Jury probings of motion picture income tax and labor matters in Hollywood.

Only last week it became known at the Capital that difficulties encountered by the Department in its investigation of film company officials' taxes in Los Angeles have in their opinion necessitated an expansion of the inquiry.

Additional agents have been assigned to the cases and the Los Angeles Grand Jury resumed its hearings on Wednesday. Charles Carr, U. S. attorney in charge, promised to present, for the Government, "one of the most important witnesses heard thus far."

It was learned Wednesday night that Joseph Schenck, chairman of the board of 20th Century-Fox, and William Dover, former Fox executive now in the talent agency business in Hollywood, would appear before the Grand Jury.

MEET ON TRUST SUIT TRIAL DATE

Counsel for the distributors and the Department of Justice were to meet before the weekend in Federal Court, New York City, to discuss a date for the start of the long pending suit in equity brought by the Government. The hearing was to start Friday, before Federal Judge John Knox, and, according to William Farnsworth, special assistant attorney general, the Government will ask for a trial date before the court's Summer recess; and for a date for the filing of answers by the two sides, to interrogatories previously submitted. Paul Williams, special assistant attorney general, was to arrive in New York this week, to represent the Government at the hearing.

Decision to expand the investigation was reached following a series of conferences between the Attorney General and the Department officials in charge of the cases.

Difficulties of the Government are said to have been intensified by the firm stand of the film company officials involved that the methods they followed in preparing their tax returns were within the law. It was admitted at the Department that the film executives have made no offers of compromise.

Intention to follow the tax matter through was voiced by Mr. Murphy after confirming reports that the Department was expanding its force. "There is going to be further Grand Jury inquiry to completely exhaust every lead that might indicate a violation of the law or the commission of a crime," he said.

The film cases are considered important in the Department because of the fact that the methods adopted by the taxpayers in accounting for their income have been used by many high-salaried executives in a number of other industries, and a successful effort by the Government to have them declared unlawful would pave the way for the collection of large sums by the Treasury.

Film Case Called Key

Committed to a stiff policy of anti-trust enforcement, fathered by Mr. Arnold, adopted by former Attorney General Homer Cummings and accepted by Mr. Murphy, the Department of Justice for the past two years has been engaged in developing a large number of prosecutions, most of which have not yet come to trial, with the motion picture industry apparently singled out as "the whipping boy."

In several cases the Department has received serious rebuffs in the courts or, at best, won purely negative victories, and in no instance so far has it achieved signal success.

To a very considerable degree, it is said in the Capital, the Department's anti-trust program has gotten out of hand. Originally inspired as a means of restoring independent competition in those industries in which it was being complained a few large companies were dominating the situation, it was planned to have the monopoly situation well in hand long before the 1940 political campaigns, but indications now are that few, if any, of the major cases will have been decided by the time President Roosevelt takes the country into his confidence as to his position on a third term.

While the Department of Justice has the commendable habit of "laundering its dirty linen" behind closed doors, there have been rumors that Mr. Arnold's unyielding insistence upon his very broad anti-trust drive was not meeting with the whole-hearted approval which it was given upon its inception, when it was believed "big business" would scare readily and fold up quickly after having been subjected to several years of "softening" under the New Deal policies.

Possibly, it is suggested, this might have happened had Mr. Arnold been less expansive in his demands; but when, for instance, he made divorce of exhibition and abolition of block booking the major bases for the film suit and told the motion picture industry he would accept nothing less as the basis for a consent decree, he forced the major companies into a stiff resistance which has delayed the trial.

Lessening of Pressure Expected

It is pointed out that Government trust-busting campaigns in the past have been sporadic and comparatively short-lived and that the history of the past six and one-half years has been that as elections approach the Administration has smiled upon industry. Accordingly, the current campaign should be about at its final stage and the time is approaching when political considerations might again become all-important.

So long as Mr. Arnold is head of the anti-trust division, however, there is little chance seen for a retreat from the Department's present position, but if he was "out of the way," it might be possible for his successor to "re-examine" the monopoly situation and pave the way for a change of attitude on the part of the Government in its trust attacks, including its attack on motion pictures.

A possible rift between Mr. Arnold and other high officials of the Department was indicated this week in the Department's disavowal of an official status to the letter which the anti-trust division chief sent to the Central Labor Union of Indianapolis, warning that there was a line beyond which activities of organized labor could not go without raising the possibility of prosecutions. (See MOTION PICTURE HERALD, November 25th, page 15.)

That line, Mr. Arnold said, is drawn at activities in restraint of trade which have "no reasonable connection with wages, hours, health, safety and speed-up systems or the establishment and maintenance of the right of collective bargaining."

When labor activities go beyond the point of the general well-being of the workers, he warned, they are no longer covered by the protection which the Government has given organized labor.

Department officials were reluctant to discuss the letter and, when pressed, said it represented his "personal views." There was no denial of the inference that his communication to the Indianapolis labor group did not represent the policy of the Department officially, and it was evident that there was no complete accord among Department executives in support of Mr. Arnold's warning.

WICHITA GETS FIRST LOCAL "CODE" AFTER THREATENING PUBLIC APPEAL

Exhibitors Charge "Monopolistic Clearance and Protection" and New Program Follows on Kansas City Pattern

The greats of distribution and exhibition, and "a million dollars" worth of legal talent worked and talked and talked and worked for years to formulate a trade practice code for distribution-exhibition, only to learn, last September, on its completion, that the document was illegal, in the opinion of the department of Justice. Thus rested the code. This week, a little group of independent exhibitors in Wichita, Kansas, got a code from the "big interests," the first localized program. They got it after they had told the companies that they would go to the public if relief from local conditions was not forthcoming quickly. Clearance-and-zoning schedules started the fight, directed against the Fox Circuit and the distributors.

Conference Follows

Given "one week's notice" to act, representatives of Fox Theatres met with all the owners of Wichita on Tuesday, in a three-hour session.

"The finest spirit of cooperation was manifest," declared O. F. Sullivan, exhibitor leader, "and as a result a fair trade practice code was verbally agreed to by all parties pending the drawing up of the instrument for signatures."

While it is still too early for the owners to divulge the specific nature of the document, it is known that, basically, the zoning adjustments will bring a schedule similar to that now existing in Kansas City, Mo.

Said Mr. Sullivan Wednesday from his home in Wichita: "There will be a fair trade practice code effective on December 24th and a new clearance schedule effective on pictures released after December 15th."

Giveaways, cut rate admissions and two-for-ones were also among the original subjects of complaint.

Other Groups Active

Individual independents have been complaining for years over "unreasonable" clearance accorded circuits by the large companies, individual owners in many instances basing anti-trust suit attacks on this grievance. Also both national exhibitor organizations, besides many state or city owners' groups, by resolution or otherwise, in recent years have gone on record for alleviation of clearance situations. The Kansas "ultimatum," however, is the first in a long time demanding "action or else."

Meanwhile other exhibitor groups were in meeting on general trade practices, and, in the courts, the companies moved along several fronts in defense of pending litigation instituted by independents on charges of trade practice discrimination.

Wichitans Charge Monopoly

The Kansas case was opened by the Wichita Independent Theatre Owners Association, Mr. Sullivan, president, with the demand, made in writing to all branch offices and general sales managers of the companies, for the establishment of a code of fair trade practice, with the advice, that "unless certain practices are eliminated at once, the greatest possible revenue for motion pictures in this community cannot be realized this season."

The basic complaint is against "monopolistic clearance and protection." The owners' group says the distributors have the power to regulate the "evils," but charges that the circuits, Fox Theatres specifically, do the regulating "by dictating to the distributors, and, thereby, have established a monopoly."

URGES MODERATION IN NEWSREEL COMMENT

The executive committee of the Council of Churches of Greater Cincinnati, over the signature of the Reverend Dr. Henry Pearce Atkins, executive secretary, has sent a letter to Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, urging a "toning down of the belligerent spirit of news interpreters, whose voices are on the sound track of the newsreels".

The communication pointed out that the Council of Churches represented 14 Protestant denominations and the clergy and lay members of more than 300 churches in Greater Cincinnati, adding that the executive committee had endorsed a letter from Dr. Earle E. Eubank of the University of Cincinnati, a Council member, to be written Mr. Hays in regard to similar matters.

The owners charge that the Fox houses charge admissions that are much too low for the "absurd" protection they receive over independent subsequents, which protection is further abused, continued the owners, by the circuit's two-for-one admissions, student tickets, give-aways (as high as $500), etc.

The circuit "feels that the monopoly it has gives it the right to resort to these unfair practices, but just such practices force independents to resort to price evasions.

Exhibitor Groups In New Discussions

Allied of Illinois is continuing to look into the possibilities of establishing a booking and buying combine, Jack Kirsch, Allied leader, said this week in Chicago. More than 180 theatres belong to the Chicago Allied unit, which is trying to find some means of combating the Balaban & Katz circuit, which they claim is getting more than its share of Chicago business.

Plans for the reestablishment of cash give-aways are also being looked into by the Allied group, who feel that some means of protecting their interests must be taken at once or great losses in revenue will result.

Harry Brandt, Independent Theatre Owners Association president, New York, was to meet this week with Al Steffes, Northwest Allied leader, and Mr. Kirsch for the purpose of discussing certain industry problems.

The conference will relate to the defunct trade practice code, film stars on the air and other matters, according to Mr. Kirsch. It was believed by some that Mr. Brandt would seek Allied co-operation in a campaign to get picture stars off the air. Mr. Brandt is making a coast-to-coast tour, holding conferences with exhibitor groups en route.

The Syracuse unit of the New York Allied went on record this week opposing the Neely Bill. Rap Merriman presided, with Ed Souhami, counsel, attending the meeting.

The officers and executive board of the Washing state exhibitor organization, formerly the MPTO of Washington, will meet in Seattle Tuesday to give further consideration to joining the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners.

L. O. Lukan, president, and James M. Hone, executive secretary, will present information regarding the coast group, after which it is expected that the board will make a final decision relative to their affiliation.

William F. Rodgers, general sales manager of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, is to be the principal speaker at the annual convention of the Theatre Owners of North and South Carolina to be held in Charlotte Sunday and Monday at the Hotel Charlotte. Ed Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, will also address the members.

Allied Theatres of Connecticut held a luncheon-meeting at the Hofbrau Haus Restaurant, New Haven, Tuesday. A. M. Schuman presided.

A meeting for members only was held by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Western Pennsylvania last week in Pittsburgh. M. A. Rosenberg, president, reported on the eastern regional conference of Allied States units held at Philadelphia recently. Mr. Rosenberg is considering calling a mideastern regional conference shortly.

A luncheon meeting of the New Jersey Allied, at the Hotel Astor, New York City, on Tuesday, resulted in protests voiced by several members that some companies are putting "B" and "C" pictures in the "A" category. Lee Newbury, president, was authorized to appoint a committee.

A drive to organize a national independent exhibitor association is under way in Toronto under the leadership of Harry Alexander, head of the Independent Theatre Association of Ontario. The plan calls for enrollment of associate members in the ITA at five dollars per person. The national body will have two purposes, to protect independent investments and to have a united front to lift the independent theatre business in Canada out of a rut, according to Mr. Alexander.

Majors Deny Charges; Demand All Details

Paramount, Twentieth Century-Fox, Loew's, Universal and the Big U Film Exchange filed answers this week in the United States district court in New York to the $75,000 triple damage anti-trust suit brought by the Folly Amusement Holding Corporation against them, all other majors, Republic Pictures and Monogram Distributing Corporation.

The answers denied charges that the plaintiff was forced to close down the Folly theatre in Brooklyn because of a conspiracy, it is charged, to deprive it of product.

Papers in support of the major company defendants' motion for a bill of particulars from the Department of Justice in the anti-trust suit against Tony Sudekum's Crescent Amusement Company of Nashville, were filed in federal court there this week and served on Department of Justice representatives. The federal court at Nashville will set a date for a hearing on the motion in the near future.

"WIND" RIDING IN WITH 'STREAMLINED' SALES AND MERCHANDISING SETUP

First - Runs Must Charge at Least 75 Cents Mornings, $1.00 Evenings; 30 - Minute Lapse between Showings

There will be many a precedent established, many a change made in distribution-exhibition procedure for and in behalf of the David Oliver Selznick production of Margaret Mitchell's Civil War story of "Gone with the Wind," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer distributing.

Two years in the talking stage, another two years in preparation and production, and now the "Wind" is about to ride in from Hollywood on one of the most unusual sets of sales and merchandising policies ever devised.

Minimum Admissions Set

An absolute minimum admission charge, at first runs, of 75c for the morning and afternoon performances, $1.00 for evenings and $1.50 for loge, box and other preferred seats is demanded of exhibitors as part of the "policy" for "Gone with the Wind." This was indicated following a special MGM sales conference held in Chicago last weekend.

"Gone With the Wind" may never be played at regular admission prices—"not for a long time anyway," according to company officials.

MGM will explore the full possibilities of only high admission price engagements before the picture goes into theatres at lower prices—"if ever."

Two high-admission tests will be made, the first between December 15th and January 1st, in seven cities and the second between January 1st and January 30th, in 25 cities. These comprise the 32 exchange centers.

William F. Rodgers, general sales manager, would make no comment on the widely circulated story that the company was asking as its share 70 per cent of the exhibitor's gross, the while even guaranteeing in some cases a 10 per cent profit. He said that it was against the company's policy to publish details of product deals and it was too early to know whether an exception would be made in the case of the Selznick-International picture, which is being sold on an individual basis.

Al Lichtman, MGM executive who attended the Chicago "Wind" conference with Mr. Rodgers, estimated on his return to New York Tuesday that at an over-all average admission of 82 cents a person, and at a rental payment of 70 per cent of the exhibitors' gross, the picture would net more to an exhibitor than "a good picture" on a regular program at an average admission of 30 cents and a 40 per cent rental.

Mr. Lichtman indicated that he expects the negative cost ($4,000,000) to be recouped in four months—on the matter of costs, they were shared equally by Producer Selznick and Distributor Metro.

He answered those who have been wondering what effect the three-hour, 40-minute running time of the picture might have on turnover, with a curt, "No obstacle."

First Special Showings Set

The first nine special showings after the premiere at Atlanta on December 15th were announced last week. The picture will run simultaneously at two theatres in each of the following cities: New York, Los Angeles and Boston. The film will also be shown in Cincinnati, Reading and Harrisburg.

"GONE WITH THE WIND" BILLS 125 CREDITS

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has completed the final credit list on David O. Selznick's "Gone With the Wind". The billing sheet begins with 12 main credits. The cast with 59 persons listed is divided into the ten main sequences of the picture. The production and technical list of credits is one of the longest for any motion picture, 56 persons being named.

Mr. Rodgers said that no other cities had been designated yet but by January the company plans to have "Gone with the Wind" showing in as many cities as possible, and by the end of February it is expected to have several hundred playings.

30 Minutes between Showings

The distributor has set a number of special requirements in addition to admission scale and high percentage. "Gone with the Wind" will be exhibited on "a modern streamline roadshow basis," Mr. Rodgers said. Though the picture runs three hours and 40 minutes, MGM demands that a 30 minute lapse of time be provided between each showing. The intermission time during the running of the picture will be decided by the exhibitor and the distributor representative. Some theatres may have but a two minute intermission while others may want fifteen minutes or more. At the Capitol in New York a half hour interval is planned. Where the picture plays on an unreserved seat basis three shows daily will be scheduled, in other spots only two.

The large business expected of the picture warrants the provision of a thirty minute lapse between shows, Mr. Rodgers believes. It would also discourage patrons from coming in at the middle of the presentation, he thinks. All advertisements will emphasize the importance of arriving for the start of the picture, and the starting time of each showing will be listed in all advertisements.

No Short Subjects

Due to the extreme length of the picture no short subjects will be shown. Only a newsreel will augment the program. Between performances the theatre lights will have to be up for at least twenty minutes, it was pointed out.

Starting immediately, the MGM sales force will begin negotiations for the sale of the picture, independently of the other Metro product. Because of this, clearance problems that otherwise might cause conflict in the handling of the picture can be worked out, it was said.

As the picture will be released in the second or third week of January on a nationwide basis, sales will be consummated at once. In most instances the picture will be sold by district and branch managers. Mr. Rodgers said that "exhibitors all over the country seem to want to play 'Gone with the Wind,' though no calculation has been made of the requests received."

Simultaneous Showings

"It is contemplated," Mr. Rodgers said, "that as many as five or six theatres in some cities will be playing the picture simultaneously. For instance, after the Chicago opening there is the possibility that additional theatres will play the picture at the same time it is showing in the Loop. The same admission prices will prevail in all theatres."

Regarding the showing of the picture in the smaller towns Mr. Rodgers said, "I can't forsee the picture running less than a week—anywhere. Smaller cities and towns will be able to show the picture as soon as the larger cities. It is not our intent to keep the picture out of the territory during the time it is playing in the key cities." He added that prints will be so scarce at first that even possible long runs will have to wait some time to play the picture. No decision has been made on any minimum booking period.

Mr. Rodgers also said that the picture would not be shown at other than advanced admission prices. "I doubt if 'Gone with the Wind' will ever be shown at popular prices," he said, or at best it would be a "long, long time" in the future.

Seeks $10,000,000 World Gross

Metro officials estimated that the picture would run for months in key city theatres and for not less than a week in the smallest towns. They were confident that the picture will break all existing motion picture boxoffice records.

MGM is seeking a world gross of between $10,000,000 to $13,000,000, according to Mr. Lichtman. This anticipated gross is at least twice the entire cost of production, distribution, advertising etc. The goal of the domestic gross alone exceeds all world grosses attained so far. "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" has a world gross of more than $8,000,000, while "Mutiny on the Bounty" reached nearly $7,000,000 and "The Singing Fool," $5,250,000. (Figures from Motion Picture Almanac's list of grosses, before reissues and revivals, include two other picture with totals over three and a half million: "Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" at $4,500,000 and "Ben Hur" at four million.)

Made in Technicolor, "Gone with the Wind," will have to gross at least $5,000,000 to break even, it was reported. The production cost is given as $4,000,000 and it was estimated that cost of prints alone would be near the $1,000,000 mark. Mr. Rodgers said that he had ordered 350 prints for the American market and that they cost approximately $1,000 each. The foreign market will use about 300 additional prints, it is estimated, and more prints for the American market are expected to be needed later.

The matter of distributing the picture abroad and in foreign countries will be announced shortly, by Arthur Loew, head of the foreign department.

Entire Exploitation Department

The entire MGM exploitation department will concentrate on "Gone with the Wind" during the next few months. William R. Ferguson, exploitation manager, has made three trips to Atlanta in connection with the premiere and in handling arrangements in the field.

A specialized form of advertising for the picture will be used, Mr. Rodgers said. Detailed announcement of this would be ready for release soon, he thought. The advertising budget is reported to be $250,000.

Advance reports from the cities opening the picture before January 1 show that reserved seat sales are the greatest the company ever has known. In Atlanta the advance sale is reported to be $10,000 over any previous record. This advance sale does not include the premiere, tickets for which are not to be had "for love or money."

It was announced that Mayor William B.

62 at Sales Meeting

The sales meeting, which opened at the Drake hotel last Friday, was attended by 62 members of the MGM sales force. Mr. Rodgers presided. Among those who spoke were Al Lichman, from the studio; Lowell Calvert, Selznick-International representative in New York; Tom Connors, Edward Saunders and Howard Dietz. The meeting was unusual in that the regular sales meetings in midseason are usually for district managers. This time branch managers from all over the country were present.

The sales plan for the picture was not decided upon until Sunday, after a full day of discussion. The test engagements of the picture may cause changes in these plans, as the handling of the picture, due to the many problems involved, would be more difficult than for any other, it was pointed out.

Bonus Plan for Exchanges

One of the unusual events at the sales meeting was the announcement of a bonus plan whereby it is possible for every exchange employee in every branch to participate. This bonus plan will be for the current season, will be on a general basis and not confined to one or a special group of pictures.

Mr. Rodgers was most enthusiastic about the record sales figures for the company this year, already 85% of the total for last year. The balance of 15% probably would not involve more than about 4% of the total revenue, it was estimated. "The summer resorts are about all we have left to sell," Rodgers commented.

Those Who Attended

Also at the meeting were Fred C. Quimby, Alan F. Cummings, Edwin A. Aaron, Jay A. Gove, J. S. MacLeod, William Levine, M. L. Simons, Harold Postman, Joel Bezahler, I. Leonard Hirsch, Charles E. Deesen and Irving Helfont.

Henry L. Nathanson, general manager of Regal Films, Toronto, and Gordon Lightstone, general sales manager of Regal, represented MGM's Canadian organization.

District managers to attend included E. K. O'Shea, New York; M. N. Wolf, Boston; Charles E. Kessnich, Atlanta; J. J. Maloney, Pittsburgh; G. A. Hickey, Los Angeles; J. E. Flynn, Detroit, and H P. Wolfberg, Kansas City.

The following branch managers were to be present: Jack Bowen, New York, and Ben Abner, New Jersey manager; Robert Lynch, Philadelphia, and S. E. Applegate, sales manager; Ralph Pielow, Albany; Robert Avey, Atlanta; J. P. Byrne, Boston; R. W. Maw, Buffalo; B. H. Rosenwald, Charlotte; W. E Banford, Chicago; E. M. Booth, Cincinnati; F. D. Drew, Cleveland; Louis Bickel, Dallas.

H. A. Friedel, Denver; D. C. Kennedy, Des Moines; F. J. Downey, Detroit; W. W. Willman, Indianapolis; F C. Hensler, Kansas City; C. T. Lynch, Los Angeles; J. F. Willingham, Memphis; S. Shurman, Milwaukee; W. H. Workman, Minneaolis; T. J. Donaldson, New Haven; C. J. Briant, New Orleans.

W. B. Zoellner, Oklahoma City; H. J. Shumow, Omaha; Burtus Bishop, Pittsburgh; Louis Amacher, Portland; J. X. Quinn, St. Louis; S. J. Gardner, Salt Lake City; L. C. Wingham, San Francisco; M. Saffle, Seattle, and Rudy Berger, Washington.

Smith Succeeds Brown In Publicity Post

George Brown, Columbia studio director of advertising and publicity for the past two years, resigned this week and was succeeded by Lou Smith, former production assistant to Frank Lloyd and Edward Small and most recently employed by the Paramount publicity department in New York.

Mr. Brown was advertising manager for Universal from 1920 to 1928. After free-lancing and working for Warners and RKO in 1932 he became director of advertising and publicity for Columbia Pictures. After three years he left Columbia and worked for Biow Company and in September 1937 was made Columbia studio publicity director.

Mr. Smith was associate producer of Paramount's "If I Were King."

N. Y. Federation Drive Meeting

Committee members of the Amusement Division of the New York and Brooklyn Federations of Jewish Charities met at a luncheon at the Hotel Astor November 28th to hear reports on the progress made to date in the 1939 campaign. David Bernstein, co-chairman of the Amusement Division with Major Albert Warner, presided.

The following presented reports: Julian T. Abeles, co-chairman of the Attorneys Committee; Harry Buxbaum, chairman of the Motion Picture Exchanges Committee; Bertram Lebhar, co-chairman of the Broadcasting Committee; Benjamin S. Moss, chairman of the Motion Picture Associates Committee and Joseph H. Seidelman, of the Universal Picture Committee.

Following the reports Mr. Bernstein predicted great success for this drive this year, "This year I expect the Amusement Division to break every fund-raising record we have set in past years for other trades to attain." Mr. Bernstein said that in the absence of Harry Brandt from the city Sam Rinzler would handle the Independent Theatres Committee.

More than a hundred executives in the motion picture industry are serving on the dozen special committees formed to aid the Federation's drive.

Lone Ranger Sues Republic

Action alleging breach of contract on the part of Republic Productions was filed by Lone Ranger, Inc., in the United States District Court in New York on November 28th. An injunction is asked to restrain Republic from interfering with negotiations for production and distribution of Lone Ranger pictures with other companies. It is also asked that an injunction be granted restraining the release of a Lone Ranger feature already produced by the defendant under the contract.

Fowler, McCarey Injured

Gene Fowler, author and screen writer, and Leo McCarey, one of Hollywood's leading directors, were injured November 28th in an automobile accident near Azusa, about 20 miles from Hollywood. Mr. McCarey sustained a broken shoulder bone and serious lacerations. Mr. Fowler was less seriously injured.

Foreign Decrease Estimated at 30%

An average film business decline of 30% in Europe since the war began was estimated by Joseph Friedman, Columbia managing director in London. Before returning by Atlantic Clipper to Europe Mr. Friedman stated that the decrease in business in the large cities was about 40 per cent due to the blackouts and other regulations, and in the country districts the loss was put at 20 per cent. He added that his general average of 30 per cent had been confirmed by a European survey made recently by a major company which he did not name.

The recent crises in the Scandinavian and Baltic countries had depressed business in those countries substantially the same as in the belligerent nations. Mr. Friedman named Belgium, Holland and Denmark as countries where film business was off considerably, and pointed out that business in the Baltic neutral countries must be experiencing the same trend.

Mr. Friedman plans to make a survey of British production facilities so that the company may decide its future policy in that matter. He said that the availability of talent and technicians constituted the major production problem, but predicted that the British government would cooperate if the producers could not solve the problem. "If the government doesn't cooperate in this respect," Mr. Friedman said, "I don't see how we can produce."

Columbia needs two more pictures between now and March to fulfill its current quota obligations. Mr. Friedman said that film shipments to Europe were proceeding satisfactorily and that the only handicap encountered to date was delay of shipments. This, however, he said, has not been serious.

Jack Segal, assistant to Joseph A. McConville, foreign manager of Columbia, was to accompany Mr. Friedman to Europe. Mr. Segal will investigate the Spanish and Italian market possibilities and will spend some time in Paris studying Continental distribution problems.

New York Ticket Code Is Renewed

The New York theatre ticket code was renewed on November 28th by Actors Equity and Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia the same day vetoed the Spellman bill which limited ticket brokers' advances to 75 cents over box office prices.

Equity insisted on several last minute revisions and the contract cannot be signed until the League of New York Theatres, the producers' group, meets Friday. It is expected that the code will be signed then. Independent theatre brokers were not entirely satisfied with the code but Equity believes the producers should keep them in line.

Mayor LaGuardia, in vetoing the Spellman bill, said that he did not believe "that the bill as drawn will correct the existing vicious practices." The Mayor also held that the theatre owners could eliminate many of the abuses. He said the bill was ambiguous and that the courts would declare it unconstitutional.

Equity insisted on several last minute revisions and the contract cannot be signed until the League of New York Theatres, the producers' group, meets Friday. It is expected that the code will be signed then. Independent theatre brokers were not entirely satisfied with the code but Equity believes the producers should keep them in line.

Mayor LaGuardia, in vetoing the Spellman bill, said that he did not believe "that the bill as drawn will correct the existing vicious practices." The Mayor also held that the theatre owners could eliminate many of the abuses. He said the bill was ambiguous and that the courts would declare it unconstitutional.

STUDIOS GRANT PAY RAISE AS TEST WHILE WONDERING WHAT IT COSTS

AFL Unions Get 10% Increase With Provisions for Arbitration February 15th on Producers' Economy Figures

Averting a nationwide strike, at least until February, Hollywood's large producers, reluctantly and with qualifications, yielded on Saturday to the demands by William Bioc, and other leaders of the American Federation of Labor studio workers, for a 10 per cent wage increase. The producers had opposed the demands for over a week on the premises that the European War has cut foreign revenues for the industry and therefore the industry must economize; that the 12,000 International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees should relinquish the 10 per cent wage increase they gained on September 25th, under Mr. Bioff's leadership; and that a similar increase for the other studio workers would produce a shutdown of studios and ruin for the industry.

The producers' surrender was qualified with the provision that the union leaders on February 15th examine producers' figures on the need for economy; and that, if they and the producers' representatives disagree on that date, the matter be subjected to arbitration.

Following Postponements

The producers had staved off the union demands since last Monday. At that time, after having previously asked Bioff, West Coast representative of the Alliance and chairman of the Conference of AFL Studio Unions, to relinquish the Alliance's 10 per cent increase, they were met with his refusal to do so, and with his insistence, under penalty of a strike (with the "deadline" originally set for 2:30 P.M. PCT last Monday), that all AFL studio workers receive a similar wage raise.

Last Monday's conference adjourned to last Friday, deadlocked but with both sides "hopeful." On Friday came another deadlock. The producers rejected the wage demand; the union leaders warned of a strike unless the demands were met by Saturday. On Saturday, the producers capitulated, with the provisions noted.

The producers' capitulation was in a written proposal as follows, Bioff and associates accepting with reservations:

"In order to avert a strike in the motion picture industry, we make the following proposal in response to your demand for a 10 per cent increase in the basic wage rate of the crafts represented by you.

"We herewith agree to a 10 per cent increase effective as of October 10, 1939.

"We have endeavored to point out to you that the conditions confronting this industry are such as to make it impractical to grant any wage increase at the present time. We particularly pointed out to you the losses and curtailment of our business occasioned by the war in Europe. We have asked for an opportunity to show you that a wage increase at this time was impractical and that retrenchment was necessary.

February Date Set

"On or about Feb. 15, 1940, you will give us an opportunity to show you that the conditions of this industry make a continuation of the wage increase impractical and further to show you that we have taken every possible step within our power to readjust our business so as to make it possible to continue without recalling these wage increases.

NEW WAGE DEMANDS EXPECTED AT NEWARK

Demands for the establishment of seniority rule, 10 per cent wage increases for three of the four international labor unions concerned and the possible reentry of the IATSE into the basic studio agreement will be discussed when the basic agreement conferences open in Newark, N. J., next Tuesday, it was reported Wednesday in Hollywood. The increases would be sought for the Carpenters and Joiners, Electrical Workers, and Teamsters and Chauffeurs, but not for the Federation of Musicians. Improvement of conditions and added employment are expected to be cardinal points of discussion.

"If we convince you that the conditions are such that the wage increase should be surrendered by you, you agree to surrender such wage increases and to secure the surrender of the wage increases granted to AFL crafts subsequent to August 13, 1938.

"If we have been unable to so convince you and there is a difference of opinion between us on this matter, the question of the surrender of these wage increases shall be put to arbitration.

"The arbitration shall be held at Hollywood beginning immediately after either party declares there is a disagreement.

"For the purpose of such arbitration, each group shall select one arbitrator and the two arbitrators so selected shall select a third. In the event the two arbitrators are unable to choose such third arbitrator, then he shall be selected by the American Arbitration Society. Each party agrees to abide by the result of the Arbitration."

Say Position Won't Change

Replying to this, Bioff and the other labor leaders emphasized that on February 15th their position would be essentially the same: demanding a re-examination of salary schedules of directors, stars, and executives of the industry before acceding to cuts in the wages of crafts or other studio workers. It was a thesis advanced from the beginning by Bioff in rejecting the producers' request that the Alliance relinquish its 10 per cent pay raise, and it has been emphasized repeatedly by other Alliance and AFL leaders in public statements and addresses to their followers. Figures were presented to show the disparity between "average" annual wages of manual and skilled workers, and of those who occupy the directorial, administrative and talent posts of the industry.

The statement from the unions follows:

"This victory of the Hollywood craft unions in their negotiations with the producers is an impressive demonstration of the solidarity of the American Federation of Labor Unions in Hollywood.

"Every member of the studio AFL unions

Conference Record Shows Negotiations were to Represent 3,267 Men, While Producer Says Even 1,363 Is Too High

Just how many Hollywood studio workers received the 10 per cent wage increase granted Saturday under threat of a strike, and how much the salary raise will cost the producers, are questions still to be answered clearly by both producers and labor leaders.

There is a wide disparity between the figures claimed by William Bioff, chairman of the conference of American Federation of Labor studio unions, who announced that members of 11 craft locals had benefited, and estimates made elsewhere.

The record of the conference itself shows negotiations were carried on for a claimed 3,267 men, while a producer source disputes this, declaring even 1,363 would be too high.

Totals Contrasted

Conference negotiators say there are working in the industry 70 plumbers, 250 machinists, 30 sheet metal workers, 305 plasterers, 1,500 building service employees, 15 blacksmiths, 22 molders, 75 sign and picture painters, 1,000 studio utility employees, 20 metal polishers.

The producer source said he believed there were only 35 plumbers, 150 machinists, 120 plasterers, 15 blacksmiths, about 500 building service employees, 22 molders, 20 sign and picture painters, 500 studio utility employees, and one metal polisher. The sheet metal workers are having a jurisdictional dispute with the carpenters, who have a closed shop, he said. Further, plumbers must have IATSE cards if they install anything on a stage under the Alliance's "special effects" classification.

Taking Bioff's statement that these workers average $900 annually, the increase obtained by the unions would amount to $295,030 annually if the conference total is used. If the other total is used, the increase costs the studios only $123,670 a year.

Bioff first claimed that the operating engineers had obtained a raise, but later it was discovered there were no studio operating engineers in jurisdiction of Local 12, International Union of Operating Engineers. The International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, included in the studio basic agreement, has jurisdiction over air condition engineers.

Locals Claiming Jurisdiction

Locals which claim jurisdiction over the crafts named by Bioff as having obtained increases are: Local 78, Plumbers and Steam Fitters International; Cinema Lodge 1185, International Association of Machinists; Local 108, Sheet Metal Workers International Association; Local 755, Operative Plasterers and Cement Finishers International Association; Local 72-B, Building Service Employes International Union; Local 212, International Brotherhood of Blacksmiths, Drop Forgers and Helpers; Local 374, Molders International Union; Sign and Picture Painters Local 831, International Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers; Local 67, Metal Polishers, Buffers, Platers and Helpers International Brotherhood; Studio Utility Employees Local 724, General Construction and Building

Laborers of America. Operating Engineers Local 12 is also a member.

In addition to ten IATSE studio locals, other members of the Conference are Studio Carpenters Local 946, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America; Studio Local 40, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers; Studio Transportation Drivers Local 399, International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Stablemen and Helpers. These three are in the basic studio labor agreement.

Bioff and Meyer Lewis, western AFL director, both had said "If the producers do not grant the demands of 10 per cent wage increase, all the unions in the Conference will strike." The basic agreement members could not walk out without abrogating the contract, and would have had to get the approval of their internationals before taking such action. They would, however, have observed the picket lines of IATSE and other members.

What Crafts Are Paid

Of the crafts which received their increases Saturday, retroactive to October 10th, the highest paid are the plasterers, whose artists, sculptors and staff modelers receive a base pay now of $2.35 an hour, or $14.06 for a six-hour shift. The foreman receives $1.69 hourly, or $10.18 per six-hour shift. A journeyman plasterer, caster, moldmaker or cement finisher, the lowest paid of men in the plasterers group, now get $1.41 hourly or $8.47 for six hours.

Receiving the lowest base rate are janitors and other building service employees, who now get 66 cents an hour for a 40-hour week, compared with 60 cents an hour previously.

Attempting to ascertain the average annual wage for each craft is very difficult and in almost all cases impossible, due to irregularity of calls, lack of figures, paying of overtime when jobs must be rushed, different systems of hiring at each studio, lack of a method for the union's headquarters to keep a check of earnings of members, and other reasons. Except for key men, gang bosses, department heads and foremen, in most cases work in motion picture crafts is only casual. When production is at peak, virtually all members of but a few crafts are working. The "peak" of production lasts for but 10 per cent of the entire year, or 36 days, it is estimated. In "boom" periods, men sometimes work a six-hour shift at one studio and after a six-hour rest period accept employment on a similar shift at another lot. In other instances, during "boom" times, men might work straight through for 10 hours, getting the usual time and a half for the added four hours to the shift.

Little "Steady" Work

Because of peculiarities of production, very little "steady" work can be expected, and unions must be able to answer calls for men at high tide of employment, thus creating "overloading" of membership rosters. For instance, studios sometimes use 500 men to build a set in 24 hours, each individual working a six-hour shift. Instead of letting 100 men each work 30 hours over a period of five days to do the work.

Time and a half is the usual overage pay, except in certain cases of double time on Sundays and holidays.

When a studio announces the building of a $50,000 set, what portion is spent on labor remains a lot secret. In some bookkeeping systems, the studios charge a percentage of the general and departmental overhead as part of this total. Naturally materials are included in the figure.

Studio labor scales for skilled mechanics are probably higher than for similar crafts elsewhere. Compensating, however, is the uncertainty of employment. Members of various studio locals, rather than receive any further raises, would like to obtain changes in working conditions which would create more employment, and at an even keel.

Bioff Calls Arrest a Plot and Files Writ Answerable on December 12

Characterizing his arrest in Los Angeles last Friday, on a 17-year-old Chicago charge as a plot to discredit him in the midst of his studio labor wage increase negotiations with producers, William Bioff, West Coast leader of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and chairman of the Conference of American Federation of Labor studio unions, on Saturday led his workers to victory, getting a 10 per cent wage increase for them, just after he had posted $1,000 bail and filed a writ of habeas corpus in the Chicago charge. Bioff had surrendered to the Los Angeles police Friday morning.

Labor and Court Matters

Bioff's troubles coincided with both the labor issue and an account of "missing" Bioff Chicago police court records, as reported by Westbrook Pegler, syndicate columnist, in the Chicago Daily News, New York World-Telegram and other papers. Mr. Pegler has been a forthright critic, in print, of Bioff policies, since last summer, when the Bioff IATSE lost a jurisdictional fight with the Associated Actors and Artistes of America for control of the Sophie Tucker vaudevillian union.

Bioff's writ of habeas corpus in Los Angeles is answerable on December 12th.

Efforts to prevent Bioff's extradition from California to Chicago were started in Chicago on Wednesday, by State Senator Abraham L. Marovitz, the union leader's counsel. Senator Marovitz notified Henry Horner, Illinois governor, that he would oppose the petition of the state's attorney, Thomas J. Courtney, for extradition, and was advised he would be granted a hearing.

This week Bioff and his associates publicly "resented" the "maligning." After the successful close of wage scale negotiations Saturday, the studio unions pledged "all local and international support necessary to his complete vindication."

Calls It "Effort by Enemies"

Bioff called his arrest "an obvious effort by my enemies to discredit and embarrass me on the eve of climaxing negotiations between the producers and the studio unions for a wage increase. It is significant that for 15 years, while I was in Chicago, and readily available, no attempt was made to revive this charge."

Replying to Bioff later in the week, Mr. Pegler said:

"How did I happen to select this time to expose Bioff? For three years I had been receiving communications. . . . Two years ago, an inquiry brought the information that he had a record of several arrests, but no data on a conviction.

"Therefore, next time I was in Chicago, which was last week, I determined to run down the truth. The inquiry proved that Bioff was convicted in a specific case, the sentence being conveniently forgotten."

Hollywood producers officially declared, "in most emphatic terms," that "they are not responsible, directly or indirectly, as charged by him," (Bioff) for his "present personal predicament," and that they "resent the imputation that they would resort to any such methods."

Bioff took cognizance saying: "Pegler has always professed a tolerant regard for human frailty; but, when a columnist who is supposed to write on current issues goes back nearly two decades for dirt with which to play somebody else's game, that's hitting below the belt," adding: "Pegler might turn his truculent pen to better advantage by presenting the cause of the Hollywood workingmen, who, employed in an industry of fabulous wealth, are barely able to make a livelihood."

AFL Units Get 10% Increase

is now assured of a 10 per cent wage increase retroactive in the case of the unions outside the IATSE to October 10, when the Conference opened negotiations on behalf of the AFL unions outside the IA.

Bioff was tendered a vote of thanks by the AFL Conference.

Said the resolution: "A vote of confidence is given to our chairman, William Bioff, and a pledge of all local and international support necessary to his complete vindication of any rumors or other persecution which has been directed against him."

The resolution declared that Bioff had been subjected "to ridicule, embarrassment and malicious persecution based upon falsehoods for the purpose of destroying confidence in him within the workers' ranks."

AFL Pledged in Support

In the negotiations with the producers last Friday and Saturday were Mr. Bioff; Meyer Lewis, western director of the AFL; J. W. Buzzell, executive secretary of the Los Angeles Central Labor Council; and Walter Redmond, international representative of the Plasterers Union.

This week the two sides met separately. The AFL conference unit convened Wednesday to plan retention of the wage raise beyond February 15th and to prove to the producers that if economy is necessary it should be on high salaries. The unit of the Association of Motion Picture Producers met Thursday to formulate a fact-gathering program to prove to the unions on February 15th that the wage increase must be given up.

Some studio workers feared that the producers would economize in other ways, and that they might shut the studios or drastically cut production during the holidays. It was pointed out that many pictures, enough f more than a month's theatre needs, are already completed.

ON THE UNION FRONTS

Last week it was reported that the IATSE, first group of AFL unions to have fought for and obtained the 10 per cent increase, would seek shortly to extend its sway over all studio AFL unions, under the sentiment expressed by George Browne, IATSE president: that the IATSE should control all workers in the entertainment industry.

Would Bar CIO

The excuse for such a move also would be that it would eliminate all opportunities for the Congress of Industrial Organizations to invade the entertainment field. The latest attempt of a CIO-backed union to do so was that of the United Studio Technicians Guild, which failed this fall to have itself certified, in a National Labor Relations Board studio election, as the bargaining agency for studio workers, in opposition to the IATSE studio unions.

The Alliance this week appeared ready to give a charter, if requested, to the Screen Publicists Guild. It is reported anxious for affiliation of the Society of Motion Picture Film Editors though that unit, it is said, is not anxious for affiliation. The Alliance can at any time, being an international union, form its own unit for any craft.

Seeking ASC Affiliation

The Alliance also is reported to be seeking the affiliation of the American Society of Cinematographers, but negotiations have been hampered by the reported refusal of the Alliance to accede to the Society's demands that it be kept apart from the Alliance's own cameramen's union, the Studio Photographers Local 659. The Society's members fear being outvoted by the minor workers belonging to the Local.

The Department of Justice still is probing Hollywood tax and labor problems, Charles Carr, special assistant to Frank Murphy, United States attorney general, has returned to Los Angeles from Washington, to continue his accumulation of evidence. While no findings are apparent as yet, the investigation is said to be concerned with the growth of the Fox Film Corporation into the Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation; with charges of income tax irregularities of several company executives and with labor "racketeering."

Anent a recent statement by Thurman Arnold, assistant United States attorney general in charge of anti-trust cases, that labor unions could be prosecuted for certain offenses against the anti-trust laws similar to those committed by large corporations, William Green, president of the AFL, last week said, in a protest to Mr. Murphy, that he was surprised by the aggressiveness of the stand by a friendly Administration's officer.

He likened Mr. Arnold's stand to the "retrogressive policy advocated hitherto only by the most extreme reactionary enemies of labor."

Exhibitors Urge Readjustment

Open exhibitor support to the producers was voiced by one organization last week: the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, who in their service bulletin, declared, "Theatre owners should cooperate with producers in their present efforts to repulse the demands of the studio unions."

However, Pete Wood, secretary of the organization, added:

"What is needed in this industry more than anything else is a complete readjustment of the salary scale in the producing end of the business, so that some of the tremendous and unnecessary expense loaded upon pictures can be reduced, and the resultant saving passed on to the theatre owner."

In New York, many members of the Independent Theatre Owners Association were reported to be dissatisfied with a recent 10 per cent tilt awarded to the Local 306 projectionists two weeks ago by an arbitration board. W. French Githens and David Weinstock, two of the Association's representatives on the board, were said to have been subjected to much criticism.

Local 306 still is negotiating with the major New York circuits on a 25 per cent pay raise, to be decided by an arbitration board.

Also in New York, Local 702, Motion Picture Laboratory Technicians, met on Monday night to organize Eastern film cutters and editors.

In Hollywood last week, the petitioners for Class B members (extras) of the Screen Actors' Guild lost a court move for a preliminary injunction to force the directors of the guild to grant extras the right to vote on union matters.

In Washington, last Friday, the National Labor Relations Board postponed a secret ballot election among cartoonists of the Walter Lantz, Loew's, Raymond Katz, and Leon Schlesinger studios, on the coast, to "on or before January 16th." The Screen Cartoon Guild had requested the postponement because its affairs were inactive pending issuance of a charter to it by the International Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers of America.

In New Haven, the Motion Picture Operators Union, Local 273, has elected A. Nelson Frazier president; Frank Perry, vice-president; Anthony Bascalicato, secretary; Edwin Boppert, treasurer; and Matthew W. Kennedy, business agent. Elected to the executive board were Myron Wheaton and Nick Villano.

In Jefferson City, Mo., last week, the state supreme court refused to entertain an appeal by John P. Nick, former president of the St. Louis projectionists union, Local 143, and Clyde Weston, its business agent, from an order by Circuit Judge Ernest Oakley in St. Louis, ousting them from control of the union and its funds. The supreme court referred the case to the St. Louis court of appeals. Mr. Nick and Mr. Weston were being tried on a charge of extortion of money from theatre owners in 1936 and 1937.

In New York last week it was said at the Eastern headquarters of the Screen Actors Guild that it was now licensing agents in the New York area.

MRS. FLANAGAN IN PLEA FOR STAGE

The National Theatre Conference, composed of theatrical persons interested in non-commercial efforts to promote the theatre in communities and universities, in New York this week was urged by Mrs. Hallie Flanagan, former director of the Federal Theatre Project of the WPA, to pick up the threads in theatre achievement which were dropped when the Federal Theatre Project was scrapped a year ago.

The Federal Theatre, as an institution, Mrs. Flanagan said, is "dead", but not even an act of Congress can kill an idea.

Hammons Meets GN's Creditors

E. W. Hammons, president of Grand National Pictures, conferred with his company's creditors on Wednesday in federal court in New York before Referee Peter B. Olney. He explained the progress of his negotiations with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for a loan of $450,000 and the necessity of continuing operations until the company gets back on its financial feet.

Meet Next Wednesday

Referee Olney adjourned the creditors' hearing to next Wednesday in the same court on condition that Patrick E. Shanahan, newly appointed chairman of the creditors committee, be allowed entry into the Grand National home offices, in effect to supervise the business for one week, and that Mr. Hammons report to the creditors' committee on Monday on progress on the RFC loan.

Mr. Hammons had met last Friday in the New York offices of the RFC with the officers of the corporation, T. Kennedy Stevenson, president of Electrical Research Products, Inc., and after the meeting said he was encouraged by developments.

Thomas J. Shanahan, former chairman of the creditors' committee, was denied admission to the meeting, according to the creditors' attorneys. The grounds were that creditors had no right to participate in such discussions, said the attorneys.

To Complete $600,000 Fund

The $450,000 from the RFC is necessary to complete a sum of $600,000 which the company will use to pay off creditors, and secure working capital. Other money is to come thus: $100,000 from Electrical Research Products, Inc.; $15,000 from the National City Bank; $10,000 from De Luxe Laboratories, and $25,000 from Loyd Wright.

Under the understood plan, the RFC would advance its $450,000 30 days after approval of the refinancing plan. Expected later is approximately $1,000,000 from Felt & Company, and associates, a Wall Street company, for the production and acquisition of pictures.

Fromberg Tentative Trustee

Harry Fromberg has been made trustee of the company, tentatively, to act only if refinancing fails and dissolution follows. On the creditors' committee, in addition to Mr. Shanahan, are Richard F. Walsh, vice-president of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees; Hap Hadley, Henry Waldman, Allen E. Freedman, president of De Luxe Laboratories; and Samuel Sedran.

The committee has secured authorization from the referee to examine the company's records.

A. Jesse Goldstein, creditors' accountant, told Referee Olney last Wednesday that the company had lost $800,000 last year, according to the books. Since the organization filed its petition, in receivership, its average weekly losses have been at least $4,000, Mr. Goldstein asserted.

Mr. Goldstein charged, at last Wednesday's hearing, that trademarks originally valued, in the books at $12,156 had been increased to $1,060,922 in the schedules.

The company has closed 10 of its exchanges, and skeletonized its home office staff. No person receives over $100 a week, and Mr. Hammons is serving without pay, it was declared.

Ben Judell, head of Producers Pictures, is reported to have signed a deal to produce on the Grand National Hollywood properties. Grand National also is reported to have closed distribution deals on a commission basis, with several unnamed producers.

HOLLYWOOD A "HIERARCHY": POWERS "NEW YORK ITS COLLECTION AGENCY"

LaGuardia Plan for Bringing Production "Back Home" Sets One of Universal's Founders Reminiscing on the Trek West

Patrick Anthony Powers—the Pat Powers of the founding of Universal Films Manufacturing Company, now Universal Pictures, back in 1912—this week offered remarks on the "hierarchy" of Hollywood for complacently eating up millions of dollars a week, the while New York, its collection agency, retains but little and stockholders are paid small dividends.

Inspired by LaGuardia Plan

Mr. Powers, a-swiveling in his chair in his offices at 723 Seventh Avenue, New York, had just finished reading newspaper accounts of Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia's project to "bring back" at least part of Hollywood motion picture production to the shores of the Hudson and the East Rivers.

He was reminiscing, by himself, of the days when he was one of the first producers to send a unit to California, when so many felt that California's sun and light were the all-essentials to motion picture photography. He never thought then that the whole shooting match, lock, stock and barrel, laboratories, studios, producers, stars and whatnot would one day be transplanted entirely in the west, with nary a camera cranking in New York.

Mr. Powers now believes that there should be a change, that part of the weekly remittances which New York has been pouring into the Hollywood "hierarchy" all these years, should be retained at the place of its collection, concluding that Hollywood has grown and developed only because of the weekly remittances of "stupendous amounts of money," fed to "a limited number of studio managers and high salaried stars who find it to their interests to operate 3,000 miles away from home office."

Turning for a moment from his principal present-day business of conducting a golf and country club and real estate development known as Longshore, at Westport in Connecticut, Mr. Powers this week took pen in hand to write to the Mayor on the subject, as follows:

"My dear Mr. Mayor:

"I have been discussing the matter of your project for the return of motion picture production to New York with our mutual friend, Paul Windels, who is familiar with my knowledge of the economics of the motion picture industry and to whom I have expressed my great admiration for the work which you have accomplished in establishing the air-port in New York.

"I was one of the first producers to send a company to the Coast, when it was essential that western pictures be made with that background. Due to the fact that it was possible to work outdoors without light we gradually produced pictures there, other than westerns, and continued to move both the technical and artistic departments to Hollywood.

"Since that time I have watched the growth of Hollywood and Los Angeles, which has been due entirely to the weekly remittances of stupendous amounts of money for production, building, etc. These companies have gradually been moving their laboratories and other facilities, for the production of pictures, to the Coast to the detriment of New York, which is used at present as a distributing center for the films. New York City has also been practically a collection agency for the payment of pictures from the entire world, where American pictures have been sold, for the benefit of California, as practically all moneys collected from the sale and exhibition of motion pictures during the past twenty years have been sent to the Coast. Very little of it has been retained in the east and a very small amount has been paid in the form of dividends to the stockholders who are principally in the east.

LA GUARDIA GETS A CARD TO TOOT HORN

New York's Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia today is an honorary member of Local 802 of the American Federation of Musicians (A. F. of L.) and has a gold-embossed membership card to prove it.

He received the card Monday night at the third annual medical fund benefit of the local in Madison Square Garden, attended by more than 15,000 persons. He said he was glad to get it, because some day he might find it necessary to earn his living tooting a horn. His father was an army bandmaster, and as a boy he played the cornet.

"For many years, as you have pointed out, the sun-light of California has not been necessary for picture production. Gradually we have had to send out lighting equipment to the Coast and, in recent years, sound equipment had to be sent out from the east, together with technicians to operate same.

"The yearly expense of railroad fare to and from New York alone is stupendous. Railroads have been the beneficiaries of this outlay.

Points to "Hierarchy"

"A hierarchy has developed in Hollywood, composed of a limited number of studio managers and high salaried stars who find it to their interest to operate three thousand miles away from the home office.

"The colossal amount of money which has been sent to the Coast during these years, which goes into millions weekly, could just as well have been retained for the production of pictures in New York and its vicinity. California has no special advantages at the present time over New York as within an hour's motor ride, everything possible for the production of pictures, in the way of scenery and backgrounds, can be had. Great savings can be made in the production of pictures in the east as against California. An intelligent survey of the situation, as it exists, would be essential and would show the advantages to be derived by the motion picture industry from the production of pictures in the east.

"If it were necessary, in order to bring the production to the east, a fraction of the expenditure which you have already devoted to the airport would accomplish the purpose which you have in mind and would help the community a thousand-fold. The equipments which are installed in the present studios in Hollywood, could very easily be detached from the building structures and moved to New York—it would then only be necessary to erect the main structures in which to house the equipment.

"The enhanced value of real estate, provided sufficient land could be acquired, would more than offset any expense which the City or the investors would undertake in the erection of the studios. I presume you have already given careful consideration to this fact.

"The principal people concerned are the bankers who now practically control the entire industry and who should be interested in a movement of this nature.

"The present anti-block booking bill which has been passed by the Senate, and looks as though it might pass the House of Representatives might have an important bearing on this whole situation as, instead of the production of pictures being confined to five or six units, it may be the means of spreading production to over one-hundred to one-hundred and fifty smaller units.

"The important thing, however, at the present time, is that arrangements should be made with two of the larger units to agree to come east if the proper facilities were made available.

"I wish you the best of success in your efforts,

"Respectfully,
"P. A. POWERS."

Thus did Mr. Powers give the first public expression of a film person to the subject of bringing back at least some production to New York—the Powers of old Edison and Victor gramophone and phonograph selling days, the Powers of penny peepers of the arcade era, of Powers' Picture Plays with Juliet Shelby, later billed as Mary Miles Minter, the Powers of Powers-Universal, of Powers Cinephone (at the very beginning of sound), etc., etc.

LaGuardia Plan in Hands of Committee

Productive of conferences, and, reputedly, of assurances, but nothing specific, Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia's "campaign" to set up a "new Hollywood" on the banks of the Hudson seemed to have bogged down slightly, as he turned the job over to an assistant, Clendenin Ryan. New York's Mayor, up to this week, had been issuing statements frequently on the practicability of production in the East, in the city "that has everything"; had been in weekly and bi-weekly conference with labor leaders interested in bringing about "10,000 jobs from Hollywood to New York"; and had, according to his "aides," received assurances of backing from "many, many producers and financial houses."

Mr. Ryan is the head of a newly formed "Chamber of Commerce" in the LaGuardia administration; the job of this unit is to win new industries for "this great city."

The Mayor first made public his desire to have the factories of illusion in his versatile domain, on October 16th, in an address to the meeting of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, at the Hotel Pennsylvania. Then followed consultations with George Meany, secretary of the New York State Federation of Labor; Thomas J. Lyons, president of the Central Trades and Labor Council; Sal J. Scoppa, business agent of the Studio Mechanics Union, Local 52; Charles Downs, business agent of the Newsreel Cameramen's Union, Local 544; and others. And then came statements about persuading the executives of the companies to transfer part of their assets, or 10 per cent, east; and further hints that, if these gentlemen were not persuaded of the practicability of such a move, new companies would spring up, backed by large banking houses.

This week, the banks were reported willing to finance only producers who have distribution commitments.

The mayor was visited last week by George Schaefer, president of RKO; King Vidor, director and producer; and other luminaries.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

While Rome Burns

The time: November 24th, evening. The place: Hollywood's Hollywood Boulevard. The characters: Some 300,000 citizens, assorted soldiers and police; a group of actors. Properties: Arc and spot lights, floats, uniformed bands, horses and motor driven vehicles.

Scene one: The mile long stretch of Hollywood Boulevard from Vine Street, running north and south, to the parallel La Brea Avenue, gradually fills with old and young citizens. The predominant note in apparel is slacks and blouses for the women, slacks and polo shirts for the men, as little as possible for the very young. Some bring crates and boxes on which to stand. Uniforms and authority appear, the street takes on a semblance of order. The crowd, eating, gesticulating, pushing, talk of last year's parade, point with pride to the signposts bearing the name "Hollywood Boulevard"; now entwined with lights and streamers, almost obliterated by placards bearing the cryptic legend "Santa Claus Lane."

Scene two: Movement and confusion increase as the first tentative tootlings of fifes and drums are heard. The crowd has grown and now overflows into the street. And suddenly a ground swell of sound spreads down the line, with a refrain very much like: "Here he comes." Lighted stars appeared magically on top of the palm trees and the light posts. And as the sound increases into a roar of approval and acclaim, Gene Autry, tanned of countenance, straight in the saddle as the Indian scouts he has sent to their screen doom, rides majestically alone as on any prairie trail. All know his responsibility, his mission. Mr. Autry is Grand Marshal.

And then they come. Anita Louise, on a 30-foot float from which, at appropriate intervals, flutter white doves. This is symbolic of peace, and interpreted by some as a direct message from studio headquarters to officials of labordom; just now engaged in serious dispute. Jack Benny, on the back of a large and intrepid wooden animal, from which perch he waves and smokes a forbidding looking cigar, with equal abandon. The initiates let it be known that Mr. Benny would shortly appear in a film the title of which was not without significance to present appearances. Dorothy Lamour follows shortly, sharing a lofty post with Robert Preston, and appearing quite at ease as cries of "sarong, sarong" issue from the crowd as greeting. Tom Mix, Andy Devine, others in great number follow in the procession, their vehicles all labelled so that there may be no mistake about their identity.

Scene three: The lights have gone down; the crowd dispersed. Only a few of the army of street cleaners remain. And, listening carefully, one could hear a weary expostulation against the continuing survival of the horse in the machine age.

POINTERS, SETTERS AND HUNTERS

Said to be the first picture made entirely on location, Jack Moss' production of Paramount's "The Biscuit Eater" is being shot some 3,000 miles from Hollywood at Albany, Georgia. Described as the center of America's bird dog area, Albany is the locale of many a bird dog trial, of numerous dog stud farms.

The two little boys featured in the film are, respectively, white and black. The former role was to have gone to Baby Le Roy, as his picture "comeback", but his illness placed Billy Lee, aged seven, in the part. The elegantly named Cordell Hickman plays the other part, having received it after being seen in the Hollywood production of "The Swing Mikado".

Recovering slowly, Hollywood at week's end had 33 pictures in work, the same number as last week. Only five were finished, compared to the preceding week's nine, and five also were started, as they were the week before.

Being prepared were 24, three more than the week before, while 82 were being edited, as against last week's 85.

Columbia wound up work on two: "His Girl Friday" and the as yet untitled fourth in the Charles Starrett series. Paramount finished "The Road to Singapore"; Universal, "Honeymoon Deferred," and Producers Pictures, "Mercy Plane."

Started were Samuel Goldwyn's "The Westerner"; Paramount's "The Way of All Flesh"; Twentieth Century-Fox's "Shooting High"; Universal's "The Road to Romance," and Warner Brothers' "And It All Came True."

Columbia and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer each finished one short subject, while the latter was also shooting one and had started another. Nine were being prepared; three each at Warner Brothers and Columbia; two at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and one at RKO. Being edited were 11.

WARNER REPORTS $1,740,000 PROFIT; UA THEATRE CIRCUIT NETS $138,811

Assets Overseas Written Down to Conform with Foreign Exchange Rates; RCA and Loew's Theatres Dividends

Warner Brothers showed an operating profit of $1,740,908 for the year ended August 26th, compared with $1,929,721 for 1938. This amounts to an equivalent of 36 cents per share on the common stock, after allowing for the year's dividends on the preferred, which was not paid, and compared with the 41 cents per share of 1938.

The operating profit for 1939 is computed after deduction of $674,780 for adjustment of film inventory, of which $551,371 came from new amortization rates set up because of the war.

At the same time the Warner financial report was made public, there came reports of 1939 earnings of $138,811 net for the United Artists Theatre Circuit; dividend payments by the Radio Corporation of America and by Marcus Loew's Theatres, Ltd., and a registration with the Securities Exchange Commission of a stock issue by the Consolidated Amusement Company, Ltd., of Honolulu.

The Warner Brothers report reveals that the company has put itself on what might be termed a "war basis," inasmuch as the assets in foreign countries have been written down to conform with foreign exchange rates, and film amortization rates have been stiffened to allow for a decline in foreign revenue.

New film amortization rates write off 19¼ per cent of negative film costs in four weeks after release, against 15 per cent under the old schedule. After 26 weeks 75¼ per cent of cost is written off against 70½ per cent under the old rates. New amortization rates have been applied as of September 1, 1938.

In addition to its consolidated balance sheet, the company presents a supplemental statement segregating assets in United States, Britain and other foreign countries. This shows total assets of $168,617,990 of which $164,420,721 are domestic, $3,626,743 in Britain and $570,526 in other countries.

	Cumulative Percentage of Film Costs Written Off
	Negatives		Positive Prints
	Former Rate	Revised Rate	Former Rate	Revised Rate
4 weeks after release.......	15	19¼	22	25
8 weeks after release.......	36½	38	52	52
13 weeks after release.......	53	55	75	75
26 weeks after release.......	70½	75¼	96	96
30 weeks after release.......	74	79¼	100	100
39 weeks after release.......	83	87½
52 weeks after release.......	95	96½
65 weeks after release.......	100	100

In a statement to the company's stockholders, Harry M. Warner, president, said, referring to a debenture transfer plan, and by order of the board of directors:

Pursuant to the plan of exchange referred to in the last annual report, and without the payment of any commissions or underwriting fees, $19,388,000 principal amount of optional 6 per cent convertible debentures, Series due September 1, 1939, have been exchanged for the company's 6 per cent debentures, series due 1948. The balance of the optional 6 per cent convertible debentures, series due Sept. 1, 1939, were either purchased in the open market by the company or called for redemption on June 29, 1939, and funds sufficient for such redemption were deposited with the trustee. The funds for the purchase of debentures in the open market and for the redemption on June 29, 1939 were obtained from working capital, mortgages on individual properties, and a bank credit agreement, which bank credit agreement is referred to in Note D attached to the consolidated balance sheet.

Prior to Aug. 26, 1939, the company retired $588,000 principal amount of 6 per cent debentures, series due 1948, in satisfaction of the sinking fund due on or before Dec. 15, 1939.

Current cash assets of the company are $5,539,975 and assets including accounts and notes receivable and inventories make the working assets $25,435,949, of which $23,557,729 is in the United States, $1,667,243 in the British Isles, and $210,977 in other foreign factors.

The statement of consolidated profit and loss and earned surplus for the year ended August 26th, discloses an income of $102,083,131, of which $98,024,760 was from film rentals, theatre admissions, and sales, and $4,058,370 from rents from tenants and royalties. The statement also shows a net income of $11,511,603, before other income and charges.

The capital surplus, carried to balance sheet, and as of August 26th, is $57,241,427.

UA Theatres Net $138,811

The United Artists Theatre Circuit, Inc., reported last week a $138,811 net after all charges had been deducted for the year ending August 31, 1939. In the preceding year the company made $148,743.37. Before deductions for interest, depreciation, amortization and provision for Federal income taxes the net was $509,134.77 including the $137,691.22 paid into the Circuit by affiliated companies not wholely owned by the chain.

All the directors of the Circuit were reelected at the stockholders meeting held November 27th in Baltimore.

RCA Declares Three Dividends

David Sarnoff, president of the Radio Corporation of America, announced following a meeting of the board of directors held November 24th the following dividends: 87½ cents per share on the outstanding $3.50 cumulative convertible first preferred stock for the period from October 1st to December 31st, 1939, payable December 21st to stockholders of record December 4th; $1.25 per share for the same period on the "B" preferred stock, payable under the same conditions as the first preferred dividend and 20c per share on the common payable on January 16th to holders of record at the close of business on December 8th.

Loew's Theatres, Ltd., Dividend

Marcus Loew's Theatres, Ltd. has voted an accumulations dividend of $3.50 per share on the 7 per cent preferred stock, payable December 15th to stockholders of record December 2nd. Dividend arrears on January 15th will total $14 a share after the above disbursement, according to Fitch.

Honolulu Chain Registers Stock

Consolidated Amusement Company, Ltd., Honolulu Exhibition Company, headed by C. H. Cooke, has filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission a registration statement covering 150,000 shares of common stock voting trust certificates and 21,287 voting trust certificates for $20 par 6 per cent preferred stock.

SHOWMEN'S REVIEWS

This department deals with new product from the point of view of the exhibitor who is to purvey it to his own public.

The Great Victor Herbert

(Paramount)

Memorable Music Set to Story

This, ladies and gentlemen of show business, is a box office picture in each and all of the several correct meanings of that much abused term. Eight times, by count, it drew tumultuous applause from a case hardened Hollywood preview audience, and once it drew tears.

Each time the applause followed superb rendition of a Victor Herbert melody as familiar as the flag to every American, and the tears accompanied a story twist as sentimental as any ever contrived by a Herbert librettist. Not highbrow, not lowbrow, but strictly on the beam for both mass and class audiences, the film is a triumph of showmanliness for all represented in its production.

The story is not a biography of the American composer, who is portrayed by Walter Connolly with compelling effect, but a story about a man, a woman and a child whose lives were lived within his sphere of influence, professional and personal. These are played and sung by Allan Jones, here giving his greatest singing and acting performance to date, by Mary Martin, singing and acting her way to stardom in this first screen appearance, and by Susanna Foster, a child of 14 whose voice is sure to be talked about throughout the land for long and long.

In support of these three are many and gifted players, each contributing to a distinguished production, and direction achievement by Andrew L. Stone, outstanding orchestral direction by Arthur Kay, and magnificent staging of musical numbers by Le Roy Prinz, are vital essentials of a tremendously satisfying whole. The screen play by Russel Crouse and Robert Lively, from a story by Messrs. Lively and Stone, is a remarkable demonstration of skill in the difficult business of fashioning a fiction to fit a fabulous music score.

There is and has been showmanly calculation, since the Irving Berlin song hits were strung together in a hit picture, an irresistible impulse to compare all similarly compounded films to that one. It is of record that the Herbert hits and the Berlin hits are not comparable, musically speaking, but it would require a Gallup poll to determine whether more theatregoers now living know and thrill to the works of one or the other. If it be granted, for sake of market estimate, that the Herbert following is the numerical equivalent of the Berlin following, it would seem that this film is as rich in box office promise as that one was.

Produced by G. M. O. Directed by Andrew Stone. Screen play by Russel Crouse and Robert Lively. Based on a story by Andrew L. Stone and Robert Lively. Photographed by Victor Milner, A.S.C. Destry Rides Again

And So Does Marlene Dietrich

Showmen fearful that the columnists have oversold this wild and wooly return of the disastrously oversold Marlene Dietrich to the profitable field of practical motion pictures needn't be. The columnists haven't told the half of it. However deep or permanent may be her artistic reformation, she goes the whole way back to her original singing, swinging, honky tonk beginnings, to the "Blue Angel" swagger minus the lust, in this rootin'-tootin' super western. Nor is that, although the livest exploitation angle for public consumption, the whole of the important truth about the picture.

Doubtlessly surer fire copy in many localities is the equally veracious news that the James Stewart of "Mr. Smith" and other notable previous appearances is here on view in a part as rich in his special variety of values as his most amorous admirer might desire. He plays a meekly masterful young man who brings law to a rip-roarin' frontier town without the aid of a six gun, until the final terrific triumph of justice. Stewart was never better marquee than now and never a better actor than here.

What goes on in this frontier town before the hero puts it to rights are such things as haven't been filmed so forthrightly and friskily since the late Thomas H. Ince filmed them with William S. Hart pulling the trigger. Miss Dietrich plays a bar room entertainer, "gyp" artist and girl pal of the town bad man as nobody has in years, if ever, and only Mae West might. The knockabout battle between Miss Dietrich and Una Merkel, so widely publicized in the cinema columns, is wilder, hotter and longer than they said it was. Nothing since Pola Negri's "Passion" has approached it. The lady also wins Mischa Auer's pants from him in a poker game and sings three songs that are purer as to lyric than some she sang in pre-code films but uttered as throatily and in the same general direction. The character is redeemed, ultimately, by bullet.

Charles Winninger as the town drunk who gets appointed sheriff for a joke and sobers up to live the part well enough to be killed for it, Brian Donlevy as the thief and killer who runs the community, and Samuel S. Hinds as the crooked Mayor turn in brilliant performances. There are no weak spots in the long cast and the settings are yet another tribute to the versatile artistry of Jack Otterson.

George Marshall's direction is a masterpiece for professionals to marvel at and for audiences to enjoy, as is proper, without knowing why. He keeps a varied assortment of characters steadily in motion and constantly balanced, one against another. He winds up the picture in a hail of lead, then adds a quiet sequence only to break into an hilariously comic incident to finish with. The original story by Felix Jackson, suggested by Max Brand's novel, is a right, tight piece of writing excellently adapted by himself, Gertrude Purcell and Henry Myers. Miss Dietrich's songs, by Frank Loesser and Frederick Hollander, are fitted to her as smartly as the hose that encase her famous legs, which she here frees from their long concealment, freely.

The film is exhilarating and forceful entertainment, as far from Miss Dietrich's sophisticated extravaganzas as black ink is from red. It is not, of course, especially suitable for exhibition at a parent-teachers' matinee.

Sol Wurtzel's staff, Cesar Romero is here substituted for Warner Baxter as the O. Henry hero of this and previous titles without perceptible jar. This particular stroke of genius consists simply of introducing the new "Cisco Kid" at start of the picture and then switching emphasis to a baby and holding attention on the infant for the first half hour or more, by which time a delighted audience accepts the new hero as is without knowing it's doing so.

The foregoing is set down with no intention of robbing Mr. Romero or the baby, a completely charming mite named Gloria Ann White, of honors honestly won. Mr. Romero is approximately the perfect personality to play the "Cisco Kid" role, here and in as many more appearances as may seem appropriate. He looks and acts the character to a T, and he dances the romantic side of it, legitimately and in narrative, which Mr. Baxter sang. The baby, seen here in its first film, is a personality for theatregoers to tell each other about, an opinion predicated on no mere preview reaction, which was a rave, but also on the fact that the studio is presenting her again in the next Jones Family film.

The story by Stanley Bauh and the workmanlike screen play by Frances Hyland are unique in concept and smoothly executed under direction of Herbert I. Leeds. Cast as the villain, Robert Barrat delivers his always dependable portrayal. Chris-Pin Martin is excellent as the hero's trigger-tricky companion, and Virginia Field is saucily dynamic as a dance hall girl. Marjorie Weaver is pleasing as the school teacher the hero marries to another man. Production by John Stone is shipshape in every particular.

Katia

(Mayer-Burstyn)

Russian Love Story

"Katia," a well-filmed love story of Princess Catharine Dolgoruki, one of Russia's more glamorous women, and Czar Alexander II in the mid-nineteenth century, is based on the novel by Princess Marthe Bibesco and was adapted for the screen by Jean-Jacques Bernard. Mayer-Burstyn has imported the French production following the success of the picture in England and France.

In "Katia" Danielle Darrieux, who portrays the title role, moves from her usual flighty portrayal of the bold young girl to a more serious type of drama, and a sagacious move it proves to be.

John Loder, star of English-made motion pictures, lends an impressive performance as Czar Alexander of Russia, and the supporting cast of Marcel Simon, Aime Clarioud and Maria Helene Daste, as the invalid Czarina, handle their parts ably enough.

The settings are replete in 19th century splendor and costuming, while the musical background under the directorship of Wal-Berg is noticeably on the plus side, especially in the palace scene after the court presentation when "Katia" waltzes with the Czar to the music of Johann Strauss.

Superimposed English titles by Julian Leigh help fix the attention of the audience on a picture which depends mainly on the dialogue for continuity.

Maurice Tourneur, director, Robert LeFevre, photographer, and A. Arnstam and Guy de Gastyne, art directors, have handled their work well.

Reviewed at a private press screening in New York at the Radio City Music Hall projection room. The audience applauded.—George Spires.

Produced by E. A. Algazy and distributed in the United States and Canada by Mayer-Burstyn. Based on the novel "Katia" by Princess Marthe Bibesco. Screenplay by Jean-Jacques Bernard. Two Thoroughbreds

(RKO Radio)

A Boy and a Horse

This is the story about the stolen thoroughbred race horse whose colt runs away and is found by an orphaned boy working on the farm of his coarse and hard bitten uncle. His love of horses, engendered by the foal, brings him into touch with neighbors who understand boys and horses, and with a girl who sees promise in him.

The simplicity and humanity of the story are coupled with fine portrayals by the boy, Jimmy Lydon, who will also be seen in "Tom Brown's School Days," and the girl, Joan Brodel, 14 years old to the boy's 16, whose approach to her role is marked by a sure comprehension notable even in the more mature.

The screen play, by Joseph A. Fields and Jerry Cady, from a story by the former, accounts competently for the situations depicted. Created to round out a program, the picture could in many situations stand alone. Its lack of pretension is in itself a builder of audiences accustomed to straightforward narrative and action.

The Return of Dr. X

(FN-Warner Brothers)

Weird Melodrama

"Doctor X" is a very good picture of the eerie type of melodrama. It has good direction, good acting, pace, suspense and that touch of the weird, which many humans find so fascinating. Its theme is not new to motion pictures but for that matter few themes are. It centers around the haemospasia activities of a man once pronounced dead by electrocution who has been returned to the living by his counterpart in eerieness, a blood specialist.

The specialist, played by John Litel, is a doctor seeking the discovery of synthetic blood. However, the man he had brought back from Valhalla, a doctor who had been convicted of murder, can stay among the living only by replenishing his blood supply, a supply, incidentally, depending upon the most rare of the four blood types, Type 1. Humphrey Bogart, with a streak of silver in his hair and a face of marble pallor, is the sinister stalker of Type 1 victims.

Reviewed at the Criterion theatre, New York. The audience, from every indication, thoroughly enjoyed the picture.—Paul C. Mooney, Jr.

Come On, George

(ATP-ABFD)

Racing Extravaganza

Preoccupation with the impending War—it was made just before the outbreak of hostilities—may account for this latest George Formby production lacking the sparkle and spontaneous comedy of most of its predecessors. There is, of course, enough Formby for the Formby fans, and the English exhibitor will sell the film entirely on its star's name. An indifferent supporting cast and rather too much leisure in getting into the film's comedy stride will probably lessen the star's chances of an extra territorial appeal.

Formby, this time, is cast as a stable hand, unconsciously set to guard a wild racehorse called Maneater. Formby, battling with racecourse crooks, is psycho-analyzed and hypnotized into unusual moral and physical courage.

There is an accepted if ultra-slender line of romance.

The ancient gag of running along the top of a moving train is exploited, and there is some nonsense with a police sergeant who offers to furnish his cell and rent it to Formby, and a mental specialist episode with much play on the theme of delayed reflex.

Formby plays extremely well and sings two or three songs.

Shown to an all-trade audience the film provoked laughter at the appropriate moments, although there were patches of uncomfortable quietude.—Aubrey Flanagan.

The Big Guy

(Universal)

Melodrama

This is a distinctly different type of prison picture, novel in story, unique in development, although plentifully supplied with prison escapes and the other standard ingredients of penitentiary melodrama. It is ably directed by Arthur Lubin, adequate in production details supplied by Burt Kelly and, all in all, a trig and trustworthy item.

Victor McLaglen is seen as a warden temporarily appointed and so distressed by prospect of demotion as to take possession of stolen funds which come into his custody under circumstances making their retention seemingly safe. Jackie Cooper has one of the best parts of his career as a young man convicted of a murder he did not commit. The screen play by Lester Cole, from a story by Wallace Sullivan and Richard K. Polmer, presents the warden with a choice between keeping the money and letting the boy be executed, or returning it and saving him. He finally takes the latter course, but not until the boy and a prison trusty have escaped. The warden is shot and killed in their capture.

Excellent supporting roles are played by Edward Brophy, Ona Munson and Peggy Moran, a newcomer of impressive promise.

The Green Hornet

Now in Serial Form

The not unexpected has happened and the popular radio figure, "The Green Hornet," has been transported to screen dimensions. He comports himself with all his virile heroics of the air. In the opening installments, we find "Britt Reid," alias the "G.H.," using his vocational calling of a newspaper editor to mask his efforts to remove some minions of crooked business practices and governmental rule. Among the items on the gentleman's agenda are investigation of a faulty construction of a tunnel, and an insurance racket whereby student pilots, after being handsomely insured by the gang, are sent to their deaths in rickety planes. The extraction from what looks like certain death appears a bit too pat. Gordon Jones plays the dual role. As "Reid" he appears a bit stiff, but once masked and in action he matches up well in the school of chapter play daredevils. Anne Nagel, Wade Boteler, and Keye Luke are important players. There will be thirteen chapters.—Running time, 21 minutes each chapter.

Zorro's Fighting Legion

Serial

The adventures of Zorro during the reign of Benito Juarez, first president of Mexico—treated before in motion pictures with Douglas Fairbanks, Sr., in the title role—return to the screen this time in serial form and presented by Republic. Treachery against the Juarez government with Mexican Indians and outlaws robbing gold trains and resorting to other underhanded methods to undermine the newly formed republic is the basic plot of the story. Zorro is played by Reed Hadley. He is supported by Sheila Darcy, William Corson, Leander De Cordova and others. The first chapter runs 30 minutes with succeeding chapters running 18 minutes. Twelve chapters complete the serial.

The Silly Season

(20th Century-Fox)

Lew Lehr Holiday

Those newsreel patrons who have found the brief appearance of Mr. Lew Lehr's "Dribble-Puss" comments too brief should relish this subject, which is devoted entirely to his wisecracks. The material used is an expose of the publicity antics instituted by press agents and Chambers of Commerce and includes bathing girlies, snoring techniques and a riderless race. In some instances Mr. Lehr's comments slip a bit to an off-side slant, but in general the "Dribble-Puss" Parade should be enjoyed by the Lehr public.

Popular Science, No. 2

(Paramount)

Scientific Developments

Produced in color Popular Science No. 2 is a roundup of latest scientific developments. Beginning with rubber jackets for meat products which preserve moisture and flavor, the camera goes into a new method of erecting houses of concrete within 48 hours, machinery utilized to pick and prepare pineapples in Hawaii, and a trip through the Underwriters Laboratories in Chicago where everyday articles are tested for safety and performance. Included are a few "whacky" inventions in the lighter vein for an already enjoyable reel.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Sleeping Princess

Lantz Colored Cartune

A miniature from the Walter Lantz paint pots has been whipped up into gay and fancy colors for a brief treatment of the fairy story legend of the Sleeping Princess who was awakened from her long nap by the reviving kiss of a handsome Prince. The important piece of osculation, as with the distributor's Deanna Durbin in her first amatory experience, works the trick, and all, including the audience, have a happy time. Voice dubbing is particularly effective.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Let's Talk Turkey

(MGM)

The Art of Carving

For Christmas Pete Smith reveals to the audience how the turkey that escaped Thanksgiving should and should not be carved. The first demonstration is by an experienced carver. Then comes Mr. Newly-wed, who rips the bird from wing to wing and joint to joint while the sneering in-laws offer anything but help. An excellent and instructive subject that will draw plenty of laughs.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Fagin's Freshmen

(Vitaphone)

Merrie Melody Moment

The color composition lesson depicted in this newest Merrie Melody moment would seem to be that "be it ever so humble, there is no place like home," even if one of the household practices calls for familial community singing of nursery ditties. There's not so much as an irreverent nod to the Dickensian source, the nasty natured Fagin of "Oliver Twist" ill fame. The tale concerns a kitten by the name of Blackie who revolts against chiming in with his brothers and sisters in the family group's "sissy" songs. The business of the proceedings is nicely realized all along the line, from comedy situations to color application.—Running time seven minutes.

Dad for a Day

(MGM)

Our Gang Comedy

A romance is woven into the latest issue of the "Our Gang" series. A young and bashful garage owner and the widowed mother of one of the Gang are the romantic couple. When the boys plan a picnic for fathers and sons they must find a temporary parent for one of the boys. They ask the garage attendant. The picnic is a success and the boy and his temporary father are awarded the medal. The widow and the temporary father marry.—Running time, 11 minutes.

American Saddle Horses

(Vitaphone)

Color Parade Item

Even if the spectator's experience with equine travel is limited to merry-go-round riding, he should enjoy and find instructive this Color Parade pageant of horseflesh, from the lowly but dependable mustang to the more picturesque and performing saddle horses. Slow motion camera work is particularly appropriate for the analysis of trotting, cantering and galloping. Color adds to the interest.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Quaint St. Augustine

(MGM)

FitzPatrick Traveltalk

Called the oldest permanent white settlement in America, St. Augustine has been captured by the camera in all its natural beauty and quaintness in the third of James A. FitzPatrick's series "See America." Such places as the Bridge of Lions, the Ponce De Leon hotel, an historic slave market, the world's largest ostrich and alligator farms, Fort Marion and Castle San Marcos during the Spanish rule, are brought before the audiences.—Running time, 9 minutes.

Mendelssohn's Wedding March

(MGM)

Musical Short

An episode from the life of Felix Mendelsohn is brought to the screen in color and reveals how he came to write his Wedding March. Walking in his garden he heard a peasant playing the violin for his wife-to-be. The boy, offered an opportunity to study at one of the better European colleges, declined because it would interfere with his marriage. Mendelssohn agreed to finance the trip for both husband and wife. At the wedding ceremony his march is played.—Running time, 8 minutes.

Information Please, No. 3

(RKO Pathe)

The Answer Men

The answer men for the third in the "Information Please" series are the permanent members of the board of experts, John Kieran, Franklin P. Adams and Oscar Levant, and the guest expert is Clarence Budington Kelland, who has dabbled a bit in writing. Mr. Kelland will be remembered as the author of "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town" and many another story that has reached the screen. Of the permanent members Mr. Kieran in this issue seems to be the best informed on all matters, Mr. Adams the best informed on nostalgic subjects and Mr. Levant the best informed on baseball and witticism. Mr. Kelland as guest expert is perfectly at home in those surroundings and in no wise is intimated by his confreres. He answers questions facilely and rivals Mr. Levant in the wit department. It is an intriguing and entertaining subject. Running time, 10 minutes.

Costs Tripled in 25 Years, Says Exhibitor 'Oldtimer'

Kansas' Ed T. Burgan Asks Fewer but Better Films

by KENNETH FORCE
in Kansas City

Ed Burgan, called the "grand old man of the movies" in Kansas, rounds out 25 years in exhibition with some very definite conclusions: Twenty-five years have brought a tripling of film costs and a 35 per cent increase in operating costs; giveaway-dishes alone cost him $10,000 in a single year, and their complete elimination in a subsequent year caused no drop in income; fewer but better pictures alone will return single feature programs.

Started with Slides

From slides advising the audience to wait "One Minute While the Operator Changes the Reels" to the employment of extra help to give away dishes or sit up with patrons who want to see the last reel of a multiple feature program, Ed T. Burgan, Kansas City, Kansas, has been an exhibitor.

Like a lot of other showmen, Ed Burgan will tell you by the hour of the things that are wrong with the business, but the fact that he is still going strong after 25 years indicates how he really feels. He's the "grand old man" of exhibition in Kansas City, Kansas, and it's a swell business, even if there are things the matter with it.

Paid Operator $12 a Week

It's true that theatre operation isn't as simple as it was in 1914. Mr. Burgan, who started out in Beloit, Kansas, used to pay the operator $10 or $12 a week. Making money wasn't simple, but it was a lot easier than it is today.

Over all, pictures have vastly improved since 1914, but Mr. Burgan still has coming the experience of seeing individual product live up to its pre-season promises, he said.

And there were some good productions in the early days: massive shows that made the box office as lively as a cricket on a cold night. Mr. Burgan recalls "The Gladiators," "Last Days of Pompeii," and "Birth of a Nation" as three cases in point. Even though they cost money (Burgan paid $200 for "The Beast of Berlin" for three days at Beloit—and could have held it a week), they made money.

It isn't the march of time so much as the march of costs that impresses Mr. Burgan about his quarter of a century in the theatre business. In the period that covers his five years at the Grand, Beloit; his six years in Kansas City, Mo., and his fourteen years in Kansas City, Kansas, where he now operates the Home, Tenth Street and Gauntier, the cost of film has almost tripled. In the period since October, 1926, when he took over the Tenth Street, the cost of operating a theatre has risen 35 per cent, although the theatres are taking in very little if any more actual money than they did then.

Wall Fans Then

"We used to think we had A No. 1 ventilation if we had a couple of wall fans," he said. "Seats were hard, floors uncarpeted; there was no sound. Today the theatre without the finest air conditioning, sound and projection equipment, seats, etc., etc., etc., could give away Ford automobiles and not do business. There wasn't any radio in those days either, and the people didn't play softball or spend so much time watching all the other ball games: baseball, basketball, football, etc., etc."

" . . . stay in there and pitch"

But the exhibitor isn't entirely blameless in the problem of increased expense, he said; not all the cost of doing business has been added by the producers. Exhibitors almost everywhere still are returning to the patron a part of every admission in one way or another. Mr. Burgan quit giving back his income in 1936, and he hasn't given away anything since, to the considerable improvement of his net, he observed.

Another cost factor for which exhibitors are partly responsible, he said, is the double feature. The idea that if people won't buy one picture they'll buy two, is, in Mr. Burgan's opinion, erroneous. If the picture is good, one is enough. He'd like to see single features come back, and thinks producers could help by making fewer but better pictures.

But, on the occasion of his twenty-fifth anniversary celebration recently, arranged by his son, Edmond F. Burgan, who has been with him in theatre operation since 1914, Ed Burgan summarized: "The only answer is to be thankful for what we have and stay in there and pitch."

Colortone in Merger

Colortone Productions, engaged in the slide film and industrial film field, has merged with Kennedy-Kut Recordings, electrical transcription company, under the name Photo & Sound, Inc. The new company will be active in both fields.

Transatlantic Book

Transatlantic Distributors, Inc., has a brochure listing its releases for the season. They are "Safia," "Conflict," "L'Emigrante," "Derniere Jeunesse," "White Slave Girl" and "Innocence."

Standard Selects Van Leer

Standard Pictures Distributing Company has appointed Arnold Van Leer Associates as its advertising, publicity and exploitation representatives.

Merger of Agfa Ansco, General Aniline Planned

A merger of the Agfa Ansco Corporation, manufacturer of photographic apparatus and film, into the General Aniline and Film Corporation, which owns 81 per cent of Agfa Ansco's shares, will be proposed at special meetings of stockholders of the two companies on December 28th.

The announcement of the merger plan was made by D. A. Schmitz, president of General Aniline and Film, until recently named the American I. G. Chemical Corporation. He said the proposal was in line with a policy of simplification of corporate structure.

Under the plan one share of Class A common stock of General Aniline and Film would be exchanged for each three common shares of Agfa Ansco.

Upon consummation of the merger Agfa Ansco would continue under the same management as before and would be operated as the Agfa Ansco Division of General Aniline. W. H. Bennett, president of the Emigrant Industrial Savings Bank; William C. Breed of Breed, Abbott & Morgan; W. P. Pickhardt, chairman of Agfa Ansco, and Ernst Schwartz, president, would be added to the board of General Aniline, increasing its membership to 12.

It is understood that a large part of the stock of General Aniline is owned by European interests, with I. G. Chemie of Switzerland, one of the principal foreign holding companies. General Aniline and certain subsidiaries are under contract with I. G. Farbenindustrie, A. G., of Germany for exploitation of its patents in this country.

Radio Pitches In For Four Films

The Paramount picture "Geronimo" opened Saturday night at the Orpheum theatre, Phoenix, Ariz., concluding a three day "Valley of the Sun Celebration," with Governor Robert T. Jones as official host. The opening was broadcast over 65 stations of the Mutual Broadcasting Company network from 10:30 to 10:45. The New York premiere of RKO's "That's Right, You're Wrong," starring Kay Kyser, Wednesday, at Loew's Criterion, also was broadcast.

Two other films are set for broadcasting "plugs." They are Warner Brothers "Four Wives" and Paramount's "Gulliver's Travels." Warners have arranged a tie-up with the Lux Radio Theatre for December 4th for representation of "Four Daughters" with original cast, which is the same as the cast in "Four Wives," soon to be released. Ten minutes of the program will be devoted to discussing filming of "Four Wives."

The Franco-American Spaghetti Company will sponsor a special broadcast in connection with the world premiere of Paramount's "Gulliver's Travels" over the Columbia Broadcasting System December 18th. The picture will open the same evening at the Sheridan theatre, Miami Beach. The broadcast will be carried by 52 outlets, with WQAM, Miami, originating the program.

Paramount held the world's premiere of "The Great Victor Herbert" Monday at the Carthay Circle theatre in Hollywood. The film is reviewed in this issue. See Showmen's Reviews.

. . . as American as apple pie!

THE HARDY FAMILY, the whole kit and kaboodle of them, have moved in next door to practically everybody in this country — and established themselves in our hearts as the most human, pesky, yet altogether pleasant pack of neighbors anybody ever had.

Ever since Mickey Rooney first went to Lewis Stone for a little confidential, man to man advice . . . ever since Fay Holden first tried to plaster Mickey's cowlick down, or take some of the shine off his blue serge suit . . . we've all had a swell time peeking at our new neighbors, the Hardys, through the window-shades, spying out what they're having for dinner, who they're going out with, eavesdropping on their family quarrels and poking our noses into their business in the good old gossipy American way. Too bad Mark Twain never lived to see an Andy Hardy picture.

You can't help liking a real human kid who takes to "swing" as naturally and honestly as he takes to the measles . . . and pulls through both with no ill effects. You can't help liking a family that meets each new crisis with fortitude and real down-to-earth humor . . . whether it's a new girl-friend for Andy, a new dilemma for the Judge or just another squabble about who'll do the dishes.

There's something solid about the Hardy family. "Judge Hardy & Son" is their newest and best adventure. It's mighty well worth seeing! Watch for it at your favorite theatre!

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

CHARLES MARLOWE CONNER, wide-grinning 14-year-old son of Marlowe Conner, manager of Warners' Avalon theatre, Chicago, is back home there after a trip that took him to Europe and back for a total cash outlay of 50 cents. Young Conner skipped school one afternoon about a month ago, hitch-hiked to New York, stowed away on a Dutch steamship, was caught, jailed in Europe as a spy.

"It was this way," Charles grinned, wiping back a blond cowlick, "I wanted to be a spy. I was tired of going to school and I wanted to earn a lot of money. When I got over there I figured I could join an army as a spy.

"That's where the big money is, not laying on your belly in the trenches. I know I could be a good spy. I'd serve for Germany, France or England, whichever would pay me the big money. This is an age where you got have dough."

It was in September that the thought of going back to school palled on Charles, and a few weeks later he stuffed some clothing into an old camping knapsack and "bummed" his way to New York. He had it all figured out. He was going to join the army.

He applied for enlistment at a recruiting station, saying he was 18. He passed all the tests, but the recruiting officer doubted he was 18 and sent him to Fort Jay on Governors Island. He had just fifty cents in his pocket.

He was kept on Governors Island for a week until they found out his age. He's tall and big for his age and for a time he fooled them. When he was told to go home and back to school he stowed away on the Holland-America liner Zaandam instead.

He was discovered soon afterward and put to work at sea, but he got awfully seasick and spent most of his time in bed. It was when the ship was held up by the British authorities in Downs for inspection that he decided to act.

For nine days the Zaandam lingered at anchor and Charles waited for a "clear day." On the ninth day, a warm, sunny day, he fitted his kit on his back—the kit weighed 30 pounds—slipped to the side of the boat and jumped into the water.

The ship was three miles from shore. Charles started to swim.

"I swam about a mile and a half when my legs became cramped," he said. "I had been swimming in and out of ships, keeping out of sight. Finally I got too tired and I swam to the nearest ship. It was a Dutch freighter, Towa."

He yelled up, weakly, and the sailors pulled him aboard. He told them what had happened, and they returned him to the Zaandam. Then he was shifted from ship to ship and finally taken to Rotterdam.

In Rotterdam he was put with a group of persons to be deported, and finally he was placed on the Statendam.

"If I could only have gotten ashore in England," he said, "I could have convinced the British or French I was intelligent and they could have given me a passport and I could get into the army and be a spy."

He admitted he couldn't speak either French or German.

"But I got two eyes, haven't I?" he asked. "I could go out and see how many tanks there were and how many guns and report back, couldn't I?"

Since Americans spend so much of their time figuring out how to do things in the least time, the little pocket-size magazine "digests" are growing by leaps and bounds, research writers for the WPA Writers' Project discovering no less than 50-odd on newspaper stands, running all the way from movies and men to sex and salvation.

One group of "digests" is for women, the WPA writers reporting their contents as carrying such weighty subjects as "Should My Daughter Be an Actress," "Birth Control Is Here to Stay," "How to Lose a Man."

"No young lady shall become a member of Mt. Holyoke Seminary who cannot kindle a fire, mash potatoes, repeat the multiplication table, and at least two-thirds of the shorter catechism.

"Every member of the school shall walk a mile a day unless a freshet, earthquake or some other calamity prevent.

"No young lady shall devote more than an hour a day to miscellaneous reading.

"No young lady is expected to have gentlemen acquaintances unless they are returned missionaries or agents of benevolent societies."

Mr. Jean Hersholt, in Hollywood, received in the mails the other morning a neatly wrapped package from Zurich, Switzerland. Seems that Mr. Hersholt, last summer, designed some posters for the World Peace Congress at Zurich, in February. They arrived in Switzerland just about the time Hitler marched on Poland, and England and France marched on Hitler, and so to war. The Peace Congress rejection slip indicated that it will not have any use for Mr. Hersholt's peace posters at this time, or probably for some time.

FRANK CAPRA, movie director, is revealed as part owner of a patent just granted by the Patent Office in Washington for a remote-control system for guiding airplanes and releasing their bombs by radio. The patent was awarded to Joseph B. Walker of Hollywood, and it reveals that one-third is assigned to Frank Capra and another third to Sheldon K. Johnson, both of Los Angeles County.

With the invention, "pilots" on the ground behind their own lines could steer the radio-controlled planes by playing on a "typewriter," and also release its cargo of bombs when it had reached its objective. A reported feature of the invention is that garbled or scrambled radio impulses are used to control the craft. By garbling the impulses, interference by enemy radios is overcome, according to the inventor.

At the ground station is a radio transmitter. Included in the transmitter is a bank of keys corresponding to the letters of the alphabet. By striking various keys different types of impulses are set up. The impulses go to a radio transmitter. Here they are garbled and then broadcast.

On the radio-controlled planes is a receiving set. It picks up the garbled impulses, unscrambles them so that the impulse which, for example, controls the motor for operating the rudder and ailerons, goes to the motor, and the impulse for controlling the catch that releases the bombs goes to the magnet that opens the catch.

H. I. Phillips contends that Hollywood will never, never answer Mayor Fiorello La Guardia's call to move production back to New York. For one thing, he says, New York is too close to the big banking interests, and the bankers would find out too soon how their money is being wasted. For another, it would take New York too long to provide the necessary number of swimming pools to compete with Hollywood. Then, the producers now in Hollywood are having their hands full accommodating persistent relatives with places on the company payrolls without moving back to New York where the rest of their relations live.

Days of Jesse James

(Republic)

Western

Roy Rogers is here depicted as a detective imported by a Bankers' Association to track down the notorious Jesse James and his gang, with results culminating in a portrayal of Jesse as more of a Robin Hood of the day than a desperado.

A bank robbery is shown to have been committed by bank executives rather than the James boys, and Roy is successful in proving that his association with the gang was merely a device used to gain information.

Joseph Kane acted as director and associate producer, as he has on all the Rogers pictures, working here from an original story by Jack Natteford, who wrote the original story and joint screen play of "Wyoming Outlaw"; and from the screen play by Earle Snell, who, in collaboration, wrote the screen play for "Dead or Alive."

The cast, in addition to Rogers, includes "Gabby" Hayes, Pauline Moore and Donald Barry, the latter as Jesse James.

Higgins Family

The Higgins family, as represented by James, Lucille and Russell Gleason, Harry Davenport, Tommy Ryan and Lois Ranson, is here embroiled in prize contests; with Lucille Gleason, as the flighty wife, getting her husband fired from his job in an advertising agency so that she may be eligible for a contest the firm is sponsoring.

As is usual in these cases, the plot works around to the advantage of the family in the end. Director and associate producer was Gus Meins, who directed the last Higgins picture, "The Covered Trailer," and, recently, "Should Husbands Work?" Rounding out the cast are Thurston Hall, Douglas Meins and Lucien Littlefield.

Sociology by Steinbeck

John Steinbeck's best-seller, a sociological study of the transient worker in modern California, has been brought to the screen with Nunnally Johnson as associate producer and writer of the screen play, in which capacities he also served on "Rose of Washington Square."

The book, by the author of another forthcoming film, "Of Mice and Men," dealt with the lives of members of the Joad family, Oklahoma farmers who had been put off their farm and headed for California at the lure of employment which turned out to be sporadic when existent. The conditions depicted have been as bitterly attacked in some quarters as the book has been praised in others for its documentary theme. As previously noted in Motion Picture Herald of November 18th, the picture was shot on a stage to which no one was admitted save those actually concerned with the making of the picture, so that the public would, so far as possible, bring no preconceived prejudices to the picture when shown. The picture is expected to arouse controversy.

The John Ford of "Young Mr. Lincoln" and "Stagecoach" directed, with a cast including Henry Fonda, Jane Darwell, John Carradine, Charlie Grapewin, Doris Bowdon, Russell Simpson, O. Z. Whitehead, John Qualen and Eddie Quillan.

Mr. Hitchcock, in addition to such English films as "The 39 Steps" and "The Lady Vanishes," has also directed the film version of "Jamaica Inn."

In the cast are Lawrence Olivier, seen in "Wuthering Heights" and "Clouds Over Europe"; Joan Fontaine, who appeared in "Gunga Din" and "Man of Conquest"; Judith Anderson, Reginald Denny, George Sanders, Gladys Cooper, Philip Winters, Nigel Bruce, Edward Fielding and Florence Bates.

Barney Balaban "Stops Dreaming"—No Time Now

Says New Theatre Movement Is Toward Neighborhoods

by WILLIAM F. CROUCH
in Chicago

Barney Balaban, the Chicago exhibitor, has stopped dreaming about the movie business. Barney Balaban, the Broadway and Hollywood Boulevard motion picture corporate general, no longer has time to dream.

Thirty-one years in the business, yet only 52, Barney of the seven Brothers Balaban, has traveled far from the lone Kedzie store theatre in Chicago, original investment $175, to the presidency of Paramount Pictures, Inc., doing an annual gross turnover of $110,000,000, worldwide producer-distributor, corporate partner in 1,200 theatres.

Sees Movement to Neighborhoods

Mr. Balaban, with Mrs. Balaban, stopped last weekend in his native Chicago to change trains from New York Central's Twentieth Century Limited, to Santa Fe's Super Chief, en route from his Times Square tower offices to the company's studios on Marathon Street in Hollywood, one of a score of corporate and management film executives traveling west to look into product, labor and related matters. At Chicago's La Salle Street Station, he was cornered by reporters. Some of the net results:

The motion picture theatre has reached its peak with today's downtown deluxe theatre.

Exhibitors in the future will limit new operations to neighborhood theatres of between 1,200 and 1,800 seats.

Theatres have rubber walls; there is no limit to them if you have the right picture.

Television is coming, but it will not hurt the motion picture business.

Mr. Balaban told the Chicago reporters: "I've stopped dreaming about the motion picture business because in late years it has taken all our time to get on with the business of the day—which is, providing the best show possible.

"As I see it, the motion picture theatre has reached its peak in theatres like the Chicago, the Tivoli, the Uptown"—citing Chicago downtown deluxe houses. "In the future theatre operators will be content to build smaller community houses, seating from 1,200 to 1,800.

"But in the building of these great houses Chicago led the world, as Chicago has been the leader in the whole development of motion picture display."

First Picture Cost $22

Recalling the early days of the family in Chicago exhibition—five of the seven Balaban brothers still are active in the amusement business—at the Kedzie, in 1908, he said:

"Our first week's picture, a single reeler—they had only single reelers then—cost us $22 and the admission price was five cents. It is a far cry from all that to the Chicago Theatre of today where we spend from $12,000 to $15,000 a week on pictures and have spent as high as $20,000 a week for a single performer in addition."

Barney Balaban told of finding his first theatre ledger the other day and being surprised at the amount of money taken in at five cents a person. It was those early returns which had prompted him to add property after property until the great Balaban and (Sam) Katz theatre circuit of the midwest towered high above any other circuits of the day, and was absorbed by Parmount Publix, which eventually brought both Mr. Balaban and Mr. Katz into production and distribution, at Paramount.

Takes on Real Stage

Returning to those early days:

"Abe Balaban, one of my younger brothers, sang in our Kedzie theatre, and Ida, our sister, who married Sam Katz after he became associated with us, played the piano. We made improvements, but the store was outgrown and we moved around on Roosevelt Road in 1910. There we had a real stage, a balcony and vaudeville. The Marx Brothers played there with their mother, and Sophie Tucker made her bow there in vaudeville.

"In 1916 we really began to dream and built the Central Park theatre with 2,000 seats.

"Then followed the Riviera, which later became the Uptown, in 1918, and the Tivoli and Chicago in 1921."

"But I've stopped dreaming," said the executive, who also pioneered in deluxe stage shows, in big acts and name bands with pictures and was one of the first to introduce refrigeration into film theatres, an outgrowth of an earlier association with the Western Cold Storage Company.

He visualizes the development of television, but it "will be limited and I do not think it will hurt the motion picture business as we know it today."

Government to Simplify Census

Rephrasing of the question of film production costs, which has led to much confusion in the past, will be the chief change in the questionnaires to be presented to motion picture producers during the 1940 census of manufactures, Washington Census Bureau officials reported this week.

As carried in the 1940 schedule, the item will call merely for the total cost of all production actually completed in 1939, regardless of when it was started.

Other questions on the schedule for studios and laboratories are substantially the same as for the 1937 enumeration. Information on type of plant and organization, and costs of film containers, power, fuel, equipment, and other essentials, data on employment and payroll, etc., and details on the number and kind of pictures produced will be called for.

Film subjects must be classified as theatrical, or otherwise, feature or short, color or black-and-white, newsreel, industrial, advertising, educational, or other.

Census enumerators will deliver the schedules personally, beginning in January, and will endeavor to have them filled out while they wait. Taken concurrently with the manufacturing census of studios and laboratories will be the national census of business, which will include motion picture distributors, theatres and other branches of amusement.

The questionnaires for distributors will inquire into receipts from film rentals, operating expenses, volume of business, employment, payroll, and so on. The theatre schedules will ask for seating capacities, receipts from admissions and similar data.

Required by Law

Reporting by individuals and concerns of the information sought is required by law, it was pointed out. However, it was assured, the same acts of Congress ordering the census also give full protection to all who file statements. Census material is strictly confidential, and cannot be disclosed in any manner that would allow even approximate identification of any person or firm, and census declarations cannot be used for taxation, regulation or, in fact, for any purpose whatsoever other than straight statistical reports.

Results of the census of motion picture production, distribution and exhibition, affording a picture of the film industry as it is today, will be released, if the expected cooperation from the industry materializes, before the end of 1940.

Ten Year Count Starts

All the people of the United States, as well as their houses, farms, stores, factories, other properties and activities will be enumerated in this 16th decennial census. It will cover approximately 132,000,000 people in the "Population Census," 33,000,000 homes in the "Housing Census," 3,000,000 business concerns in the "Census of Business," 170,000 manufacturing establishments in the "Census of Manufactures," 7,500,000 farms in the "Census of Agriculture," and about 12,000 mines and quarries in the "Census of Mines and Quarries."

Approximately 200 area managers and assistants, in charge of the field work in 104 main areas into which the U. S. is divided for census purposes, have been given a special course of instruction in Washington. They were sent into the field in mid-November to complete arrangements for the nation's 10-year inventory of assets and liabilities.

With the area managers, 560 district supervisors are being selected to head local offices, one in each of the 560 districts which conform, fairly closely, to the Congressional districts.

The 560 districts have been broken into enumeration districts of which there will be 143,000. Generally speaking, there will be one enumerator in each of these districts, but in sparsely settled regions an enumerator will cover more than one.

THE KEYSTONE OF YOUR FUTURE

NEW YORK CENSOR CUTS RISE 71%; 2 BOARDS SCORED, 3RD PLANNED

Number of Pictures Rejected Completely Remains at 24; Total of 1,334 Eliminations Made in 140 Films by State Board

The Motion Picture Division of the New York State Education Department—the censor board—in the past year ordered 71 per cent more scene eliminations (either dialogue or action) than last year. The number of pictures rejected in toto, 24, however, was about the same. The report was submitted on Wednesday to Commissioner of Education Frank P. Graves, in Albany, by Irwin Esmond, chief censor. 1,920 films were reviewed and 1,334 eliminations were made in 140 pictures during the year ending June 30, 1939. Six of the 24 films rejected were passed after revision.

Net Revenue Over Two Millions

The report announced a total net revenue to the state since 1921 of $2,768,049.07. The total receipts were $298,023.50 against $304,073.83 in the preceding year. The expenditures rose about $2,500 to $67,296.45 and the state's share was about $8,500 less than in the 1937-38 season.

The Division reviews all motion pictures, except newsreels, prior to exhibition in New York State. The report drew particular attention to the steady increase of foreign-made films up to June. The war, however, has cut off the foreign product supply to a great extent. There were 485 foreign-made films presented for censors' review in 1938-39, from the following countries: Great Britain, Germany, France, China, Mexico, Czechoslovakia, Poland, Sweden, Hungary, Russia, Italy, Egypt, Finland, Ireland, Spain, Argentina, Switzerland, Norway, Cuba and Denmark.

The five films barred by Mr. Esmond's censorship division were appealed to the Board of Regents. The ban was upheld in four cases. The only reversal was on Warner Brothers' "Yes, My Darling Daughter," but even in that case the censors were not overruled because the film had been revised before the appeal.

Grounds for Eliminations

Statutory grounds for elimination of 1,334 scenes, subtitles, or dialogue were: indecent, 433; inhuman, 65; tending to incite crime, 286; immoral or tending to corrupt morals, 508, and sacrilegious, 42.

Nearly nine million feet of film were reviewed, Mr. Esmond stated in his report, and is asking for additional staff members to meet increased demands, for the board not only reviews films but must check theatres and storage places to see that the license leader is displayed in accordance with statute. Inspectors also check to see whether eliminations have been made.

In summarizing his report Mr. Esmond said that since the motion picture law first went into operation in August, 1921, 363 films have been rejected in total and 40,000 eliminations made in scenes and dialogue. Mr. Esmond said, "Importers and producers who might otherwise be inclined to cater to morbid tastes are much less likely to spend their money on pictures which they realize in advance can not be shown in the State of New York. Therefore, our work of review properly exercises an important and wholesome influence over the production and exhibition of pictures. Thus theatre owners and operators who strive to furnish clean entertainment for their patrons are spared a type of competition which neither they nor the public generally approve."

Osa Johnson in New York

Osa (Mrs. Martin) Johnson, who recently completed "I Married Adventure" for Columbia, a cavalcade of her adventures in the African jungle, extending over a period of more than 20 years, arrived in New York this week from the coast. She plans to return shortly to the coast.

Civil Liberties Union Promises Finish Fight to Abolish Censorship in Chicago after Ban on "Beast of Berlin"

A "fight to the finish" to abolish censorship in Chicago has been undertaken by the Civil Liberties Union, following the censors' banning of Benjamin Judell's states right production of "Hitler—the Beast of Berlin," subject of much controversy in other cities and states. In New York, the state board banned the picture, but rescinded its order after the producer agreed to change the title to "Beasts of Berlin."

Other Actions

The producers of the stage play of "Tobacco Road" acted similarly against the Nashville, Tennessee, censor board, after a return engagement of the "Jeeter Lester" characterization of Georgia "crackers." Special Chancellor John Hooker over-ruled the censors, permitting the show to go on.

In St. Charles, Ill., the city council has drafted an ordinance providing for film censors.

While both Chicago's and Nashville's censor boards are local in structure and authority, their eliminations, nevertheless, apply to distribution throughout their states, because changes in prints made by them generally remain in statewide distribution, each being the center of film distribution for its state.

Cites Title of World War

The Chicago Civil Liberties committee held that the "Hitler—Beast of Berlin" film should not be banned because during the World War a picture called "The Kaiser—Beast of Berlin" was shown in the city. The Committee took the Ban as one of the reasons for launching a campaign to abolish the censor board. It was charged in a committee report that the censor group was antiquated and undemocratic. It was stated that only six pictures had been banned in the last two years, yet all except one, the Memorial Day strike newsreel pictures, were later given permission to be shown.

Former attempts to abolish the censor board in Chicago never were successful, but the Civil Liberties committee say that they plan a fight to the finish. The group submitted a plan for a new city ordinance to handle the motion picture situation. The Committee asked: 1—that the review board be established for the sole purpose of determining whether the films may be seen by children; 2—that newsreels and educational films be excluded from review; 3—that the board be independent of the police department; 4—that the board consist of five experienced persons selected for limited terms; 5—that provision be made for appeal and that the board make a report public at least once a year.

Notes Members' Years of Service

The committee recalled that the present board was established many years ago and that "judging from the length of time served by four of its members, it appears that the board is almost as old as the censorship ordinance itself." Board members and their years of service are: Anna M. Costello, 22 years; Edith E. Kerr, 25 years; Amy Louise Adams, 21 years; William A. Foust, 20 years, and Cora C. Doolittle, 12 years.

While the censor battle continued in Chicago, two other Illinois towns were active in the same matter.

In St. Charles, the council has drafted an ordinance in nine sections providing for motion picture censors for the town. Three censors are to be appointed by the Mayor for a one-year term and shall be subject to removal at any time.

It is reported that the reason for the drafting of this ordinance is the number of "sex pictures" shown in St. Charles during recent months.

The duties of the censors will be to review and examine all films to be shown in St. Charles. The board would make its own rules. The board may reject films depicting the burning, lynching or hanging of any human being or any showing which might lead to a breach of the peace.

Arrest Follows Nudist Film

In Dekalb, Ill., recently, one of the city councilmen had a theatre manager arrested for showing a picture based on a nudist camp. The charges were dismissed when the manager promised the City Council that pictures of such a nature would not be shown in his theatre hereafter.

The censor board of Nashville, Tenn., refused to give permission for a return engagement of "Tobacco Road," describing the play as "thoroughly filthy from start to finish." The play was presented in the city last December.

The producers of the play have won 31 of their 34 lawsuits over "Tobacco Road" and have filed a petition for an injunction which not only would let the show go on but would abolish the Nashville Censor Board. The play backers argue that the Nashville charter made no provision for a censor board.

MEXICO REPEALS TAX; AVOIDS THEATRE STRIKE

Absentee Levy of 4 Per Cent Is Canceled by President Cardenas; $100,000 Saving

by JAMES LOCKHART
in Mexico City

American film interests in Mexico are elated over the repeal of the absentee tax of four per cent on all money exported from Mexico by President Lazaro Cardenas. The tax has been in effect for the last five years.

A strike for higher wages and economic concessions that would have closed all the film houses in Coahuila State, on the American border, has been averted by the Federal Labor Department, which induced the employees to compromise on their demands.

[Executives of major company foreign departments in New York expressed gratification over the repeal of Mexico's absentee tax of four per cent on money exported from the country. The executives said the film industry had not protested against the tax or agitated for its repeal, but ascribed the rescinding to internal factors, either the failure of the law to accomplish its purposes or the creation of a financial reserve within Mexico through other channels.]

See $100,000 Saving

It is estimated here in Mexico City that the President's repeal of the tax bill will save distribution interests at least $100,000 annually. It was indicated here recently that repeal had not been expected this year, although Congress had approved abolition of the levy, since President Cardenas had been away on a trip and was not expected to act in the matter until January.

Objections of Mexican patrons forced the elimination from the French picture "Gibraltar" of a sequence showing a Frenchman beating a South American. The sequence had been passed by the Mexican censor.

William Oscar Jenkins who, with a group of experienced Mexican exhibitors, started a theatre building program in the provinces in 1937, is to open four of his houses in the Christmas season. The theatres, accommodating from 3,000 to 4,500 each, are in Guadalajara, this country's second largest city, and the port of Vera Cruz, Jalapa and Orizaba, Vera Cruz State.

Mexico's largest house, the Cine Colonial, seating 7,000, is nearing completion here. It is to be the hub house of the circuit of 17 theatres operated by Samuel and Oscar Granat.

Those who plan film houses in the federal district, which includes this city, must have plans for the theatre approved if they are to continue selling stock in the enterprise.

M. P. Associates Party

The annual dinner-dance of the Motion Picture Associates was held last Saturday night at the Hotel Astor in New York. The 500 guests were entertained by George Jessel, Benny Goodman, Louis Armstrong, Tony Martin, Nick Kenny, Lionel Stander and others. Morris Sanders, general chairman; Joseph Lee, Moe Kurtz and Seymour Florin were in charge. Ben A. Boyar headed the entertainment committee, and William Stanley Sims was master of ceremonies. The proceeds went to the Associates' welfare fund.

No New Deal Funds for Bureau of Mines Films

Appropriations for "New Deal" motion pictures, 87 of which have been produced and distributed by the various alphabetical agencies of the Administration, do not apply to films made by the Bureau of Mines, of which John W. Finch is director and M. F. Leopold is safety engineer.

Some readers misconstrued the report of New Deal films, appearing in MOTION PICTURE HERALD on November 25th, to the point where they concluded that Bureau of Mines films were under Governmental appropriation.

The Bureau now has in its library over 3,000 reels that were shown last year on nearly 100,000 occasions, to an estimated attendance of 10,000,000. Some 90 per cent of these showings were before educational institutions. No Government funds are expended either in the production or distribution of the films, all costs being paid by the mineral and allied industries. Each subject is in effect a sponsored film, with actual production and editing under supervision of the Bureau, and teaching conservation of mineral resources and safety and first aid in the mineral industries. Filming is farmed out to commercial film producers.

Paramount Declares Dividend

The board of directors of Paramount Pictures, Inc., at a meeting Wednesday declared the regular quarterly dividend of $1.50 per share on first preferred stock and 15 cents a share on second preferred stock. These dividends are payable Dec. 26, 1939, to stockholders of record at the close of business on December 8th.

December 10 Set For Renewal of Legion Pledge

That the Legion of Decency pledge by Roman Catholics in the U. S. to avoid immoral motion pictures will be renewed in churches on Sunday, December 10th, is set forth in the annual report of the Episcopal Committee on Motion Pictures, made public Friday in Washington by the National Catholic Welfare Conference, following the annual meeting of Bishops.

The Bishops likewise stressed the desirability of strengthening diocesan organizations of the Legion, "that the united effort which has been manifested throughout the country may be maintained and the standards of decency and morality in motion pictures upheld," stated the press announcement.

It was suggested that pastors of churches throughout the country "be encouraged" to subscribe to the weekly list issued by the National Organization of the Legion of Decency, New York.

The members of the Episcopal Committee on Motion Pictures are: Archbishop John T. McNicholas, O.P., of Cincinnati, chairman; Archbishop John J. Cantwell, of Los Angeles; Bishop Hugh C. Doyle, Pittsburgh; Bishop John F. Noll, Fort Wayne, Indiana, and Bishop Stephen J. Donahue, auxiliary bishop of New York.

The report of the committee, submitted by the Rev. John J. McClafferty of New York, executive secretary of the Legion of Decency, discloses that 590 motion pictures were reviewed by the organization from October, 1938, to November, 1939. Of these 324 were rated as being unobjectionable for general patronage, 207 as unobjectionable for adults, 50 as objectionable in part and nine as condemned. During the period from 1936 to date, the Legion reviewers have reported findings on 4,336 pictures including features, shorts and news reels.

It was pointed out that during the last year there has been a slight increase in pictures found to be objectionable in part and in those which are condemned. Last year 32 pictures were considered partially objectionable as against 50 in the current year's report, while seven were condemned last year as compared with nine for 1938-1939.

Exhibitors Benefit by Court Ruling Against Local Bans on Handbills

Local ordinances prohibiting public issuance of handbills unconstitutionally abridge the freedom of speech and of press, the United States Supreme Court ruled last Thursday, acting specifically on ordinances in Los Angeles, Milwaukee and Worcester, Mass.

Exhibitors, besides local "merchants" and others will benefit thereby, for there is hardly a theatre in the country which at one time or another has not employed handbills, issued publicly on the streets or inserted in letter boxes, to advertise to prospective customers the nature of a current bill or a future booking.

While such local ordinances prohibiting the use of handbills in scores of towns and cities for the most part were intended to curb the circulation of political messages, or messages for or against labor causes, or propaganda for or against a race or creed, the effect, nevertheless, was felt by theatre owners, many of whom have resorted to this form of advertising as a means of publicizing their shows.

The highest court in the land now rules that the right of free speech comes ahead of local authorities' handbill prohibitions, which, it is said, are usually set up under the guise of guarding public safety, convenience and health.

The court ruled that "the purpose to keep the streets clean and of good appearance is insufficient to justify an ordinance which prohibits a person rightfully on a public street from handing literature to one who is willing to receive it."

The three civil liberties cases were decided seven to one, with only Justice James C. McReynolds dissenting.

Exhibitors in the Niles, Ohio, area who distribute advertising matter may continue the practice without municipal documentary sanction. Common Pleas Judge Lynn B. Griffith at Warren, Ohio, ruled unconstitutional a Niles city ordinance requiring distributors of advertising matter to obtain a license.

Indianapolis City Attorney Michael Reddington this week nullified the city's ordinance prohibiting the passing of handbills on streets.

Editor Lauds Alumnæ On Film Ratings

The International Federation of Catholic Alumnae, which has reviewed 4,336 motion pictures for the Legion of Decency since the movement started five years ago, was commended for its work in rating the films Monday night at a dinner at the Waldorf-Astoria, New York, observing the 25th anniversary of the organization.

The Rev. Francis X, Talbot, S.J., editor of "America," told 500 at the dinner that the Federation had been commended by the American Catholic bishops within the last week for "the soundness of the judgments" it has expressed on the films. The group has rated the films as either unobjectionable for general paronage, unobjectionable for adults, objectionable in part or condemned.

Mrs. Mary B. Finan, of Chicago, former president of the Federation, made the first reference to the work. Speaking before Father Talbot, she said that long before the Legion of Decency was established the Federation had pioneered in the field of motion-picture reform.

Father Talbot, taking up the subject of the Federation's bureau on motion pictures, said that when the Catholic bishops had decided on "a final wrestling with the problem of the degenerate and noisome movies," the Federation had been intrusted with the work of reviewing and rating.

National Decency Legion Classifies 10 Pictures

Of 10 pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week six were approved for general patronage and four were listed as unobjectionable for adults. The films and their classification follow.

QUOTA CHANGE HELD POSSIBLE UNDER NEW BRITISH REVENUE REGULATION

Stanley Leaves Door Open for Amendments in Announcing Plan for 50 Per Cent Remittance; Army Supply Settled

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Branch and sectional conferences in London and the Counties this week were discussing ways and means of applying the film trade regulations announced last week by Oliver Stanley and planning their future operations accordingly. As outlined by Mr. Stanley the new Government regulations will permit the export by American companies of 50 per cent of their British revenue in dollars and include the retention of the Quota Act in its present form at least until next March when the current booking registration period ends.

Amendment Suggestions Presented

Producers and labor interests conferred all this week. Distributors already have presented suggestions for amendments to the Films Act to Mr. Stanley, his statement that certain amendments were necessary having been taken as an indication of the Government's readiness to make changes following industry representations.

It has been suggested that the American angle not be emphasized in any Films Act amendment; that the minimum figure on reciprocity cost films be lowered to permit a wider range, and the restrictions on the use of foreign stars and technicians be lifted.

Mr. Stanley's definition of the Government policy concerning withdrawal of American profits was made in a letter to Sir Frederick Whyte, chairman of the Films Council. The statement indicated that the 50 per cent remittance regulations would be effective for one year from November 1, 1939, to October 31, 1940.

Withdrawals Based on Average

The amount of revenue allowed for export is to be based on the average income of the American companies from British operations over the last three years. The total annual revenue of the American companies is put at approximately $51,000,000. Since approximately $15,000,000 of this amount is expended on operations, the actual gross revenue of the companies is about $35,000,000. Thus the amount allowed for export is estimated at a maximum of $17,500,000.

There will be a control organization set up representing the seven American companies, the Government and the Board of Trade. This organization will have supervision of the remaining revenues.

Under the agreement, reached through United States Ambassador Joseph E. Kennedy and the Government, any foreign exchanges occurring as a result of overseas distribution of pictures made in England are exempted from the provisions of the agreement. British companies which distribute American product in England are also affected, but with certain modifications.

Referring in his letter to the Films Act Mr. Stanley foresaw certain amendments necessary to the Act and he indicated that possibilities would be explored for replacing the Quota provisions by alternative arrangements under which American distributors would spend an amount equivalent to the monetary obligations incurrable if the Quota Act remained either directly on production or as a guaranteed loan for production.

KENNEDY RETURNING BY PLANE FOR YULE

Joseph E. Kennedy, U. S. Ambassador to the Court of St. James's, will fly home by Atlantic Clipper for consultations with the State Department at Washington following completion of the trade negotiations in London which included the settlement of the regulation of American film revenue export. Mr. Kennedy will be accompanied by Harvey Kemmer, special expert of the Maritime Commission, and his son, John Joseph Kennedy, and will spend the Christmas holidays at home. He is expected to leave Lisbon December 2nd.

The American companies agree under the pact not to restrict their film exports to Britain and not to raise their film rentals above the present level.

Army Film Supply Settled

After a series of movements and counter movements, confusions and contradictions, claims and counterclaims, involving politicians, Army authorities, and film industry executives and organizations, excusable probably only by the general confusion of the times, British troops in France are at last seeing British and American films regularly and promptly.

With the disbanding of the recently formed Army Films Council, launched with the express object of perfecting the machinery of supply, and with ensuring the collaboration of the trade, notably of the owners of the films themselves, responsibility has moved back once again to the Navy, Army and Air Force Institute, official entertainments body supplying the armed forces. American and British film owners and distributors have guaranteed the supply of films, and already the best and latest of the motion picture product of Hollywood and London has made its way to France.

The channel through which the screen entertainment of the British Expeditionary Forces now goes is the already mentioned NAAFI, official body acting as a Government sub-department. Its Director of Entertainment is Mr. Basil Dean, a director of Associated Talking Pictures. Operating its film section is Mr. Ben Henry, chief of Associated British Film Distributors, who handle the former's output and many of whose films were the first to go over to France..

Mobile Units Operating

Through the Institute, mobile film units are operating in France both at the Front and behind it. Audiences of 1,000 and more see the films. Previously the films have been limited in range and character. The Gracie Fields and George Formby films made under ATP-ABFD auspices were prominent. Others from the Elstree studios of Associated British Pictures Corporation and from the British Lion group, exclusively British firms, were included.

Before war broke out an Army Films Council was the subject of conversations and promises between both the War Office and the CEA and KRS. With the rapid arrival of hostilities the trade took for granted that steps would be taken towards carrying plans, intentions and promises into practice.

Meanwhile the Institute sprang into being with Government backing and finance, its task to organize and control entertainment of all kinds for the forces on active service. Mr. Basil Dean was and remains its Director of Entertainment. It was early learned that a film section had been formed, without consultation with the trade, or the collaboration or approval of the KRS or CEA, for the purpose of supplying films. Mr. Ben Henry was and is its chief.

Uncertain of the status of the proposed body leading KRS members here hesitated to supply films until they were officially certain of the authority of the NAAFI section, and the fate of the original corporation.

Mr. Basil Dean in an interview with the Times said it was expected a representative committee to which NAAFI could look for the best films would be set up. In late October Sir Adrian Baillie, a leading figure in the British Technicolor Company, was appointed Army Film Chief. It was understood he would have the task of forming such a new body.

Meanwhile the Institute insisted on their authority, claimed that theirs was the appropriate organization, laid down laws under which any films for the forces should be sent overseas.

By October 23rd Sir Adrian said he had already discussed with the War Office and with the CEA and KRS the question and details of film supplies, said he realized the need for a body equivalent to the Navy Council. He had, however, received no official notification of his appointment or status. David Rose of Paramount, Francis Harley of 20th Century-Fox, and others publicly expressed their anxiety for the matter to be straightened out.

Indications of a minor discontent within the trade ranks came with the suggestion that the CEA had been active without immediate KRS collaboration in assuring the War Office of trade goodwill, and of the availability of the renters films. Nor were matters assisted when Sir Adrian, taking initial steps towards the formation of the new body, went to a CEA meeting and received their nominees before he went to the owners of the films themselves. A select group of leading CEA executives were voted into office and Sir Adrian went away confident that this meant trade support.

Four or five days later a joint meeting of the KRS and CEA over which Sir Adrian presided formed the Army Films Corporation. Distributors had a majority of one on it. It seemed the machinery was at last in motion.

The Institute, however, insisted on their authority, claimed that any other machinery was redundant, refused to collaborate. The distributors representing the leading American houses protested that the matter was too confusing, that they would not supply films until the War Office made up its mind, and told them them authoritatively and finally, through which channel they wanted the films to go to France. "We don't mind which way they go," they said in effect, "so long as we do know. The films are waiting for you, not you for the films."

On November 15th the War Office announced the abandonment of the Army Films Corporation and the virtual resignation of Sir Adrian Baillie, the full collaboration of the KRS—with their film supplies—and of the CEA.

And there, it is hoped in industry circles, the matter ends and the entertainment of the troops by Hollywood and British films really begins.

Wisconsin Official Asks For Opinion on ASCAP

Fred R. Zimmerman, Wisconsin secretary of state, has requested John E. Martin, attorney general, for an opinion as to his constitutional right in forcing the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers to take out a state license before being permitted to continue transacting business in Wisconsin. Such a license has been required under the 1935 law and its strengthening amendment in 1937 but no effort has been made to enforce it.

Stockholders' Suit Filed Against Pickford Company

Mary Pickford, Mary Pickford Company, Frank C. Reilly, T. Newman Lawler, Paul D. O'Brien, Dennis J. O'Brien and the Film Treatizor Company are defendants in a suit filed in New York supreme court by James C. Richard, Jr., and Lester and Mildred Soman, stockholders of Film Treatizor Company.

The plaintiffs seek an unspecified amount of damages charging loss of profits to the company. According to the complaint, Miss Pickford controls the Film Treatizor Company, organized in 1935 to sell a patented fluid used to clean film and make it non-inflammable. The defendants, as directors of the company, have wrongfully refused to push sales or exploit the product, it is charged.

File Damage Suit

A suit for $25,275 damages has been filed in common pleas court, Columbus, Ohio, by Ardmore Amusement, Inc., operators of the 560 seat suburban theatre Bexley, against United Artists, Cleveland, charging breach of contract. The plaintiff charges that United Artists furnished to a nearby competitive theatre a group of pictures for which the Bexley had entered into a contract for exclusive first run showing, and, specifically, on May 8, 1938, the Bexley was compelled to close and refund admissions because of failure to deliver a print of "Goldwyn Follies of 1938."

LaVarre Appeal Heard

The New York court of appeals, Albany, this week heard argument on the appeal by William LaVarre, who seeks $50,000 from Warner Brothers claiming he was hired to write "The Bedside Manner" to feature Warren William and "The Fatal Woman" and "Yankee Girl," to star Barbara Stanwyck. Mr. LaVarre's work was turned down, the appeal says. An opinion is expected within a fortnight.

Slander Suit Filed

George W. Stillwagon, Wyandotte, Mich., father of Linda Ware, 14, screen actress, this week filed a suit in Detroit against Paramount Pictures, Inc., the girl's aunt and uncle and her business manager. Seeking $50,000 damages, he claims the Paramount publicity department falsely said that he had abandoned his daughter in an orphanage.

20th Century-Fox Denies Charges

Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation this week filed in superior court in Chicago a categorical denial of charges by Fannie Brice that the film "Rose of Washington Square" was based on the story of her life and damaged her to the extent of $750,000. Miss Brice filed the suit in August naming the company, Tyrone Power, Alice Faye and Al Jolson, players in the film, as defendants.

"Masher" Suits Against Poli-New England Start

As a result of a socalled "masher" attack on three girls between five and eight years old, Poli-New England Theatres, Inc., this week is defending three damage suits totaling $100,000 in the superior court for New Haven County before Judge Carl Foster. The three girls attended an afternoon performance of "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" unaccompanied by parent or guardian, and claim, through their fathers, that they were indecently assaulted by a patron while watching the performance.

Negligence of the theatre in providing adequate lighting, ushers and supervision, for the safety of children, is charged in the complaint, as well as damages in violation of Section 6282 of the General Statutes of Connecticut, Revision of 1930, which makes it a crime for motion picture theatres, dance halls and other specified places to admit children under 14 unattended by parent or guardian at any time.

Morris Mendelsohn, attorney for the defendant, attempted to test the complaint by a demurrer in which he argued that a theatre could not be held responsible for the unforeseen degenerate act of one of its patrons. The demurrer was overruled on the grounds that the claimed negligence, if proved, might still be the basis for an action in damages.

OBITUARIES

Fanny Hatton Dies; Wrote Gay Comedies

Fanny Locke Hatton, playwright, who collaborated with her husband, Frederic Hatton, in the writing of more than 30 stage plays and motion picture scenarios, among them "Years of Discretion" and "The Great Lover," died November 27th at her home in New York. She was 70 years old.

The plays of the Hattons enjoyed a 15 year vogue before, during and after the last war. Rebelling against the melodramas then popular, they turned out smart, light, sophisticated plays. After the stage swing towards more serious productions in the late '20s, they went to Hollywood, where they wrote the scenarios for a series of motion pictures, and the captions for 125 silent films.

They wrote motion picture scenarios for Alice Brady, Mae Murray, John Gilbert, Tom Mix, Buck Jones, Norma Shearer and Reginald Denny. They adapted "Tonight or Never" and "Dancing Partner" for David Belasco, and "The Church Mouse," which William A. Brady managed.

Andy Anderson Dies

Andy Anderson, 41, former musical director for Educational, died at Far Rockaway, Long Island, November 24th. Mr. Anderson also had been employed by the RKO Circuit as solo organist from 1923 to 1938. He was directing his own orchestra at a Long Island night club when he died.

Emil Umann

Emil Umann, 37, Hollywood theatreman, died at Cedars of Lebanon Hospital there November 21st.

Mrs. Ella K. Adams

Mrs. Ella King Adams, 61, head of the research department of Cecil B. deMille's film productions, died November 26th at the producer's home in Hollywood after a five-months' illness. She was the widow of Judge Frederick Adams of the New Jersey circuit court of appeals and a cousin of Mrs. de Mille.

Samuel Gaylord

Samuel X. Gaylord, 78, formerly president of the Miles Theatre Company, Detroit, died there November 25th. He had been inactive for several years.

Gerald Schneider

Gerald Schneider, 41, manager of the Stratford theatre, Detroit, died from a heart attack November 25th.

Sue Oil Promoter

Ralph Bellamy, Frank Morgan and Reginald Owen, screen actors, this week filed suit in Los Angeles against Harry Hanbury, oil promoter, for $34,000, $22,000 and $72,500 respectively. They charge that Mr. Hanbury induced them in 1936-37 to invest in Louisiana and Texas oil leases on the promise, not fulfilled, of more productive interests if the leased fields failed to produce oil.

Theatre in Receivership

The inability of Alex C. Kalafat and H. E. Hart, partners, to agree on the operation of the Royal theatre, Garrett, Ind., has resulted in a receivership for the house. Harry E. West has been named receiver by William P. Endicott, justice of the circuit court.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

BEHIND THE MASK (reissue): Jack Holt; BLACK ROOM, THE (reissue): Boris Karloff—First horror show we have had in a long time. Program pleased the patrons and the number of patrons pleased us.—C. E. Fismer, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

FLIGHT INTO NOWHERE: Jack Holt, Dick Purcell, Jacqueline Wells—Played this for Tilbury Community Band on Halloween night. It's a dandy. Real good. . Play it. We were all surprised.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

LADY AND THE MOB, THE: Fay Bainter, Ida Lupino, Lee Bowman—Business NSH (not so hot) but the few who did show up really enjoyed this one. —C. E. Fismer, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

LONE WOLF SPY HUNT: Warren William, Ida Lupino—Enjoyed very much as best half of a double bill.—C. E. Fismer, Jr., Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

MR. SMITH GOES TO WASHINGTON: James Stewart, Jean Arthur, Guy Kibbee, Thomas Mitchell, Claude Rains—One of the finest pictures ever produced. Stewart and Arthur sure won some kind of a medal in my opinion. Pleased 100%.—Harry Hobolth, De Luxe Theatre, Imlay City, Mich. Small town patronage.

MY SON IS A CRIMINAL: Alan Baxter—Program picture that held up its end of a double bill.—C. E. Fismer, Jr., Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

ROMANCE OF REDWOODS: Jean Parker, Charles Bickford—Program picture with a fire scene finale that is a dandy. Swell for action half of a double bill.—C. E. Fismer, Jr., Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

THUNDERING WEST: Charles Starrett, Iris Meredith—Only complaint on these is that the same faces are in the entire series—in a second run situation as ours many people decide they have seen the picture elsewhere after looking at lobby display.—C. E. Fismer, Jr., Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

WESTERNER, THE, (reissue): Tim McCoy—These reissues outdraw many of the newer westerns. Prints and sound as good as most of the new releases.—C. E. Fismer, Jr., Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

First National

ANGELS WASH THEIR FACES: "Dead End Kids," Ann Sheridan, Ronald Reagan, Bonita Granville, Frankie Thomas—Now here's the type of story Ann Sheridan should play in, as she was mighty fine and the Dead End Kids as always were good. This did a little extra business. Running time, 86 minutes. Played November 8-9.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

ANGELS WITH DIRTY FACES: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, Ann Sheridan, Humhprey Bogart, "Dead End Kids," George Bancroft—Stood them out on this one. Just the right stuff for any audience. Play it if you have not already done so. Running time, 10 reels.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough. Saskatchewan, Canada. Small town patronage.

CONFESSIONS OF A NAZI SPY: Edward G. Robinson, Francis Lederer, Paul Lukas—My patrons thought this just one grand show, showing to the people just what is going on behind the scenes both in Canada and the United States.—Running time, nine reels. Played November 16-18.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Small town patronage.

DUST BE MY DESTINY: John Garfield, Priscilla Lane, Alan Hale—The trailer Warners put out on this will give you the same idea it gave us. It's going to be a grand picture. It was. A great production. Warners did not waste time and money on big sets, pretty gowns and a lot of high brow ideas. Instead they give you a real story, every day clothes and a brilliant cast. The trailer brags it up to a top picture; the trailer wasn't lying. Running time, 88 minutes. Played November 12-14.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box-office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

EACH DAWN I DIE: James Cagney, George Raft, Jane Bryan, George Bancroft—Well, the sooner Warners start stopping this type of production the sooner we'll be satisfied. This was far too heavy and some of the conditions which existed were undoubtedly much overdrawn. Give us more light stories and don't tell us Cagney can't play them because we know better. Running time, 92 minutes. Played November 12-13.—Horn and Morgan, Inc. Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

OLD MAID, THE: Bette Davis, Miriam Hopkins, George Brent—A great picture but did not draw. Probably too tragic. Did not see it myself.—Harry Hobolth, De Luxe Theatre, Imlay City, Mich. Small town patronage.

ON YOUR TOES: Zorina, Eddie Albert, Alan Hale, Frank McHugh, James Gleason, Gloria Dickson—It is not the biggest thing made but it is not the worst. The picture gets a little slow in places but is supported by good music, dancing and well spaced wise cracks. Running time, 94 minutes. Played November 15-16.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

SMASHING THE MONEY RING: Ronald Reagan, Margot Stevenson—Fair programmer. Treasury Department agents tracking down counterfeiters using state prison to print the bogus bills. Running time. 56 minutes. Played November 10-11.—Bob Elliano, Palace Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

Grand National

LONG SHOT: Gordon Jones, Marsha Hunt—Dandy picture. While the picture has no star draw, it pleased the ones that came.—Harold Smith, Dreamland Theatre, Carson, Iowa. Rural patronage.

PANAMA PATROL: Leon Ames, Charlotte Wynters—Very good. These Grand National pictures are much better than some the majors put out.—Harold Smith, Dreamland Theatre, Carson, Iowa. Rural patronage.

RIDE 'EM COWGIRL: Dorothy Page—Average western. Fact that a girl is featured and that it was one of the few westerns we played first run, helped very much at the box.—C. E. Fismer, Jr., Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

SIX-GUN RHYTHM: Tex Fletcher, Joan Barclay —Compares favorably with the average western. Sound and production value are a little weak but the star. Tex Fletcher, a newcomer, makes a very good impression with the audience. He has possibilities Played to better than average business. Played November 16-18.—William F. Yager, Plymouth Theatre, Leominster, Mass. General patronage.

TRIGGER PALS: Art Jarrett, Lee Powell—Dandy little western. Jarrett's singing won't stampede Autry, but there is a load of comedy in this one furnished by oldtimer Al St. John. Wonder where they sent the phone bill for the one the villain had in the cave.—C. E. Fismer Jr., Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ANDY HARDY GETS SPRING FEVER: Lewis Stone, Mickey Rooney, Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden—An excellent Andy Hardy picture. Everybody enjoys this family. Andy falls in love with his school teacher after Polly turns her interest to a man in the Navy. If you have had a case of puppy love or know someone who is having a case of it, you will enjoy this the better. Give it good running time, 85 minutes. Played November 5-7.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

ANDY HARDY GETS SPRING FEVER: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden—Still the top family series in this business but it slipped a little at the box office. Hardly believe it was entitled to top allocation. Running time, 85 minutes. Played November 5-7.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

ANDY HARDY GETS SPRING FEVER: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden—This picture is one of the best of the Hardy Family series but not in draw. Did not draw as well as the last one.—Harold Smith, Dreamland Theatre, Carson, Iowa. Rural patronage.

BABES IN ARMS: Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland, Charles Winninger, Guy Kibbee—No comment needed on this natural. It is tops and can only be spoken of in superlatives and then in a hushed voice, silenced with awe. Here is a company that gives you one smash hit after another and then gives you more. A perfect picture with a perfect cast, produced with perfect direction. All this spells box office in capitals only. Running time, 94 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

BLACKMAIL, THE: Edward G. Robinson, Ruth Hussey, Bobs Watson, Gene Lockhart—Very good picture; very poor at box office.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

CALLING DR. KILDARE: Lew Ayres, Lionel Barrymore—Mission Week. Everybody in church. This picture couldn't stop their going. Good picture, but when it's church, our showmanship fails us.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario. Can. General patronage.

DANCING CO-ED: Lana Turner, Artie Shaw and His Orchestra. Richard Carlson—Good picture, good business. This is a jitterbug show and the young folks will eat it up! Running time, 81 minutes. Played November 14.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

ICE FOLLIES OF 1939: Joan Crawford, James Stewart, Lew Ayres, Original Ice Follies Cast—Our folly for 1939 in playing it. Didn't do business. Too much dialogue for small town. The skating sequences good. Business only fair—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MAISIE: Robert Young, Ann Sothern—Fine. Played this with personal appearance of Roy Acuff and Co., from WSM, Nashville. Both fine. Republic, why not give us Acuff in an Autry western?—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

MIRACLES FOR SALE: Robert Young, Florence Rice—Fair picture. Nothing to boast about or nothing to complain about. Running time, 71 minutes. —H. T. Nokes, Ozark Theatre, Ozark, Mo. General patronage.

MARX BROTHERS "AT THE CIRCUS": Marx Brothers, Florence Rice—Grand show, the best I think I have ever seen them in. Extended runs in all spots. Step on it, for it will do business and please every mother's son. Running time, 87 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

ON BORROWED TIME: Lionel Barrymore, Bobs Watson, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Beaulah Bondi, Una Merkel.—Wonderful acting by Barrymore and Watson. Picture will create a lot of talk. Well worth playing. —Harold Smith, Dreamland Theatre, Carson, Iowa. Rural patronage.

ON BORROWED TIME: Lionel Barrymore, Bobs Watson, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Beulah Bondi, Una Merkel—One of the best we have run. A little over the children's heads. Running time, 99 minutes.—H. T. Nokes, Ozark Theatre, Ozark, Mo. Small town patronage.

TARZAN FINDS A SON: Johnny Weissmuller, Maureen O'Sullivan—Excellent thriller that gave us extra business and brought in the thrill lovers. Played November 15-17.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

THESE GLAMOUR GIRLS: Lew Ayres, Lana Turner, Anita Louise, Tom Brown, Richard Carlson, Jane Bryan—Just a little disappointed in this one. Maybe we expected too much and maybe it was because we had too much trouble with the school element because of the pert, dialogue. It did have a swell cast and seemed to please about an average attendance. Running time, 80 minutes. Played November 15-16.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

THEY ALL COME OUT: Tom Neal, Rita Johnson—Very good draw. Picture full of action and just the thing for weekends.—Harold Smith, Dreamland Theatre, Carson, Iowa. Rural patronage.

THUNDER AFLOAT: Wallace Beery, Chester Morris, Virginia Grey—I heard this was not so good but personally think it OK. Drew fair and played three theatres in my territory day and date. It's OK.—Harry Hobolth, De Luxe Theatre, Imlay City, Mich. Small town patronage.

WIZARD OF OZ: Judy Garland, Frank Morgan, Ray Bolger, Bert Lahr, Jack Haley, Billie Burke, Margaret Hamilton—Wonderful in every respect. Beautiful color. Fantastic story but pleasing.—Big business.—Harold Smith, Dreamland Theatre, Carson, Iowa. Rural patronage.

WIZARD OF OZ, THE: Judy Garland, Frank Morgan, Ray Bolger, Bert Lahr, Jack Haley, Billie Burke, Margaret Hamilton—This surprised us and drew much better than we expeected. Even the grownups were delighted.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

WOMEN, THE: Norma Shearer, Joan Crawford, Rosalind Russell, Mary Boland, Paulette Goddard, Joan Fontaine, Virginia Weidler—Did about twice as much as usual midweek picture. It was generally liked very much.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

Monogram

HEROES IN BLUE: Dick Purcell, Bernadene Hayes, Charles Quigley—Racketeers vs. Bluecoats. Just fair. Running time, 56 minutes.—Played November 12.—Bob Elliano, Palace Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

MUTINY IN THE BIG HOUSE: Charles Bickford, Barton MacLane—Opened western premiere to best business of past sixt months. Picture is Monogram's best effort. We put a tremendous campaign behind it and it was certainly worth the effort. Story of Canon City prison riot that inspired this feature took place only 40 miles from here and many local officers, etc., took part in quelling riot, which made picture a natural for us. Running time, 83 minutes. Played November 18-21.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

STAR REPORTER, THE: Warren Hull, Marsha Hunt—Program picture that drew a little extra due to Warren Hull being in our current theatre.—C. E. Fismer, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

Paramount

BEAU GESTE: Gary Cooper, Ray Milland, Robert Preston, Brian Donlevy, J. Carrol Naish—Wonderful picture. Perfect cast, including Brian Donlevy. J. Carrol Naish also very good.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

I'M FROM MISSOURI: Bob Burns, Gladys George—I ran it late but was well worth running. Drew good and everybody was satisfied.—H. T. Nokes, Ozark Theatre, Ozark, Mo. General patronage.

INVITATION TO HAPPINESS: Fred MacMurray, Irene Dunne—Very much better than I expected. Pleased a good crowd.—Harold Smith, Dreamland Theatre, Carson, Iowa. Rural Patronage.

LADY'S FROM KENTUCKY: George Raft, Ellen Drew, Zasu Pitts, Hugh Herbert—Just a fair picture. Zasu is in it just enough to get her name on the list. Running time, 77 minutes.—H. T. Nokes, Ozark Theatre, Ozark, Mo. General patronage.

MAGNIFICENT FRAUD, THE: Akim Tamiroff, Lloyd Nolan, Mary Boland, Patricia Morison—A swell job of acting throughout. Tamiroff is good. Lloyd Nolan does a grand job. Patricia Morison will give you "oomph" ideas and you'll want to see more of her as the result of this feature. Believe she will go "up" from here. Played November 15-17.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

MILLION DOLLAR LEGS: Betty Grable, Larry Crabbe, Jackie Coogan—A college picture with lots of comedy and a little romance. Should standup on a single bill if properly advertised. Larry Crabbe is the film highlight and the photographer made some excellent shots. Running time 65 minutes. Played November 8-9.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

OUR LEADING CITIZEN: Bob Burns, Susan Hayward. Good draw. Picture did not please as well as his previous ones. People want comedy and expect it in a Burns picture.—Harold Smith, Dreamland Theatre, Carson, Iowa. Rural patronage.

RANGE WAR: William Boyd, Russell Hayden, George Hayes—The usual run of good Hopalong series. Running time, 64 minutes. Played October 27-28.—Bob Elliano Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

WHAT A LIFE: Jackie Cooper, Betty Field, Lionel Stander—This is a honey. We used it on our double bill but it will stand alone. Pleased better than average crowd. Played November 15-16.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

Republic

BLUE MONTANA SKIES: Gene Autry—Still our best bet. Wish Autry were twins.—C. E. Fismer, Jr., Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

FRONTIER PONY EXPRESS: Roy Rogers.—Picture average, business ditto.—C. E. Fismer, Jr., Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

FLIGHT AT MIDNIGHT: Phil Regan, Col. Roscoe Turner, Jean Parker, Robert Armstrong—Good action picture. Better than average from this company. Played November 15-16.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

IN OLD CALIENTE: Roy Rogers, Mary Hart, George Hayes—Very good. Nice business. Played it single bill. "Windy" a good boost for Rogers.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

JEEPERS CREEPERS: Weaver Brothers and Elviry, Roy Rogers—Good picture; good business. This hillbilly picture is the funniest thing Republic has ever made and will please all. Roy Rogers is good, too. Running time, 69 minutes. Played November 15-16.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

ROVIN' TUMBLEWEEDS: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Mary Carlisle—Good picture; good business. Running time, 62 minutes. Played November 17-18.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

CAREER: Edward Ellis, Anne Shirley—Very fine little picture. Ellis fine. Let's have more with him starring. People like him very much.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

FIFTH AVENUE GIRL: Ginger Rogers, Walter Connolly, James Ellison, Tim Holt—Title not so good but picture pleased.—Harry Hobolth, De Luxe Theatre, Imlay City, Mich. General patronage.

FIGHTING GRINGO: George O'Brien, Dick Lane—Very good western.—Harry Hobolth, De Luxe Theatre, Imlay City, Mich. Small town patronage.

IN NAME ONLY: Carole Lombard, Cary Grant, Kay Francis—This brought below average business for Sunday. It is decidedly a woman's picture, especially the last part, which is rather draggy. So many ladies came without their husbands we decided we'd never play a woman's picture again on Sunday because our ladies certainly didn't bring their men.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

TIMBER STAMPEDE: George O'Brien, Marjorie Reynolds—Good western. Worse Saturday business in months. O'Brien will not draw for me, although his westerns are good.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomanton, Ala. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

CHARLIE CHAN IN HONOLULU: Sidney Toler, Phyllis Brooks—Real good. Business extra good. Play it by all means on a double bill. Best week-end in months.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

CHICKEN WAGON FAMILY: Jane Withers, Leo Carrillo, Marjorie Weaver—About the usual Jane Withers picture. The B.O. said hardly as good as "Boy Friend," but Jane is still good with us. Running time, 64 minutes.—H. T. Nokes, Ozark Theatre, Ozark, Mo. General patronage.

HERE I AM A STRANGER: Richard Dix, Richard Greene, Brenda Joyce, Roland Young, Gladys George—Fair picture; poor business. For some unknown reason this picture just did not draw. Running time, 82 minutes. Played November 12-13.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

HERE I AM A STRANGER: Richard Dix, Richard Greene, Brenda Joyce, Roland Young, Gladys George—This one holds interest and suspense up to very last, then lets down at end. Box office was lowest for Sunday in a long time. Dix and Brenda Joyce were better than star.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

PANAMINT'S BAD MAN: Smith Ballew, Evelyn Daw, Noah Berry, Sr.—Not a bad Friday-Saturday picture. Musical score has its high lights. This type of picture has great possibilities. There is lots of room for improvements but if more time was taken in preparing these pictures, it wouldn't be long before they will be a leading product. Running time, 58 minutes. Played November 3-4.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

RAINS CAME, THE: Tyrone Power, Myrna Loy, George Brent—Drew above average business. Was well liked by most of the patrons.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

RAINS CAME, THE: Tyrone Power, Myrna Loy, George Brent—An excellent production but opinions divided as to its merits. Done just average business after spending extra large amount for advertising. Played November 12-14.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

SECOND FIDDLE: Sonja Henie, Tyrone Power, Rudy Vallee, Edna May Oliver—My first comments I placed away and these have mellowed into a few statements of fact. On the second evening I was standing outside watching the sparrows up in the cove lights. There were some people, who, averse to night air, were inside watching "Second Fiddle." When the show let out, these people filed out silently. Most of them looked straight ahead. A few showed signs of animation by watching the sparrows I was watching. One man, however, did a startling thing. He inquired if I were the Manager. I assented somewhat reluctantly, only to hear the following amazing statement. He said, "I want you to know that was not only a great film, but this Sonja Henie is a great actress . . . " Such a remark was so incredible that I was moved to request the gentleman's name forthwith. "Orwell Hislop," he said. "Orwell Hislop." I could not find out where he lived, but I pass this information along to Hollywood for what it is worth. There is a man—of medium height—darkish hair—named Orwell Hislop, who actually said to me, under no duress or influence from narcotics or beverages, that Sonja Henie can act. I would like to have more information about him myself, because it's going to be plenty difficult for me to get anyone to believe this, but the only other thing I can remember is that he wore a brown suit. Played August 17-18.—C. T. Cooney, Jr., Waldo Theatre Corp., Waldoboro, Maine. General patronage.

STANLEY AND LIVINGSTONE: Spencer Tracy, Richard Greene, Nancy Kelly, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Walter Brennan, Charles Coburn, Henry Hull—Another triumph for Darryl Zanuck and Spencer Tracy. We hope they make another picture together for this is absolutely one of the best you will have on your screen this winter. This held up nicely for three days and we enjoyed the enthusiastic comments from our patrons as much as the above average box office receipts. Running time, 101 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

TAILSPIN: Alice Faye, Constance Bennett, Nancy Kelly, Joan Davis—The opening night we did nice business, but oh! my! the second night was awful. This, we believe, was due to a mission held for a week.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

YOUNG MR. LINCOLN: Henry Fonda, Alice Brady, Marjorie Weaver, Arleen Whelan—Mighty fine picture. Will stand alone anywhere. Running time, 101 minutes.—H. T. Nokes, Ozark Theatre, Ozark, Mo. General patronage.

United Artists

ETERNALLY YOURS: Loretta Young, David Niven, Billie Burke, C. Aubrey Smith, Hugh Herbert, Zasu Pitts, Raymond Walburn—A nice picture that did not draw.—Harry Hobolth, De Luxe Theatre, Imlay City, Mich. Small town patronage.

HOUSEKEEPER'S DAUGHTER: Joan Bennett, Adolphe Menjou—A picture that pleased and drew a fair crowd.—Harry Hobolth, De Luxe Theatre, Imlay City, Mich. Small town patronage.

Universal

I STOLE A MILLION: George Raft, Claire Trevor, Dick Foran, Henry Armetta, Victor Jory—If your patrons like Raft this is a good picture for them but it is the old cut and dried formula and you know just what to expect as soon as the first reel is half over so there is not much to it. Just another picture in our estimation. Running time, 78 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

LITTLE ACCIDENT: Baby Sandy, Hugh Herbert, Florence Rice, Richard Carlson, Joy Hodges—A plenty sweet little show and Baby Sandy does more than just "pose" in this one. Filled with laughs and the climax puts them in the aisles. Audience reaction and comment swell. Running time, 65 minutes. Played November 18-21.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

RIO: Basil Rathbone, Victor McLaglen, Sigrid Gurie, Robert Cummings, Leo Carrillo—A production like this should have been dealt with before now. An embargo might be instituted by the State of California forbidding film companies to send such things out of that state, thereby preventing any recurrence of the dreadful reactions I anticipate from the theatres showing "Rio." I only hope my fears are exaggerated. Perhaps, if we just stand around and whistle snatches from airy little compositions the whole thing will subside. At any rate we must see that somebody disposes of that hat Basil Rathbone wore, at once. I would suggest burning it or better still pulling it down hard over Robert Cummings' ears. Played November 15-16.—C. T. Cooney, Jr., Waldo Theatre Corp., Waldoboro, Maine. General patronage.

SUN NEVER SETS, THE: Basil Rathbone, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.—Too heavy for the average person.—Harold Smith, Dreamland Theatre, Carson, Iowa. Rural patronage.

THREE SMART GIRLS GROW UP: Deanna Durbin, Nan Grey, Helen Parrish, Charles Winninger, Robert Cummings, William Lundigan—Deanna Durbin is not a draw with us but this should be no reflection on the picture, as it was a real fine production but did only ordinary business with us.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

TROPIC FURY: Richard Arlen, Andy Devine, Beverly Roberts—Just a programmer. Lacked "Fury" and excitement for this type picture. Will please the average theatre-goers. Running time, 52 minutes. Played October 27-28.—Bob Elliano, Palace Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

UNEXPECTED FATHER: Baby Sandy, Mischa Auer—This picture had a good draw and seemed to please. Personally, I think it's pretty weak in story. —Harold Smith, Dreamland Theatre, Carson, Iowa. Rural patronage.

Warner Brothers

DODGE CITY: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland—Here is a western that clicks with everybody. Good business and everybody pleased. We could use more of this kind. It seems that the people, anyway in the sticks, are more western minded than they used to be—that is, for the good westerns that have a story to tell and players to tell it.—O. S. Nordine, Karlstad Theatre, Karlstad, Minn. Country patronage.

NANCY DREW AND THE HIDDEN STAIRCASE: Bonita Granville, John Litel, Frankie Thomas—Very interesting and well produced. Running time, 60 minutes. Played November 17-18.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

PRIDE OF THE BLUE GRASS: Edith Fellows, James McCallion, Gantry, the Blind Horse—We don't know how true the story is but we don't care a darn. It was a swell picture and we want to see more like it. Pictures like this don't need to be on the double feature bill and I can't figure out why they do it. An excellent story of a famous blind horse in the Blue Grass Country. Play it; you'll like it. Running time, 68 minutes. Played November 10-11.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

TUNDRA: (Burroughs-Tarzan) Here is a picture we booked through our good friend, James Davidson of Superior Films, and thank you, Jimmy. It was a knockout. We enjoyed the biggest business in six months on this picture. It's a story based on the arctic and the adventures of a wrecked doctor. Play it, brothers. There is money to be made. Orchids to you, Jimmy. Many thanks.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

COUSIN WILBUR: Our Gang—Again Butch is the villain and tries to cut in on the Gang's racket but Cousin Wilbur has other ideas about it. An excellent comedy. Let's have more like it. Running time, 11 minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

DARK MAGIC: Robert Benchley—This is the first Benchley we've played in a long time but had so many nice comments guess we'll get some more. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

DOG DAZE: Our Gang—Average Our Gang comedy. —E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

NATURAL WONDERS OF WASHINGTON STATE: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—Just another travel talk.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

PROPHET WITHOUT HONOR: MGM Miniatures —Here is a short I was proud to show. There are so many splendid shorts on the market now it is a shame to show double features, especially when one of them is just so much film. A man came up to my box office last night and asked if we had a double feature on. I told him "no" and asked if he preferred them. He said he did not, that they made him too tired. Here's hoping this is a straw showing the way the winds blow.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

MOVIETONE NEWS: Nov. 22, No. 10—War news, sports, news of the nation and Lew Lehr. This film is tops in not only as a newsreel but is clever entertainment. No dull moments here. Running time, 10 minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

THREE BEARS, THE: Terry-Toons—There's others that are better. Running time, eight minutes. —Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

VILLAGE BLACKSMITH: Terry-Toons—Very good. Cartoon market getting crowded. Needs house cleaning.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

AMERICAN SADDLE HORSES: Color Parade—This company has started something new and believe me they hit it on the head with this outstanding short. I only hope they next take dogs and then the balance of the tame animals in the world, cattle, sheep, hogs, etc., and they will have something to rave about. This is different and it is truly excellent. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SLAPSIE MAXIE: Broadway Brevities—It stinks. Whoever said this boy was an actor. The only good part was the comedy prize fight. It may go alright on the nights you have plenty of kids, but be careful where you book it. Running time, 17 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SWING STYLES: Melody Masters—Very good swing short. Running time, 10 minutes.—Bob Elliano, Palace Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

TAX TROUBLE: Vitaphone Varieties—A few laughs in this one. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Small town patronage.

THREE MINUTE FUSE: Floyd Gibbons' "Your True Adventure" Series—Certainly a shame this man had to die. His stuff is excellent. This is no better or worse than the balance. Always good. Running time, 11 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor
GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

"What Qualities Must a Man Have?"

Comes a letter from an ambitious young man. Anxious to get into exhibition, he asks, "What must a man know to be a theatre manager?" Since most of a theatreman's knowledge comes to him only through experience, the aspirant might rephrase his query more importantly to read: "What qualities must a man have to be a theatre manager".

That could best be answered by the man in the field, if not directly, then via his campaigns reported here in recent mails.

For instance, courage, as typified by Stuart Tomber's determination to sell an unusual attraction outside of his regular territory, as detailed on another page. To do so, Tomber took over, in unfriendly quarters, an added advertising and distribution problem that tested showmanly mettle.

Salesmanship is another virtue, as represented currently by the Round Tabler in a new situation who promoted a conservative editor to use a regular motion picture column, bylined by the theatreman. Until then, local theatres had received inadequate newspaper support. The situation is brighter now.

It is a truism that showmen possess ingenuity, as illustrated by Arnold Gates' herald treatment, told elsewhere in this section. And ability to speak on one's feet is also to be counted, as indicated by Dick Cruciger of Warners Columbia, Portsmouth, Ohio, before a leading civic club. The manager, speaking on motion pictures and education, stressed those school tieins that could do the most good for his theatre. Valuable boxoffice contacts were made.

Sense of humor? By all means. For instance, the case of Stan Stanfill, of the Craig, Craig, Colo. Conspicuously slender, Stan offered passes on "Another Thin Man" to locals thinner than the manager. The offer hit page one.

Civic consciousness is another "must". It is currently represented by J. Lawrence Pilegard's accomplishments through his kid club at the Fox, Visalia, Cal., whereby serious street hazards were removed. The club petitioned voters, appeared before the city council, carried on a radio campaign. The community applauded, endorsed. The Fox Theatre was consistently and favorably in the news.

Flexibility of mind is represented in Moon Corker's drive to publicise the first stage show in over a year at the L & J Palace, Athens, Ga. Co-op ads were promoted, programs broadcast, parades organized. Community support gave the event a touch of civic importance. Corker's long-time occupation with pictures did not dull his mental agility in handling this new departure. The shift was taken in stride.

The able showman should show an awareness of news-sense as indicated in the four columns of publicity gained by J. Knox Strachan on the MGM short, "Drunk Driving", at Warners Laroy, Portsmouth, Ohio. In the same direction, the news values of MOT's "Uncle Sam, the Farmer", were recognised by P. E. McCoy, at the L&J Georgia, Athens, Ga., and Lew Bray, at the Lyric, Brownsville, Tex. County agents, agriculturist school heads, farm magazine editors, prominent farmers, newspaper editors, were invited to special screenings, to speak on the air. Publicity compared favorably with breaks obtained only by top-line feature attractions.

Courage, ingenuity, salesmanship, sense of humor, civic consciousness, mental flexibility, speaking ability, news-sense; though there are other virtues as solid, these add up to a respectable total, at that.

Should our young aspirant upon inspection find the listing slightly on the formidable side, let him be forearmed with the knowledge that these qualities are regarded as basic equipment by the successful manager from the very beginning of his career.

"The Management have arranged to make the 'Orient' splinter and blast proof. You are safer in the cinema than congregating on the streets."

Quoted from a handbill issued by the Orient Kinema, Glasgow, Scotland, and suggested here for inclusion in reasons-for-thanks listed by theatremen on this side.

Round Table In Pictures

Advance lobby display including cabin, tepee, and Indians, for his date on "Drums Along the Mohawk," was moved to the marquee of the Center Theatre, in Salt Lake City by Manager C. Clare Woods during his run on that date. Lad beating tom-tom drew constant crowds.

Local dealers in Albany cooperated with Andy Roy for his "Elizabeth and Essex" date at Warners' Strand by featuring window displays tying the House of Westmore cosmetics to the picture. Giant posters of Perc Westmore making up Bette Davis for her part in the picture formed the center of the display, which included prominent title and playdate plugs.

Moving in on the city of Buffalo's annual flower show, Dick Walsh at the Lafayette Theatre secured donation of thousands of blooms which were transferred to the lobby, forming the basis of his display on "First Love." Center of setpiece included large cut of Deanna Durbin. . . . Cutout of Anna Neagle pictured in a battlefield scene directly over body of dead soldier constituted part of the front of the Fausto Theatre in Havana for the date on "Nurse Edith Cavell". Other side of entrance also featured scene from the picture. Front was conceived by Ernesto Smith.

Amateur Harrisburg artists were allowed an opportunity by Sam Gilman to win guest tickets for "Another Thin Man" at Loew's through the above lobby poster which carried outlined face of baby in the picture. Public was invited to complete picture with chalk lines. Stunt was reported as terrific, proving one of the most successful ever used by the Round Tabler.

Availing themselves of the personal appearance of the "Dead End" kids in Philadelphia, Ted Schlanger's Warner admen posed the studio players with various managers, the shots to be enlarged and used for lobby display on coming pictures in which the kids appear. Illustrated at right is one of the groups with Round Tabler Jack Lexey of the Broadway Theatre.

O'Donnell Celebrates Moreau Week at Theatre

In connection with the annual celebration to honor A. J. Moreau of the M. & P. Theatres, Manager Jim O'Donnell at that circuit's Haines Theatre, in Waterville, Maine, staged an "Appreciation Week" which included newspaper contests, merchant tieups, fall fashion show, etc. Lobby was decorated with special cutouts on all walls and around box office, special pictorial art work on all exit doors and lobby frames carried copy plugging the week.

Special "Appreciation Week" drinks were featured at fountains of chain sweet shops, personal letters were sent to all fraternal and civic clubs advising them of the occasion, transportation company bannered its busses, and programs with editorial on front page were sent through the courtesy of Montgomery-Ward to their entire mailing list. The store also being tied in on the fashion show, windows were generously devoted to the slant, merchant furnishing gowns, accessories, models, orchestra, master of ceremonies, stage furniture, flowers, etc. Show was generously covered in the papers with stories and art work.

Anti-Aircraft Searchlight Aids Eldridge on "Thunder"

Week ahead of opening of "Thunder Afloat" at the Capitol in Concord, N. H., Manager Frank K. Eldridge ran an attractive trailer advising all to watch the theatre on opening night. Through cooperation of local National Guard unit, their new 800-million candle-power anti-aircraft searchlight was operated in front of the house. Once the beam got under way, it could be seen for miles around and created plenty of comment, reports the theatreman. Timely lobby display was also featured consisting of machine gun, range finders, gas masks and a remote control that operated the searchlight.

Cruciger Shows Movies In Window on "Cavalcade"

Securing prominent downtown store window four days prior to opening of "Hollywood Cavalcade" at the Columbia Theatre, in Portsmouth, Ohio, Manager Dick Cruciger showed old time movies. Screen was inside store window as was projector, signs on either side plainly visible to onlookers carried copy on the stars and pictures of yesteryear and plug for current attraction. Complete show ran about 45 minutes and three shows were given each evening. The pictures run consisted of two Charlie Chaplin reels, Mary Pickford, Fatty Arbuckle and many other oldtimers.

Smith Promotes Special Section

Celebrating the fourth anniversary of the Paramount Theatre, in Hot Springs, Ark., Malco City Manager W-Clyde Smith promoted a double truck newspaper ad from cooperating merchants. Each store ad carried congratulatory message in which the theatre was prominently mentioned. In addition to stories and cuts on forthcoming attractions, center of page featured a "thank you" editorial from the theatreman.

Song Contest Tops Crabtree Campaign On 'Babes in Arms'

That most everyone evidently has a secret ambition to be a song writer was discovered recently by E. E. Crabtree, Publix Great States city manager in Danville, Ill., as a result of a contest worked with Don Knapp, publicity head, put on for a week ahead with the local daily as a tiein for "Babes in Arms" at the Fisher. At one time or another, says Crabtree, his theatres have used about every kind of contest, but the song writing idea proved to top all previous efforts in number of entries. The tiein angle of course was Mickey Rooney's activities in this direction.

Cooperating paper, the Commercial News, ran daily stories and added art. Judges were leading local music teachers and competition was stimulated by a wire to the paper from Rooney expressing his interest, the wire given a heavy play in the publicity. Cash prizes and term passes to the theatre were given the three winners, first, ten, second, five, and third, a 30-day pass.

Winners Broadcast Opening Day

Station WDAN was tied in to have the winners broadcast the day after opening on a 15-minute program with Knapp, who took care of the theatre mentions. Station plugged the contest in advance for week ahead. Winning numbers were played and sung and afterwards forwarded to Rooney, at the studios, where the star was photographed looking them over, the shot mailed to Danville for newspaper publication. Top music store tied in with entire front window on the contest and date, with life-size cutouts of the two stars as background. Store also paid for thousands of heralds carrying co-op copy and distributed house to house day ahead.

Store scales carried title and ticket offer to those getting scale tickets carrying photo of any star in the picture.

In crediting Knapp for originating the idea, Crabtree also extends a bow to Norman Pyle, Chicago zone M-G-M exploiteer, for cooperation in getting the studio assistance.

CHEERING SECTION SPELLS OUT TITLE

At the recent Ohio State-Illinois game in Columbus, Ohio, Johnny Barcroft arranged with local college for the cheering section to spell out "That's Right, You're Wrong" for the date at the RKO Palace. Drawings and cards supplied by Barcroft were manipulated by the rooters to bring forth the ballyhoo.

At the game a bouquet of flowers was presented to the college queen and her court and a wire read over the loud speaker system announcing that the presentation was made through Kay Kyser.

Letter to Schools Helps 'Kids' Break All House Records

Neither a neighborhood or a downtown theatre, the subsequent-run Colonial, Detroit, has a hard time getting newspaper or other publicity and as a rule does little kid business. So when the "Dead End Kids" were booked for a three-day personal appearance, Manager B. V. Samuels decided upon a strong mail campaign directed to local schools of which there are some 250 in the Greater Detroit area, most of them distant from the theatre. The letter, addressed to school principals, was informative, well-mannered and restrained, helped in breaking attendance records, the engagement attracting thousands of school children, new to the theatre's patronage. It read as follows:

"Dear Friend:

"It is our wish to call to your attention the fact that we have the original 'Dead End' Kids of Movie Fame appearing at our theatre in person on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, October 22, 23 and 24.

"This is the first and probably the last time the 'Dead End' boys will ever appear on any Detroit stage and in the event that you think this would be either interesting or entertaining to some of the older students under your supervision, we would greatly appreciate it if you would inform them of this event in some way. Attached you will find a short biography of the boys making this tour.

"This letter may appear a bit presumptuous on our part, but as I stated above, the 'Dead End' boys will be here for three days only, and we are taking the most direct means of notifying dramatic schools, clubs, etc., who we think may be interested.

"The boys will make several appearances daily but there are two shows which I think would be best for your student attendance, namely at four p.m. and seven-thirty p.m.

"Thanking you in advance for any cooperation you may be able to give us, etc., etc."

GIVES MAN AWAY ON "MR. WILLIAMS"

Pressbook stunt that clicked hard on "Amazing Mr. Williams" having to do with giveaway of a man "absolutely free" was used for that date at the Orpheum in New Orleans by Manager Vic Myer and Publicist Gar Moore. Unmarried women were eligible and, to enter, left name and 'phone number at theatre. On opening night, winning number was announced and the "prize", masked and wrapped in cellophane, was presented from stage.

The Amazing Mr. Williams then took the girl to dinner and to the town's best night clubs, entertainment having been promoted in return for the great publicity attached to the stunt.

THE FINISH NEARS

With the end of this year's Quigley Awards in sight, some 30 winners are listed for appointments in the current Fortnight as they battle down the stretch for last Quarter honors and consideration in the 1939 finals. As was to be expected, the majority are previously consistent winners, although newcomers continue to score with reassuring frequency.

With the year's finishing date set for December 30th, there remain two Fortnight periods for the 1939 windup. It is therefore emphasized that entrants make every effort to be represented in these remaining periods, since the total of Appointments taken down will no doubt have some bearing in the Quarterly results.

Boucher, Hart Tie Up City On World Premiere of "Drums"

It isn't often that the residents of Gloversville are treated to as much excitement as they were recently when Frank Boucher and Lou Hart went to work for the premiere of "Drums Along the Mohawk," with everyone that was anyone in town out to greet the stars from the picture who arrived for the opening. Series of entertainment was provided for the celebrities who were hosted by the Schine Brothers, Chamber of Commerce cooperated and newspapers carried numerous stories and art work.

In addition, essay contest was planted in all local schools plus a coloring contest and a tieup was effected with the Johnstown Historical Society, every window in town having a display featuring relics, from Sir William Johnson Hall, a reported first time that they were ever permitted out of the musuem. Streets and poles were decorated, every town and village within a 50-mile radius was covered with paper and co-op ads were received from merchants.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Gates Envelopes Heralds

Since it is his experience that the average herald is not always given sufficient attention, Manager Arnold Gates, elaborated the idea for sound returns on "Blackmail" at Loew's Park, Cleveland. The throwaways were inserted in envelopes, imprinted with large outline letters spelling the title, and nothing more. Distributed at nearby stores and hotels, the stunt did the trick.

Special Issue Combats Drawing Area Competitions

Breaking into competitive towns with a special issue of his local paper to announce a rare first-run booking and Book Night, was the device used by Manager Stuart Tomber, of the Fargo, in Sycamore, Ill. The Round Tabler had previously taken space and promoted tieins in these outside situations, and since his policy is strictly repeat-run, figured he was not cutting in. But for some reason, Tomber reports, his advertising was banned by the papers in the competitive spots, which led him to put across the special edition.

Paper Turns Out Extra Run

This was done by having the local sheet put out an extra issue of five times the usual number of copies, for which Stuart agreed to sell at least one full page of outside advertising and to distribute 3,000 copies in the neighboring towns. Paper favored the idea since additional space could be sold on the basis of increased circulation and merchants went for it as the special went into new trading territory. In addition, every local home was covered, as were those on all rural routes.

Results of the project were so successful that merchants and chamber of commerce have appointed Tomber to take charge of a similar monthly trade area promotion. Theatreman also strengthened his political "in" by allowing space on page-one to candidates for important state's office to announce their intentions.

Local Garland-Rooney Sought By McBride on "Babes in Arms"

Tying in with popular local Station WPRO program in Providence, Manager Ed McBride at Loew's State for "Babes in Arms" planted a contest to find a local girl with a Judy Garland voice to sing on a street broadcast and on the program, which is aired thrice weekly. Since Mickey Rooney is a song writer in the picture, radio contest was also featured to find a Providence song writer youngster. All copy written was sent to the radio station and material considered good enough was featured on the program.

Tieup with flower shop brought Garland roses which were presented to the first 50 youngsters who came into the theatre opening day. Store also featured a window display with background of picture and playdates. Balloons advertising the picture were released from the roof of theatre, 25 guest tickets included in as many balloons. Ushers reading newspapers on prominent street corners with bold red picture copy on back covered downtown area. In addition, two girls and two boys each carrying dolls walked through the downtown streets with appropriate tiein copy.

Rosenthal Directs "Music" Campaign at Students

Distributing sets of four tinted cards, each carrying cut of one of the kids appearing in "They Shall Have Music," Morris Rosenthal for that date offered free admissions to high school students collecting the entire set and presenting them at the boxoffice. Number of free tickets given out was controlled by theatreman, backs of each card carried the offer, title, cast and playdates.

Mayor Proclaims Music Week For DiPesa's Heifetz Date

Much todo was made locally over the proclamation by Mayor Tobin of a special "Music Week," stunt arranged through the efforts of publicity director Joe DiPesa for "They Shall Have Music" at Loew's State, in Boston, breaking most of the papers with art and theatre plugs. Facsimiles of the proclamations were printed and distributed by Postal from office to office. Newspaper coverage included serialization with art, breaks in rotogravure section and 3,000 special fliers were distributed at schools and colleges.

Theatre ushers picketed the front of the theatre in advance of "The Women," sign stressing the fact that the picture was unfair to men. Leading department store featured window displays with scene stills, and radio tieups included spot announcements over WEEI, WBX, WNAC and WORL. Teaser ads assisted in stimulating advance interest in the picture, three column fashion layout was secured in the Globe and six column publicity layout in the Transcript.

Human Interest Story Promoted by Fulton

Discovering that one of the girls in his stage show, "French Follies," had a close relative living in Poland, Bob Fulton at the Paramount, in Waterloo, Ia., enlisted the support of newspaper reporter, who called on her and worked up a nice timely human interest story with photos and plug for the show.

Additional publicity was gleaned through newspaper stories, inviting the public to go to the theatre as Fulton's guest on the morning the show was hung. Writeup brought a crowd of some 400 who watched the show and naturally created a lot of interest around town.

Starz Accords "Information" Intensive Campaign

A comprehensive campaign involving advance newspaper stories, radio tie-ups, Canada Dry exhibits, a special trailer and other factors was put on by Frank Starz of the Palace Theatre, Dallas, for an "Information, Please" short. Newspaper publicity consisted of advance column with four-column art, in the News a few days prior to opening; story on radio page of the Dispatch-Journal day ahead, and program story in the Dispatch-Journal amusements page.

The radio angles included generous advance and current plugs over Station KGKO, the station that carries the "Information, Please" program. Included in the exploitation was a special setpiece in a Canada Dry exhibit in the main exhibit building at the State Fair of Texas. This setpiece went in several days in advance and stayed throughout the run of the short. Special trailer was used; banners spotted in lobby and special setpiece tying in Station KGKO and Canada Dry.

Manuel Enlists School Cooperation on "Mikado"

Placed on sale in the principals' offices of all local schools were tickets for John Manuel's "Mikado" date at Schine's Strand, in Delaware, Ohio, in addition a personal letter to every parent was sent out over the signature of the president of the PTA, and group parties plugged. The music department of the school system stressed the picture by playing records and distributing photos in each class room during the music period. Classes also ran the records accompanied by oral plugs over their school-wide radio system.

Testimonials Used Fox Publicity

For newspaper publicity, Manuel contacted leaders in educational, religious, civic, musical and dramatic groups for testimonials which were planted with the dailies and added breaks were garnered through an invitation extended to the Orphans Home. Readers, art and paid ads were obtained in a bi-weekly campus publication, benefit organization defraying costs. This organization, which represents every fraternity and sorority on the campus, formed teams of solicitors to canvass the entire student body, making up their own window cards which they planted in all dormitories.

Special Morning Orphan Show Launches "Oz" for Roddick

Announcing via local dailies that he would hold a free morning show of "Oz" at the Capitol, in Halifax, R. S. Roddick played host to some several hundred orphans which brought generous feature stories and art work in cooperating papers. Regular newspaper advertising started with teasers four days ahead and was built to climax day of opening; four day serialization was also run.

Over his regular spot announcements, Roddick planted electrical transcription 12 days ahead; one-sheets were placed in various store windows throughout the community, and 24 sheets covered main highways. Numerous window displays were secured all of which featured scene stills and "Oz" balloons were distributed by these merchants. Special front was built for the occasion with cutouts of the various characters in the picture, and lobby setpiece used three weeks in advance was moved to adjacent empty store window.

Lampe Directs "Twenties" Campaign at Students

Football guessing contest for "The Roaring Twenties" was staged by Gus Lampe at the Keith, in Syracuse with guest tickets going to those naming five former Syracuse players who were prominent during that era. Contest ran for five days in the Syracuse University paper five days ahead with theatre, title, and star credits. Second contest was run in the Syracuse Herald in connection with best letters referring to events which were history ten or more years ago.

Leading night clubs tied up by plugging the picture through the medium of a singing waiter warbling hit tunes. Radio coverage included plugs over WFBL and WSYR, featured organist playing picture songs and vocalist also doing his bit.

RALPH PHILLIPS
Writes a Letter About a Great Motion Picture
"DISPUTED PASSAGE"
Starting Saturday
State Theatre

Dear Friends

Saturday of this week brings to the State another great motion picture of the higher type, one that combines all of the necessary elements that make superb entertainment.

Dorothy Lamour, never more beautiful and alluring than in this picture, as the American girl born in the far east and now fighting honorably in America for what her heart tells her is right.

Akim Tamiroff, a great star of many past pictures, an outstanding artist whether the part calls for comedy or dramatic heights, reaches a new peak in the dramatization as to whether or not science and love can mix.

Lloyd C. Douglas, the author who surpasses his ever-popular Magnificent Obsession and Green Lights and answering a question that many have talked of.

John Howard, a coming young star playing a magnificent part as the young scientist who believes that romance is necessary to life regardless of profession

The producer, Paramount, whose trade name stands and is recognized as makers of great motion pictures.

In summing up the above, I want to sincerely say that Paramount pictures have produced Lloyd C. Douglas' great novel, Disputed Passage, into a tensely melodramatic picture that is warmly human. You will display your sympathetic emotions. You will live the tense parts of it You will revel in the beauty of Miss Lamour and love her romance with John Howard It is not just a show to see but one to cherish—a motion picture that will imbed itself in your memories I sincerely recommend it to you not as the greatest motion picture ever, but one, in the words of the theatre, that "packs a terrific entertainment wallop." Therefore, I urge you to see it.

YOU ARE INVITED TO JOIN UP

has been in the moving picture industry since he was seven years old, at which time he sold popcorn and peanuts in an airdrome. He did whatever he could in and around the theatre, even to the extent of producing plays when he was older. About two years ago Carmon joined up with Griffith Theatres and was ably supervised and guided by our good friend, Russell Hardwick, in Clovis, N. M. After a year he was transferred to Deming, N. M., as an assistant manager and head of exploitation. From there he went to the Lea in Eunice, N. M., having been promoted to manage the house.

is the manager of the Mary Anderson Theatre in Louisville, Kentucky, which house belongs to the People's Theatre Co. circuit. In 1930 he secured his first position at the National, in the same city, and the next year moved to the Chicago Theatre in Chicago, Ill., where he acted as usher and ticket taker. In 1932 Clifford returned to his first situation and then came on to his present situation, first doing the duties of an assistant manager, then receiving a promotion to handle the skipper's post.

started in showbusiness in 1925 as a relief usher in one of the Griffith Theatres in Norman, Okla., while working his way through the university. From time to time promotions came his way so that when he received a B.S. degree in the school of engineering he had also gained much experience in the theatre. Practicing what he learned, Emmett built a 100 H.P. power plant, which has been in successful operation for the past three years. About a year ago he became the assistant manager of the Griffith Theatres in Norman and then was promoted to act as manager of three theatres, headquartering at the University Theatre.

began as an usher at the Palace Theatre in Lubbock, Texas, and a short while later was made doorman at the Lindsey. His next move was to the Texan, doing doorman duty at this place, too. Returning to the Palace, Randall spent some time at the door but shortly after became the house manager where he remained until he changed to the Cactus, in like capacity.

has been in the industry since 1930, when he became usher for Shea's at the Buffalo Theatre, then working at the Hippodrome, Century and Great Lakes and by that time having become chief usher. Leaving the Shea outfit, Dick went to the New Lafayette in Buffalo, holding the positions of usher and assistant. In 1936 the young man went West and secured an usher's job at Warner's Downtown in Los Angeles but stayed for just a short time. He returned East and became Ellen Terry's manager for about a year. In 1938 Dick was hired by Basil Bros. becoming a manager for the circuit at the Roxy in Buffalo, N. Y.

CONSTANCE MAE on Wednesday, November 1, to Mr. and Mrs. Joe Scanlan, Jr. Proud pappy holds down the managerial reins at the State in Bellevue, Ohio.

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1939-40 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

The Most Vital News Story—and Why!

When exhibitors tell each other which stars pay off best at their boxoffices, this is the most vital industry news that can be printed.

That is why the Motion Picture Herald's annual Money Making Star Poll is so important to all theatre owners.

Watch for the results of this year's poll, because it is recognized that the company having the most stars among the First Ten has the product with the most power at the boxoffice.

". . . we Smell a Red."

FOR quite a while both your editor and your publisher had a notion that they had exclusive and lone functions in giving attention to that curious organization known as "Film Audiences for Democracy," but now it seems we must be sharing the fun with Scribner's Commentator, monthly.

In the December issue, in a department entitled "Once Over Lightly—by Our Official Philosophical Observer", signed by Walter Brooks, the observation is made that: "We would like to see more truth and less hokum and distortion in the movies. But we don't think that these people are going the right way about it."

In a discussion of the heated anti-Nazi stand, the Commentator remarks: "There are other things to get stirred up about—Russia for instance. After all the Communist and Nazi creeds are equally un-American." A reference sent us into the files to look up the August issue of Film Survey, organ of Film Audiences for Democracy, there to find this amazing paragraph under title of "Fan Fare":

"MGM, shelvers of 'It Can't Happen Here', because it was 'not politically propitious,' have just about completed Garbo's latest movie, called 'Ninotchka'. This little morsel (we have seen the script) is in all likelihood the most anti-Soviet film that has been produced since the 1929 crop. If one were to remove the anti-Soviet material there would be very little more than a de luxe trailer left. Fuller information will be carried in the next issue. Meanwhile, you might tell your theatre manager not to book it. . . ."

How do you like that for "crust" in the organ of an organization that says it is defending Democracy for us?

Continuing, the Commentator finds in Film Survey high praise for the Russian picture "The Oppenheim Family" as anti-Nazi, and remarks: "We are then to protest anti-Soviet films, but cheer for anti-Nazi films. Seems to us, Professor, (that's Dr. Henry Pratt Fairchild) we smell a Red."

CUSTOMER WRITES

WITH show timing what it is, and maybe a trend in sight with a three-hour-and-forty-minute picture at hand, that venerable subject of the double bill obtrudes now and again. The other day your editor, being interviewed on the radio, opined, again, that the question of the double bill was properly up to the decision of the exhibitor and his customers, an opinion obvious enough and one amply supported by established practise.

But surprisingly enough, mail response developed among the customers, who it seems resent criticism of their amusement buying habits and preferences. They also seem to be not a little aware of what might be considered interior trade discussion.

A sample letter, written by a young woman resident in a middle class region of upper Broadway in New York, remarks: ". . . but if we go to the theatre for an hour or two we still have part of an afternoon or evening left, but with a three hour show one knows that the time is to be spent and it's worth the effort to dress and go out. Besides one gets a good rest in three hours. Up my way it's been tried and we passed up a first class picture to go to the next movie with two pictures . . . and the shorts are terrible . . ."

ON CHEWING

NEW YORK'S indefatigable Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia, the same who has of late been much in print with a movement to "bring the movie industry home," this week took off on a new campaign. He has a movement to get to the manufacturers of chewing gum to put up their product in a bigger wrapper, to bear directions urging that it be used "for disposal of gum after use."

This seems to arise from a discovery that two porters assigned to gum scraping in three subway stations worked two years and never got caught up with the output. The Mayor estimates that gum disposal costs the City hundreds of thousands of dollars a year.

If His Honor can get anything done about the gum curse he will be doing the theatre and theatre housekeeping important service, more important probably than he can hope to achieve in the geography of production.

In a more virile, keen spitting era, gum was no trouble, because the nation's chew was "plug" and "fine cut."

This was a man's country then. But the trend to chicle and cigarettes was not to be stemmed. Gone is the cannonball stove and the sawdust on the floor. Needed now is a lamenting ode to the passing of the cuspidor, which survives only in the Pullman car. Sissy gum has no tradition.

PASSING OPINIONS

SOME of the best entertainment in our industry is in reading the reviews among those who are minded to speak out. Just now they are having a time with the superornamental "Elizabeth and Essex," which same the customers appear to like very much.

In Liberty, Mr. Beverly Hills is concerned somewhat about historicity, and concludes, despite all the glamouring of the picture, that probably in very fact Whitehall of Queen Elizabeth's day was dirty and smelled bad. Beverly apparently wanted the picture in three colors and one stink.

In the New York Sun, Miss Eileen Creelman, of top rank in metropolitan reviewing, found "too much technicolor, too much velvet, and too many jewels, too much grand music rolling forth behind each speech . . ." Probably, almost surely, Miss Creelman also wouldn't care for a double maple-walnut sundae, with butter scotch on it, either—but a lot of the customers like 'em rich.

Also, while Miss Creelman likes Bette Davis' Elizabeth immensely, she'll have no part of Errol Flynn's Essex, on the ground that he is not as complex as Maxwell Anderson's Essex in the play. If Mr. Flynn had had the luck and the lines to steal the show from Miss Davis he'd be in trouble, anyway.

This Week in the News

Labor and $ $ $ $

WHEN 9,405 IATSE studio workers of ten locals of gaffers, best boys, lamp and projection operators, swingers, prop men, grippers, riggers, gang bosses, et al., received a ten per cent wage increase from admittedly very reluctant producers, on the afternoon of September 20th, last, they started something that has grown into a virtually Hollywood-wide demand of production craftsmen for similar wage recognition.

On November 27th, eleven more locals of studio workers received a ten per cent increase from producers who were this time even more reluctant—the raise going to plumbers, machinists, sheet metal workers, plasterers, blacksmiths, sign and picture painters, metal polishers, et al., 3,267 in all.

On Tuesday, a ten per cent raise was demanded by studio electrical workers, teamsters, chauffeurs, carpenters and joiners; and it was duly ordered paid by motion picture corporate executives, who, with the topcrust of the various brotherhoods—representing 2,000 members in studios—had traveled to the ritzy Ritz Carlton on the windswept boardwalk of Atlantic City to effect a new "basic agreement." They went into meeting at 1:58 P.M., finished the job at precisely 7:27. The film folk went from Broadway, the unionites from the west and middle west, avoiding New York on a Pennsylvania Railroad Broadway Limited sleeper that carried them from Chicago to Philadelphia for an Atlantic City special.

With the wage increases now safely in the wallets of the 15,000 aforementioned studio craftsmen, the motion picture business now finds itself faced with demands—and they're stern ones, too, for pay raises from many, many more: 6,500 Hollywood extra players, 3,500 film exchange workers, an undisclosed number of Hollywood press agents, hundreds of vaudevillians and others.

This week's story of Labor and $$$$, as told on page 33 and page 36, carries with it a most comprehensive documentation that tells the story of all of Hollywood's Labor Bill, under new and old scales, working hours, conditions and related pertinencies, running from page 40 through to page 46, as compiled by Vance King, of MOTION PICTURE HERALD's Hollywood staff.

Hollywood's Labor Bill is not an item for Hollywood alone, obviously, for it enters into the costs charged exhibitors for film rentals and into the costs charged the public for film viewing—all in unknown quantities, of course.

"Labor Pains" was the snappy retort given a reporter in answer to his inquiries into what might have been the subject of conversation between the big moguls of production and Will H. Hays, this week, in Hollywood. While elaboration of the remark was refused in open conversation by the tight-lipped executives as they emerged from the meeting room, it was learned later that one item on the labor agenda was the important matter of a date on February 15th with Hollywood labor chieftains, when the producers, by previous agreement, will bring to labor their ledgers and cost sheets in an attempt to convince them that the studios cannot afford to pay the raises because of narrowing markets in war-land.

Meanwhile it will be observed that many a Hollywood studio will be all up, or nearly so, on 1939-40 product commitments by the time February 15th rolls around—there always being the possibility of disagreement between Hollywood labor and capital, always the possibility of a labor strike, a capital lockout. (Labor's original September and November demands for wage increases were accompanied by a pay-or-else-we'll-strike ultimatum.)

Why Atlantic City?

The question puzzled many observers this week, as they watched business representatives of studio locals and heads of international unions journey 3,000 or less miles to the Jersey coast resort, to meet Tuesday, in the Ritz-Carlton, with producer signatories of the five-year studio basic agreement. The producer representatives were from New York City.

New York City's Columbus Circle is exactly 100 miles from Atlantic City's northern-eastern borders. From New York City's Foley Square (Federal Court House) the distance is probably 95 miles.

On the other hand, the Ritz Carlton Hotel is well within the resort city's borders; so the distance is again 100 or more miles.

Now, labors' big figures, the heads of internationals, battle for unionism all over the U.S., not only in studios. And New York is full of labor squabbles—and legal suits.

And it seems that, while a Federal Court subpoena may be served anywhere, it is only effective if served within 100 miles of the Federal District in which it applies.

It is believed that William Fox learned this two years ago, anent other court matters.

Copy That Pulls

LOOK for an outbreak in the advertising pages anytime now, from Robert Gillham's office at Paramount. A rare demonstration has been had. Paramount organized a party pertaining to "The Great Victor Herbert" at the famous August Luchow's restaurant in New York's Fourteenth Street, one time capital of the amusement world. Al Wilkie sent out the wired invitations, to a list of 125 persons, phrased so compellingly that he got 211 acceptances.

Treading the "Grapes"

DEVILISHLY CLEVER Darryl Zanuck, of Wahoo, Nebraska, currently with 20th Century-Fox, is making or rather has made, "Grapes of Wrath," from the John Steinbeck novel, and now sets out to have, hopefully, productive publicity trouble about it.

There are several counts. Mr. Steinbeck's novel was full of dirty words—in the name of art, one might suppose. Also it is a dismaying tale of dust bowl degeneracy. Now it's to be a motion picture of entertainment for the American millions. What may be the movie version?

Keynote to the policy of promotion is sounded in the subcaptions to the first stills from the picture arriving this week. Be mindful the while that it is all planned. No visitor reached a set or location. It's a secret until now. And now! From the subcaptions:

"This couldn't happen in the United States. Yet it has, dozens of times, in the California Okie camps. Labor contractors bring along officers to help them round up the migratory workers at low wages."

"Hollywood wouldn't dare film this story." "Despite clamour from Californians. . . ." "Thousands are starving in California!" "Shot down! Zanuck answers rumors with this photo." "Darryl Zanuck trampled down a storm of protest from Californians. . . ."

That's the way it goes. Apparently while "Gone with the Wind" is blowing, Mr. Zanuck has arranged to "tie with a topic" and raise merry hell. That is showmanship. His friends hope that showmanship will not be confused with politics.

Meanwhile in that direction, indicating how the breezes blow, out in Los Angeles the newspapers, receiving advance stills only a day after THE HERALD, have agreed that "in behalf of Christmas shopping" they will print only "protection pictures" against being scooped, and withholding the real tale until the spenders have spent.

And the while, Sidney Skolsky, who shoots from the hip, confides that Mr. Zanuck is negotiating for "Tobacco Road"—which is not so dirty as "Grapes," but more famously so.

Stage Cuts Prices

The legitimate stage of Broadway this week started drastic reductions of box office scales in order to bring prices into a better competitive relationship with motion picture admissions. The stage plays "See My Lawyer," "Swingin' the Dream," "New Pins and Needles" are among the first to realign admissions on the new order.

Trying "Northwest"

"NORTHWEST PASSAGE," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's production from Kenneth Roberts' novel, and one of the most costly among Hollywood's grandiose items, is in the throes of a grooming for the market in a marked silence—possibly a silence calculated to avoid a sharing of attention with "Gone with the Wind."

A week ago Friday, after several postponements, "Northwest" went into the ordeal of try-out, unfinished, at Loew's New Rochelle house. The unfinished state was indicated by the fact that picture and sound track were yet on separate films, requiring double attention on synchronized machines.

Indicating that M-G-M very much wants to know, a whole corps of publicity department functionaires passed preview cards for audience reactions. Readers of the novel in that audience were inclined to observe that the whole book was not on the screen. They were, to be sure, not expert enough to know that Mr. Roberts told too many stories in his novel for any job of film unity, also that his novel was a re-casting and refurbishing of his Saturday Evening Post serial, to bring it up to length.

A remarkably large audience turned out when the New Rochelle put the alluring "Preview" on the marquee. The New Rochellers thought they were going to see an advance showing of "Gone with the Wind."

"Too Bad" Department

"DESTRY RIDES AGAIN," swell horse opera from Universal opening at the Rivoli in New York, contained one priceless line—as of Thursday last week. Marlene Dietrich sings "The Boys in the Back Room" and such, and, as Frank Nugent so feelingly recorded in his review for the New York Times: "She cold decks a poker sucker with complete nonchalance, tucks her earnings down her dress front and doesn't bat an eye when a cowhand murmurs 'Thar's gold in them hills.'"

But, fatally, Mr. Nugent added "(And where the Hays office was when that line sneaked through we'll never know, not that we mind it.)"

Then all of a sudden this Tuesday the amusement page of the Times said, "The Hays office censors in Hollywood have ordered Universal Pictures to delete a line of dialogue from 'Destry Rides Again'"—and it was Mr. Nugent's favorite line.

". . . and it was stated that it would also be cut from prints now being made ready for distribution."

Now one might wish that Mr. Nugent hadn't mentioned the matter, leaving it a secret among bosom friends.

Men Without Arms

DIFFICULTIES facing the men who must be where fighting is going on but are armed with only a camera were reported at first hand on Tuesday by Neil Sullivan, Pathe News cameraman just returned to New York from Western Europe. Mr. Sullivan said he had a busy time looking for the war and his rovings took him through belligerent and neutral countries. When he did find fighting, and was under fire for two hours on the Mannerheim Line (Finland's Maginot-West Wall chain of fortifications), no one believed him when he returned behind the lines. The war wasn't official yet.

Frank Muto, International News cameraman, brother of Tony Muto, Movietone News representative in Washington, and former New York World reporter, formerly of the Hays organization staff and for a spell with the IATSE film union, found that a bullet makes no distinction between soldiers and cameramen, Cameraman Sullivan also reported. Mr. Muto, he said, spent sometime recently in a Holland hospital recovering from machine gun wounds suffered in the Polish campaign. However, he is now covering the efforts of Mr. Stalin to bring "peace" to the people of Finland.

Casting Henry Ford

HENRY FORD is being urgently invited to appear in "Edison, The Man", by Clarence Brown, who was selected to direct the piece for M-G-M. Mr. Brown wants Mr. Ford for one sequence, calculated to reveal the friendships of Edison, Ford and Henry Firestone. It is to be remembered that Mr. Ford as a worshipper of the Edison tradition has moved the old workshop of "The Wizard" from Menlo Park to Dearborn, and with it all manner of Edisonia. Unforgettable is that occasion when Mr. Edison, getting off the train to inspect the project, stamped his feet and said: "Why, Henry's even got some of that damn New Jersey clay up here." Also some will remember Mr. Ford as a producer—"The Ford Weekly," distributed by none other than Samuel Goldwyn.

Films, A Quarterly

IF there is any doubt that motion pictures have come of age, the question is settled by the appearance of films, "a quarterly of discussion and analysis." Although the Greeks are famous for having the right words, other nations are not unskilled in this matter. The French would characterize this new magazine as précieux; Americans would just call it "arty."

The quarterly magazine is edited by Lincoln Kirstein, Jay Leyda, Mary Losey, Robert Stebbins and Lee Strasberg and published by Kamin Publishers which has the same address as the Kamin Bookstore on 56th Street in New York. In answer to an inquiry the Kamin company said that the magazine "had no news-stand distribution and was being sold direct to subscribers and at the finer bookstores throughout the country." The single copy price is 60c.

The first sentence of the first article seems to give the spirit of the new publication: "Film at its best is an art-form—and a social manifestation." To showmen film is the stuff out of which entertainment is made. The magazine's keynote article continues: "It can be of little consequence merely as casual entertainment despite the insistence of some trade papers to the contrary." films, the magazine, speaks of the "ethical obligation" of films (which must not be "casual entertainment") and then denounces the Production Code and the Legion of Decency.

Who made the remark, "Consistency, thou art a jewel"?

Kuhn to Dewey

IRENE CORBALLY KUHN, writer for newspapers and other media for many a year, known to motion pictures for her writings therein and thereon, on Monday morning became second in command of Thomas Dewey's publicity army, in the New York District Attorney's newly-launched campaign to get the Republican Presidential nomination at its Chicago convention next summer. Mrs. Kuhn has sold a book and several scripts in Hollywood.

THIS WEEK IN PICTURES

FOOTBALL AND EXPLOITATION mix rather well, John Barcroft of the Palace in Columbus, Ohio, proves in the demonstration above which he arranged with the student body of Ohio State University for his date for the RKO-Kay Kyser number called "That's Right, You're Wrong". Either they're not college students at all or they needed a proofreader, not a cheerleader.

FIRST STILL. The scene below is from the long discussed and now shooting "Grapes of Wrath", John Steinbeck novel being produced under the 20th Century-Fox banner by Darryl Zanuck. John Carradine as "Casey" is kicking the officer who has just shot the Okie woman at left, while Henry Fonda as "Tom Joad" holds his leg.

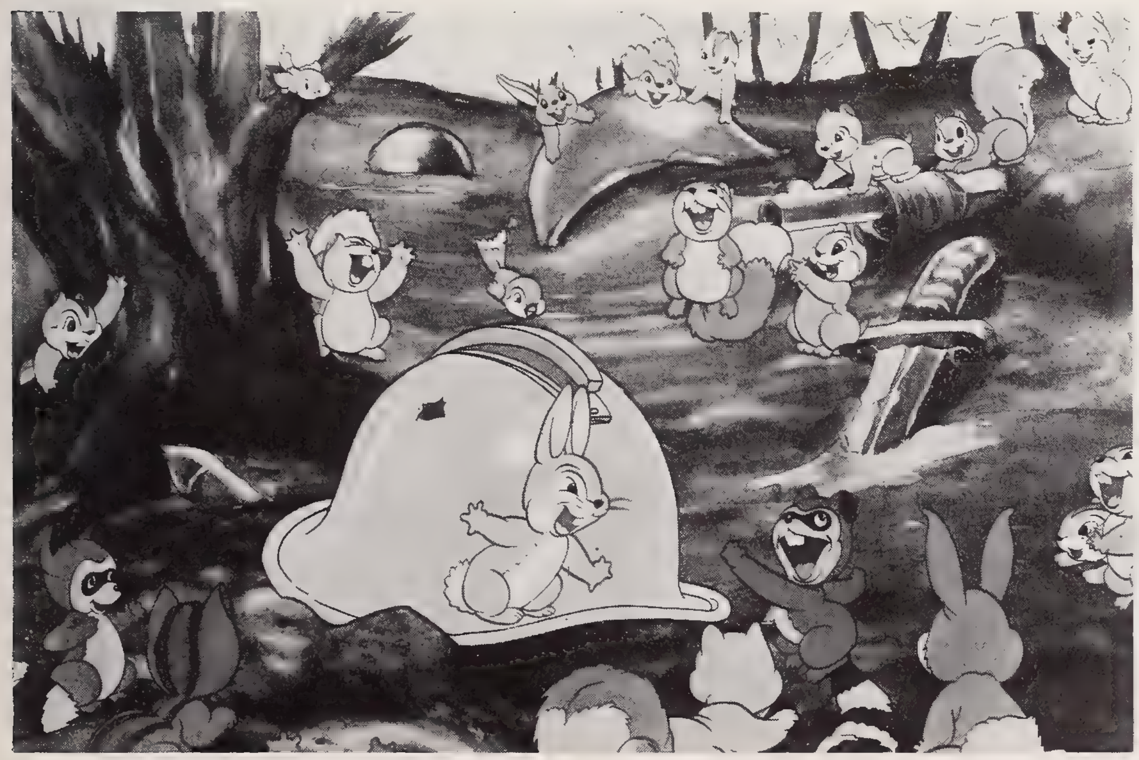
AWARD AND ANNIVERSARY. Paul Binstock, above right, manager of the Lyric, Hartford, is presented with a third quarter Quigley Award Medal by Acting Mayor James F. McCourt. Mr. Binstock enterprisingly combined the award with a campaign marking his 20th anniversary in show business and doubled his average attendance. The show was arranged by Julian Tuthill, Hartford Times film editor.

PRESENTATION. The Count and Countess Keller, who produce the United Artists World Windows travel short subjects, receive an Award of Merit from Mary Hamman, right, motion picture editor of Good Housekeeping and chairman of that publication's Movie Forum. The Kellers have just returned from India where they made a new series of the subjects to follow the group on Italy and the later group on Palestine and Arabia.

IT'S all a campaign for the premiere of Warners' "A Child Is Born" in Kansas City, held there perhaps because that city has been called the Brooklyn of the Middle West. The legs at right belong to a sextette of nurses selected as the most beautiful in Kansas City. We're sorry the rest of the picture was out of focus. Third from the left is Mary Smith. The crowning touch, below, shows Ed Moeller, winner of the baby diapering contest. A bachelor, he won over six married contestants mostly because he invented tri-corner pants with a zipper. The zippee is Bobby Smith, also in a hurry.

HARRY L. SOMMERER, new manager of manufacturing for the four plants of the RCA Manufacturing Company, Inc. Mr. Sommerer joined the Victor Talking Machine Company in 1909, became general purchasing agent and later played a prominent part in the company's activities in sound disc recording for motion pictures. He later represented Victor and RCA in Japan, and in 1937 he returned to an executive post here.

IT'S SUPER-COLOSSAL. Robert Gillham, above center, Paramount advertising and publicity director, introduces Oscar Morgan, southern division manager, to Dave Ballard, 8-foot giant employed by Paramount just to walk around and remind people of the forthcoming Max Fleischer color cartoon, "Gulliver's Travels".



CARTOON WITH A MESSAGE. The Hugh Harman color cartoon, "Peace on Earth", from which the scene at left is taken, will be released December 9th by MGM as the first cartoon on its 1939-40 schedule. It imagines a world from which mankind has vanished as a result of a series of wars, the last coming when "the meat-eaters persecuted the vegetarians", and peopled only by the animals who recall the humans as always "a-fightin' and a-feudin' and a-shootin'."

NATE BLUMBERG, right, visits the Universal studios in Hollywood for seasonal production conferences. Reading past the president to the right are Marshall Grant, story editor; David Garber, studio executive, and John Joseph, advertising and publicity director.

EMIL JANNINGS, not so many years agone a name of box-office magic, appears below in a scene from "Robert Koch" for Tobis Cinema in Berlin for which he is now a managing director and star. "Koch" is the biography of the doctor who first isolated the tuberculosis germ.

20 "BIG" RELEASES SET HOLIDAYS PRECEDENT

Distributors Throw Overboard Old Idea of Slow Period and Place Outstanding Films in Yule Weeks

The Christmas-New Year season this year apparently is not being considered a box office bugaboo. Virtually all the large producer-distributors are setting custom aside to release or preview their biggest available pictures in the Holiday period.

Abandoning the traditional practice of holding up potentially big grossers until after the holidays, the companies now stand ready to make available at least 20 important productions, either through pre-release or regular release, in the few days before, during and immediately after the biggest holidays of the year. (Merchandising details page 14.)

Upsetting Tradition

Heretofore all distributors decided against sending out big films during the holidays for fear they would suffer at the box offices at the hands of a public engaged in Christmas shopping and spending and traditionally turning to family and hearthstone more than at any other time of the year. There have been sporadic instances of big films getting holiday release ("Snow White," for one), but they have been few.

One important reason seems to be the decision of leaders to put product on hand into an earning capacity in view of the international situation with its narrowing film markets in warring countries.

Evidences of Optimism

Evidences of the optimism held by leading film executives for earnings seen ahead for all—distributors and exhibitors—in the next few weeks, may be had from Leon Netter, who, as vice-president of Paramount Theatres Service Corporation, is in contact with Paramount theatre operations and those of its partners, representing the largest exhibition interests in the country. Mr. Netter this week expressed the belief that "New box office records will be established with such outstanding productions as 'Gulliver's Travels,' Paramount; 'Gone with the Wind,' Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer; 'The Great Victor Herbert,' Paramount; 'Blue Bird,' Twentieth Century-Fox, to mention but a few productions of equal importance which will be available for holiday bookings."

Two Dozen More

Besides the 20 top-caliber productions, there will be made available during the holidays another two-dozen of varying quality, some of them said to be quite promising, if not of the "Gone with the Wind" or "Gulliver's Travels" standing. Last week, MOTION PICTURE HERALD reported that as of December 1st, the 10 large companies—Columbia, MGM, Monogram, Paramount, RKO, Republic, Twentieth Century-Fox, United Artists, Universal, Warners—had no less than 107 features on hand, actually "in the can," for release in the next several weeks, and that another 223 features, of the 500-odd promised for 1939-40, had been released between September 1st and December 1st, the majority of them still playing widely, many enjoying holdovers.

Busy Week in Hollywood

Thirty-six pictures were before Hollywood cameras this week, as ten finished and seven started. Twenty-one were being prepared and 67 were being edited.

The tally by studios:

COLUMBIA: In work: "The Lone Wolf Strikes Back." Started "Five Little Peppers Midway," "Daughters of Today."

GOLDWYN—In work: "The Westerner."

MONOGRAM—Started "Mr. Wong at Headquarters."

PARAMOUNT—Finished "Man from Bar 20." In work: "The Biscuit Eater," "Buck Benny Rides Again," "Safari," "At Good Old Siwash," "The Way of All Flesh."

RKO—Finished "Vigil in the Night," "Swiss Family Robinson," "Saint's Double Trouble." In work: "The Marines Fly High," "The Primrose Path." Started "Irene," "Little Orvie," "Glamour Boy No. 2" and "Bullet Code."

ROACH—Finished "Two's Company." In work: "1,000,000 B. C."

SMALL: Started "My Son, My Son!"

20TH CENTURY-FOX—Finished "Young as You Feel." In work: "Shooting High."

WANGER—Finished "The House Across the Bay."

WARNERS—In work: "Virginia City," "The Life of Dr. Ehrlich," "We Shall Meet Again," "And It All Came True."

The first of the important holiday pictures is "Gone with the Wind," Selznick International picture released by MGM, which opens in Atlanta on December 15th and will be playing in 30 cities by January.

Paramount's 'Gulliver's Travels," made by Max Fleischer, will have its premiere in Miami on December 18th and will be playing in more than 75 cities by the end of the holiday period.

"The Hunchback of Notre Dame," another, is the highest-budgeted feature yet made by RKO Radio and considered by company executives as the most significant film ever made by that studio. The picture is set for release on December 29th and probably will open at the Radio City Music Hall on that date.

Others for Exhibitors

"The Great Victor Herbert" (also for release on December 29th) opened this week at the Paramount theatre in New York.

"Blue Bird," Shirley Temple's new picture, is scheduled for pre-release engagements immediately after the first of the year.

Warner Brothers' "Four Wives," which is to be released on Christmas Day, will have special pre-release dates in 51 cities.

Additional Leaders

Some other holiday season releases include: "Charlie McCarthy, Detective" (Universal), "Send Another Coffin" (United Artists), "Everything Happens at Night" (Twentieth Century-Fox), and "Judge Hardy and Son" (MGM)—all being released December 22nd.

Universal's "Destry Rides Again," starring Marlene Dietrich and James Stewart, is to be nationally released on December 29th for New Year's Week.

MGM's "Balalaika" also is to be released on December 29th. The picture will play a pre-release engagement at the Music Hall beginning after the current picture, "We Are Not Alone" (Warner Brothers), starring Paul Muni.

"Invisible Stripes" is Warner Brothers' New Year's picture.

United Artists will release "Raffles" for the New Year business.

January Releases

"Swanee River," Twentieth Century-Fox, is scheduled for release on January 5th.

Also for early January 12th release is "Geronimo" (Paramount), which is playing a number of special pre-release engagements in the West following the recent triple premiere.

"The Swiss Family Robinson" (RKO) is to be released on January 19th; also on that date is "Rebecca" (UA).

"Pinocchio" (Walt Disney-RKO) will be released in mid-January, at about the same time Twentieth Century-Fox releases "Grapes of Wrath."

A number of other strong attractions already released will be playing during the holiday period. These include "Ninotchka" (MGM), "Drums Along the Mohawk" (20th-Fox), "We Are Not Alone" (Warners) and "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" (Columbia).

Completing Schedules

Twentieth Century-Fox has begun the final preparations for the 15 remaining pictures which will complete the company's 1939-40 release schedule. Between now and the middle of January all of the remaining pictures will be in work. The company has finished work on five of the company's most important pictures: "The Grapes of Wrath," "The Blue Bird," "Swanee River," "Everything Happens at Night" and "Little Old New York."

Darryl Zanuck, production chief, put into production this week "Dance With the Devil," starring Tyrone Power and Dorothy Lamour. Other pictures which will be in work by the middle of January are: "I Was An Adventuress," "Brigham Young," "Lillian Russell," "Public Deb. No. 1," "Twinkle, Twinkle Little Star," "Young People" and "The Californian," all Zanuck specials, and "Charlie Chan's Oriental Cruise," two "Cisco Kid" pictures, one Jones Family picture, "Marriage in Transit," "For Women Only" (tentative title) and an untitled drama, which will be produced by Sol M. Wurtzel, executive producer.

On February 15th Hollywood union leaders will examine producers' figures on the need for economy and will reconsider the 10 per cent wage increase granted two weeks ago to the American Federation of Labor studio workers and last September to the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees.

SETTING FINAL POLICIES ON 'WIND', CARTOONS 'GULLIVER,' 'PINOCCHIO'

No Minimum - Maximum for "Gulliver's Travels", Price to Depend on Best Bargains; "Pinocchio" Plan This Weekend

The approaching release of "Gulliver's Travels," produced by Max Fleischer for Paramount, and "Pinocchio," Walt Disney, for RKO Radio, turns attention this week to the manner and method, policy and procedure for selling and showing these second and third feature cartoons of motion picture history. Mr. Disney's "Snow White" of two years ago was the first.

"Gulliver's Travels" reaches exhibitors on December 24th, "Pinocchio," in mid-January.

No Minimum for "Gulliver"

"Gulliver" will have no minimum, no maximum rental stipulation—prices depending on the best bargainer; "Pinocchio's" price to exhibitors will be set this week. It will be remembered that Mr. Disney's "Snow White" rental was 50 per cent of the gross.

"Gulliver" was sold last summer at the same time as the regular Paramount product 1939-40 schedule, but on a separate contract. No set percentage or minimum figures were established for the Max Fleischer feature cartoon, despite widely circulated reports that Paramount would ask a flat 40 per cent or 50 per cent. Each deal for "Gulliver" is individually handled by Paramount.

"Gulliver's Travels" will open Christmas week in 41 key theatres and in about 40 more for New Year's week. The only special regulation for the early engagements of the picture is that a minimum two-weeks' playing time must be guaranteed. An agreement to run the picture for this length of time will entitle the exhibitors to an option on holdovers where these may be desired.

The picture, which was two years in production at the Max Fleischer studio in Florida, will have its world's premiere at the Sheridan theatre in Miami Beach on December 18th. A feature of the opening will be a program over 52 Columbia Broadcasting Stations originating at station WMAM, Miami, at 11:00 A.M. and 1:45 P.M. for rebroadcast to the West Coast. Jessica Dragonette will be guest-star on Lanny Ross' morning program and they will sing numbers from "Gulliver's Travels." The voices of both are heard in the picture.

Miami Chamber Busy

The Miami Chamber of Commerce is preparing plans to organize a statewide celebration in connection with the premiere of "Gulliver" and will use the opening as part of its campaign to get more moton picture production for Florida. John Hall, president of the Miami Chamber of Commerce, said, "Florida has plenty to offer film producers and we'll match anything that Mayor La Guardia offers, plus a little more. We offer tax exemption for 15 years and a year-round climate that makes even Californians want to change the subject when you speak of the weather."

Miami's Chamber of Commerce is meeting to plan the premiere and a statewide celebration. Ellis Hollums, executive editor of the Miami Herald and a civic figure in Florida, heads the committee.

Neil Agnew, vice-president in charge of sales, said, "Because of the technical difficulties in securing color prints in time for the Christmas

MORE TRAVELINGS FOR PRODUCT AND SALES

The records do not disclose any time in recent years when New York and Hollywood production, distribution and corporate officers have been so active traveling from and to both coasts, and into the field, in behalf of new product, new contracts, new bookings — resulting, for the most part, from an unprecedented number of pictures being moulded for production, pictures completed for release to exhibitors. In the past three weeks, more than a dozen leading executives each week have been making trips for product and/or sales conferences. This week's travelers:

S. R. Kent, 20th Century-Fox president, and Charles E. McCarthy, advertising and publicity head, are to leave New York Friday for Movietone City.

Will H. Hays returned to New York Thursday from Hollywood.

John W. Hicks, Jr., vice-president in charge of foreign distribution for Paramount, and Neil F. Agnew, vice-president in charge of sales, returned to New York from Hollywood; Barney Balaban, president, and Stanton Griffis, chairman of the executive committee, are expected to return to New York shortly.

David Rose, head of Paramount's British production, arrived in New York from Europe Monday.

J. Cheever Cowdin, Universal board chairman, arrived in New York Tuesday from Hollywood.

Al Lichtman, vice-president of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, returned to the coast from New York.

William A. Scully, Universal general sales manager, attended the convention of the Theatre Owners of North and South Carolina at Charlotte and visited Nashville and New Orleans.

Maurice Silverstone, UA head, returned to New York from the coast.

L. J. Schlaifer, UA sales executive, returned to New York from a western trip.

Alexander Korda, UA producer, arrived in New York this week and planned to fly Sunday to London via Lisbon.

Norman H. Moray, Vitaphone sales manager, returned to New York after a trip to western and southern branches.

F. J. A. McCarthy, eastern sales manager of Universal, visited Nashville and other southern cities.

Herbert J. Yates planned to remain at the Republic studio until shortly before Christmas before returning to New York.

Ben Kalmenson, western division chief for Warner Brothers, visited San Francisco to discuss the forthcoming Sears Drive. He will visit other cities in his territory before returning to New York.

Jesse L. Lasky arrived in New York Wednesday from the coast.

H. O. Briggs, president of Pathe Film, left New York for the coast.

"Gone with the Wind" Will Not Go to Popular Prices Until 1941 or Later, Declares Metro - Goldwyn - Mayer

The final policy and procedure for selling and showing David Oliver Selznick's Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer 220-minute release of "Gone with the Wind," were determined this week as producer and distributor were completing preparations for its first public showing at Atlanta on December 15th to be followed four days later with special openings in New York and in five other cities before the first of the year.

Guarantees 10% Profit

MGM will guarantee a 10% profit under certain conditions and the terms for all theatres are 70%. The picture will not be cut for any runs. The company says that the picture will not be shown at popular prices until 1941 or later.

It previously had been determined that the absolute minimum for first run admission prices would be 75¢ for mornings and $1.00 for evenings, with higher prices for special seats. Also the distributor requires a 30 minute lapse between showings. The picture is expected to play simultaneously at a number of theatres in each large city.

William F. Rodgers, general sales manager of MGM, told the convention of the Theatre Owners of North and South Carolina at Charlotte last Monday that the interest of all would be best served by departing from the usual company policy of not revealing terms or conditions of contracts. He said in part: "'Gone with the Wind' will be shown at advanced prices at least until 1941. It will be offered to our customers, who will charge the advanced admission prices, and the terms to all, large and small alike, are 70%.

The Condition of Guarantee

"We do recognize that a theatre, operating on this basis, is entitled to protection against declining grosses on an extended run engagement and is therefore expected to make a fair profit. For that reason, where theatres are willing to charge the admission prices we ask, and will give the picture the extended time it deserves, we will agree (where expense figures can be agreed upon and if such exhibitors so desire) that they will make as a minimum 10% of the theatre's gross of this picture as profit, regardless of what they have been in the habit of making or losing on other pictures," Mr. Rodgers continued.

The first day's sale of tickets for "Gone with the Wind" in New York broke all records, according to MGM. By late afternoon the sale had more than tripled that for "The Great Ziegfeld," previous record holder for the same period. Opening night seats were exhausted for both the Astor and the Capitol, where only the premiere will be on a reserved seat basis. The New Year's Eve show at the Astor was sold out by noon the first day tickets went on sale. According to Howard Dietz, MGM's director of advertising and publicity, opening day seats are also sold out in Atlanta, Boston and Reading.

The first "Gone with the Wind" newspaper advertisements appeared in three New York newspapers on Friday, December 1st. On suc-

45 "GULLIVER" PRINTS BY CHRISTMAS

dates, we were unable to promise delivery to more than approximately one-tenth of the requested key run bookings on "Gulliver." The cities and theatres to which we have pledged prints were selected after lengthy conferences between division managers J. J. Unger, Charles Reagan and Oscar Morgan, and were chosen on the basis of assured extended playing time and for geographically strategical reasons."

Christmas Week Bookings

The Christmas week bookings follow: December 20th—Paramount, New York, and Newman, Kansas City; December 21st—Paramount, Los Angeles, and Paramount, San Francisco; December 22nd—Denham, Denver; Michigan, Detroit; Paramount, Seattle; Palace, Milwaukee; Majestic, Houston, and Alabama, Birmingham; December 23rd—Uptown, Toronto; Stanley, Philadelphia; Palace, Rochester; Keith's Syracuse; Penn, Pittsburgh; State, Cleveland; Great Lakes, Buffalo; Fox, Atlanta; Saenger, New Orleans; Malco, Memphis, and Majestic, San Antonio; December 24th—Strand, Providence; December 25th—Paramount, Miami, and Colony, Miami Beach; December 28th—Metropolitan, Boston; Allyn, Hartford; Fox, Spokane; Des Moines and Roosevelt, Des Moines; State, Portland; December 29th—Paramount, Springfield; Paramount, New Haven; Capitol, Worcester; Rialto, Tacoma; Lyceum, Duluth; Criterion, Oklahoma City; Strand, Scranton; Comerford, Wilkes-Barre; and December 31st—Capitol, Little Rock.

The inability of Technicolor to deliver more than 10 per cent of the prints that Paramount would like for Christmas week bookings, will delay the openings in many cities and in a number of cases will result in the opening of pictures on Saturdays and Sundays during the holidays. The theatres that were selected for holiday openings of "Gulliver" must show the picture the date it can be delivered even though this requires a departure in the regular opening policy.

First Print December 15th

The first print of "Gulliver" is scheduled to be delivered to the company on December 15th, just three days before the Miami opening. By Christmas week about 45 prints will be delivered and approximately forty will be completed in time for New Year's week showings. After that time prints will be delivered to the exchanges at the rate of approximately sixty per week.

The negative cost on "Gulliver's Travels" is estimated at $1,000,000 with prints and advertising additional. An advertising budget of about $250,000 has been set. Leon D. Netter, vice-president of Paramount Theatres Service Corporation, estimated a domestic gross of approximately $3,000,000 for the feature-length cartoon as a result of extended preferred A playing time throughout the country. Mr. Netter said, "I feel confident that "Gulliver's Travels" cannot but result in exceptional business everywhere."

Over 100 companies which have been licensed to make products in connection with "Gulliver" are expected to spend more than $1,500,000 on material, equipment and advertising. The manufacturing companies and the retail stores are expected to cooperate with exhibitors on "Gulliver's Travels." Paramount has set a budget of $100,000 for advertising in national magazines.

Licensing for the manufacture of commercial products linked with the Max Fleischer cartoon in Great Britain and Ireland is being handled by J. Walter Thompson Company.

Sales of "Gulliver's Travels" merchandise are expected to establish a new high in sales for articles based on motion picture cartoon characters, according to Harry L. Royster, in charge of Paramount's licensee department under Lou Diamond. Among the stores participating in holiday promotion based on characters in the Paramount cartoon are: R. H. Macy & Co., New York; Abraham & Straus, Brooklyn, and Sibley, Lindsay & Curr in Rochester.

The following stores are using "Gulliver's Travels" Toyland and window displays purchased from the Gardner Display Co. of Pittsburgh: the Dayton Company, Minneapolis; Burdine's Inc., Miami; Gimbel Bros., Pittsburgh; Rike-Kumler Company, Dayton; Herpolsheimers, Grand Rapids; Rucker-Rosenstock, Petersburgh, Va.; John C. MacInnes, Worcester; Geo. Wyman Company, South Bend; Stillman Dry Goods Co., Fort Wayne; Hochschild Kohn Co., Baltimore; Charles Stores in Raleigh, N. C., and Richmond, Va. In additon to the above stores, it is said that every important retail outlet in the country has stocked one or more "Gulliver's Travels" items.

Lou Diamond, head of Famous Music Corporation, said: "The leading record companies have accorded 'Gulliver's Travels' sixty separate recordings of the various song numbers to be heard in this production. In addition to the nation's topnotch orchestra leaders, many of the songs are sung by outstanding vocalists for the various records."

The following record companies have made recordings of "Gulliver" songs: Victor, Columbia, Decca, Bluebird, Vocalion, United States, G. Schirmer, R.C.A. and World Broadcasting Records. The song numbers have been widely used on the radio and a large number of copies has been ordered by music stores all over the country.

Victor Young, Paramount composer-conductor, announced that his score for "Gulliver" will be made into a symphony suite for four movements. Four former members of Paul Whiteman's band have been credited with the solo specialties in the atmospheric music written by Mr. Young. The choral effects were made by a vocal ensemble of 110 voices under the direction of Max Terr.

The Spanish version of "Gulliver's Travels" is being made under the direction of Luigi Luraschi, Paramount's censorship editor. The film is being entirely rescored and redubbed for the Spanish-speaking markets.

Exploitation Crews

To assist exhibitors in their campaigns on the picture Paramount has sent a number of exploiteers into the field. Carl Krueger, of the studio staff, will divide the Midwest; Jack Dailey will handle the Pacific Coast cities from San Francisco to the Canadian border; Bill Lansberg has the Rocky Mountain territory. The following have left New York for various advance engagements: Ralph Ravenscroft covering Detroit, Indianapolis, Louisville, St. Louis

Now Florida Wants Production; LaGuardia Would Settle for 16

The State of Florida, erstwhile enemy of California in advertising sun and sunkist citrus, has reopened its campaign of many years standing to woo Hollywood producers to its shores.

Moving in on Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia's New York efforts to "bring production back east," in part, at a time when the "little flower" is turning new attentions to new civic projects—mainly, stopping New York gum chewers from gumming up the streets, Florida was pointing with pride to the production by Max Fleischer of Paramount's new "Gulliver's Travels" under Florida's sun.

Preparations for the world's premiere of "Gulliver's Travels" has given impetus to the campaign to bring motion picture production to Florida. John Hall, president of the Miami Chamber of Commerce, said: " 'Gulliver's Travels' was produced in Miami, very successfully. . . . Florida has plenty to offer film producers and we'll match anything that Mayor LaGuardia offers, plus a little more. We offer tax exemption for 15 years and a year-round climate that makes even Californians change the subject when you speak of the weather. Our Chamber of Commerce is meeting to perfect plans for the premiere of 'Gulliver's Travels,' for the state-wide celebration of the event and for our campaign to bring more film studios to Florida."

Meanwhile in New York Mayor LaGuardia has been pushing his campaign for eastern production of motion pictures. He has conferred recently with Floyd B. Odlum, head of the Atlas Corporation, one of the principal owners of RKO; John D. Rockefeller, Jr.; Nelson Rockefeller and Gerard Swope. Mayor LaGuardia is reported to be hoping each of the eight major film companies will produce at least two feature pictures in New York. The Mayor has been advised that his plan can not be put into action immediately. New York's facilities for production would have to be enlarged, a sufficient supply of labor and technical help would have to be available and peaceful labor conditions would have to be assured, before production could be attracted from Hollywood, film men informed the Mayor.

Erpi has reconsidered its decision to withdraw support from feature production in the East in favor of advertising films. It is possible that Al Christie and the Wildberg-Skirball combination will produce in the East. George Jessel and Ben Hecht are seeking financing for an independent producing company to make one picture in New York.

and Cincinnati; Thomas Jefferson for New York State; Harlan Hobbs for Atlanta, New Orleans, Memphis, Birmingham and Nashville; Vernon Gray is covering Scranton, Wilkes-Barre, Philadelphia, Washington, Baltimore and Richmond; Clinton Bolton for Boston, Providence, Worcester, Hartford, New Haven, Springfield and Portland, and Ben Hill for Dallas, Houston, San Antonio, Fort Worth, Oklahoma City and Tulsa.

Tieup with "Popeye"

One feature of the national promotion campaign on "Gulliver's Travels" is a "Gulliver-Popeye" tour. In conjunction with TWA and King Features, which controls the Popeye newspaper strip, Paramount has sent replicas of "Gulliver" and "Popeye" on a national tour. The figures will visit about 20 cities on the way to the Miami premiere. The idea of the trip is that "Popeye" will introduce "Gulliver" to the country.

A giant figure of "Gulliver" took part in the Macy Thanksgiving Day parade in New York City. The store is distributing 250,000 "Gulliver" children's verse books as their annual gift to their customers.

Max Fleischer has announced that his Florida studio will adopt a schedule of one feature and 30 shorts a year. Almost all of the 130 animators have been placed under term contracts. Al Spar, executive assistant to director and co-producer Dave Fleischer, Charlie Schettler, head cameraman, and Maurice Manne, sound effects chief, have returned to Miami from Hollywood where the music scoring, sound effects and dubbing were completed for "Gulliver's Travels."

"Pinocchio" in Mid-January

"Pinocchio," Walt Disney's successor to "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," will have its world's premiere in the middle of January amid what is called one of the greatest pre-release publicity campaigns ever given any motion picture. More than twelve national periodicals, with a total circulation of 20,718,338, have carried from one to twelve pages on the picture thus far. Also hundreds of department stores are displaying "Pinocchio" merchandise and breaking big advertisements in the daily newspapers.

The publicity and exploitation campaign on "Pinocchio" is expected by the distributor, RKO Radio, and by the Walt Disney organization to top the attention given "Snow White." In every way "Pinocchio" was selected and produced with the previous record of "Snow White" in view. Walt Disney said, "We put 'Pinocchio' into production because it seemed just the follow-up to 'Snow White' that the public would like. Every character is ideal for the medium of animation."

"Snow White" holds the record gross for all time: $8,000,000 (1939-40 MOTION PICTURE ALMANAC). But Walt Disney was not completely satisfied with that production, he said, and believes that a better job has been done on "Pinocchio." The first engagement of "Snow White" at the Radio City Music Hall set a record gross, in five weeks, of nearly $600,000, half the production cost.

Sales Policy Awaited

Certain special regulations were made for the sales policy of "Snow White." A percentage figure of 50 per cent was charged; the exhibitor was asked not to raise his regular prices except for children who were charged the regular adult price scale. In some cases special clearance rules were made and the picture was restricted to a single bill. The sales and exhibition policy on "Pinocchio" is being prepared and will be announced soon.

The newspaper publicity campaign on "Pinocchio" began on October 1st when the section This Week, carried in many newspapers, and the New York Times magazine section carried double spreads on the new Disney star and troupe.

Other publications that have carried "Pinocchio" material include: Good Housekeeping magazine for October and November, 11 pages; Coronet for November, 8 pages; Young America for October, 1 page; Screenland for December, 1 page; Esquire for December, 4 pages; Metropolis for November, 2 pages; Pic for November, 1 page; Household for December, 4 pages; Popular Mechanics, 12 pages.

The outline of the "shooting script" of "Pinocchio" and 20 colored photographs of scenes in the picture appear in the current issue of McCall's magazine in an article signed by Walt Disney.

Hundreds of stores are displaying "Pinocchio" merchandise, many of them using colorful mechanical displays. Over seventy department stores throughout the country have contracted to use a life-like "Pinocchio" display made by Old King Cole, Inc. All the characters in the feature cartoon are reproduced in this display. Many large stores are devoting window space to "Pinocchio," for example Bloomingdale's in New York is using 12 windows.

Hal Horne, eastern manager for Walt Disney Productions, is to leave for the Coast this week for conferences at the Disney studio. Before leaving he hopes to complete arrangements on the sales policy for "Pinocchio."

REVIVAL OF "WAMPAS STAR" AWARDS ASKED

Discussions among studio publicity chiefs are underway regarding a plan proposed to Fred Beetson, executive vice-president of the Association of Motion Picture Producers, by the Los Angeles Advertising Club for a yearly banquet at which stars from each studio would be honored. For many years the now defunct Western Associated Motion Picture Advertisers annually selected "10 Baby Wampas Stars," one representing each studio and including players with "big name" potentialities.

Johnston Names Thomas To Monogram Post

W. Ray Johnston, president of Monogram Pictures, on Wednesday announced the association of Harry H. Thomas with Monogram's company-owned branches in New York, Philadelphia and Washington. He will be general manager of these units.

Mr. Thomas, who was the original Monogram franchise holder in New York and Philadelphia, had been associated with Mr. Johnston in various distribution deals for twenty or more years, having joined Mr. Johnston in 1920 as manager of Arrow Exchanges, in New York, at the time Mr. Johnston was vice-president of Arrow Film. Their association continued through Rayart and Monogram distribution and until Mr. Johnston joined Republic.

Plans for Finance To Bolster British Production Begun

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Trade attention in Britain this week focussed on the preliminary steps taken by the Films Council toward the establishing of British film production on a wartime basis. The Council appointed a committee charged with the examination of the situation especially with regard to financing and the determination of whether funds to aid British producers shall come direct from the Board of Trade or from city sources. The Board of Trade, it was said, is determined to provide sufficient backing to insure production.

Committee Named

City experts and financial authorities will discuss the matter with trade representatives, the committee being composed of D. E. Griffiths, Arthur Jarratt; Norton Elvin, secretary of the Association of Cine Technicians; Professor Arnold Plant, Sir Frederick Whyte and one other city finance authority not yet selected.

It is reported that one financing plan under consideration would create a money pool, chiefly using the funds of American distributors frozen in England under the new remittance arrangement, and loans would be made to approved producers. It is believed likely that the Board of Trade would take a definite interest in rental arrangements on the product.

American interests in London are inclined to accept the possibility of such a Government step and probably would be granted an option to loan their money for this purpose if the principal and interest were guaranteed.

Following the Films Council meeting it was reported that continuance of the quota until new provisions were ready would be asked. Oliver Stanley, Board of Trade president, in his statement on the quota situation last week said the Government would "consider immediately the possibility of replacing the quota provisions by alternative arrangements." These would replace the footage and cost quota provisions by an equivalent expenditure.

Marquee Lighting Sought

Following relaxation by the Government of certain of the lighting regulations central London cinemas this week formed a liaison committee which will discuss with Scotland Yard the possibility of increasing marquee lighting displays. All theatres are now back to normal operating hours.

New Shaw Film Set

Gabriel Pascal, managing director and executive producer of Pascal Film Productions, Ltd., will produce and direct "Major Barbara," the George Bernard Shaw play for which W. C. Sheriff has prepared the script. Wendy Hiller will be starred in the production, which will go before the cameras at Denham on January 15th.

PLANS FOR OTHER FILM PREMIERES

cessive days ads appeared in other New York papers. They broke precedent in the fact that they were simple announcements of the exhibition details with no adjectives. The newspaper campaign broke 19 days before the picture opens in that city. Howard Dietz has announced that all advertisements for "Gone with the Wind" will carry the sentence: " 'Gone with the Wind' will not be shown anywhere except at advanced prices at least until 1941." The New York ads after the first day carried that line. The opening of the New York campaign, with one ad in each page, cost over $8,000. No details of the total advertising budget for the New York showing are available.

Newspapers, theatre offices and MGM exchange officials in Chicago have been barraged with questions as to when "Gone with the Wind" will open in that city. It is understood that negotiations for the Chicago showing are underway and the picture is expected to open early in January there to avoid criticism similar to that which greeted "In Old Chicago" premiere which followed openings elsewhere.

The first pictures from "Gone with the Wind" to appear in a fan magazine are in the current issue of Screen Guide published December 1st. Motion Picture Herald presented the first pictures from the Selznick production in the issue of November 18th.

Al Lichtman, MGM vice-president, arriving in Hollywood Wednesday, said, "If the public responds to 'Gone with the Wind' as we believe it will on the bases of the Gallup poll and our own canvass, showing 58,000,000 people intend to see the picture, the cost of the film should be returned within six months. We expect that $20,000,000 will be paid into the country's box offices for the picture."

"Gentleman from Arizona" Opens

"Gentleman from Arizona", Monogram picture produced by Golden West Productions, had its world's premiere on December 7th at Phoenix, Arizona. The local Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring the opening and the Governor of the State and other officials took part in the celebration. Members of the cast and leading Monogram players were on hand at the opening of what is said to be the first motion picture produced in its entirety in Arizona. W. Ray Johnson and other Monogram executives attended. (Review on page 72.)

"Gentleman from Arizona" was produced by Charles Goetz, Phoenix business man. Mr. Goetz plans three more features which will likewise be made in color.

"Victor Herbert" in New York

"The Great Victor Herbert," Paramount picture starring Allan Jones and Mary Martin, opened at the Paramount theatre on Wednesday. On Tuesday evening a dinner was held at Luchow's in honor of the composer's daughter, Mrs. Ella Herbert Bartlett, and the film stars. Thirty-four of Victor Herbert's melodies are sung in the film. Gene Buck, president of Ascap, and friend of the late Victor Herbert, was master of ceremonies. Allan Jones, Mary Martin and Walter Connolly were present.

Allan Jones and Mary Martin will make personal appearances with "The Great Victor Herbert" at the Chicago theatre on December 29th.

Advanced Prices for "Lincoln"

"Abe Lincoln in Illinois" will be shown only at advanced prices, according to Harry Goetz, co-producer of the RKO release. The world's premiere of the picture is scheduled for Keith's theatre, Washington, on January 22nd. Mr. Goetz and his partner, Max Gordon, plan to start production on "The American Way" in February. He also said that he had discussed the possibilities of Eastern production with Mayor LaGuardia.

FOOTBALL LEADS IN NEWSREEL FEATURES

The currently most popular feature of the newsreel are the football games of the leading college teams in the country, according to News of the Day. A survey just concluded of public reaction to recent newsreel releases in motion picture theatres revealed that, despite the war, chief interest of patrons is in the scenes of major gridiron battles.

"Four Wives" Trade Show

Warner Brothers will hold trade showings of "Four Wives" at all the companies' branches on Tuesday, December 12th. "Four Wives", starring the Lane Sisters, is a Christmas week release and the initial feature of the Sears Drive. Leading citizens, members of the press, clergy, women's clubs and exhibitors and their wives will be invited to the special preview showings. The trade showings are to be handled as important local civic events. "Four Wives" will have its world's premiere engagement at the New York Strand theatre sometime before Christmas.

"Escape from Yesterday" Openings

First run openings have been arranged in Boston, San Francisco, Los Angeles and Washington for "Escape from Yesterday", according to J. H. Hoffberg, distributor of the French motion picture which stars Jean Gabin and Annabella. The picture is now playing at the Apollo in New York, where it broke house records last week.

"Old Hickory" December 16th

Norman H. Moray, Vitaphone sales manager, has announced that the world's premiere of "Old Hickory", historical feature, will be held at the Saenger theatre in New Orleans on December 16th. The event will be marked by a special publicity campaign and high military, government, state and city officials will attend the initial showing in the locality where Andrew Jackson, the subject of the color picture, won the most important military engagement of the War of 1812.

Dual Opening for "Destiny"

"Isle of Destiny", Fine Arts picture which RKO Radio will release, will have a double premiere in Minneapolis and St. Paul in early January with members of the picture's cast and executives of Fine Arts attending.

"Child Is Born"

In connection with the world premiere of Warner Brothers' "A Child Is Born", on December 5th, Jerry Zigmond, manager of the Newman theatre in Kansas City, arranged a competition to select a baby for the place of honor at the premiere and also be the baby for the 1940 edition of the Universal Newsreel.

A line several blocks long waited for the theatre to open four hours before the picture began. Kansas City's oldest physician, Dr. Caleb A. Ritter, 88, who had brought many of the audience into the world, was honored on the stage, and a parade of nurses preceded the opening.

Kansas City was selected for the opening of the picture because it is the native city of Mary McDougal Axelson, author of the novel from which the picture was made.

Society Preview for "Alone"

A special preview was held for an audience of Kansas City civic and social celebrities and members of the press, and the presidents of Missouri's colleges in connection with the opening of "We Are Not Alone" for that city. The picture opened December 7th for its regular engagement at the Orpheum.

"That's Right" On Broadway

1,000 Extra Days for "Mr. Smith"

In the first seven weeks of national release, Columbia's "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" has already exceeded 1,000 extra playing days. In many places the Frank Capra picture has been extended many times beyond the original week scheduled. Where prior booking engagements prevented the picture from being held over as long as was desired, the picture continued its run in one or two other houses in the same city. "Mr. Smith" has been held over from two to five extra weeks in over 30 cities.

Pathe Laboratories Negotiating Coast Deal

O. H. Briggs, president of Pathe Laboratories, Inc., of New Jersey, is expected to consummate a deal in Hollywood this week under which International Cinema Laboratories, now known as Cinema Laboratories, will be taken over by Pathe. The deal involves creation of Pathe Laboratories, Inc., of California, which will operate the Hollywood laboratory.

No change in the personnel, headed by Marvin Travis, president of Cinema Laboratories, is contemplated at present.

Pathe Laboratories this week filed a suit in the United States district court in New York against the Du Pont Film Manufacturing Corporation claiming that it had been compelled to pay $210,000 for raw film in excess of a stipulated contract price.

The suit is based on a contract claimed to have been made in 1925 between Pathe Exchange, Inc., and the defendant which gave Pathe the right to buy all its raw stock requirements at 30 per cent over the manufacturing cost. The contract was to be for a period of five years.

STORY BUYS HIT NEW LOW; PUBLISHERS LOOK TO SCREEN AS BOOK SOURCE

Publishing Rights to Original Story Sold by Paramount and Leaves Are Granted Personnel to Do the Novel

With the war in Europe, now in its fourth month, bringing further declines in film markets, Finland is the latest loss, story purchases for November fell to the lowest level in eighteen months, producers in November buying only twenty properties in their retrenchment. Of these, twelve were original stories, five were from books or magazines, and three were stage plays. Hollywood is looking more and more to the countless manuscripts lying in their studio vaults.

Screen Story to Publisher

The procedure of producers purchasing material from publishers has been reversed for the first time. Hollywood, after paying millions of dollars for possible screen material has sold a long original story intended for the screen to a publisher to be made into a novel. Publishing rights to "Memo to a Movie Producer," purchased by Paramount for production by Arthur Hornblow, Jr., have been sold to the New York publishing firm of Duell, Sloane and Pearce, Inc. Ketti Frings, author of the original story who has been working on the screen play with Charles Brackett and Manuel Reachi has been granted a leave of absence by Paramount to do the novelization.

"Here may be the beginning," said Richard Halliday, head of the Paramount story department, "of an entirely new trend in the publishing field.

"It is hard to understand why American publishers have so long neglected Hollywood's screen offerings as a source of material. The files of movie studios are full of stories that might easily be transformed into best-sellers,—for example, "Rulers of the Sea," Frank Lloyd's story of the conquest of the Atlantic by steam.

Sees Appetite Whetted

"The fact that the public has seen a story on the screen should whet its appetite for a novel based on the same material, just as Hollywood finds that a best-seller makes an ideal basis for a film story. Also," continued Mr. Halliday, "preparation and shooting of a picture often requires so much time that it is possible to novelize an original screen story and have it on the bookstands from one end of the country to the other before the film is ready for release.

"From whatever angle you regard it," Mr. Halliday concluded, "Miss Frings' sale of 'Memo to a Movie Producer' for novelization is an important event."

For Possible Remake

Meanwhile screen rights to two old motion pictures have been purchased for possible remake. They are "Down to the Sea in Ships" and "Kiki."

"Down to the Sea in Ships" was produced in 1923 by the Whaling Film Corp., and was made in the old whaling town of New Bedford, Massachusetts, featuring Raymond McKee and Marguerite Courtot. The rights to remake the picture have been purchased from Elmer Clifton, director of the initial film, by 20th Century-Fox.

"Kiki" was first produced by Joseph M. Schenck in 1926 and distributed by First National. Clarence Brown directed the film with Norma Talmadge and Ronald Coleman in the starring roles. In 1931 the picture was made a second time with Mary Pickford, who owned the rights, in the role of "Kiki." This was produced and distributed by United Artists. Confident that another picturization will be an attraction at the box office, RKO has purchased the screen rights from Miss Pickford, and says the picture will be put into production soon.

RADIO REVOLUTION BEGINS—TO JUNK 40 MILLION SETS, ALL OLD STATIONS

PART ONE

Engineers Say Maj. Armstrong's Frequency Modulation System Will Eliminate Natural and Man-Made Interference

by MARTIN QUIGLEY, JR.

A technological revolution in radio—reminiscent of what happened when sound hit the screen—impends.

The radio listener's dream of "staticless" and complete verity of reception is alleged to be at hand. Radio utopia has been reached, according to broadcasters, in the Armstrong frequency modulation system, which is said to eliminate natural and man-made interference, giving "unbelievable" high fidelity.

The new method has just been brought out of the laboratory and awaits the vote of public opinion, which will come soon, for 50 FM (as frequency modulation is abbreviated) stations are operating or projected for the spring. Public approval would be expected to make obsolescent the 40,000,000 radio sets now in use in this country and radio stations worth about $75,000,000, forcing replacement within a few years by FM transmission and receiving sets.

Dealers are pleased.

See Abrupt Change

Just as the motion picture story is divided into before and after the advent of sound radio history may be dated before and after the introduction of the Armstrong system, say radio authorities. Before this development there had been no fundamental change in radio though it had grown from an amateur's toy to one of the greatest methods of communication. Many radio experts believe that radio has come to the end of that first epoch and faces a revolution, or abrupt transition, made necessary by an American's perfection of a better radio system.

At the same time, radio folk say that Major Edwin H. Armstrong has put the radio industry in an embarrassing position, not so much because all existing radio equipment may be junked within a few years but because his frequency modulation was rejected by RCA only a few years ago. The radio industry was not convinced until Major Armstrong spent $300,000 of his own money, a part of his fortune made from radio patents, to build a full-sized FM station at Alpine, N. J., atop the Palisades across the Hudson from Manhattan.

But Not His First Invention

The radio industry finds its position made all the more difficult by the fact that Major Armstrong was not an unknown inventor when he announced, after ten years of research, his system of FM to the Institute of Radio Engineers in the spring of 1935. Although a stranger to the public, Major Armstrong already was being acclaimed as the man who had made the greatest contribution to broadcasting since Marconi. Mr. Armstrong had developed the regenerative feedback circuit which lifted radio out of the headphone era; the superheterodyne circuit, which is the basis of most modern radios and made possible long-distance reception, and the superregenerative circuit, which has special uses in short wave radio, especially for military work.

RADIO NETWORK FORMED WITHOUT USING WIRES

The first triple rebroadcast without the aid of telephone wires was made last Sunday with the Armstrong frequency modulation (FM) system. A program originating at the Yonkers FM station, W2XCR, was picked up and rebroadcast by W2XMN at Alpine, N. J., and in turn was picked up by W1XPW in Meriden. From Meriden the program was again rebroadcast and picked up at the studio of WDRC studios.

At present all network programs are carried from station to station by telephone wires. Major Edward H. Armstrong, the inventor, stated at the conclusion of the demonstration of wireless relay that "it is just the beginning of chain broadcasting of frequency modulation." K. B. Warner, managing secretary of the America Radio Relay League, said: "In 10 years there won't be any orthodox brand of broadcasting remaining, except for the lowest grade of local service."

The exact nature of Major Armstrong's FM system is beyond the layman. As far back as 1922, radio's anathema had become a target on the FM system when the Radio Engineer's Institute was told that frequency modulation "inherently distorts without any compensating advantages whatsoever." Mr. Armstrong is credited with having removed the distortion, finding that FM gave reception which radio experts hail as "literally unbelievable," of the "highest excellence" and leaving "nothing whatsoever to be desired."

On Amplitude Modulation

Radio transmission today is, and always had been until Mr. Armstrong came along, on amplitude modulation, that is, each station broadcasts on a fixed frequency and varies the power to correspond with the sound impulse which reaches the microphone. Radio men realized that amplitude modulation (AM for short) never would bring a radio utopia because there is always distortion present as the stations are so crowded together on the wave band that the natural range of sound cannot be reproduced, and they knew also that broadcasting cannot escape static. Static is both natural, chiefly lightning, and man-made, which is caused by all kinds of electrical machines.

Major Armstrong devised a method to eliminate the distortion in FM transmission. FM broadcasting, it was noted, keeps the power at a constant rate and varies the frequency. Mr. Armstrong, radio men said, discovered a way of blanketing natural disturbances and designed a receiver to eliminate most of the noise found in ordinary reception.

"Showmen will especially welcome the new system," Major Armstrong told MOTION PICTURE HERALD, "because they will find that dramatic effects can be achieved in the new method of broadcasting, that are now impossible. Even a whisper is received with unbelievable reality."

Tests have shown that FM not only transmits music with a fidelity unknown in radio, but also in a way "ghastly in its realism" brings to the receiver sounds not attempted in regular broadcasting, such as whispers, the striking of a match, tearing of paper and pouring of liquid. It is claimed that no audible sound is beyond the range of the system, which operates over a band five times the width of an AM station.

The General Electric engineers conducted a series of elaborate experiments to prove the worth of Armstrong's FM system. One transmitter was set up in Schenectady, another in Albany, only 15 miles apart. They operated on the same frequency (41mc) and sent different programs. The Albany station was using 150 watts power and the Schenectady transmitter 50 watts.

What They Found

The engineers drove a FM radio-equipped car between the two points and found that out to 10.8 miles from Albany only that program could be heard, and out to 2.7 miles from Schenectady only the program sent from that place could be received. In the center zone of two miles both programs were heard intermittently and the movement of the car a few inches would throw out one program and bring in the other. Whenever the strength of one signal was twice that of the other, the stronger signal would prevail 100 per cent.

In regular radio reception the strong signal must be 30 or 40 times stronger to blot out the weaker station. That is the reason, engineers said, why there is so much static and interference in regular broadcasting; AM stations interfere with other stations hundreds of miles away and a weak signal will disturb the station to which the radio owner wants to listen. In FM, stations do not interfere with each other except when they are very close together, the area of interference is small and the stronger station can blanket 100 per cent the other station with no difficulty, they declared.

When Major Armstrong's own powerful station went on the air, the time for speculation had passed. Even the RCA engineers who had conducted experiments for a year with Armstrong's system from the Empire State Building had no defense. The RCA men had found that the system was better than regular transmission but they had not realized how much better it was, and so Major Armstrong's equipment had been thrown out of the Empire State station to make room for television.

In the localities of the country that do not now enjoy good radio broadcasting, the Armstrong system, according to radio authorities, will bring reception that is better than now achieved anywhere under the AM method; the rest of the country, as the change-over is made, will have static-less reception and no interference from other stations.

Sommerer Named Manager of RCA Manufacturing Plants

Harry L. Sommerer has been appointed manager of manufacturing for the plants of the RCA Manufacturing Company. "The Flying Deuces" gives a lot of folk something extra to be thankful for at this Thanksgiving time. Laurel and Hardy can give thanks to Boris Morros for taking so much pains with their new picture; Arthur Mayer can be thankful for the privilege of exhibiting it. And we fans of this comic team can rejoice that they're together again and be thankful for being able to roll in the Rialto's aisles. And don't say my taste in comedy is low. If you feel that way after seeing "The Flying Deuces," you ought to have your family doctor examine your funny bone.

They Join the Legion.

In their first picture under RKO's banner, Stan and Ollie join the Foreign Legion, Ollie because he wants to forget a girl and Stan because he can't let his pal down. One offense piles on another till they mournfully await their execution at sunrise for attempted desertion.

Up to this point I have to admit that "The Flying Deuces" is very much like any other Laurel and Hardy comedy. Then it shakes off the familiarity, and from the time they hopefully plan their escape till they are far away from Morocco, you'll have to hold to your seat if you want to stay in it. And the finale will almost be the end of you.

Besides treating the boys handsomely with the production, Morros has provided unusually good support in Reginald Gardiner, Jean Parker and C. Middleton. Among the nonsense and hokum offered there are flashes of real genius that, as far as I'm concerned, equal anything the old maestro, Chaplin, has done. It would spoil your fun to tell you about them. But you must listen for Hardy's singing and Laurel's selection on the harp.

"Their new picture is reason enough for a glad hand. Anything which contributes to the generation of laughter in the body politic is okay by this department. And since laughter is what our honored friends are able to provoke plenty of, their latest effort is recommended." —B. C., N. Y. Times

"Laughs are what fly mostly in this Rialto offering — hefty, hearty, belly-laughs, most of them fresh ones, and funny enough to roll the customers in the aisles. A honey of a comedy."

"If it's slapstick you're in search of, then the place to visit is the Rialto, where 'The Flying Deuces' is on view. Indeed, low comedy—almost extinct on the current screen—has seldom been more consistently hilarious and the stars themselves have rarely been in better form. Provided with a first-rate story and some fresh and imaginative gags, the co-stars will keep you in stitches from beginning to end."

RCA SHOWS FCC NEW MOBILITY OF TELEVISION, EXTENDING PUBLIC USE

New Equipment Carried in "Suitcases", Superseding Motor Vans; Three Pickup Cameras at Various Distances

New field apparatus to give television the mobility of sound broadcasting as developed by the Radio Corporation of America and soon to be put into use in New York and Los Angeles, was demonstrated last week before officials of the Federal Communications Commission.

Instead of the two motor vans, built on inter-urban bus chasses, which now are used for field pickup, the new equipment is carried in "suitcases." All the equipment necessary for the operation of one camera can be packed in four of the small cases with a total weight of 300 pounds, and can be carried in an ordinary automobile.

Network Television in January

Network television will start January 2nd when General Electric's new station in Schenectady, N. Y., begins regular program operations. Tests have indicated that the signals received from the National Broadcasting Company's station in New York City, approximately 130 miles distant, are of sufficient strength to permit re-telecasting.

GE is also reported to be planning a station in Bridgeport, Conn., but no definite announcement concerning this station has been made thus far.

Apply for Public Use

The demonstration was staged by R.C.A. at the Commission's offices, in Washington, in support of an application now under consideration for the public use of the system. A corps of experts from RCA explained the apparatus to members of the commission.

The portable equipment, of which this was the first demonstration outside the laboratories, permits the use of three pickup cameras which may be placed at various distances to get different aspects of the scene to be televised. Whereas the cameras on the truck installation now in use are "tied" to a distance of 500 feet, with the new setup they can be carried as far as 1,000 feet from the point of initial transmission, it was pointed out.

RCA engineers explained that the new equipment costs about one-sixth, weighs only about one-tenth and consumes only about one-fifth the power of the truck installation. The lower power is offset by the use of small antennas which multiply the effective power several times. The wavelength used is below one meter, eliminating much of the electrical disturbance and static which prevails on other frequencies.

Predict Rapid Expansion

With new methods for "chaining" transmitters by radio instead of wire, the new and cheaper equipment, RCA engineers declared, should result in a rapid expansion of television transmitting activities.

While nothing definite was said as to where new stations are planned, it was suggested that the 1941 Presidential inauguration will be televised from Washington.

New television pickup apparatus, of the type demonstrated today before the FCC, has been produced by RCA for the Don Lee Broadcasting System, Los Angeles, and the National Broadcasting Company. Another set of the apparatus will be built for the Columbia Broadcasting System.

TELEVISION HAS 22 BROADCASTERS

The National Union Radio Corporation, as of this week, reports 22 television stations extant, 16 of them in the East. Following is the listing:

Columbia Broadcasting System, Inc., New York
Don Lee Broadcasting System, Los Angeles
Allen B. Du Mont Laboratories, Inc., Passaic, N. J.
Farnsworth Television, Incorporated of Pennsylvania, Springfield, Pa.
First National Television, Inc., Kansas City
General Electric Company, Bridgeport
General Electric Company, Albany
General Electric Co., Schenectady
General Electric Co., Schenectady
General Television Corporation, Boston
National Broadcasting Co., Inc., N. Y.
National Broadcasting Co., Inc., Portable, Camden, N. J., and New York, N. Y.
Philco Radio and Television Corporation, Philadelphia
Philco Radio and Television Corporation, Philadelphia
Purdue University, West Lafayette, Ind.
Radio Pictures, Inc., Long Island City
RCA Manufacturing Co., Inc., Portable, Camden
RCA Manufacturing Co., Inc., Camden
RCA Manufacturing Co., Inc., Portable-Mobile, Camden
University of Iowa, Iowa City
University of Iowa, Iowa City
Zenith Radio Corporation, Chicago

Among those who witnessed the demonstration were James Lawrence Fly, chairman of the FCC; Commissioners Thad H. Brown, Norman S. Case, and T. A. M. Cravens, members of the FCC television committee; and commission engineers, headed by E. K. Jett.

Television set manufacturers soon will slash prices of their product, it was said this week. They made the decision, it was said, after experimentation in the Newburgh-Middletown section of New York State.

The RCA, which disclosed the results of the experiment, is drawing up a mass-production schedule to permit lower prices, on a permanent basis. The first television sets were benchmade, hence their $400 to $800 price; new manufacturing methods should certainly lower the cost, it was asserted.

While RCA will continue to sell its sets outright, other companies are reported planning to lease theirs, in such locations.

The new marketing drive, featured by lower prices of sets, also will be accompanied by introduction of many new inventions, held back by manufacturers until they could be sure of a wider market for the product of their plants.

That the business men of each community join in underwriting a television station for that community, was the suggestion advanced recently by U. A. Sanabria, of the American Television Institute, in Chicago. Mr. Sanabria added his conviction that television as a popular entertainment medium would employ 1,000,000 directly and benefit 5,000,000 indirectly.

Television demonstrations in the Los Angeles area have resulted in sale of over 100 receivers, it was reported this week. Sets are now in department stores, priced from $195 to $650. KHJ, the Don Lee station, is now telecasting nine hours weekly, of "live" television shows, additional to films.

Before the end of next year, television networks are a possibility, A. H. Morton, vice-president of the National Broadcasting Company, said last week, in an address to the Pittsburgh Rotary Club. He also said television was an ally of motion pictures, not a rival.

Baird Television, British television set and equipment manufacturers and experimenters, and a subsidiary of Gaumont British, will manufacture in the United States, after the beginning of next year, Arthur Lee, American vice-president, said in New York last week. Theatre television, utilizing a screen 15 by 20 feet, will be the company's specialty, he said.

Appoint Gilmour

John G. Gilmour, formerly director of General Electric's motion picture department, has been made program manager of the company's new television station, W2XB, near Albany.

Wired Television Order

Filene's, Boston department store, has adopted the wired television system of the American Television Company.

New Television Screen

Philo T. Farnsworth, television invention pioneer and head of the radio and television set firm that bears his name, has been awarded a patent for a new type screen, in conjunction with Bernard C. Gardner, of Philadelphia.

Television Broadcasts

Among the projected or past telecasts of prominent events and personalities by the NBC television service, and others, has been that of the Canzoneri-Al Davis boxing bout at the Madison Square Garden in New York; the television debut of stage impresario Max Reinhardt on the Thomas Lee television station, W6XAO, in Los Angeles last month, and his inauguration of a series of dramas which he directs, also last month; the broadcasting of the Ridgewood Grove Arena boxing bouts on the NBC; the appearance of Rube Goldberg, Lowell Thomas, Theodore Roosevelt, Gene Tunney, Captain Edward Rickenbacker, and others on the Tex O'Rourke "Round-up" on the same service, also last month; and the televising of the Macy department store's Thanksgiving Parade by the NBC, in New York.

Undaunted by the refusal of producers to rent late film features for television, the NBC has gone ahead with telecasting of old ones, or those from independent sources. Thus, last week, the NBC-RCA service telecast "The World Gone Mad" (Majestic, 1933); "Mayerling," and "Harlem Rides the Range." This week: "Broken Melody" and "The Quitter."

NBC Commercials

The NBC has arranged its second series of commercial shows. Elizabeth Watts, fashion authority, is doing a series in cooperation with New York stores.

THREE MORE CRAFTS GET PAY RAISE; FOUR ADDITIONAL SEEK INCREASES

Agents of Producer and Union Signatories to Five-Year Basic Agreement at Studios Meet in Atlantic City

by FLOYD STONE

Effective this "payday," a 10 per cent wage increase will be pocketed by studio members of three of the "Big Four" American Federation of Labor international unions—the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, the International Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, and the International Brotherhood of Teamsters and Chauffeurs—as the result of a five and one-half hour conference on Tuesday, at the Ritz Carleton hotel, Atlantic City, between representatives of the producer and union signatories to the five year basic studio agreement, ending in March, 1941. (Pictures by HERALD staff photographer on two following pages.)

The increase will be in effect until February 15th, when it is understood the producers will ask a reconsideration along with the other recently granted increases.

The remaining unit of the "Big Four," the American Federation of Musicians, was represented at the meeting by its president, Joseph Weber. However, the musicians are not asking a wage increase, at this time.

Two More in Basic Agreement

Two more internationals were admitted, at the meeting, to membership in the basic studio agreement. These are the International Brotherhood of Plasterers and the International Brotherhood of Laborers. The last-named claims 150,000 members nationally, is based in Quincy, Massachusetts, and its studio local is Number 724, Studio Utility Employees, claiming an enrollment of 1,000.

Inclusion of the studio locals of these two internationals in the basic agreement gives them the advantages of a closed shop; they did not ask for wage rises. Local 724 received a 10 per cent addition recently, along with other AFL Conference of Studio Unions locals. Pay of its members had been 75 cents per hour. It is now 82½ cents per hour.

The basic agreement provides generally for a three shift, six hour, five day week. The Tuesday meeting did not discuss changes in this setup. According to Pat Casey, producers' labor contact, who acted as chairman of the producers' committee at the meeting, changes in conditions may be argued at further meetings on the coast.

IATSE Not Represented

No representative of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees attended the conference. It had been thought the Alliance might seek re-entrance into the basic pact, from which it withdrew over a year ago. However, Mr. Casey remarked that no applications had been received from the Alliance, nor had he any indications of such action.

The producers granted a 10 per cent increase to the American Federation of Labor studio workers on November 25th in Hollywood and had given a similar raise to the 12,000 International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, under the leadership of William Bioff, on September 25th. On February 15th the union representatives are to examine the producers' figures on the need for economy. The success of those unions in obtaining wage increases was followed by the action of the other studio internationals in requesting a similar raise.

New York executives of the large companies, including RKO's president, George Schaefer, and Loew's Nicholas Schenck, were out in force for the Atlantic City conference. Business agents of coast studio locals and chief executives of the internationals represented the unions.

Marshall for Laborers

Joseph Marshall acted as representative of the International Brotherhood of Laborers and its studio union, Number 724, members of which are classified as "general laborers," doing manual work. He was not admitted to the meeting until his application, together with that of the plasterers, had been argued and approved; this was several hours after the start of the meeting.

Applications of both internationals were made through William Hutcheson, president of the carpenters' international, and chairman of the unions' basic agreement committee.

The next annual meeting of the producers and the international unions will be in 1941, possibly for the renewal of the basic pact, although Mr. Casey remarked, "I don't know if it will be renewed; look at the length of this conference, on this subject; how can anyone predict what will happen next year?"

Estimates 2,000 Affected

Not over 2,000 workers are affected by the 10 per cent increase, Mr. Casey estimated. He refused to hazard how much the increase would cost the producers annually, pointing out the variability of employment on sound stages.

A committee from the AFM will meet with Mr. Casey in April or May, on plans for reemployment of musicians in motion picture theatres, according to Mr. Weber. He added that appointment of the committee and formulation of plans depended upon the executive board, which may meet before then, in Miami.

The musicians may discuss, with the producers, some minor changes in practices of copying music, and other things; but this will be done later, Mr. Weber emphasized.

At the meeting were, for the producers, Pat Casey, their labor contact and chairman of committee; Fred Pelton, producers' labor contact; Nicholas Schenck, president of MGM; George Schaefer, president of RKO; Harry Buckley, United Artists; William Michel, executive vice-president of Twentieth Century-Fox; Leonard Picker, Columbia attorney; Joseph Hazen, Warner attorney; Adolph Schimel, lawyer for Universal; Austin Keough, Paramount vice-president.

For the unions were William Hutcheson, president of the carpenters' brotherhood, and chairman of the unions' basic agreement committee; Mr. Weber; Dan Tracy, president of the theatrical workers' brotherhood; Joseph Tuohy, business representative of the Studio Drivers' Local 399 of the teamsters' brotherhood; M. A. Hutcheson, first vice-president of the carpenters; J. F. Cambiano, also a carpenters' representative; Frank Carothers, secretary of the unions' basic agreement committee; William Castle, business representative of the studio Carpenters' Union Local 946; Al Speede, business representative of the Studio Electricians' Local 40; Mr. Marshall, and John Gillespie, assistant to Daniel Tobin, president of the teamsters' brotherhood.

HAYS, PRODUCERS TALK ABOUT LABOR

The studio labor situation was "uppermost in the minds of all present" at a meeting of the producers called by Will H. Hays in Hollywood on December 3rd ostensibly for a review of foreign conditions. At the meeting, which lasted five hours, preparations were made for the Atlantic City meeting with labor union representatives which was held on December 5th. The producers' meeting was attended by Harry Cohn, president and in charge of production for Columbia Pictures; Barney Balaban, president of Paramount; Cliff Work, in charge of RKO divisional theatre activities and manager of the Golden Gate theatre, San Francisco; Walter Wanger, president of Wanger Productions; Louis B. Mayer, vice-president in charge of production for MGM; Joseph Schenck, chairman of the board of directors of 20th-Fox; Pat Casey, labor contact for the producers; Fred Pelton, producers' labor man and Mendel Silberberg, attorney.

A definite assurance that production schedules will be maintained without impairment of quality was voiced at the meeting of the producers following Mr. Hays' report on the foreign situation. At the meeting Lou Anger, United Artists theatre partner of Joseph Schenck as the producers' representative on the standing committee governing the Actors Guild Code for extras resigned. William Holman, former Columbia studio manager, accepted the post.

15% Raise Asked By Actors Guild

The Screen Actors Guild is seeking a pay raise of approximately 15% for the 6,500 motion picture extras. Officials of the Guild have not revealed what action they plan to obtain the desired increase, but they feel that, since other workers in the industry have recently received a pay raise, the extras should get more money.

The Screen Actors Guild seeks a minimum of $6.33 for atmosphere players who now get $5.50 per day; regular extras now getting $8.25 would ask $9.49, and dress extras, who now receive $16.50, would get $19 a day.

Meanwhile in negotiations between the Screen Actors Guild, Actors Equity and the American Federation of Radio Artists over television jurisdiction little progress was reported.

BIGGER AND BETTER PAY DEMANDS

Walsh, vice-president, were expected to ask wage increase of approximately 25% when they meet with distributor men on Thursday. The union has about 3,500 members in 31 exchange centers. The initial agreement reached two years ago provided wage increases up to about 50% for employees in the lower wage brackets. Negotiations are expected to take several weeks. The union's committee includes the following: Lou Johnson, president of the New York local; Lawrence J. Katz, Pittsburgh; W. E. Crick, Memphis; Neil C. Bishop, Chicago; Marie Holdsworth, Des Moines; Lee Cronk, Denver, and J. Jodrey Smith, San Francisco.

The New York local, B-51, Film Exchange Employees Union, were reelected for the third consecutive term on Monday night. 236 of the 300 members voted. The officers are: Lou Johnson, MGM, president; vice-president, Lew Braun, Paramount; financial secretary-treasurer, David Newman, Warners; recording and corresponding secretary, Gerard Lee, MGM; sergeant-at-arms, August Kubart, MGM. Trustees elected were: Carman George, MGM; Leonard Brooks, Warners; Rubin Beloff, 20th-Fox; Selig Epstein, RKO; Victor Petitto, Columbia; Harry Newman, United Artists.

Screen Publicists to Get Raise or Join IATSE

The Screen Publicists Guild will probably become affiliated with the IATSE if the producers do not sign a recently negotiated contract covering wages and working conditions, according to Guild officials. If the pay checks received Thursday did not contain the increase the Guild was scheduled to call a meeting for final settlement of the affiliation question. The Screen Publicists Guild is composed of a majority of publicity men in virtually all minor studios. The Guild asks that the wage increase be retroactive to October 9th.

Vaudeville Union Asks Closed Shop, More Pay

The American Guild of Variety Artists, union of vaudeville and night club performers, have sent contracts to the major circuits demanding that the union be recognized as the collective bargaining agency for all houses using vaudeville or stage presentations. This is the first action, on a national scale, of the AGVA, which was chartered last summer after the charter of the American Federation of Actors was revoked.

The union's demands include a closed shop, a 40 hour week, a maximum of 30 performances a week, minimum wages of $50 weekly for principals and $40 for chorus or $10 for principals and $7.50 for chorus on a day basis. Employers must pay $7.50 extra per week, plus expenses, to traveling shows. Special rehearsal pay is requested as follows: when two weeks of work is guaranteed, first week of rehearsal, no pay; second and third, half pay and full pay thereafter. When four weeks are guaranteed, no pay is provided for the first two weeks of rehearsal, no pay for the first two weeks, half pay for the next three weeks and then full pay. The union further asks dismissal pay of two weeks on steady employment, wardrobes must be supplied, workmen's compensation must be carried and dues must be deducted from pay and unpaid auditions, where the public is invited, are prohibited.

IATSE Sued in California

The IATSE bank account in the Hollywood State Bank was attached last week in a Superior Court suit for $18,213 brought by Ninette Nieburger, assignee for several persons involved in the fight of former Local 37 officers against IATSE officers. The I.A. and the new locals, 44, 87, 728 and 165, were named as defendants. The assignee has brought suit in behalf of Joseph W. Carpenter, Howard Hurd, attorney; Pete Ladjami, Bertha Zinn and Ethlyn, who claim that money is due them for expenses before Local 37 was taken over by the I.A. and dissolved.

HEARING ON BIOFF EXTRADITION

The hearing on the extradition of William Bioff, West Coast leader of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and chairman of the Conference of American Federation of Labor studio unions, was to be held Thursday before Governor Horner of Illinois. State's Attorney Thomas J. Courtney had asked that the union leader be brought to Chicago from California to complete serving a sentence on a 17-year-old "vice" conviction. State Senator Abraham L. Marovitz, Bioff's counsel, had appealed to Governor Horner for a hearing on the case and the Governor granted his petition.

In California Governor Culbert Olsen gave George M. Breslin, attorney for William Bioff, assurance that the IATSE leader would have a "full hearing" before him when papers for his extradition to Chicago should arrive. On November 30th the Los Angeles county district attorney's office issued a fugitive warrant for Bioff to expedite extradition proceedings brought by Chicago authorities in connection with a conviction in 1922. The union leader had surrendered to Los Angeles police when the extradition was requested, posted a $1,000 bond and filed a writ of habeas corpus which is returnable on December 12th.

Unions To Combine New York Offices

The Screen Actors Guild, the Musical Artists Guild and the Theatre Authority have all leased offices in 545 Fifth Avenue. The groups are affiliated with the Associated Actors and Artistes of America, parent union, and member of the American Federation of Labor. The unions consolidated their offices to make it unnecessary for members to visit a half-dozen union offices scattered throughout the city.

Operators Win Point In British Columbia

Projectionists in British Columbia have obtained a revision in the fire marshal's act which requires one projectionist for each machine in theatres seating 450 or more. This action partially counters the recent order which allows all houses operating 40 hours or less per week to use only one projectionist. Few theatres in the province seat less than 450.

More Canadian Report Figures

The Canadian Government has issued a condensed summary of theatre business as of December 31, 1938, from a report compiled by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. The figures that follow have been culled from the summary and are in addition to the statistics from the report which appeared in MOTION PICTURE HERALD, page 33, issue of November 25th.

Total receipts for 1938, $33,625,052; average receipts per theatre, $29,687; total admissions for year, 137,976,052; average number of admissions per theatre, 121,779. Population of Canada, 11,199,000; number of theatres, 1,133; number of independent theatres, 566; number of two-unit theatre groups, 57; number of three-unit theatre groups, 14; number of circuit theatre groups (four units and over), 24.

The summary points out that there are 296 villages of less than 1,000 population in which a theatre is situated; 193 towns of from 1,000 to 2,999 population having a theatre; 129 towns from 3,000 to 9,999 population having theatres and 64 places with larger population in which theatres are operated.

Only 658, or 58 per cent, of the theatres in Canada were operated on a full-time basis in 1938. In Ontario 93 per cent operated on a full-time basis; 83 per cent in Quebec and 72 per cent in the Maritime Provinces. British Columbia had 69 per cent on full time, while the Prairie Provinces had only 38 per cent operating every day throughout the year.

Ontario, with 363 theatres, reported $15,202,597 in gross receipts for 59,562,426 admissions, with a combined seating capacity of 249,575 and an average admission price of 25.5 cents, the whole working out to an efficiency rating of 30 against an efficiency of 28 for the whole country.

The 172 theatres in Quebec had an economic rating of 25, with receipts of $6,897,986; admissions, 29,561,273; seating capacity and average admission, 23.3 cents. The 116 theatres in British Columbia rated 32, with $3,665,264 receipts, 15,829,392 admissions, 68,680 seating capacity and 23.2 cents for average admission price.

James Roosevelt to Coast

James Roosevelt, vice-president of Samuel Goldwyn, Inc., left for the Coast Tuesday to confer there on his future plans. Prior to his departure Mr. Roosevelt would make no comment on reports that he was planning a new independent production venture for major company release.

Loew Subsidiaries Dissolved

Loew's Lexington, Inc., Fenton Amusement Corporation and Steinway-38th Street Corporation, three subsidiaries of Loew's Inc., have been dissolved and made part of another subsidiary, Loew's Theatre and Realty Corporation.

HOLLYWOOD'S LABOR BILL UNDER NEW WAGE SCALES

(Showing Old and New Wage Scales, Including Ten Per Cent Wage Increase Granted Sept. 20 and Retroactive to Aug. 12)

IN a day of industry turmoil caused by the lessening of overseas grosses because of war, Labor comes to the fore with demands for wage increases, some of them sought under threat of strike.

Raises in salary, however small, given any craft in Hollywood, affect major and independent studios alike, union organizations maintaining one scale for both.

On November 27, the producers gave ten crafts locals, who, with the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and other organizations, compose the Conference of Studio Unions of the American Federation of Labor, a 10 per cent wage increase, retroactive to October 10. The unions claim 3,267 workers were benefited.

On September 20, the IATSE obtained for its ten member locals in Hollywood, whose total membership is 9,405, a 10 per cent wage increase, retroactive to August 12.

On August 25, at a basic studio agreement meeting in Atlantic City, N. J., the company heads conceded, before adjourning to Tuesday of this week, a 10 per cent raise to the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, whose Hollywood affiliate, Studio Carpenters Local 946, has 2,800 members. This was done because, some years ago, the carpenters were denied a 10 per cent raise given other crafts.

This week, three labor signatories—the carpenters, the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers and the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Stablemen and Helpers of America—won a 10 per cent increase. (See page 33.)

Later in the month, the request of the Moving Picture Painters Local 644, International Brotherhood of Painters, Paperhangers and Decorators of America, for a 15 per cent increase will be acted upon in Hollywood.

Elsewhere on the labor front come indications of moves for obtaining increases in the basic wage scales. The Screen Actors Guild is seeking a reclassification of extra players which in effect would amount to a 15 per cent increase in pay; the Society of Motion Picture Film Editors, having an agreement with the producers, seeks to have its members get 10 per cent more.

On February 15 the producers, who have declared that they recently granted the IATSE and other craft raises in Hollywood in order to avert a nationwide strike, will attempt to convince William Bioff, IATSE leader and chairman of the Conference of AFL Studio Unions, and other negotiators that the increases were doing great harm to production and the industry as a whole. Early indications from the Conference are to the effect that the crafts will refuse to rescind the increases.

Arbitration has been provided for in the event of a disagreement over the return of the overages, and, according to a letter written by Joseph M. Schenck, head of the Association of Motion Picture Producers, to Bioff, the IATSE leader has agreed, in the event that the arbiters decide in favor of the producers' contention, to see that other IATSE wage increases granted since Aug. 15, 1938, also be rescinded.

While craftsmen's wages in the production end of the industry are higher than elsewhere in the country in other businesses, the fact remains that employment in Hollywood production is casual, never steady except in cases of "key" men and department heads. With the rise and the ebb of production, men are hired and laid off. Few can tell in any given month how many pictures will be on the stages and how many will be nearing final stages of preparation—necessitating the building of sets, stages, props and the like.

As a result, there can be no average wage scale determined for an individual craft. When there is work, craftsmen are busy—even to the extent of getting time and a half and double time for overtime. When there is no work, they sit by telephones or in the union hiring halls, earning nothing.

Dietrich Rides Again To Screen Triumphs

Marlene Dietrich dresses for her role as an entertainer in Rivoli's "Destry Rides Again," a dramatization of the Old West.

By KATE CAMERON.

"Destry Rides Again," Universal production, screen play by Felix Jackson, Henry Myers and Gertrude Purcell from story by Max Brand, directed by George Marshall and presented at the Rivoli Theatre.

THE CAST:

Frenchy	Marlene Dietrich
Tom Destry	James Stewart
Wash Dimsdale	Charles Winninger
Boris Callahan	Mischa Auer
Kent	Brian Donlevy
Janice Tyndall	Irene Hervey
Lily Belle Callahan	Una Merkel
Bugs Watson	Allen Jenkins
Gyp Watson	Warren Hymer
Lem Claggett	Tom Fadden
Hiram J. Slade	Samuel S. Hinds
Loupgerou	Billy Gilbert
Jack Tyndall	Jack Carson

Nineteen-thirty-nine will go down in cinema history as the year that turned Greta Garbo from the screen's greatest dramatic actress into one of its first comediennes and that brought that great sleeping beauty of the screen, Marlene Dietrich, back to life.

In Universal's production of "Destry Rides Again," which had its first showing at the Rivoli Theatre yesterday, Miss Dietrich comes to life with a bang. The bang in this case happens to be the popping of guns in a barroom battle, when the bad men of an old western frontier town carry on a death struggle with the forces of law and order.

The picture has everything that a fast-moving, fancy riding, trigger-tickling picture of the Old West should have to make it an exciting and entertaining exhibition. The story is based on Max Brand's novel of the same name and it has been whipped into fine cinema shape by a trio of clever writers whose names appear at the head of this column.

Not only has Marlene Dietrich come back to the screen more beautiful and alluring than ever, but she has been permitted to sing three songs, especially written for her, in the throaty voice that first attracted American audiences to her as a screen personality. In watching her work with a newly acquired animation, one forgets the series of static performances that sent her into voluntary retirement a couple of seasons ago.

Winninger Excellent.

The entire cast works under George Marshall's direction with splendid competence. James Stewart is delightful as the Destry of the title. He is a soft-spoken officer of the law whose words carry a wallop in their velvet drawl. He believes in outwitting his adversaries by other than tri[illegible]

Mischa Auer and Una Merkle contribute a number of amusing sequences as an incongruously married pair. Irene Hervey brings in a pleasant breath of romance and Allen Jenkins, Warren Hymer, Billy Gilbert and Samuel S. Hinds add to the picturesque atmosphere of Bottleneck by their interesting characterizations.

Type-casting, the bane of the film industry, has rarely been more successfully pied than by Producer Joe Pasternak in his "Destry Rides Again" at the Rivoli. With a sweep of his Hungarian fist he has taken Marlene Dietrich off her high horse and placed her in a horse opera and has converted James Stewart, last seen as Washington's timid Mr. Smith, into the hard-hitting son of an old sagebrush sheriff. Such epics as Max Brandt's tale of the coming of law and order to the frontier town of Bottleneck have been told often enough before. What sets this one off from its fellows, converts it into a jaunty and amusing chronicle is the novelty of finding a Dietrich and a Stewart in it and playing it as wisely as though their names were Mr. and Mrs. Hoot Gibson.

It's difficult to reconcile Miss Dietrich's Frenchy, the cabaret girl of the Bloody Gulch Saloon, with the posed and posturing Dietrich we last saw in Mr. Lubitsch's "Angel." Her "Blue Angel" comes closer to it. Once again she's hard and tough and painted to the margins of the pallette. She delivers such ballads as "Little Joe the Wrangler" and "The Boys in the Back Room" with quite the proper whisky contralto effect. She cold-decks a poker sucker with complete nonchalance, tucks her earnings down her dress front and doesn't bat an eye when a cowhand murmurs "Thar's gold in them hills." (And where the Hays office was when that line sneaked through we'll never know, not that we mind it.)

The scene that really counts, though, is the cat-fight between Miss Dietrich's Frenchy and Una Merkel's outraged Mrs. Callahan. We thought the battle between Paulette Goddard and Rosalind Russell in "The Women" was an eye-opener; now we realize it was just shadow-clawing. For the real thing, with no holds barred and full access to chairs, tables, glasses, waterbuckets and as much bottles, as may be conveniently hair as snatched from the opponent's scalp, we give you not "The Women," but the two women who fight it out in the Bloody Gulch over a pair of Mischa Auer's pants.

Marlene Dietrich

Mr. Stewart is all right, too. He usually is. Here he's Destry, son of a fighting father, who comes to Bottleneck as Charles Winninger's deputy and almost breaks that old fire-eater's heart by professing a dislike for firearms. That, naturally, sets him down as a softy, in the opinion of Brian Donlevy and the rest of the thick-necked gentry of Bottleneck. It shouldn't fool you, though; with a name like Destry and a girl like Frenchy to lend him her rabbit's foot, Mr. Stewart couldn't very well help emerging as the hero of a rather heroic occasion. And he couldn't help being Mr. Stewart, turning in an easy, likable, pleasantly humored performance.

So there it is, a bit of the old West with a good bit of the old Dietrich in it; a tightly written, capitally directed show, with perfectly grand supporting performances by Samuel S. Hinds as Bottleneck's mayor, Mr. Donlevy as the chief villain, Mr. Winninger as the shirt-tucking sheriff and Mischa Auer as a Russian cowboy. Good fun every minute of it, and another trophy for Mr. Pasternak.

NOTE: These ten craft locals, members of the Conference of AFL Studio Unions, of which William Bioff, IATSE leader, is chairman, on Nov. 27 obtained increases retroactive to Oct. 10, 1939, when negotiations begans. The numbers appearing in parentheses following the names of the locals are the approximate membership of the locals working in film studios, according to Conference figures. However, in the Building Service Employes' instance, the number indicates the union's estimate of how many workers it claims fall under its jurisdiction. The total number of men affected by the wage increase is 3,267, according to Conference figures. According to Bioff, before the wage increases were granted, the men "made an annual average salary of $900."

*—Jurisdiction of Local 831 is questionable, members of that organization being compelled to take out cards in Moving Picture Painters Local 644, member of the same international, which has collective bargaining agreement with producers. Conference of AFL Studio Unions claims to have obtained increase for members of Local 831 working in studios, so wage scales were computed on basis of prices contained in pact between producers and Local 644.

—Building service employes are very loosely organized and each studio has different method of hiring its help in this classification, which includes night watchmen, janitors and the like. The 66 cent per hour rate is regarded as a basic scale, some studios paying more to the different ranks of this classification.

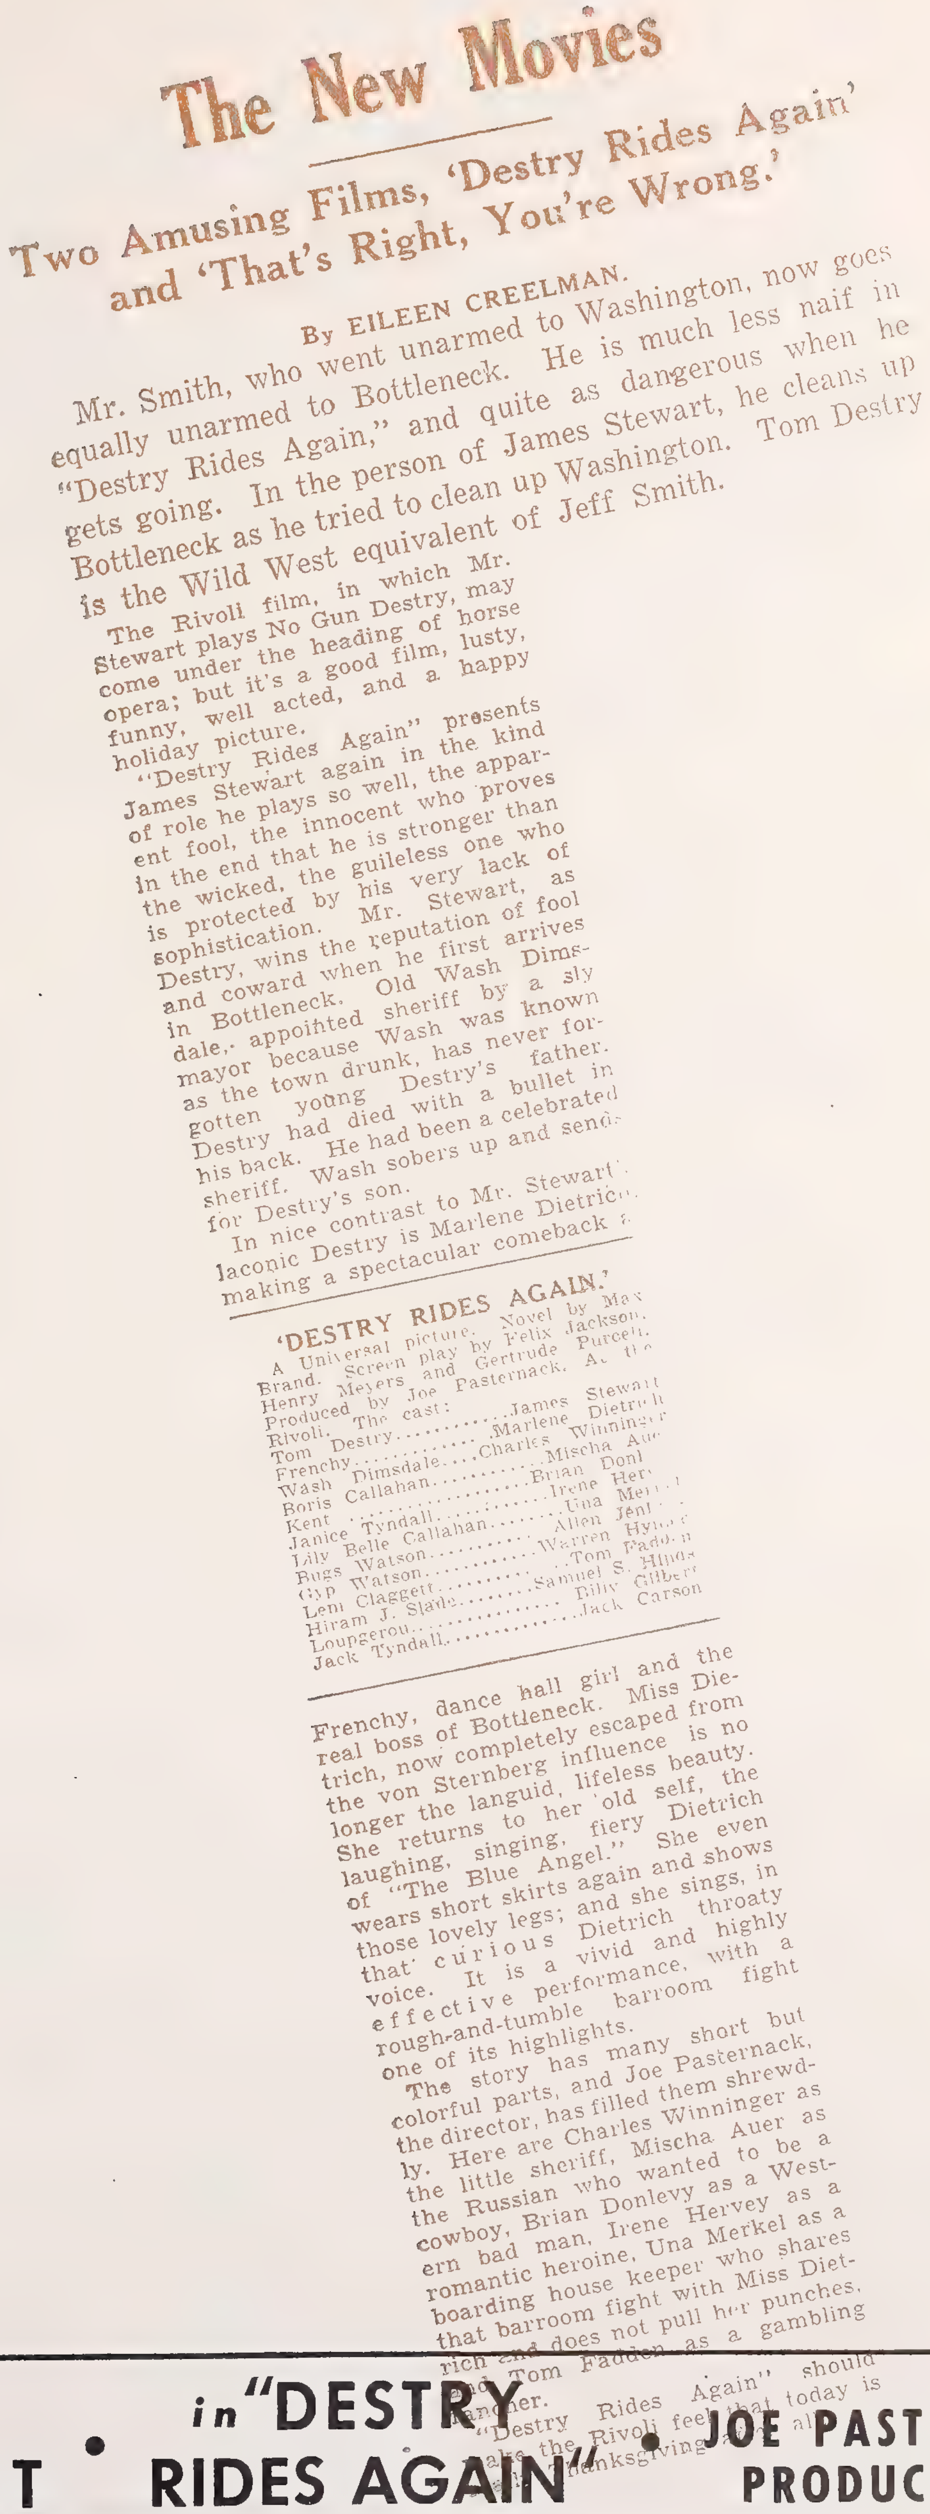
Says Creelman
in N. Y. Sun



The New Movies

Two Amusing Films, 'Destry Rides Again' and 'That's Right, You're Wrong.'

By EILEEN CREELMAN.

Mr. Smith, who went unarmed to Washington, now goes equally unarmed to Bottleneck. He is much less naif in "Destry Rides Again," and quite as dangerous when he gets going. In the person of James Stewart, he cleans up Bottleneck as he tried to clean up Washington. Tom Destry is the Wild West equivalent of Jeff Smith.

The Rivoli film, in which Mr. Stewart plays No Gun Destry, may come under the heading of horse opera; but it's a good film, lusty, funny, well acted, and a happy holiday picture.

"Destry Rides Again" presents James Stewart again in the kind of role he plays so well, the apparent fool, the innocent who proves in the end that he is stronger than the wicked, the guileless one who is protected by his very lack of sophistication. Mr. Stewart, as Destry, wins the reputation of fool and coward when he first arrives in Bottleneck. Old Wash Dimsdale, appointed sheriff by a sly mayor because Wash was known as the town drunk, has never forgotten young Destry's father. Destry had died with a bullet in his back. He had been a celebrated sheriff. Wash sobers up and send for Destry's son.

In nice contrast to Mr. Stewart' laconic Destry is Marlene Dietric making a spectacular comeback

Frenchy, dance hall girl and the real boss of Bottleneck. Miss Dietrich, now completely escaped from the von Sternberg influence is no longer the languid, lifeless beauty. She returns to her old self, the laughing, singing, fiery Dietrich of "The Blue Angel." She even wears short skirts again and shows those lovely legs; and she sings, in that curious Dietrich throaty voice. It is a vivid and highly effective performance, with a rough-and-tumble barroom fight one of its highlights.

The story has many short but colorful parts, and Joe Pasternack, the director, has filled them shrewdly. Here are Charles Winninger as the little sheriff, Mischa Auer as the Russian who wanted to be a cowboy, Brian Donlevy as a Western bad man, Irene Hervey as a romantic heroine, Una Merkel as a boarding house keeper who shares that barroom fight with Miss Dietrich and does not pull her punches, and Tom Fadden as a gambling rancher.

"Destry Rides Again" should make the Rivoli feel that today is [illegible] Thanksgiving al

"Destry Rides Again"—Rivoli

"DESTRY RIDES AGAIN," a screen drama by Felix Jackson, Henry Myers and Gertrude Purcell, based on a novel by Max Brand, directed by George Marshall, produced by Joe Pasternak and presented by Universal at the Rivoli Theater with the following cast:

Frenchy	Marlene Dietrich
Tom Destry	James Stewart
Wash Dimsdale	Charles Winninger
Boris Callahan	Mischa Auer
Kent	Brian Donlevy
Janice Tyndall	Irene Hervey
Lily Belle Callahan	Una Merkel
Bugs Watson	Allen Jenkins
Gyp Watson	Warren Hymer
Lem Claggett	Tom Fadden
Hiram J. Slade	Samuel S. Hinds
Loupgerou	Billy Gilbert
Jack Tyndall	Jack Carson

"DESTRY RIDES AGAIN" continues the cycle of super-Westerns with great skill and gusto. The new Rivoli offering is as conventional as a handshake in story outline, but in its production, from the casting to the cutting, it has all the excitement of a knockout punch. This is the picture which was supposed to be chiefly intriguing for the fact that it had Marlene Dietrich engaging in a frontier town saloon scuffle and had James Stewart playing cowboy. Those rather odd assignments add no little to the dramatic thrust and suspense of the film, for Miss Dietrich and Mr. Stewart fill them brilliantly, but the stars alone do not make for a first-rate show.

What is chiefly responsible for the robust and captivating entertainment, I think, is the splendid supervision which it has had. Joe Pasternak, whose principal concern in Hollywood has been the guiding of Deanna Durbin's unprecedented career, produced "Destry Rides Again," and he has demonstrated that he is as shrewd a showman with a six-shooter spectacle as he is with comedy of adolescence. The continuity is full of the usual Wild West hokum, but it has been handled with such exuberant good humor and such telling melodramatic effect that the motion picture, instead of being a latter-day reprint of a successful formula, is one of the best examples of its genre.

Much has been made in advance of Miss Dietrich's assumption of a gambling joint hostess role for all the world as though she were attempting something sensational. I would say that she is perfectly cast in "Destry Rides Again." Whether she is singing barroom ditties in a low, husky voice, engaging in a hair-pulling and kicking contest with an indignant wife or helping to fleece a rancher in a crooked poker game, she is convincing and extremely attractive. Here is a part which is reminiscent of the one she played in "The Blue Angel." It should convince anyone that Holywood made a bad mistake by trying to change her into a sophisticated glamour girl.

It is James Stewart, though, who keeps a helter-skelter script unified and engrossing from an acting standpoint. His portrayal of a deputy sheriff who doesn't carry guns because someone might get hurt, but cleans up a bad town in record time is perfectly in key with the peculiar mood of the piece. When the photoplay wants humor, he contrives it; when it asks for melodramatic urgency, he never fails to whip it out of the proceedings. It is not only a superb piece of acting, but it demonstrates that Mr. Stewart is one of the most [illegible] actors [illegible] the screen.

Marlene Dietrich

In "Destry Rides Again"

The supporting players are fine, too. Charles Winninger plays a town drunk, who turns square on being mockingly appointed sheriff, with a consummate sense of comic values; Mischa Auer adds brilliant touches of buffoonery, and Brian Donlevy, Una Merkel, Allen Jenkins and Samuel S. Hinds contribute the sort of persuasive burlesque impersonations without which the Rivoli presentation would be definitely dull. Meanwhile, George Marshall has staged the production with pace and a nice eye for showy details. Altogether, "Destry Rides Again" is a singularly satisfying show, and for my part I'll thank Mr. Pasternak as much as anyone for the fact that this is so.

Germany Reopening Theatres in Occupied Poland; Decline in Hollywood Revenues from Europe Less Than Predicted

WAR NEWS:

Soviet's invasion and bombing of Finland last week further reduces foreign film markets for Hollywood product, in a country where 56 per cent of the pictures shown are American. The extent of the loss is still to be determined.

U. S. newsreels turn their cameras on Finland, latest victim in Europe's wars.

Germany, realigning ownership of theatres on Nazi-occupied Poland, pushes efforts to reopen the houses, all of which were closed on the Nazi-Soviet invasion.

New Australian war taxes raise duties on film imports.

Montreal is washed by wave of war propaganda films.

Official assurance has been given that the Dominion Government will not interfere with distributors or exhibitors in Canada through its newly-created National Film Board, headed by John Grierson.

Wall Street estimates that the decline in Hollywood film revenues from Europe will not be as severe as was at first predicted.

The United States Department of Commerce observes that many millions of dollars belonging to American companies, including millions of U. S. motion picture money, invested in Europe, are now "fighting" for both sides, all countries having drafted foreign capital for war service.

The international situation is one reason given for the action of distributors in the United States in releasing an unprecedented number of big films during the holidays "off" season. See page 13.

War sends Hollywood producers deeper into story vaults for feature material, sending story purchases to a new low. See page 18.

American companies petition U. S. Ambassador Joseph Drew in Tokyo to protest Japan's "discrimination" growing out of the Sino-Japanese conflict. See page 50.

International situation is brought by Hollywood producers into discussions with studio labor. See page 33.

London authoritatively reports for a money pool to assist British production, the money to come from American distributors' "frozen" funds.

"GOOSE STEP" NOW TITLE OF "HITLER"

The Producers Pictures film, "Hitler, Beast of Berlin," has been permanently retitled "Goose Step" at the suggestion of the Production Code Administration which has issued a certificate for the film under the new title.

Judge Robert W. Arnold of the Richmond, Va., circuit court has affirmed the action of the State Division of Motion Picture Censorship barring the film from Virginia. In upholding the rejection the judge held that the court was not a censorship body; that it was empowered merely to sustain or reverse a decision of the censorship authority.

Colonel Robert T. Barton, Jr., counsel for Trio Productions, distributor of the film in that territory, indicated that the censors may be asked to pass upon the film again, after certain changes have been made.

Finland Newest Problem For U. S. Distributors

The "little democracy" of Finland seems destined for the same position as a customer for American motion pictures as Austria, Bohemia, Moravia, Poland and other European countries upon which a strong anti-Hollywood arm has been placed by the Nazis and Reds in Europe in the last two years.

While distributors' home offices in New York have yet to hear of the exact nature of immediate losses, and of the predictions of potential losses of invaded Finland, they recognize that Finland's bombed cities are not at the moment tenable for motion picture exhibitions.

Paramount, Fox, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Warners have offices in the most seriously affected city of Helsingfors.

American pictures have about 56 per cent of the market. German and French pictures run second in foreign competition; however, strongest competition comes from relatively large native production, which, in boxoffice value, is estimated as "six times" that of a foreign film.

There are 282 theatres, six of them new. The country's total theatre capacity is for 82,440.

Estimates of the U. S. film industry's revenue derived from the country are not obtainable in New York due to the fact that some American distributors sell outright to Finnish agents, whereas others carry on their own distribution.

Foreign department executives are convinced that in the event the Soviet carries out a complete conquest and absorption of Finland the market will be closed thereafter to American films, as in Russia. However, if the Soviet stops with the seizure of desired military and naval bases in Finland, it is believed that the market would be open, partially, as it is in Esthonia, Latvia and Lithuania.

Newsreels Rush Films On Invasion of Finland

American newsreels this week shifted their war scenes to little Finland, all five reels immediately making the invasion the leading item of their subjects, rushing to their libraries for stock shots to document material recently taken as Russia started to threaten the country.

Typical of the newsreel releases following the invasion was RKO Pathe's pictures of buildings of Helsingsfors (Helsinki), where the 1940 Olympic Games were to take place, commentators explaining that the buildings had become targets for Red bombs. Finnish Minister Hjalmar Procope was filmed in Washington explaining his Government's official stand.

Paramount News this week released "last minute" pictures from stricken Helsingfors, showing hasty evacuations of women and children before the Russian bombs were dropped on the Finnish Capital.

Minister Procope also appeared for Paramount News, and in the others, all of them playing up pictures from the newest scene of Europe's theatre of war.

Radio Unable to Get Finnish Hookup

Neither the National or Columbia broadcasting systems were able to put through a single program from Finland with Russia's invasion.

N. B. C. had originally scheduled a broadcast by Foreign Minster Eljas Erkko from Helsingfors. It was to have been relayed through Geneva, Switzerland, but the Helsingfors-Geneva circuit could not be established.

C. B. S. had scheduled an address by Premier Aimo K. Cajander as part of its nightly roundup from European capitals. The New York office was advised by its Geneva representative that communication could not be established with the Finnish capital.

Nazis Realigning Polish Exhibition

Germany's motion picture industry, cooperating with the military and civil authorities, is making every effort to have the motion picture theatres in occupied Poland resume operations, according to a report to the U. S. Department of Commerce, Washington, from Assistant Trade Commissioner Paul H. Pearson, Berlin.

Polish theaters in the possession of persons of German origin, the report points out, will continue to be operated by the present owners. It is estimated that about 80 cinemas in East Upper Silesia and 60 in the Corridor district will remain under their present management. In the greater number of cases, however, German commissioners will be installed and they will manage the theaters until the question of ownership is settled.

For several weeks German distributors have been supplying re-opened Polish picture houses with features, only German films already released in Germany being offered. In addition to the features, numerous shorts pertaining to "social" and political developments in Germany are also being shown in Poland.

Assistant Trade Commissioner Pearson also has informed the Department of Commerce that proposed Czechoslovak motion picture productions which have received the approval of Germany's Film Advisory Board will be granted a subsidy of 200,000 crowns (about $8,000) which in exceptional cases may be increased to 300,000 crowns ($12,000).

War Brings Boost In Australia Taxes

Australia has imposed a new duty of one-pence per foot on raw stock imported into the commonwealth and has increased the duty on color prints and all other positives from four-pence to five-pence a foot, according to information received in home office foreign departments in New York Monday from company representatives in Australia.

The increases were ascribed to the need for increased governmental revenues as a result of war-time expenditures.

Heretofore, raw stock has been admitted to the commonwealth duty-free The increased tax on black-and-white positive imports, however,

'Destry Rides Again' at Rivoli

By ROSE PELSWICK.

A good Westerner is a lot of fun, and "Destry Rides Again," at the Rivoli Theatre, is bang-up entertainment. It's not only turned out with all the traditional speed and action of the old-fashioned Wild West yarns, but it also has the further benefits of a top-flight cast, an amusingly written script and slick direction.

Here is James Stewart as Thomas Jefferson Destry, son of a two-gun Western sheriff, who single-handedly cleans up the lawless town of Bottleneck. Here is Marlene Dietrich, of all people, as Frenchy, a be-frizzed and hard-boiled dancehall girl with a heart of gold. And here also are Brian Donlevy as Kent, the dastardly gambler-owner of the Last Chance saloon; Samuel S. Hinds as the crooked, silk-hatted Mayor; Charles Winninger as a reformed alcoholic, Mischa Auer as a would-be cowboy and Allen Jenkins and Warren Hymer among the ornery hombres who do their ornery boss's bidding.

For Bottleneck is the wildest and wooliest town of the old West, where anyone who doesn't take orders from Boss Kent is promptly liquidated. When the local sheriff makes a protest about Kent's switching cards on a rancher during a crooked poker game, the peace officer is instantly shot dead and, as a gag, the lawless element appoints the town drunkard to fill out the rest of his term. At which the new sheriff sobers up and sends for the son of his old friend, Destry, to be deputy sheriff.

But Thomas Jefferson Destry, unlike his gun-toting father, is a quiet, drawling, lanky young man who doesn't believe in carrying guns, who whittles napkin rings while he talks, and who points up his remarks with homespun anecdotes. The lawless element thereupon considers him harmless and returns to its shootings and land-grabbings, but, slowly and methodically, young Destry takes over. Instead of shooting 'em up, he puts 'em behind bars, and you'll want to see for yourself how law and order come to Bottleneck.

Spun out with just the right tongue-in-cheek humor, the picture moves rapidly, offers plenty of rowdy action and boasts some really funny dialogue. Mr. Stewart was a happy choice for Destry Junior, and Miss Dietrich checks in a lively performance in a role far removed from the attitudinizing and almost trance-like parts of her previous films, a role that finds her rolling cigarettes, singing and dancing Western ditties and even engaging in a hair-pulling scrap with Una Merkel.

Mr. Hinds, usually the benevolent judge or neighbor, does an outstanding bit as the crooked Mayor; the rest of the principals down the line give excellent accounts of themselves, and it all winds up, as all good Westerners should, in a chair-breaking, glass-smashing free-for-all. You'll enjoy this one.

Film Propaganda Floods Montreal

Montreal theatre patrons this week were washed by a wave of propaganda films as first-run houses along St. Catherine street made their first test of public reception of such pictures.

Most heavily pushed was Alexander Korda's "The Lion Has Wings," described as "an authorized inside story of the British Royal Airforce," with Merle Oberon and Ralph Richardson. Heavy advertising, good press reviews, and printed comments of local military authorities drew good crowds at the Palace, of Consolidated Theatre, Ltd., having an all-but-one first-run monopoly.

Starting Tuesday, at His Majesty's theatre, a screen and legitimate house, there ran another big feature, "War," Herbert Wilcox's "Our Fighting Navy," film of the British Navy, with H. B. Warner, Noah Beery. Also well advertised, with a paraphrase of Admiral Lord Nelson's famous "England Expects Every Man To Do His Duty" reading "England Expects Everyone to See 'Our Fighting Navy'" this picture, too, was well treated.

At the Capitol theatre ran a 15-minute short, "The Democratic Way," filmed by Associated Screen News Limited, Montreal. A hodgepodge of newsreels covering 1914 mobilization; Canadian War Memorial Ceremony at Vimy, France, three years ago; this spring's Royal Visit and all cuts available on Canadian Legion gatherings in the past five years, the film was accompanied by a commentary, to confuse audiences more than anything else. Poorly received, it was possibly the poorest film ever produced in Canada.

Newsreels were also liberally sprinkled with propaganda pictures. At various houses were shown some of the best British propaganda output to date, a film talk by First Lord of The Admiralty Winston Churchill; shots of the Royal Canadian Navy defending the east coast of the Dominion; England's music hall star, Gracie Fields, crooning to soldiers in barracks.

Optimistic on Foreign Decline

Wall Street feels that, so far as can be seen, the decline in U. S. film rentals from Great Britain, which account for around half of receipts from abroad, has not been as bad as was originally feared and business there has even been improving a little in recent weeks; best estimates are that British business now is running about 80 per cent, Wall Street Journal reported Thursday.

It was observed, however, that the full effects of the upheaval that has taken place in the foreign income of American producers probably have not yet been felt. Meanwhile, disruption of office and bookkeeping personnel abroad, and the curtailment of communication facilities, have made accounting returns late.

More disturbing than the actual decline in revenues, however, were said to be growing exchange restrictions, not only in Britain, but in its colonies and in France.

French business was estimated to be off around 50 per cent from normal levels and exchange restrictions will probably be imposed, it was said.

American dollars, including millions belonging to U. S. film companies, are being marched off to war side by side with the franc, the pound and the mark. Whether they like it or not, United States companies are contributing millions to the cost of Europe's conflict.

Nearly $3,000,000,000 in American money, the U. S. Commerce Department estimates, is invested directly in industrial plants and other commercial establishments in Germany, France and the British Empire. And American money, like the rest, has been drafted for war service.

For years it has been impossible to take cash out of Nazi Germany. Now England, France and Canada, the department said, are requiring permits for the exportation of money, some of them prohibiting all or partial currency exports.

American investors are not likely to bring home any profits they may make abroad—at least not for the present—for the belligerents are laying heavy taxes against war profits, the Government said.

Warner Club Party Set

The annual Warner Club Christmas Party for the children, nieces, nephews, of Warner Brothers' metropolitan New York employees will be held December 16th at the Warner Vitaphone studio in Brooklyn.

Majors Petition Ambassador to Protest Japan's "Discrimination"

The major motion picture companies, through their representatives in Tokyo, have asked the American Ambassador, Joseph C. Grew, to file a formal protest against what they term discriminatory tactics and restraint of trade on the part of the Japanese Government. This is the most recent development in the negotiations that have been going on for some time for loosening restrictions, monetary and otherwise, on American companies in Japan.

More than $1,500,000 in motion picture receipts of Paramount, Twentieth Century-Fox, MGM, RKO, Warner Brothers, and United Artists is frozen in Japan because the government has refused to grant remittance permits. The company men also told the ambassador that many films were being held up by the Japanese customs officials.

Difficulties in Japan became acute in September, 1937, when the importation of films was banned. About a year after that an agreement was made under which the companies could import $30,000 worth of film with the value fixed at 1.5¢ per foot. Receipts, in addition to the $30,000 of actual film cost, could not be converted into dollars immediately but were to be held for three years without interest at the San Francisco branch of the Yokohama Specie Bank. The Japanese Government insisted on this because it was feared that the yen would fall if a large sum was changed into dollars in any short period. About 3,000,000 yen, accumulated between September, 1937, and May, 1938, were covered by the plan which expired almost a year ago.

The companies are now trying to work out arrangements for the yen receipts of the last year. They hold that the government has not lived up to its part of the agreement. About 80 per cent of the $30,000 actual film cost has been allowed up to date but that, they say, is not a great consideration in relation to the total receipts. The American companies want dollars and not yen but the Japanese Government has not permitted the exchange.

The home offices have no additional information about the latest move by their representatives but the men in Japan have full authority to negotiate an agreement and when the proposal takes final form it will be referred to New York for approval, they said. The foreign departments in New York held that no threat was being made against the Japanese Government and that the protest was just a step in the negotiations.

The Japanese Government has been astonished by Ambassador Grew's vigorous protests against interference with American business in the Orient. The petition of the film companies will be the basis of additional material for discussion when the abrogated trade treaty with Japan comes up for discussion in December.

Dietrich Glamorous in Western

By WILLIAM BOEHNEL.

DESTRY RIDES AGAIN, at the Rivoli, with Marlene Dietrich, James Stewart, Charles Winninger, Mischa Auer, Brian Donlevy, Irene Hervey, Una Merkel, Allen Jenkins, Warren Hymer, Tom Fadden, Samuel S. Hinds, Billy Gilbert and Jack Carson. Directed by George Marshall from a screen play by Felix Jackson, Henry Meyers and Gertrude Purcell, based on a novel by Max Brand. A Universal picture.

As glamorous and alluring as ever, Marlene Dietrich stages a rousing comeback as a painted lady in an early Western dance hall in Destry Rides Again, at the Rivoli. She slinks around with that come-on look, shows her famous gams, stages a riotous free-for-all with Una Merkel, sings a couple of blues numbers in her husky voice and clearly demonstrates that all she needed to show how good she is was the chance.

William Boehnel

As for the film itself, it is a racy, exciting, forthright 90 minutes of thrills and humor which you simply cannot afford to miss, because it takes a lot of the staple elements of Western melodrama, such as the dance hall girl with a heart of gold, the crooked gambler and the lanky, homespun sheriff, and gives them a fresh airing.

Besides, there is Jimmy Stewart to bring charm and credibility to the part of the folksy deputy sheriff who likes to solve his problems with an appropriate story illustrating his point, but who can use a six-shooter with the best of them when he gets his dander up. Here is a performance, coming as it does right on the heels of his work in Mr. Smith Goes to Washington, which should prove once and for all how fine an actor, as well as how attractive a personality, Mr. Stewart really is.

Fine Performances.

There is, too, a first-rate performance by Charles Winninger as a drunk who is made sheriff of the town as a jest, but who persuades Tom Destry to become his deputy and help him clean up the place, and an equally fine performance by Samuel S. Hinds as the tobacco-chewing, chess-playing racketeering mayor.

Fine, too, are Brian Donlevy as a gambler with an itch to kill; Una Merkel as a staunch frontier wife and Mischa Auer as her Russian husband, who must live up to the fact that her first mate was a mustachioed gentleman named Callahan.

1,000 FIGHT "POT O' GOLD" AIR SHOWS; RADIO'S "CONTRIBUTIONS" TO FILMS

Livingston of Lincoln Capitol Says Theatres Are Applying His Tactics of Making Counter - Offers to Public

Exhibitors the country over are joining Robert (Bob) Livingston, of the Capitol theatre, Lincoln, Nebraska, in the fight he launched two weeks ago (see MOTION PICTURE HERALD, November 25, page 34), to combat "the devastating box office slump" being caused nationally by the Tums stomach-pills' "Pot O' Gold" $1,000 cash giveaway.

Figuring that the airshow, as conducted for Tums by Horace Heidt and his orchestra, is cutting into Tuesday night theatre business by as much as 45 per cent, Mr. Livingston adopted a counter offer, agreeing, by newspaper advertising and otherwise, to give $1,100—$100 more than Tums' offer—to any person in Lincoln and environs who was in his Capitol theatre when Tums called by telephone and found the person not at home.

Says 1,000 Theatres Act

One thousand theatres, both independent and affiliated, are represented as having adopted similar tactics in fighting the new cash competition, which, according to Mr. Livingston, is keeping scores of thousands of potential theatre customers at home Tuesday nights beside their radio and telephone in anticipation of the call from Tums announcing their winning of the thousand dollars.

P. J. Woods, Ohio MPTOA head, went even further, and should the person called be in an Ohio MPTOA theatre the person will be paid double the amount of the radio giveaway. Mr. Woods indicated this action was taken because two of the Tums winners had been in Ohio, and the Tuesday night slump there was very sharp. Furthermore, a committee of Ohio showmen is round-tabling with Warners and RKO circuit heads in that state, to get them also to join in a mutual insurance scheme to be used to pay the $1,000 when a patron not at home when called by Tums is the winner.

The Independent Ohio Theatre Owners Association, through Mr. Wood, with headquarters at Columbus, concluded that "'The Pot O' Gold' may be gold for the radio sponsor, but theatre owners are finding it to be something entirely different."

Mr. Wood told Ohio's owners that if they had been wondering why their Tuesday nights' business had been on the downgrade since the middle of October, investigation would prove that many of their patrons were "hugging" their telephones between 8:30 and 9:00 (E.S.T.) to listen to the "Pot O' Gold" program.

Board of Governors Meets

"Realizing the seriousness of the situation," continued Mr. Wood, "the board of governors of this organization met this week and decided that Ohio theatre owners could recover this Tuesday night business by offering to give to the person whose telephone number is called in this "Pot O' Gold" contest, double the amount offered by the program's sponsor if the person is in a Ohio motion picture theatre and properly identifies him or herself as the person whose telephone number was called. If the 'Pot O' Gold' award is $1,000, we will offer $2,000; if the 'Pot O' Gold' prize is $2,000, our offer will be $4,000.

MORNING SHOWS PROVE SUCCESS

Harry F. Shaw, Loew-Poli division manager, New Haven, reports that a move in all towns of the circuit to sell theatres to local merchants and organizations for holiday morning shows, has resulted in additional revenue. The circuit, however, will also run its own benefit kiddie shows.

"The campaign will be open to all Ohio picture theatres irrespective of their membership in this association. The amount to be assessed against each participating theatre shall be decided upon after we know the number of theatres that will participate. However, before we can definitely set any assessment, we must first know how many theatres are interested. The more theatres participating the lower we can make the assessments.

"The campaign will be sponsored by this association which will guarantee the payment of the prize money to any winning contestants during the period of the campaign," said Mr. Wood, who expects the counter move to start December 12th.

Crescent Circuit Applying Plan

J. M. Savage, of the Crescent Amusement Co., Nashville, Tenn., with theatres throughout the south, has written for tear-sheets on Mr. Livingston's ads in the Lincoln papers, and will install the same plan over his circuit. New England theatres also have grouped for mutual protection. Ralph Goldberg, who has a circuit of neighborhood houses in Omaha, is using the plan, also.

Another circuit to join is Fox-Intermountain, with Rick Ricketson, the district chief saying he believed it to be the most comprehensive attack on the radio money giveaway problem devised so far.

Mr. Livingston's test so far has shown these results at his Capitol:

Prior to the Tums giveaway, he averaged his Tuesday nights for some time to find the normal, or 100 per cent business.

After Tums started dishing out cash but prior to Mr. Livingston underwriting, business had slumped to 55 per cent.

Since the underwriting, business has once more shown an upturn and is now up to 87 per cent.

Another Turn

The Capitol theatre advertising has taken this new turn:

"You probably won't win the $1,000 if you sit home by the radio and telephone on Tuesday night, but you can't lose by attending the Capitol theatre. . . . "

With radio broadcasting now taking this new turn as a box office competitor, in a manner as threatening as the guest radio appearances of Hollywood stars about which exhibitors have been complaining for years, New York's principal advertising agencies, which handle virtually all of the placements of national air shows for advertisers, are understood to be flooded with "carbon-copys" of the "Pot O' Gold" selection-by-telephone-number, as made at random, peddlers of the new forms calling for selection by social security card number, automobile license plates, auto engine serials and whatnot.

Broadcasters Name Dozens of Players Taken from Radio for Film Work; Largest Group Orchestras and Bands

Following renewal of attacks by motion picture exhibitors, both organized and otherwise, on the continued appearances of film players on national and sponsored radio programs, broadcasters this week were look-Hollywood stars on national, sponsored radio ing for tangible lines of defense to strengthen their contention that film players' guest spots on the air not only are not competition but actually help the theatre box offices.

Point to "Contributions"

With many state and city exhibitor groups renewing attacks of late, led by New York's ITOA, the broadcasters now are pointing up to their "contributions" to Hollywood talent rosters, naming dozens of players who were taken by the studios from radio for film work, after radio had spent months buildings talent.

Executives of the nation's two largest radio networks, Columbia Broadcasting System and National Broadcasting Company, point out that a number of performers who either began in radio work or achieved national note in that medium, are now strong attractions at motion picture theatres.

The largest group of those who became nationally known on the radio and then were appropriated by the motion picture industry is made up of orchestras and bands. Radio, it is said, has built many dozens of bands and their leaders are known and liked everywhere and these units have made numerous motion pictures and some of them have also been starred.

The most recent example is RKO's "That's Right, You're Wrong," which features radio's Kay Kyser and his orchestra. At the recent world's premiere of the Kyser picture, radio played a part in the celebration because the orchestra's regular radio program was broadcast from the stage at Rocky Mount, N. C.

Orchestras featured in recent motion pictures include those of Artie Shaw, Larry Clinton, Phil Spitalny, Russ Morgan, Gene Krupa, and numerous others. Ben Bernie, Benny Goodman, Rudy Vallee, Cab Calloway and Rubinoff are only a few of numerous other orchestra men who achieved part or all their national reputation in radio before they appeared in films.

Air Stars Become Film Players

Broadcasters also mention dozens of radio personalities, who have become stars in motion pictures. Included in this group are Don Ameche, Bing Crosby, Deanna Durbin, Dorothy Lamour, the Dead End Kids.

Radio has supplied some well-known motion picture comedy teams such as Gracie Allen and George Burns, Fibber McGee and Molly and "Charlie McCarthy" and Edgar Bergen (not to mention "Mortimer Snerd"). Other radio personalities, or partly of radio, include Jack Benny, Bob Hope, Parkyarkarkus, Joe Penner.

Among the singers, the following are mentioned: Kate Smith, Lanny Ross, James Melton, Kenny Baker, Jerry Cooper, Virginia Verrill, Frances Langford.

Others in films who achieved fame on the air include Bob Burns, John Archer, Dorothy Arnold, Lucille Ball, Minnie Dupree, Alice Eden, Sid Fields, Jane Froman, Jack Haley, Betty Janes, Walter King, Mary Livingstone, Barbara Luddy, Benay Venuta, Meredith Wilson.

By ROBERT COLEMAN

"Destry Rides Again" is a rip-roaring, hard-riding, two-gun hit. Yippee! It should have New York's excitement seekers flocking to the Rivoli Theatre in droves. Yeow! It offers a new Marlene Dietrich and a better-than-ever James Stewart, supported by a glittering cast. Wow!

Not since "River of Romance" flowed into Paramount Theatre some years back has so entertaining a comedy thriller come to town. That one had to do with a civilized young man who thought shooting up folks in duels was downright wrong.

"Destry Rides Again" has much the same theme, but it is plenty original in its situations and characters. It presents the case of the son of a dead-shot, legendary dad who is called upon to tame a lawless community and decides to do it sans the customary artillery.

Papa Destry always beat the other fellow to the draw, but ended up under the ground because a low-down rascal shot him in the back. Son Tom decided that it was futile to go around armed to the teeth, violating the law to enforce the law.

Enrolled as a deputy sheriff by his dad's old friend, Wash Dimsdale, Tom decided to use strategy and right instead of bull-headedness and might to drive the enemies of the law forth. Sheriff Wash was shocked when his deputy refused to strap on the six-shooters.

Tom proved he had the correct solution in the end, but not until Sheriff Wash had been killed in a jail-break and Frenchy the dance-hall darling had gone to her creator, stopping a villain's bullet intended for the hero.

Jimmy Stewart turns in a grand performance as the handsome, courageous and idealistic Tom. Marlene Dietrich amazes as Frenchy the firebrand. She forgets her dignity to indulge in a cyclonic dance hall brawl, she sings a Mae Westian song superbly and she works wonders with a difficult role.

Charlie Winninger is swell as Sheriff Wash, a teller of tall tales after the manner of a Lightnin'. Brian Donlevy is an excellent villain. And Una Merkle scores as a determined wife.

Others making admirable contributions are Mischa Auer, Warren Hymer, Irene Hervey, Tom Fadden, Jack Carson, Allen Jenkins, Samuel Hinds and Billy Gilbert.

"Destry Rides Again," in sum, is a tornado of thrills and laughs. It, the great Dietrich and the terrific Stewart will sweep into your affections with telling effect.

Movies Clean Despite Vulgarists, Says Runyon

Finds Production Code Saves "Vast Contingent of Customers"

(By special permission of King Features Syndicate, Inc., and the New York Daily Mirror)

Damon Runyon, private in the Minnesota Volunteers in the Spanish-American War, reporter, sports writer and war correspondent, also poet and author of stories and plays, helped Shirley Temple to her several years' ranking of THE money making star in the Fame - Motion Picture Herald annual poll of exhibitors. Mr. Runyon's original story was the basis of "Little Miss Marker", of 1934.

THE movies are kept clean in spite of themselves. We owe their comparative purity not to the producers and directors out there in Hollywood, but to forces outside the movie business. We owe it to the moral influences of the church people and others who compelled a censorship without which you can bet the picture makers would be trying to out-do the stage in what some call forthrightness, another name for dirt.

We hear squawks now and then from the movie colony about the way Will Hays' office gums up the best laid plans of the picture makers to run in a little vulgarity in the guise of wit on their product, and it may be that sometimes the censorship does seem over-stringent, but without that censorship we fear the movies would be in plenty of trouble.

One of their troubles would probably be the absence from the movie theatres of a vast contingent of cash customers who prefer their entertainment without suggestiveness or smut. We are inclined to think that these customers far outnumber those who enjoy it otherwise. If the movie makers do not agree with us let them abandon the censorship for a while and see who is right.

We frequently note a tendency on the part of the movie makers to outfumble the censorship and sneak in a little off-color junk into their pictures. In fact, we are sometimes surprised at the extent to which these maneuvers succeed. We then wonder if Mr. Hays' office was caught napping or if it was just too naive to understand what was going on. Perhaps the office needs an expert in modern double entendre.

Still, when you consider the number of master minds of vulgarity in Hollywood that are always working to circumvent the censorship, the Hays office does very well. We get a minimum of pictures that contain suggestive dialogue or situations, both of which we consider a lot worse than the gangster picture to which the Hays office also objects, but which has too many forms to be completely suppressed.

Thus, as we say, we generally feel safe at the movies. The picture may be awful, but we can be pretty sure that our artistic sensibilities are not going to be offended by some expression of frightful vulgarity from one of the actors or some reference that may not sit any too well on a full dinner. There is one successful play in New York right now that you should attend only on an empty stomach. Can this be art?

We prefer the moving pictures to the stage, because at the movies we feel generally safe from the smutty cracks and vulgar innuendo and downright filthy language that is characteristic of much of the dialogue of the theatre nowadays.

Indeed this fifth is so common that no one pays much attention to it any more. It is supposed to reflect real life and sophistication and perhaps it does, but when we want to hear that kind of stuff we know places where we can go and get a big earful without paying our good dough for the privilege and without the embarrassment we feel when it is uttered in the mixed company of a theatre audience.

However, it must be that chit-chat of this nature is what the theatre public wants because several of the current New York successes reek of vulgar language and equally vulgar situations and who are we to quarrel with the public about its taste? It just seems curious to us that presumably respectable persons who appear to enjoy the stage vulgarity are the types who would kick you out of their homes if you gave off that same vulgarity at their tables or in their drawing rooms.

Another thing that strikes us as curious is that we seldom read any protests from the dramatic critics about stage vulgarity, disguised as real life or otherwise, and we think this is curious because the critics represent the only .98 per cent clean mediums of public expression left to us. Meaning the newspapers. They are cleaner than the movies. They are about the only reading matter that can be safely placed in the hands of the children or old Aunt Emma in these times when even a novel is judged by the amount of filthy language it contains.

Occasionally a newspaper will print a cuss word out in full instead of eliminating some of the letters and substituting dashes, like D—M, which was the formula of the old time editors who wanted to appear advanced and daring. Occasionally, too, a newspaper will publish details of indecencies beyond the bounds of good taste, but these instances are rather rare.

In an age when obscenity has come to be regarded as smart, the newspaper editors have preserved their sense of decency mighty well. It is a cinch that no newspaper editor would publish the unexpurgated dialogue of some of the current New York stage successes with which thousands of men and women profess to be highly entertained. Therefore on the standards of their newspapers alone we think it curious that the dramatic critics do not belt the vulgarities of the stage with greater frequency.

Few More French Theatres Reopen

by PIERRE AUTRE

Somewhere in France

A few more theatres have reopened in Paris and operate up to 11 P. M. (The Herald's Paris correspondent reported on page 55, issue of November 18th, that 83 motion picture theatres were operating in Paris to 11 P. M. out of approximately 300 theatres in the French capital. It was pointed out that some other theatres are operating until 8:30 P. M. while some of the larger theatres have remained closed because of the limitation to 300 patrons at a performance.)

Two French features, produced before the war, are being shown for the first time in two of the first run cinemas in Paris. Apart from the fact that one film which the war had found unfinished has been completed after five days of renewed production, other production has not been resumed. The Ministry of Information, which includes the cinema, does its best for it, but it is not easy to get the players and technicians already mobilized.

The French trade paper La Cinematographie Francaise, whose P. A. Harle, owner and editor, is mobilized, as well as all of the men of the staff, publishes fortnightly a reduced war edition on six or eight pages. The French film fan magazines continue to publish and are concerned for the most part with news of mobilized male actors.

Ohio Censors Make 30 Cuts

The Ohio censors ordered 30 eliminations in a total of 680 reels reviewed during the five-week period of November. In October 678 reels were reviewed and 26 eliminations ordered. The figures for November 1938 were 665 reels and 47 eliminations.

RKO-Atlas Plan Due This Week

Atlas Corporation, headed by Floyd B. Odlum, has been given one week to submit an underwriting agreement for $1,500,000 of reorganized RKO's common stock by William Bondy, federal judge. The judge last Tuesday criticized the delay and refused a two week adjournment. H. C. Rickaby, Atlas counsel, told the court that the war conditions made various economies necessary for RKO and that the company had met and "surmounted" the new conditions.

The directors of RKO have been discussing the terms of the Atlas Corporation proposal. The board met last Monday and a final meeting on the question is scheduled for Friday. But Judge Bondy pointed out at the hearing that the underwriting agreement does not require the approval of the RKO board of directors, but merely his approval.

The judge said: "As I understand the reorganization plan, Atlas is to present an underwriting offer to the court. I expect this to be done promptly and if it is a liberal offer I will approve it. If not, we will seek one elsewhere."

One cause for delay in submitting the underwriting agreement is that the Supreme Court is expected to rule in the near future, perhaps on Monday, on a petition of H. Cassel & Co. for a writ of certiorari attacking the legality of the RKO reorganization plan. If the Supreme Court denies the Cassel appeal, it is believed that the RKO reorganization will be swiftly completed.

New York Critics to Judge Newsreels and Stars

The New York Film Critics have been appointed judges for the first annual newsreel award sponsored by W. French Githens, president of Newsreel Theatres, Inc. Mr. Githens will award a cup for the best newsreel subject released during 1939. The five newsreel companies will each submit three subjects and a special screening will be given for the judges. The cup will be presented late in January.

The critics at a meeting held last Saturday drew up plans for the presentation of their 1939 acting awards on January 9th. Mayor LaGuardia has been asked to be master of ceremonies and Kate Cameron, critic for the News, will introduce the winners over a WJZ-NBC hookup. Acceptance of the awards will come from Hollywood as well as New York.

Johnston, Monogram, Buys Leichter Films

Mitchell Leichter, a producer from Hollywood, now in New York, announced Wednesday that W. Ray Johnston, Monogram Pictures, had purchased for distribution in territory still unsold, Mr. Leichter's pictures, "Hell's Harbor," "She Goes to War" and "Sudan."

Signs Mexico Contract

Luis Lezama has closed a contract to distribute Republic product in Mexico. He will make his headquarters in Mexico City.

Grand National Plans Delayed

When Grand National representatives were able to report only slight progress on refinancing measures on Wednesday in New York, Referee Peter B. Olney proposed that a conference of all principals be held Saturday afternoon and the results reported to the company's creditors at an adjourned hearing on Monday morning.

Expected at the conference, details of which were to be arranged, were Mr. Olney, E. W. Hammons, Grand National president; Saul Rogers, his attorney; T. Kennedy Stevenson, president of Erpi, a principal in the refinancing; representatives of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation; Patrick E. Shanahan, chairman of the creditors committee, and Joseph Dannenberg, committee counsel.

Testimony on Wednesday indicated that the delay was caused by the RFC's insistence upon obtaining stand-off agreements from secured creditors of Grand National which would provide the company with a moratorium for a reasonable period.

Syracuse "U" Fund Film

The University of Syracuse has prepared a two-reel motion picture for the use of the Syracuse Community Fund. The picture was made by the drama department of the University and highlights activities of local Fund members. Professor Sawyer Falk, head of the Drama department, directed the film and was the commentator. Sound and projection was handled by R. W. Stanmyre. This is the first of a series of screen workshop productions planned as part of the regular drama department course.

Chilian Subsidiary Chartered

Republic's Chilean subsidiary, Cia. Republic Films Chilena, Inc., was chartered last week in New York state. Harry Davis is on the way to Chile from New York to take charge of the new branch. Paul Ris takes over Mr. Davis' position as Republic manager in Panama.

McConville to South America

Foreign Manager J. A. McConville of Columbia was scheduled to leave by plane for Argentina Friday to hold a meeting in Buenos Aires with company managers of Brazil, Chile, Peru and Argentina. En route Mr. McConville will make stopovers at Cristobal, Lima and Santiago.

More Drive-In Theatres

Phil Smith, Boston circuit operator, who operates nine New England theatres and Drive-Ins at Detroit and Cleveland, plans six more Drive-In theatres early next year in various sections of the country. The theatres will be equipped with RCA Photophone sound.

Wometco Circuit School

Classes in theatre management for assistant managers and ushers are being held twice a week by the Wometco theatres of Miami. The classes began November 3rd and will continue for eight weeks.

Honig Appointed

Pearl Honig has been appointed editor of Modern Screen, succeeding Regina Cannon.

Ad Budget Raised By Paramount

Paramount is increasing its expenditures in newspaper and magazine advertising in order to develop to a greater extent the domestic market, Barney Balaban, president, announced Tuesday before his departure from Hollywood for New York with Stanton Griffis, Russell Holman and John W. Hicks. Mr. Balaban declared that the company had increased its advertising outlay in the last few months $500,000 as compared with the previous period.

The value of newspaper and magazine advertising plus intelligent exploitation for both the picture company and for the exhibitors was stressed by Mr. Balaban. The coordination of advertising and distribution was praised. Mr. Balaban said that "Paramount has not been stampeded into any so-called economy drive that might jeopardize the high quality of our product. We will continue to furnish exhibitors with outstanding films."

Mr. Balaban pointed to Paramount's extensive theatre holdings as the best proof that the company would make high quality pictures to supply those houses and others.

He said that all of Paramount's current pictures, scheduled through June, already had been completed.

Preliminary plans for Paramount's proposed new studio in west Los Angeles were discussed by executives with William Pereira, architect in charge.

Producers Set Film

"Kingdom Come," original story by Adela Rogers St. John, will be filmed by the Producers' Corporation of America, according to Sig Schlager and George Green, president and vice-president of the company.

Hedy LaMarr Back at Work

Hedy LaMarr, who has been having a salary dispute with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, returned to the studio this week to fulfill her contract obligations. She is now working on added scenes for "I Take This Woman," in which she is starred with Spencer Tracy. The film is now planned for release after having been shelved.

World Acquires "The Patriot"

World Pictures Corporation has acquired the American distribution of Harry Baur's "The Patriot," a film directed by Maurice Tourneur from the Alfred Neumann novel. The cast, in addition to Baur, includes Pierre Renoir and Suzy Prim.

Witt Leaves Standard

Peter Witt, having completed his campaign on the New York opening of "The Mill on the Floss," has resigned as director of advertising and publicity from Standard Pictures owing to previous commitments.

Lupe Velez - Errol Films

RKO has decided to make three more pictures with Lupe Velez and Leon Errol, using the same characterizations as in "Mexican Spitfire," as a result of audience reaction at sneak previews, according to the company.

"One of the very big weeks of the year. The ads pulled the crowds and the picture lived up to all the ads had said about it. You can't beat that combination."

Word-of-mouth advertising is fine but you've got to get them to see your picture before they can talk about it!

"OUR NEIGHBORS-the CARTERS"

When Paramount's interviewers visited Mr. Reed he was playing "Our Neighbors—the Carters" and despite a week of terrific competition in Providence, the Strand was doing plenty of business. Reason for this was easy to see by a glance at the Journal and the Bulletin where Mr. Reed was running a 2864 line campaign. Note on last page of this insert how marquee plugs picture with punch copy line.

Frank Lloyd's "RULERS OF THE SEA"

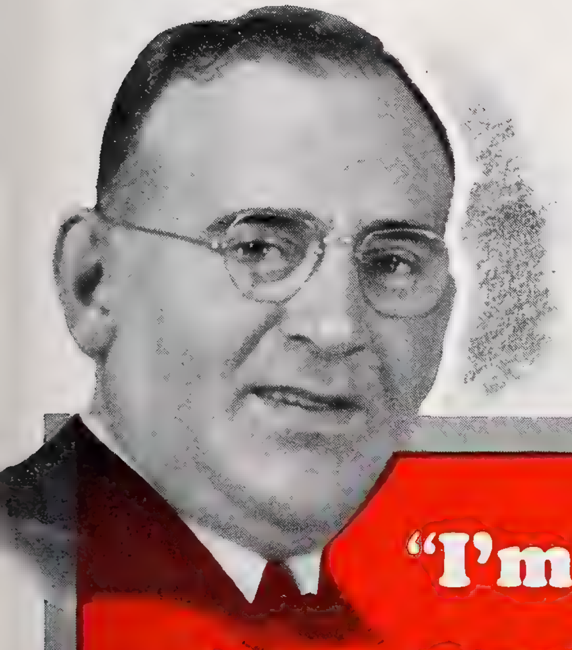
Preparation for next picture, "Rulers of the Sea," had been going on for months. Armistice night preview had already proved picture was hot. 12 by 18 foot board in lobby smashed bigness of "Rulers" to customers. And, as you can see on last page, inside panel of marquee plugged picture. WEAN Man on the Sidewalk, Strand six times a week fifteen-minute radio program, had been working up interest for weeks. Ads had been selected and readied for publication a whole week ahead of opening . . . and campaign was starting Sunday with usual four-day buildup, including thousand liner day before opening and 500 line follow-up on Friday... A typical Reed "elbow grease" job.

Mr. Reed makes us all good Paramount salesmen!

Vincent Carrocia, Assistant Chief Usher, and, of course, member of the Strand Sunshine Club, Mr. Reed's peppy employee mutual aid organization, has been taught Mr. Reed's program of "selling with a smile." "Makes 'em want to come back to your theatre," says Mr. Reed.

Candid camera scared grin from Ticket Taker Christopher Horan's usually smiling face. But note Christopher's neat appearance. "My boys must be neat . . . and so must my theatre. Neatness pays, especially when women and children are your public."

We went from top to bottom of the Strand and we'll bet there's no Providence housewife who keeps her own home any neater. Mary Kennedy, ticket seller above flashes that Strand Sunshine smile on a customer.



"I'm not too proud to get out and do a little two-fisted selling myself!"

"I don't just sit at my desk and wait for business to come in. I go out and get it. A lot of boys in this business don't realize how much they can do to fill their theatres by direct personal selling. For instance, right now I've got all the waitresses at the Biltmore here entered in our Gulliver contest. They're selling "Gulliver" for us. I call up people and talk our pictures to them. I sell them on the street. And apparently nobody resents my enthusiasm . . . I've been doing business at the same stand for 25 years . . . and plenty of it, too."

The early bird gets the business these days. We promote our pictures sometimes 3 months ahead of their playing date.

U.S. AND MAJORS SWAP QUESTIONS; NEW TRUST SUIT BY INDEPENDENTS

Judge Urges Both Sides in New York Action to Set Trial Date and Decides on December 15th for Answer

The United States Government last Thursday filed a brand new set of interrogatories to be answered before trial by the producer-distributor defendants in the New York anti-trust suit action, "key" suit of the Department of Justice in its prosecution of the organized industry, and the companies came right back with an equally long list of interrogatories to be answered by the Government. The Department of Justice's set were in effect a simplification of the very lengthy and complex interrogatories filed some time ago.

Meanwhile, the federal court, through Judge John C. Knox, started pushing both sides to set a trial date, and himself set December 15th for an answer.

The New Interrogatories

The Government served its 59 interrogatories on Monday in New York federal court. The original number of interrogatories numbered 68, and ranged back as far as 1918. The amended set asks questions about the season 1930-31 to the present. The previous questions were concerned with detailed itemization of each picture since 1918: stars, distribution setup, and cost. The amended questions do not consider cost.

In the new interrogatories, details on pictures seem to have been limited in many instances to the season of 1936-37. Complete information of rentals obtained have been confined to New York, Philadelphia, Kansas City, and Atlanta, and are constrained to five pictures from each company.

The Government has also changed its inquiries on newsreels and short subjects; it now seeks only information on the 1936-37 season.

The majors were expected to serve their interrogatories this week. The serving was delayed, it was reported, because the form of the questions might have to be revised, inasmuch as Paul Williams, special assistant to the United States Attorney General, said that the Government would answer defense interrogatories if these followed the form of that submitted by United Artists some time ago. The scheduled majors' interrogatories were known last week to differ materially from the United Artists' questions.

The majors expected to submit new interrogatories are Paramount, Loew's, Warners, Columbia, Twentieth Century-Fox, and Universal. RKO, as well as UA, has already served questions on the Government.

U. S. Trial Motion Postponed

The Government's motion for trial calendar preference, and to set a trial date, originally scheduled to be heard last Friday, has been postponed to next Friday.

Attorneys for the majors this week indicated they might be able to answer the new set of Government questions by the beginning of February or March. This would allow an early Spring trial. The attorneys agreed in court last Friday, before Federal Judge John Knox, to confer with Mr. Williams and with William P. Farnsworth, on a trial date agreeable to both sides. They are to report on their efforts to reach agreement, at the next Friday hearing.

NO CANCELLATION, SAYS NATHANSON

MGM product in Canada will not be distributed with the 20 per cent cancellation clause, Henry L. Nathanson, general manager of Regal Films, Ltd., Canadian MGM distributor, said in Toronto Monday. Mr. Nathanson declared the Canadian company's policy was entirely independent of the U. S. organization, and added that distribution costs were higher in that country.

In the same city, three officials are studying plans for a clearance board. The three are M. A. Milligan, general manager of Paramount Film Service, Ltd.; N. A. Taylor, vice-president of the Independent Theatres Association and general manager of the Exhibitors Booking Association, and Colonel J. A. Cooper, president of the Motion Picture Distributors of Canada.

Judge Knox will set a date, if no agreement is reached.

Mr. Williams declared the Government would be ready for trial in February; or, as soon as answers to Government interrogatories were obtained. He predicted that the trial would start "before Summer."

The case already has been removed from the regular court calendar, by stipulation of attorneys from both sides, it was disclosed last Friday.

Mr. Williams' statements last week, after receiving RKO's interrogatories, 43 in number, and mainly concerned with names and addresses of Government witnesses—that the Government would answer these, was said this week to be an "about face" by the Government in view of its statements last April that it feared intimidation of witnesses.

Mr. Williams indicated last week that the Government might ask for a "pre-trial" on certain questions, in order to hasten disposition of the actual anti-trust action.

The interrogatories of the majors to the Government were expected this week to have substantially the same tone of that of UA and RKO: to find out the names of the Government witnesses, and the instances in which the Government charges the majors conspired in production, distribution, or the operation of theatres.

Industry's Jubilee Press Comment

Press comment on the golden jubilee of the motion picture industry was 96.7 per cent favorable, according to a tabulation made by the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors Corporation. Only one-half of one per cent of the comments were unfavorable, while 2.8 per cent were neutral, said the report.

Standard Franchise Signed

Gene Marcus, vice-president of Allied Pictures, Inc., of Philadelphia, has signed a franchise with Standard Pictures. George Trainor, general manager of Standard, concluded the deal with Mr. Marcus.

Linden Theatre in Baltimore Charges Conspiracy; Defendants File Decree in Chicago Consent Decree Case

In the matter of anti-trust suit actions in the field, other than the New York case (see column one), the list of actions against the large companies was added to, this week, when the Frank H. Durkee and the J. Louis Rome Baltimore theatres and the eight majors were charged in that city with conspiracy, in the local federal district court.

Charges Monopoly

The plaintiff is the Linden theatre, independently operated; its specific charges, in a 50 page bill of complaint, were that the Rome-Durkee houses conjoined with the majors in effective monopoly of product; that the Linden was unable to bid properly on the open market, for pictures; that clearance operating in favor of the Durkee-Rome houses, was excessive. The suit charges that Rome and Durkee control 32 of the 78 "white" theatres in the city; and it asks that they be enjoined from building more theatres.

In Chicago, Balaban and Katz and the majors have filed briefs to the Government's charges of violation of a 1932 consent decree; these briefs contending the Government failed to prove its case.

Two briefs were filed: one for Loew's Twentieth Century Fox, United Artists, and Vitagraph; author for Paramount, B. and K., Barney Balaban. The Government has withdrawn its charges against Universal and RKO.

U. S. Has 15 Days to Reply

The brief for the first group was 91 pages; that for the second, 41.

Balaban and Katz attorneys summed up their side, thus: "Balaban and Katz occupies the first run field in the Loop. Jones, Linick and Schaefer, Essaness, et al, would like to break in. There are not enough quality pictures to go around; so if Jones, Silverman, et al. move in Balaban and Katz must move out to make room for them. What law compels this?

The Government has 15 days to offer a reply. The defense then may offer a rejoinder. Then oral arguments may start or the Master in Chancery may review the case. It was indicated this week that no decision would be reached before February 1st.

Philadelphia Suit Moved

In Philadelphia, Harry Fried's anti-trust suit against the majors and the Stanley Warner circuit has been moved in that city's courts, back to February 5th, it was reported this week. Mr. Fried operates three suburban houses; he charges excessive clearance, and "unlawful combination, agreement, and conspiracy" on the part of the distributors. The only major exempted from the charges is Twentieth Century Fox.

In Los Angeles, next Thursday has been set by Federal Judge Beaumont as the date for hearing on arguments over the defendants' request for a bill of particulars from the Government, in that body's criminal contempt case against the Fox West Coast circuit and the majors. The defendants are also expected to enter a plea to the charges, at the deferred hearing.

A crowded court calendar was blamed for the postponement.

NEELY BILL, 16 mm. SHOWS, PREVIEWS, MOVEOVERS, CODE, BEFORE OWNERS

Harry Brandt, in Hollywood, Says Exhibitor Conferences Show Majority Opposition to Bill to Bar Block Booking

The Neely Bill to abolish block booking was assailed, also propaganda in films; the "threat" of 16 mm exhibition again came to attention; the large distributors were commended for their efforts to include in film contracts some provisions of the defunct, because adjudged "illegal," trade practice code; and officers of individual exhibitor units were elected when state theatre owners' organizations met this week and last, and sales managers and exhibitor spokesmen voiced their opinions on trade topics.

Harry Brandt in Hollywood

Harry Brandt, president of the Independent Theatre Owners' Association of New York, and co-owner of the Brandt circuit, of the same city, arrived in Hollywood this week, after talking to exhibitor leaders in most of the cities in which he stopped on his way. He conferred with them on distribution problems, exhibitor organization, and on the Neely Bill.

Almost immediately on his arrival in Hollywood this week, Mr. Brandt spoke against the Neely measure. He was scheduled to discuss it at a luncheon meeting Friday, of independent exhibitors, in Hollywood.

In Kansas City, last week, he said his conferences with exhibitor leaders convinced him the majority opposed the measure. In St. Louis, Mr. Brandt assailed the bill before the local MPTOA, saying it would increase rentals and cause product shortage.

Mr. Brandt also has called the appearance of screen stars on the radio a ruinous evil.

Charles C. Pettijohn, general counsel to the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, and David Palfreyman, chairman of that association's theatre relations committee, are to discuss the Neely Bill next Thursday at a luncheon meeting of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, in New York. A. Montague, general sales manager of Columbia, also has been invited to talk.

Carolina Owners Against Propaganda, Neely Bill

The Theatre Owners of North and South Carolina, in annual convention at Charlotte, N. C., Sunday and Monday, adopted resolutions declaring taht the efforts of the majors to include some trade practice concessions in their business contracts, such as the 20 per cent cancellation clause, were praiseworthy; that the other majors not doing such should join at once; that the distributors, working together and extending their concessions, could eliminate the agitation for the Neely Bill; and that the screen was for entertainment, not propaganda.

They heard William F. Rodgers, sales manager of MGM, say the Neely Bill would end in defeat, and urge them to write their Congressmen in opposition. They heard Mr. Rodgers assert that the bill would cause a product shortage, and predict that a trade practice code would be adopted. They also heard him advocate longer playing time for pictures.

Another speaker was Ed Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America; he also predicted a product shortage, and said there was one, of better pictures, at the present. He urged a board of conciliation for arbitration.

ANALYZE NEW YORK FAIR ATTENDANCE

Market Analysts, a statistical organization for the New York World's Fair Corporation, has completed a survey of attendance at the Fair. The survey shows that 22 per cent of the visitors made return visits to the Fair.

It also revealed that the transportation area was the most popular, that one in every five visitors went to the "Town of Tomorrow" and that five-sevenths of the visitors had incomes of more than $2,000 a year and "consequently were in a position to buy the products displayed".

Other data in the survey include: One in every six visitors was a member of a profession, and 50 per cent owned automobiles; Fair visitors had twice as much high school education and ten times as much college training as the nation at large.

Officers elected were H. R. Berry, president; Pauline Griffith, secretary-treasurer; Harry E. Buchanan, and George W. Parr, vice-presidents.

Another Complaint About Competition from 16 mm.

The Allied Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Western Pennsylvania, in Pittsburgh last week, protested the growth of 16 mm. shows. Directors of the organization, it was said, will "take steps" to persuade distributors of the mistake of allowing their product to be transformed into 16 mm., and shown in competitive situations.

It was said one 16 mm. distributor had collected $18,000 this year from 16 mm. exhibitors.

Seattle Group Changes Name; Still in MPTOA

As a successor to the former Motion Picture Theatre Owners of the Northwest, a new organization was named this week, the Independent Theatre Owners of Washington, Northern Idaho, and Alaska, based in Seattle. The new group is affiliated with the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Exhibitors. Robert Poole, the latter group's executive secretary, attended last week's session which resulted in the new group, which still retains its membership in the national MPTOA.

Trustees are M. Kenworthy, Charles Grieme, Bill Riples, Fred Mercy, Jr., Ed Halberg, Howard McBride, Mike Barovick, George Dean, Gene Groesbeck, LeRoy Johnson, Ben F. Shearer, Paul Westlund, John Danz, and L. Lukan. M. F. Hone continues as executive secretary.

Strengthening the Connecticut Allied

E. Thornton Kelly, formerly executive secretary of the New York Allied when that organization was considered part of the national Allied, is acting as field representative of the Independent Exhibitors of New England (New England Allied) in an attempt to gain more members for the three Connecticut Allied units, in New Haven, Hartford, and Bridgeport.

Poole Hits "Commercial" Previews, and Moveovers

Robert Poole, executive secretary of the Independent Theatre Owners of Southern California and for the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Exhibitors, asked sales managers of the majors, in letters last week, to eliminate commercialized previews and abuse of "moveover" policies.

New York Allied Meeting on Monday

The New York Allied upstate regional meeting will be held next Monday at the Ten Eyck hotel, Albany. Mitchel Conery, of the Conery circuit, and a regional vice-president; and Edward E. Souhami, general secretary, will speak.

January, in Columbus, Ohio, ITO Meet Date

The convention of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, earlier postponed, will probably occur in Columbus, same state, in January, it is reported. The convention would be held simultaneously with a special convention of the state legislature.

Warners Selling Away From Sparks Circuit

Warner Brothers are selling away their 1939-40 product from the E. J. Sparks circuit in Florida, due to an inability to agree on terms. "We are developing our own outlets in the Sparks territory, and have already made deals with independents in Jacksonville and St. Petersburg," Carl Leserman, assistant general sales manager, said this week. "Similar deals are being negotiated elsewhere," he added.

Establish New Youth Forum School Awards

Youthbuilders, Inc., a New York City organization, has announced the establishment of Youth Forum Awards, to be presented to that motion picture, book, radio program, newspaper article or series, which, during the 1939-40 school year, encourages best the pride and understanding of children in democratic government.

The school children themselves, members of the Youth Forums, established by the organization, will select the items for award, make the presentations, and explain the reasons for such, at the annual Spring luncheon of the Youthbilders, Inc.

Bequeaths Money to Charity

Jewish charities and the Chicago Community Fund will receive a total of $9,500 from the $25,000 estate left by Morris Katz, father of Sam and Harry Katz, who died November 17th at the age of 70. Bequests are to the Marks Nathan Jewish Orphans' Home, the B. M. Z., Old People's Home and the Chicago Sinai congregation, $1,500 each; the Jewish Charities of Chicago, $2,500; the Jewish People's Institute, $1,000; the American Jewish committee, $250, and the community fund, $1,250.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

The Spirit Revives

Unperturbed as ever by the march of events over the hills and across the water, Hollywood this week perked up a bit and started twice as many pictures as it had last week or the week before. At the same time, certain of its more adventuresome citizens were looking for gold in the Hollywood Bowl, home of open air concerts.

Braving the legendary curse of Cahuenga (now the name of a road), one Ray Johnson, who has no connection with Monogram's W. Ray Johnston, and a Henry Jones started digging themselves a pit some 14 feet deep, convinced that quantities of the precious metal would reward their endeavors. With them in their search, in addition to crowds of the curious, was an electric metrograph in charge of Frank Haekstra, which machine was purported to be infallible in giving indication of the treasure buried by the Hollywood Spaniards of years ago.

And with them in spirit was Los Angeles County, which gave the treasure seekers permission to tear up a part of Hollywood Bowl on condition that their findings be split 50-50 with the County. Latest reports confined their findings to an alarm clock of ancient vintage and dubious rust-resistant qualities. The County not yet put in its claim for 50 per cent.

In addition to starting 10 pictures as against the five of each of the preceding weeks, seven were finished by the studios this week, compared to last week's five, while 36 were in work, three more than the week before.

RKO-Radio wound up work on three: "Swiss Family Robinson," a Gene Towne-Graham Baker production; "Vigil in the Night," and "The Saint's Double Trouble." Paramount completed "The Man from Bar 20"; Hal Roach releasing through United Artists, "Two's Company," Twentieth Century-Fox, "Young as You Feel," and Walter Wanger, also for United Artists release, "The House Across the Bay."

RKO-Radio also led with regard to the number started, putting in work "Irene," "Little Orvie," "Glamour Boy No. Two" and "Bullet Code." Columbia started "Five Little Peppers Midway" and "Daughters of Today"; Monogram, "Mr. Wong at Headquarters"; Republic, "Wolf of New York" and "The Dark Command", and Edward Small, for United Artists, "My Son, My Son."

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Columbia each furnished one short subject, while the former started four, and the latter, one. MGM also had four shooting and one being prepared, in which classification Columbia had four, and Warners and RKO-Radio one apiece. Being edited were 14.

Time Out

Saks-Fifth Avenue, of New York, Chicago and Beverly Hills, California, brightest jewel in the merchandising crown worn these many years by the House of Gimbel, and outlet eagerly sought by film exploiteers, is currently advertising spats, or, if the reader prefers, spattees, for women.

Along with bustles and such, says Saks, spats, or spattees, are the "newest bit of fashion fun."

In fact, these spats, or spattees, also possess the virtue of being very definitely "gay and pre-war."

One detail is lacking in the report. Which war?

THIS IS THE CATS!

Hollywood's felines, without resort to strike threats for improved conditions, have managed to attain some of the more luxurious things of life. This, of course, applies to the aristocracy, though even the alley cats have a shade more hauteur than their Eastern cousins, noticable in the plume of a tail, the arch of a neck.

Operating successfully, according to reports, is a hotel for cats in North Hollywood, which takes "guests" at a dollar a day — weekly and monthly terms arrangable. Felines without baggage pay in advance. Food is strained, but relationships, never, separate sleeping and plumbing facilities being provided.

The trend is apparently growing, Universal reporting that its Sigrid Gurie has established a "beauty parlor" for her pets, which include 12 Great Danes, two South American ocelots and a silver fox. Therein are bathing tubs, spraying, clipping and stripping machines and a private medical cabinet.

SHOWMEN'S REVIEWS

This department deals with new product from the point of view of the exhibitor who is to purvey it to his own public.

Gentleman from Arizona

(Monogram)

Action and Color

Produced by Charles Goetz, ice manufacturer of Phoenix, Ariz., this is the first of four films contemplated both as features for the entertainment market and by way of demonstrating the virtues of Arizona as a site of production. The film is in Cinecolor and compares favorably with much western product produced in and around Hollywood, although somewhat less tightly constructed as to story and somewhat more leisurely in lens canvassing of natural backgrounds.

John King and J. Farrell MacDonald are the best known of the Hollywood players imported by Mr. Goetz, the large cast including many, such as diminutive Ruth Reece, who have Arizona followings of one kind and another. Mr. King and Miss Reece sing several songs, an entertainer named in the film and credits as Adrianna both sings and dances, and there is orchestral music in the Spanish manner on the expansive grounds of the Phoenix Biltmore. Arizona is presented as an extremely attractive place, both in town and on the range, convincingly.

Earl Haley, who wrote the story and directed the film, uses a horse, Rex Jr., to open and close the picture, and provides the best entertainment of the production in a horse race (The Phoenix Handicap) for the closing sequence. This is handled not dissimilarly to previous handlings, the winning of the race saving the ranch for the heroine's father, exposing the villain, vindicating the hero, and so on. It generates considerable interest for its own sake, however. The picture's strong point throughout is the use of color on fascinating exteriors.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

Nick Carter, Master Detective

(MGM)

Boyhood Hero

Rapid-fire action and excellent characterizations mark this first of what bids fair to be as popular a series, film-wise, as were in their field, the Nick Carter stories on which it is based.

As the Nick Carter remembered by successive generations of boys, Walter Pidgeon provides an interpretation which should be welcome to those who have only been able heretofore to picture him on the printed page. Donald Meek, as an eccentric apiarist with leanings toward criminology, provides some hilarious moments, while Rita Johnson and Henry Hull give good accounts of themselves.

Engaged to ferret out the method by which secret plans are being stolen from a plane factory, the detective portrayed by Pidgeon succeeds in his job; a story which in its screen telling moves with a swift sureness towards its finale without a single let-down en route.

Topical in its content to the extent of its concern with planes and the attempts of foreign agents to steal or sabotage, the picture also has in its main character a name known to the countless readers of the 1,200 Nick Carter yarns.

Directing his first feature after short subjects experience, Jacques Tourneur has imbued it with life and vitality more than sufficient to maintain a level which should please old followers of Nick and create new ones.

Previewed at the Village theatre, Westwood, Cal., to a highly enthusiastic audience.—WALTER SELDEN.

All Women Have Secrets

(Paramount)

College vs. the Biological Urge

This moderately if not modestly produced little offering is notable, if at all, as the film in which first screen use is made of the timing of labor pains for entertainment purposes. This incident, following upon long and varied discussion of the question as to whether college boys and girls should marry and the further question of whether, having done so, they should have babies, is of a sort to seem to warrant somewhat specific description in the interests of showmen who may contemplate exhibition of the film.

The coed whose labor pains are referred to above is one of three who have married fellow students and found out that the necessity of making a living while going to school interferes with their studies. This one lives with her spouse in a trailer attached to a jaloppy. Her husband's away when her pains start, but another pregnant coed and a drunken fullback have dropped in and the girl abed checks the progress of her condition by repeatedly asking the football player what time it is. When he and the visiting mother-to-be find out what's going on they hitch the trailer to the jaloppy and start for the hospital but run out of gas. A gas station attendant who was studying to be a doctor when he got married and had to quit school delivers the baby before the ambulance arrives.

The Devil Is an Empress

Old-Russia Intrigue

A French production that is being released in this country by Columbia, "The Devil Is an Empress," has been based on the H. Dupuy-Mazuel story, "The Chess Player of Vilna." It concerns a bizarre character, an Austrian baron whose hobby it was to create robots, of which "The Chess Player" was one, and in which the Baron attempts to smuggle a Polish patriot out of Catherine the Second's realm.

Russian court intrigue plays its important role. Catherine is here presented as an eccentric woman who wears male riding attire, smokes a long clay pipe and in the semi-privacy of her chambers dons large-rimmed spectacles. The acting is uniformly good, with the cast including such well-known performers as Conrad Veidt, Francoise Rosay, Micheline Francey, Paul Cambo and Gaston Modot. The film was directed by Jean Dreville.

"Boleslas," the Polish patriot, is in love with "Sonia," born of Russian parents but reared in Vilna. The Baron is a friend of both, and when "Boleslas" is tricked into a fight with a Russian officer a price is set on his head. The Baron hides him in the "Chess Player." The Russian officer finds out about the hiding place and has the "Chess Player" sent to Catherine, who orders a firing squad to fire at it. In the meantime the Baron has substituted himself in the automaton and it is he who is killed while "Boleslas" and "Sonia" escape.

Distributed by Columbia Pictures. Directed by Jean Dreville. From the story "The Chess Player of Vilna," by H. Dupuy-Mazuel. Music by Jean Lenoir. French dialogue with superimposed English titles. Joe and Ethel Turp Call on the President

(MGM)

Comedy

This MGM picture is a homey drama, based on the adventures of a "typical" Brooklyn couple who visit the President of the United States in an effort to gain pardon for a mailman who destroyed a registered letter. The events of the story are told through a "flashback" process, interrupted time and time again to bring the tale up to date.

Of interest to exhibitors are the items: that this is from a story by Damon Runyon, who devotes his widely syndicated Sunday column to the interests of the "Turps"; that Ann Sothern, of "Maisie" fame, is "Mrs. Turp"; that Lewis "Judge Hardy" Stone portrays the President; and that Walter Brennan, character actor par excellence, William Gargan, comedian, and Marsha Hunt, who created a surprise bit of acting in MGM's "These Glamour Girls," are also in the cast.

Melville Baker executed competently the task of writing the screenplay from the Runyon story. Robert B. Sinclair, entrusted with the direction, obtained the most from the elementals of the story. Edgar Selwyn was the associate producer.

The "Turps" call on the President to obtain a pardon for the mailman who, after years of service to their community in Brooklyn, was charged with destroying a registered letter. They tell the Chief Executive the story of the mailman's devotion to the woman to whom he years ago was too bashful to propose and whose romance in later years was shattered by her wayward son, and the President, given an interlude from drastic affairs abroad in which America is threatened by an unnamed dictator, gives the postman clemency.

Previewed at the Westwood Village Theatre, West Los Angeles, where the audience, aroused by the charm of the human interest drama, really sat back and enjoyed it.—V.K.

Produced and distributed by MGM. Associate producer, Edgar Selwyn. Directed by Robert B. Sinclair. Screen play by Melville Baker. Based on a story by Damon Runyon. Musical score by Edward Ward and David Snell. Art director, Cedric Gibbons. Associate, Gabriel Scognamillo. Photographed by Leonard Smith. Edited by Gene Ruggiero. P.C.A. Certificate No. 5662. Running time, when seen in West Los Angeles, 70 minutes. Release date, Dec. 1, 1939. General audience classification.

Private Detective

(Warner-FN)

Melodrama

A trim little picture presenting trim little Jane Wyman as a girl detective competing with her sweetheart of the detective bureau in solution of a murder mystery, this Bryan Foy creation steers clear of hackneyed situations and runs up a neat total of entertainment points. It screens in slightly less than an hour and is paced swiftly, holds interest steadily throughout.

Complications, which are many, grow out of the murder of a man suing his wife for custody of their son in order to obtain possession of a fortune. The audience knows who did it but the detectives don't. Kay Krause wrote the story and Earle Snell and Raymond Shrock prepared it for the screen, with a keen eye and ear to audience values. Noel Smith's direction is high grade.

Pocomania

(Lenwal)

Negro Melodrama

For the production of "Pocomania," the Negro cast, starring Nina Mae McKinney, was taken to the island of Jamaica in the British West Indies, and against this background, with the natives of the island as extras, the picture was filmed.

The theme and setting are introduced in a fresh manner by devoting the first fifteen minutes of the 65 to a travelogue of Jamaica, showing the Myrtlebank Hotel, the Glass Bucket, one of the leading night clubs; Spanish Town, banana loading docks and plantations; open air market, and the introduction of "Sweet Charlie," a native conga dance performed by the Lynsted Market dancers. Then comes the story.

"Sylvia Walton" (Ida James), upon the death of her father in New York, goes to Jamaica to take charge of her inherited plantation. "Isabelle," a half sister, on "Sylvia's" arrival leaves the plantation and concocts a plan to scare her sister from the island. "Sylvia" in the meantime becomes infatuated with "Phillip Ramsaye," the crooked overseer of the plantation, but is asked for her hand in marriage by "John Lowden," owner of a neighboring estate. "Sylvia" is kidnaped by "Isabelle" and "Phillip" and taken into the jungle to undergo voodoo sacrificial rites. "John" arrives in time.

"Pocomania" can be classed as one of the better made Negro productions. Here there is none of the usual theme of a downtrodden race but a complete assemblage of persons in various walks of life from the be-chauffered plantation owners to the field hands.

Produced and directed by Arthur Leonard from a story by George Terwilliger, the supporting cast aiding Nina Mae McKinney includes Jack Carter, Ida James, Hamtree Harrington who looks and acts like Jack Benny's "Rochester," Willa Mae Lane as Hamtree's native girl friend, and Emmett Wallace.

"Destry" a Universal Picture

"Destry Rides Again," with James Stewart and Marlene Dietrich in the leading roles, was incorrectly named a Paramount picture in the review that appeared in last week's issue. "Destry Rides Again" is a Universal production.

Escape to Paradise

(Principal-RKO)

Comedy

This is Bobby Breen's final picture for Principal Productions, whose Breen pictures have been released through RKO. Laid somewhere in South America, the picture presents the young singer in the role of a driver of a taxi-motorcycle who, by his enthusiasm, gets his new-found friend, a wealthy American, into trouble, both romantically and financially.

With much Spanish and broken English being spoken, some of the "gags" of the screenplay of Weldon Melick, who adapted the original story by Ian Hunter and Herbert C. Lewis, were lost to the preview audience. Erle C. Kenton directed for the associate producer, Barney Briskin.

The story concerns the love of a young American, "Fleming," for a South American, "Juanita," whose father is a grower. "Fleming" poses as a buyer from the United States and, when his father refuses to supply him with funds, is disconsolate and gives up his attempts to win the girl's love. However, through a last-minute shift in the market, "Fleming" is on the road to becoming independently wealthy, and love blooms again.

In addition to "Tra-La-La" and "Rhythm of the Rio," written by Nilo Menendez and Edward Cherkose, there are four folksongs sung by Breen and others.

Previewed at the RKO Hillstreet Theatre, Los Angeles, to an audience which evidently enjoyed it.—V.K.

Acqua Cheta

(Modern Film Corp.)

Italian Comedy

Produced in Italy first as a stage play and later as an operetta, "Acqua Cheta" (Still Water), now has been made into a motion picture by A. Galleo. It is based on the comedy by Augusto Novelli as adapted for the screen by Alessandro De Stefani. Modern Film Corporation has imported this Italian made production.

The lack of English subtitles limits appreciation of the picture to those who understand the Italian language. For them the plot, though not swift, continues at a steady pace, and the audience in the Cine Roma theatre on Broadway found the dialogue humorous and clever.

The story is of two sisters, the first the quiet, home-type girl who at the climax of the film is saved from disgrace by the sister who is looked down upon by the family because of her love for a person whom they do not believe good enough. The picture ends happily with both daughters marrying the men they love.

Gianfranco Giacchetti as the hack-driving father and Olga Capri as the mother of the girls give interesting performances. Germana Paolieri and Andreina Pagnani portray the daughters

"Ida" and "Anita." Others in the cast are Guido Celani, Elio Steiner and Renato Lacchini.

Reviewed at the Cine Roma theatre in New York, where an afternoon audience gave appreciative attention.—GEORGE SPIRES.

Artistic direction by Gero Zambuto. Photographed by Arthur Allea. Musical comments by Maesto U. Mancini. Sound technician, Enzo Finardi. Taken in the establishments of Caeser Films, Rome. No P.C.A. number. Release date, Nov. 18, 1939. General audience classification.

Cowboys from Texas

The Three Mesquiteers

Reclamation of western waste land under the sponsorship of President Theodore Roosevelt in 1902 is the theme of the second of the Mesquiteers series for this season. Robert Livingston, Raymond Hatton and Duncan Renaldo are the hard riding, unconquerable cowboys, and Carole Landis is the girl.

Directed by George Sherman, with Harry Grey associate producer, the story is from an original screen play by Oliver Drake, based on characters created by William Colt MacDonald.

The Mesquiteers band together with the homesteaders, who have been granted permission by the United States government to establish homes on the waste land of the west. Cattlemen, guided by unscrupulous government officials and outlaws, endeavor to drive the homesteaders from their newly established homes. "Stony" joins up with the outlaws to disclose their leader.

Livingston returns as "Stony Brooke," Hatton continues as "Rusty Joslin" and the picture is Duncan Renaldo's second as a Mesquiteer.

The three appear in roles new to the series.

All at Sea

(British Lion)

Nautical Farce

Sandy Powell, of the expansive beam, gleaming spectacles and warm Yorkshire accents, is something of an institution on these shores, with a definitely plebeian apostolate developed via vaudeville, radio, gramophone and screen. The latest of his adventures, directed by his British Lion sponsor, Herbert Smith, exploits as background the British Navy in a yarn about a secret explosive and foreign spies. Admiralty collaboration has enabled the producers to register some high seas spectacle and action flashes easily from the Chatham Barracks drill ground to the grey giants of the Home Fleet.

The story is a rather dramatic excuse for Powell's peculiar brand of easy fooling and casts him as a chemist's messenger enrolled in the Navy by mistake. Most of the slapstick hinges upon his efforts to get back a tube of explosive stolen by some crooks. The comedy, very unsophisticated, involves complications in the drill squad, falls down main deck ventilators, paint on the petty officers' uniform. A most amusing episode is one with Powell and Gus McNaughton playing an invisible violin.

Shown in London to an all trade audience tensed by the knowledge of an air raid warning, the film certainly registered laughter at the appropriate moments.—AUBREY FLANAGAN.

Produced and distributed by British Lion. Directed by Herbert Smith. Photographed by H. M. Glendinning. Cameraman, Harry Rose. Scenario, Gerald Elliott and Reginald Long. Editor, Jack Harris. Art director, Philip Bawcombe. Running time, 74 minutes. General audience classification.

Peace on Earth

(MGM)

Harman Colored Cartoon

For the holiday season, the production is obviously suitable, and for this holiday season, particularly appropriate. The cartoon departs from routine. It retains the format, with animal characters and bright colors, but it is decidedly topical. It deals with war and pleads for peace, and it does this in an effective manner. At times it steps over the border into the gruesome. An old squirrel is telling his grandchildren that Christmas means "Peace on earth, good will to men." The young squirrels ask, "Who are men?" And Grandpa squirrel relates that they were uniformed monsters that exterminated their kind on earth; and that the animals, coming upon a ruined church and seeing a book of the commandments and admonitions, heeded that which said they should "rebuild the old wastes." That, he says, is the reason for the present happy state of the animal world, celebrating Christmas this year in cleanliness and happiness. Running time, 10 minutes.

The Kangaroo Country

Magic Carpet Jaunt

The camera-wise Magic Carpet has landed on the island continent of the British Empire, Australia. From the smartly cosmopolitan setting of the city of Sydney with its amusement resorts, business centers and botanical garden spots to the rich inland farm districts, the tour has been excellently conducted. The somber sides are lightened by action and slow motion shots of kangaroo gaits and closeups of a mama Koala bear and baby.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Artie Shaw and His Orchestra

(Vitaphone)

Melody Master Turn

For the devoted following of Maestro Artie Shaw, this musical round from the swing series of the Melody Masters has the subject devoted to the sole expression of his unique talents and the demonstrations offered should please even the most exacting of his jitterbug public. The numbers rendered in loud and violent style include "Jeepers Creepers," "Deep Purple" and "Lady Be Good." Helen Forrest and Tony Pastor are adequate vocalists.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Sky Fighters

Adventure of the Newsreel Cameraman

In a documentary work, which has been given feature length and romantically tinted treatment as in "20,000 Men a Year," the Newsreel Cameraman finds his adventures this time in a study of governmental schools of aviation. The school days have been given an intelligent inspection and the results, in the demonstration of some of the airbirds, are most interesting and patriotically satisfying. Despite the intriguing material, first honors must go to the sterling camera crew. One sequence showing a squadron of ships flying over the sand dunes of the Imperial Valley has airplane shadows dancing along the dunes like a school of ocean porpoises, while above loom the real planes.—Running time, 11 minutes.

The Royal Rodeo

(Vitaphone)

A Cowboy, a King's Best Friend

Apparently home conditions such as the settling of mortgages, rounding up local horse thieves and saving "Our Nell" from a fate worse than death are well enough under control to allow our national adjustment heroes, the cowboys, to expand their "fixit" program into international channels, in this colored featurette as good-will ambassadors. John Payne is the vocally talented knight who rides out of the west, Lucille Fairbanks is the pulchritudinous court lady, Scotty Beckett pretends to be kingly to the very last inch of his small stature, and Cliff Edwards assists as the comic sidekick of our "Bill." A production, dressed up with brightly-colored backgrounds, a display of rodeo routines and capable acting assistance is thus offered to round off any program.—Running time, 15 minutes.

One Mouse in a Million

Terry-Toon

It seems that the rodent community is a bit fed up on being given the run around by the feline, and in a mass meeting nominates one of its members, who accepts the challenge to encounter the cat menace for the selfish and not social reason of impressing his girl friend with his feats of daring. How the brave mouse goes about the project is the subject of the tale. The young of the audience will enjoy the subject.—Running time, seven minutes.

Couriers of the Nation

(Emerson Yorke)

Postal Service

This is the second of the series of short subjects on government produced, written and directed by Emerson Yorke and to be shown at the New York World's Fair next year. It was made for the U. S. Golden Gate International Exposition Commission. It is entirely concerned with the inner and outer functions of the Postoffice Department and as such is chiefly, in the words of the producer, "an informative subject." Into its two reels has been crammed as much information as possible about the postal service from the time in 1775 when Benjamin Franklin became the first postmaster general to the incumbency of James A. Farley. The United States Marine Band plays the background music and the narrator is Alois Havrilla. Running time, 17 minutes.

A Wicky Wacky Romance

Colored Terry-Toon

A South Sea idyll of a happy hula-hula mouse community, whose paradise is threatened by the arrival in neighboring waters of a crew of blood thirsty cats, is told in bright colors and lively action of a Terry-Toon adaptation. The hero of the mouse group is endowed with the physical agility and vocal signature of a Tarzan and, when his girl friend is carted off to the pirate frigate, his primitive nature goes to the front to effect a rousing rescue of the damsel in distress as well as a thorough and complete debunking of the feline crew. There are moments of amusement for the average audience.—Running time, seven minutes.

His Girl Friday

The Reportorial Life

"His Girl Friday" is the 1939 edition of the Ben Hecht-Charles MacArthur stage play, "The Front Page," which was a rowdy, lively and comic interpretation of the quandary facing a newspaper reporter who wants to get married and doesn't realize what a jealous wench his paper really is.

Unlike the play and the 1931 United Artists film version, the reporter, "Hildy Johnson," is here "Hildegarde Johnson," in the person of Rosalind Russell, recently one of "The Women." In the former film version, Pat O'Brien made his motion picture debut in the role, as reported in Motion Picture Herald of March 28th, 1931. The part of "Walter Burns," the hard-boiled managing editor, in whom may be recognized the Duffy Cornell of Chicago newspaper fame, is taken by Cary Grant, seen recently in "Only Angels Have Wings." His predecessor in the screen role was Adolphe Menjou.

The complicating emotional factor is depicted in the characterization given by Ralph Bellamy as an insurance salesman in love with the girl reporter, here shown as having been formerly married to the managing editor.

Duly noted as the paper under consideration is "The Morning Post," recalling, in personnel and action if not name, undertones of that turbulent period when Bert Leston Taylor, with his "Line o' Type or Two," the Annenbergs, Moe and Max; the late James Keeley, able Walter Howie, aided and abetted by such lusty young reporters as the play's co-author, Ben Hecht, were creating journalistic fame, tradition and notoriety in the violent Chicago of the early 1920's.

Produced and directed by Howard Hawks, who carried the same assignment on "Only Angels Have Wings" and "Bringing Up Baby," the screen play was written by Charles Lederer, who collaborated on "Within the Law" and wrote "Broadway Serenade."

The cast includes Gene Lockhart, Ernest Truex, Cliff Edwards, Roscoe Karns, Regis Toomey and John Qualen, as the escaped convict whose story constitutes "Hildy's" scoop.

Release date: To be determined.

Honeymoon Deferred

(Universal)

Murder Mystery

Edmund Lowe, recently back from a personal appearance tour, here appears as an insurance detective whose honeymoon is interrupted by an attempt to perpetrate an insurance fraud through making a suicide look like a murder.

Associate producer Ken Goldsmith, who handled "The Invisible Man Returns," "Big Town Czar" and "Unexpected Father," with director Lew Landers, of "Conspiracy" and "Bad Lands," cast Margaret Lindsay as the bride who helps Lowe solve the mystery, and Elizabeth Risdon as the woman attempting to mask the suicide as a murder. Miss Lindsay was last seen in "The Under-Pup."

Also in the cast are Anne Gwynne, Jerry Marlowe, Joyce Compton, Julie Stevens and Chick Chandler.

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

If Hollywood producers are looking for a really new twist in prison stories, let them go visit south Texas where convicts work miles away from their prison, inside the thicket and tall pine country, without gun or guard in sight. One little crew of four handles long timber knives, carries keys to an automobile that carries them there, have access to fast horses that know the timber land. They go and come as they please to their field work at field trials of the Texas Fox and Wolf Hunters Association.

One killed a man in a holdup and was given the death sentence, later commuted; another got $7 in a street car stickup and 37 years in prison; a third is under a 30-year sentence for highway robbery and the fourth was given 25 years for robbery and kidnapping. One of them has been as far as 700 miles away from prison without a guard, advertising the prison rodeo.

A film about them would not, of course, contain the inevitable film jailbreak. You couldn't pay those men to make a break.

Hollywood stars' wholesale writing of testimonials for everything from hair tonic and headache powders to soaps and suds, tobaccos and tomatoes, gowns and gravies, electric razors, electric washers and avoirdupois reducers, reminds researchers of New York City's WPA Writers' Project of an early testimonial just uncovered from the New York Almanac for 1851, as follows:

> "Mr. Lent, the Celebrated Equestrian Manager, has gone a-traveling as if he never had a sick day. He came from San Francisco with his constitutiton awfully shattered, and was in a decline. Dr. Killinger took the case in hand, and, in a month perfected a cure. This wonderful medicine can be had, in very large bottles, at 476 Broadway, at $1 each."

In these days of growing attention to motion picture salesmanship in behalf of Hollywood product in Latin America, Mrs. Columbia Sileo, of the New York photographer Sileos, bemoans the complete lack of equipment of some who travel from these states to the Latin states to sell film.

Herself a Latin from Manhattan, Mrs. Sileo has spent much time among the Latins from elsewhere, bringing forth some observations of apparent film selling importance. For example, in the first approach for a film sale, she says it is important that business be relegated to the background until, say, after luncheon and a siesta. Also, never try to determine when and how and where the films will be paid for, rather let the Latin take his own good time to remit; never dun him. It is most advisable, she adds, that the American be able to speak the language of the Latin American country; most persons traveling to the land of the Rio Grande with the idea of taking a quick correspondence course there in Spanish, or some such, along the lines of the three-for-a-dollar lessons obtainable here.

STAGE-DOOR Johnnies, matinee idol admirers, and autograph hunters have been part and parcel of the theatre from time immemorial, but there never was a crowd like the one that gathered on May 10, 1849, before the Astor Place Opera House, in New York. Thousands had come to prevent an actor from giving a performance of Macbeth. The prevailing mood was like that of a lynching bee.

Opposing the crowd were solid flanks of militia and police. The preliminary skirmishes, in which the crowd tried to rush the building, were won by the military. An order to disperse was received with jeers. The troops fired a warning volley and the crowd answered with hoots. A second volley wounded several civilians and the maddened crowds surged on the troops. The result was hardly a fight, though. Slaughter would be a more apt description.

Twenty-two civilians were killed, some 30 wounded, and unknown scores injured. Of the soldiers, some hundred or so suffered stone bruises.

The Astor Place Riot, one of the worst in theatrical history, was caused by a most trivial and ludicrous set of circumstances.

It was the bloody culmination of a personal feud between two rival actors. William Macready, Englishman, had hissed Edwin Forrest, American, in London and Forrest had hissed him back in Edinburgh. The press on both sides of the Atlantic took up the petty squabble and the War of 1812 was fought all over again.

So much ill-feeling developed that it was only with the protection of the police that Macready was able to give performances on his third tour of America in 1848-49.

On May 7th, three days prior to the riot, Macready had been hissed and driven off the stage of the Astor Place Opera House by a barrage of cabbages, potatoes, and rotten eggs.

After such a reception he was ready to cancel his tour when he received a letter signed by prominent citizens of New York, among them Washington Irving, promising him protection and support if he would continue. Enheartened by this, Macready announced another performance of Macbeth for the night of May 10th.

Precautions were taken to prevent a repetition of the events of May 7th. Tickets were sold or given away only to those known to be favorable to Macready. A police guard of 300 was stationed in and around the theatre to keep out all gate crashers. Troops were held in readiness for any emergency.

The show must go on, was the battlecry of Macready's supporters. There were thousands of other New Yorkers who were equally determined to stop the show. The result was 22 killed, hundreds injured.

Too many men in high places are wearing their mustaches wrong, complains Perc Westmore, studio makeup director for Warners and others in Hollywood.

Mr. Anthony Eden is one statesman with correct facial adornment, Westmore concedes. And King George, of England, who is cleanshaven, should grow a neat one like that which Doug Fairbanks, Jr., wears.

"The perfect mustaches," says Westmore, "are being worn by film actors."

Mr. Westmore says Stalin should wear a Gable mustache. King Carol would be handsomer, he insists, with a cookie-duster like Errol Flynn's, and Chamberlain could take a lesson from Lewis Stone.

As for Hitler, his should be replaced with one similar to that of Adolph Menjou, says Mr. Westmore.

As for Hitler, Mr. Westmore, he should just be replaced.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD

ROCKEFELLER CENTER NEW YORK

IN COURTS

Court to Renew "Lynton" Ruling

The United States Supreme Court on Monday consented to review the long drawn out litigation over "Letty Lynton," a motion picture made by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, which was held plagiarism.

Granting a petition of Edward Sheldon and Margaret Ayer Barnes, authors of the play "Dishonored Lady" which, they claim, was plagiarized in "Lynton," for review of a Second Circuit Court of Appeals decision, the court denied a similar petition filed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. The case has been in the courts for years, and has been considered one of the most important of its kind and it is one of the first of such cases to involve exhibitions.

As recited to the court in the petition of the authors, the play was copyrighted in 1930 as an unpublished work and shortly after its New York opening MGM procured the manuscript and negotiated for the sale of the film rights, for which $30,000 was asked. While the deal was still pending the novel "Letty Lynton," inspired by the same historical event, was published in England and MGM abandoned the negotiations and bought the film rights to the novel for $3,500.

Following the production of the film, the playwrights brought suit for an injunction and an accounting of profits. The District Court dismissed the bill and, upon appeal, an injunction was denied until the box office value of the film had been exhausted.

The Circuit Court of Appeals found the motion picture to be deliberate plagiarism but awarded MGM 80 per cent of the profits plus $922,141 as part of the overhead, the latter amount, it is claimed, being a percentage of the annual net profits of a holding company paid to three parties who contracted to produce films for the company.

The authors contend the lower court erred in holding them not entitled to all profits realized from the film and in apportioning the profits, because the infringement was in the form of a motion picture, when the infringing picture was a single indissoluble unit and all receipts therefrom were for the use of the infringing work as a unit.

In the petition denied by the court MGM contended that the lower tribunal erred in reversing a decision of the District Court and in disregarding the findings of that court without reversing them, and also in refusing to limit the copyright prohibition as the company claimed is provided for in the law by holding that the component parts of a play were copyrightable although not new and in excluding material from the public domain together with testimony regarding the use of such material.

The court is expected to reach the case for argument sometime in February.

A total award of $152,536 was granted this week to the authors under a decree signed by Vincent Leibell, federal judge, in New York. The original $600,000 verdict, which represented all the profits earned on "Letty Lynton," plus attorneys' fees, was reduced to one-fifth of the profits by the circuit court of appeals.

Ruth Selwyn Sued

Otto L. Preminger filed suit in New York supreme court this week against Ruth Selwyn for $7,830 damages charging breach of contract. The defendant, it is claimed, employed the plaintiff to direct the play, "The King with the Umbrella."

Dramatist Pact Assailed in East

"Not practical, and also inoperable," is the verdict of some of the members of the League of New York Theatres, on the recently adopted amendment to the Dramatists' Guild pact (see November 4th MOTION PICTURE HERALD) which permits film companies which back legitimate stage productions, to purchase film rights in advance. The verdict was given at a meeting last Friday in New York, of 12 members of the league. Because the number did not represent a quorum, no formal action was taken; only the opinion is given.

The League is not a signatory to the basic agreement with the Guild; signatories are each producer and corporation producing plays.

At the Friday meeting, it was said by those present that they would refuse to accept the new amendments in the new basic agreement of the Guild.

Two-thirds of over 400 signatories must approve new amendments to the Guild's pacts, before their adoption, it was pointed out. Guild executives said this week they would confer with officers of the League before calling a meeting, to vote. They added that if the full membership of the League insists on major changes, the whole plan might be dropped.

The old basic agreement, requiring the sale of the play in the open market, had caused a virtual boycott against play backing by the majors, these companies not wishing to back a successful play, the rights to which might be obtained by a rival motion picture firm.

Bureau of Plays Continues Course

The Bureau of Plays, formerly known as the Bureau of New Plays and now a department of the Dramatic Workshop, recently organized by the New School for Social Research, New York, will continue its playwriting seminar this season. Theresa Helburn will be the chairman.

In an advisory capacity will be Robert Sherwood, Philip Barry, S. N. Behrman, Elmer Rice, and Gilbert Miller.

The Bureau originally was organized to encourage new playwriting talent, under the sponsorship of J. Robert Rubin, MGM; Jacob Wilk, Warner Brothers; Russell Holman, Paramount; Eve Ettinger, Columbia; Edwin P. Kilroe, Fox; Leda Bauer, RKO, and Nate Blumberg, Universal.

New York Theatres League Ratifies New Ticket Code

The League of New York Theatres this week ratified the new ticket code after months of protracted negotiations. The new code limits speculation in theatre tickets to a surcharge of 75 cents for orchestra seats and 50 cents for balcony seats. The code runs to September 1, 1940.

The Grievance Board, set up under last season's code, is abolished, and a Code Enforcement Authority is established. The Authority, which will have two League members, and two members of Actors Equity, will investigate complaints and hold hearings.

Brokers are required to pay a tax of three cents per ticket, instead of the present three and one-half cents. Two cents will be used for enforcement and the third will be held in escrow.

The League also ratified a one-year contract with Equity, providing for wages and working conditions for actors, which expires the same day as the code. Only minor changes from the existing contract were made.

The League on Tuesday set aside a budget of $2,500 from the enforcement fund of the code to be used for attracting new audiences.

French Author in Stage Affiliation

Maurice DeKobra, French novelist and playright, has become affiliated with Continental Productions, Inc., which plans to produce a dramatized version of "The Widow with the Pink Gloves," a DeKobra novel.

The play will be given a Broadway production and a film treatment is also being prepared. Erwin Piscator, German producer, is participating in the company and will direct the play, which will have a current war background.

Mr. DeKobra arrived in this country last week from France and plans to remain here indefinitely as both stage and film production has virtually ceased in France. He said the 11 p. m. curfew has disrupted Paris night life. There are no legitimate shows except for an occasional performance by the Theatre Francaise. All theatres, including film houses, must close at 11 p.m. Theatre attendance is limited to one-third of capacity.

Mr. DeKobra said the recently appointed French film commission is attempting to work out a plan whereby the Government will permit service leaves for technicians, actors and others for a few months at a time, subject to war conditions, in order to allow resumption of film production. The lack of staffs and talent has crippled studio operations.

The pictures planned by the new film regime will not only be for native consumption but to maintain the French export market.

"Dead Men Tell No Tales," released by Alliance Films, has been booked into the Brooklyn Strand. The Lincoln, Troy, N. Y., also has booked the film.

BOOK REVIEWS

UNDERSTANDING THEATRE TELEVISION, by Aaron Nadell. Technological Publications, 51 Chambers Street, New York. 66 pp. and Index. Paper, $1.00.

On the premise that television will be adopted by the motion picture theatre as hastily as sound was 10 years ago, the author has prepared an outline account of the general nature of the equipment to be used in theatres (as of today) and the principles on which it functions.

A brief introductory chapter compares a television installation with a sound system, pointing out that both have amplifiers, but that whereas the output of the sound amplifier is wired to a speaker for the production of sound, the output of the television amplifier is wired to a device that creates a visible image. The commonest image producer, the cathode ray tube, is then illustrated and described as to both construction and principles of functioning.

A more lengthy account is given of the circuit arrangements generally used, the voltages needed for operation and the sources from which they are obtained. The production of the television signal in the studio, its electrical peculiarities, and the nature of scanning are described, and illustrated at special points with simple diagrams.

A short description of mechanical systems, which use lenses or mirrors to form the image instead of a cathode ray tube, follows, and is followed in turn by two chapters devoted to the transmission of the television signal by radio and the equipment the theatre will need to receive it. A complete theatre installation, capable of reproducing any television signal whether received by radio, coaxial cable or telephone line, is then described in outline.

The next chapter describes projectors used in the television studio for reproduction of images from motion picture film. The book closes with a resume of the current status of the art, in which the writer expresses his belief that commercial use of television in the theatre is not dependent on further technical advances, but only on completion of the necessary commercial contracts.

The book is short, and omits many small details that might have been included. It is intended, obviously, to serve as an introduction to the subject, providing projectionists and theatre managers with some advance knowledge of processes they may fairly soon have to deal with occasionally.

Few Stock Deals Reported to SEC

Transactions of officers and directors of film companies in the securities of their organizations continued at a low level in October, it was disclosed by the Securities and Exchange Commission Tuesday in its semi-monthly report, issued from headquarters at Washington.

The largest transaction shown was the disposition of 3,000 shares of Twentieth Century-Fox preferred stock by Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board, reducing his holdings to 15,284 shares.

Next largest was the disposition of 1,700 shares of Trans Lux Corporation common stock by H. P. Farrington, New York, director, reducing his holdings to 100 shares.

The largest buy reported was that of 500 shares of Warner Brothers common, by Robert W. Perkins, New York, director, not theretofore a holder of such securities.

Loew's, Inc., continued its acquisition of Loew's Boston Theatres common stock, securing 258 shares during the month to bring its holdings over the 100,000 mark. At the close of the month the company held 100,203 shares of the affiliated corporation's common stock.

Reporting the liquidation of a holding company, William Freiday, New York, director, in Universal Corporation, disclosed that 1,500 common voting trust certificates had been transferred to him direct and that 100 more were acquired during the month, giving him a total of 2,900. In the same company, Nathan J. Blumberg, Universal president, reported the acquisition of 800 certificates, giving him a total of 4,000.

The only other film-stock transaction reported was the disposition of seven shares of Pathe Film common by Thomas P. Loach, New York officer, who held 11 shares at the close of the month.

In Columbia Broadcasting System, Lawrence W. Lowman, New York officer, reported the disposition of 274 shares of Class A stock, reducing his interest to 3,794 shares, and Paul W. Kesten, New York officer, in delayed reports showed the acquisition of 1,000 shares of Class A stock in August, giving him a total of 1,744 shares, together with 300 shares of Class B stock acquired in April.

Hugh G. Davis, elected an officer of Monogram Pictures on October 4th, reported that at the time of his election he held no stock in the company.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

NORTH OF THE YUKON: Charles Starrett, Linda Winters—The usual western to normal business. Played November 4.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

YOU CAN'T TAKE IT WITH YOU: Jean Arthur, James Stewart, Lionel Barrymore, Edward Arnold, Mischa Auer, Spring Byington, Ann Miller—The boys here waited many months to see this production and it is perfectly safe for me to say that we did not have one dissatisfied customer (?). The picture pleased in every respect and had them rolling in the aisles most of the time. As might be expected, the jail scenes were especially amusing to the group here. To single out any one person who was outstanding is a somewhat difficult job, for the cast was well chosen and all performed admirably. However, our audience favored Lionel Barrymore above the rest but could not lose sight of the fine performances given by Edward Arnold, Jean Arthur, Mischa Auer, James Stewart, et al. If you want your audience to have a really enjoyable time and to receive a lesson in how to live democratically, book this one and then sit back and relax. Running time, 125 minutes. Played November 23.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

First National

ESPIONAGE AGENT: Joel McCrea, Brenda Marshall, Jeffrey Lynn, Frank McHugh—Something went haywire here. It seemed too disconnected or the story just wasn't meant to be filmed. Pass it up and you won't miss it.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

NANCY DREW, REPORTER: Bonita Granville, John Litel, Frankie Thomas—Played this on a double and passed. Cannot understand why Warner keeps making these. Good entertainment but no draw.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

ON YOUR TOES: Zorina, Eddie Albert, Alan Hale, James Gleason, Gloria Dickson—After seeing this picture screened, I decided it was not suitable for a small town.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BABES IN ARMS: Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland, Charles Winninger, Guy Kibbee—Swell picture and good business. This picture should please and draw anyway. It's the best entertainment this fall.—Running time, 95 minutes. Played November 22-23.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

BAD LITTLE ANGEL: Virginia Weidler, Gene Reynolds—Fair picture which pleased on family night. Running time, 72 minutes. Played November 21.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

DANCING CO-ED: Lana Turner, Richard Carlson, Artie Shaw and His Orchestra—This picture didn't amount to much until Artie Shaw and his Band hit the screen but from then on business really picked up. Did average business with a hot date. Play it; the young folks will go for it.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

DANCING CO-ED: Lana Turner, Richard Carlson, Artie Shaw and His Orchestra, Roscoe Karns—Good picture and the audience well pleased. It is light, frothy entertainment. Miss Turner looks like a comer if she gets the right roles. You won't suffer from brain fag on the plot but it kept them laughing and that is something these days. I suppose this Artie Shaw band is hot stuff to the jitterburgs. But, he was just a lot of noise to my more mature patrons. —A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

FAST AND FURIOUS: Ann Sothern, Franchot Tone—Good picture; good business. Running time, 73 minutes. Played November 19-20.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

FAST AND FURIOUS: Ann Southern, Franchot Tone—A clever little mystery drama that had more than its share of comedy to ease the suspense. Feel certain that any audience will enjoy this little picture. Very good. Running time, 73 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

GOODBYE, MR. CHIPS: Robert Donat, Greer Garson—Nice little picture but doesn't do the business it should for the price allocation it is sold at. Is OK as a program offering. Played November 12.—B. Hollenbeck. Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

MAISIE: Ann Sothern, Robert Young—Excellent. Did better than average. Played November 8.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

ON BORROWED TIME: Lionel Barrymore, Bobs Watson, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Beulah Bondi, Una Merkel—An excellent picture that pleased 100 per cent but did just average at the box office. Played November 1.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

OUT WEST WITH THE HARDYS: Lewis Stone, Mickey Rooney, Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden, Virginia Weidler—"Leo" makes another grand slam with what was considered here to be the best of the Hardys. This picture, as do the others of the series, has plenty of comedy and a satisfactory amount of pathos. Metro is to be congratulated for selecting such excellent stories, not to forget the perfect casting. Each character seems to act his or her part so naturally it makes one believe he is actually following the every day life of a neighboring family. Lewis Stone, a grand father, continues to be outstanding as does the invincible "Mickey" Rooney. However, we cannot pass up the one person who, in the opinion of the majority here, stole the show. Her name is Virginia Weidler and we believe she would certainly be a worthy addition to the Hardy family. Let's hope MGM will find it possible to cast her in future pictures featuring the Hardy Family. If you haven't played this one yet, contact your distributor, dust off the S.R.O. sign and watch the customers go by (the ticket collector). By the way, perhaps a story with the adoption of Virginia by the Hardy family as the theme could be written and produced. How's about it, Leo? Running time, 84 minutes. Played November 18.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

PYGMALION: Leslie Howard, Wendy Hiller—I am here to tell you that this is a masterpiece of real entertainment. Of course, this must be seen from the start. The transformation from the street flower girl to the grand reception is as fine a bit as the screen has ever shown. We have a lot of plain folks and some so-called roughnecks, but they all gave it strict attention. We had no fault to find with the recording. Those exhibitors who reported that this was hard to understand would do well to check the sound system. While this had no special draw it did a good average. —J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

SERGEANT MADDEN: Wallace Beery, Tom Brown, Alan Curtis, Laraine Day—The first night we enjoyed good business but second night didn't do so well. However, Leo lift a little profit. People seemed to like it.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SWEETHEARTS: Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy, Frank Morgan, Ray Bolger—The first Eddy-MacDonald picture that has not pleased the majority here. Approximately fifty per cent of our population believed that there was too much singing (too much repetition of songs) and not enough comedy. However, even those who did not care for the film could not avoid remarking about the excellent blending of colors and voted the picture to be the outstanding color production to date. Running time, 114 minutes. Played November 25.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

Paramount

HONEYMOON IN BALI: Fred MacMurray, Madeleine Carroll, Helen Broderick, Allan Jones—This picture did average or better and pleased our patrons. It is just right for the Sunday night dates and the

It's screwy and scary!

FIRST EXHIBITOR: Dave, I'm a nervous wreck and I've got dyspepsia from worrying. Details, details, and always more details! Now comes my projectionist, saying we need replacements, and talking about gears, sprockets, condensers, vacuum tubes. It's all Greek to me, Dave! How should I know about such things?

SECOND EXHIBITOR: Well, Joe, why shouldn't you get rid of all those headaches, just the way I did? I signed up with Altec. My projectionists like it, because they don't have to come to me all the time to okay buying new parts. Altec provides them automatically when they're needed. You see, Joe, it's to their advantage, just like it's to mine, to keep the equipment in apple-pie order all of the time. So I know they're on my side, whatever they do. Why don't you let one of these Altec boys tell you their story?

wisecracks satisfy the young folks. That's all that ever come inside this theatre anymore.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

MAN ABOUT TOWN: Jack Benny, Dorothy Lamour, Edward Arnold, Binnie Barnes, Eddie "Rochester" Anderson—This gave us the best week end gross in several weeks. By this time most exhibitors know what this is all about. It looks as if the combination of Jack Benny and "Rochester" may mean something in the future with the right material. Some critics remark that "Rochester" stole the show. But take Jack Benny out of the picture and what would you have left. Anyway there is enough glory for all in a box office hit like "Man About Town."—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

$1,000 A TOUCHDOWN: Joe E. Brown, Martha Raye—This picture did much better than average business and pleased fairly well. Some said too silly. Running time, 71 minutes. Played November 15-16.—K. A. Spears, Roxy Theatre, Winlock, Wash. Rural patronage.

WHAT A LIFE: Jackie Cooper, Betty Field, Lionel Stander—I believe that this picture did please more bargain night patrons than anything we have given them except some reissues. It is a honey and with the Aldrich Family, a well known radio name, the picture does have some drawing power. I wouldn't be afraid of it on my best time because it would please.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

Republic

COLORADO SUNSET: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, June Storey, Buster Crabbe—A very good western with plenty of good music by the KMBC Rangers and Patsy Montana. It seems like this added music sure is a big help and the Autry westerns are getting better. We don't break any house records with Autry but our patrons are pleased.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

COWBOYS FROM TEXAS: Three Mesquiteers (Robert Livingston, Raymond Hatton, Duncan Renaldo)—Fair picture; poor business. Running time, 60 minutes. Played November 24-25.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MAN OF CONQUEST: Richard Dix, Edward Ellis, Gail Patrick, Joan Fontaine—Here is a picture bigger than "Stagecoach" and almost as big as "Union Pacific." It's first class in every way. If we could have played it when released, it probably would have done good business but it was held out on us until now and the result was the poorest Sunday-Monday-Tuesday in 16 months. Running time, 98 minutes. Played November 19-21.—K. A. Spears, Roxy Theatre, Winlock, Wash. Rural patronage.

NIGHT RIDERS: Three Mesquiteers (John Wayne, Ray Corrigan, Max Terhune), Doreen McKay, Ruth Rogers—For those who want peppy western action, this fills the bill nicely. It is somewhat different from the usual western but it has all the western trimmings plus the masked night riders. This was doubled with "Boy Friend."—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

SHINE ON HARVEST MOON: Roy Rogers, Mary Hart, Lulu Belle and Scotty—Fine action picture. We had lots of compliments. They liked Lulu Belle's songs. Running time, 57 minutes.—H. T. Nokes, Ozark Theatre, Ozark, Mo. General patronage.

S.O.S. TIDAL WAVE: Ralph Byrd, Kay Sutton—Pleased the action fans on Friday-Saturday. Running time, 60 minutes. Played November 10-11.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

WYOMING OUTLAW: Three Mesquiteers (John Wayne, Ray Corrigan, Raymond Hatton)—Another western to us but the farm lads stamped their approval with satisfactory box office receipts.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

RKO Radio

EVERYTHING'S ON ICE: Irene Dare, Edgar Kennedy—Now we know why Sonja Henie is nervous and skates between scenes when she is on the set. Little Irene Dare is second to none as a skater and with the proper chance should go a long way. If your patrons like ice skating, give them this for good entertainment. Our patrons raved over Irene and asked when she would make another picture. Running time, 67 minutes. Played October 6-7.—A. F. Allen, Orpheum Theatre, Glenwood Springs, Col.

EVERYTHING'S ON ICE: Irene Dare, Edgar Kennedy—This seemed to please our patrons, although there were not many of them on hand. Most of those present enjoyed Miss Dare's skating. Played November 15-16.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

WAY DOWN SOUTH: Bobby Breen, Sally Blane, Alan Mowbray—No business. The few that came walked out and I did not blame them. Running time, 63 minutes. Played November 16-18.—M. Bailey, Strand Theatre, Dryden, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, THE: Basil Rathbone, Nigel Bruce, Ida Lupino—Terrible. So many complaints and walkouts that I pulled it after the first showing and put in 'Too Busy to Work" which happened to be in the depot. It is too slow and draggy and has too much English dialogue. Running time, 80 minutes. Played November 25.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

BOY FRIEND: Jane Withers, Richard Bond, Arleen Whelan—Jane retained her popularity in Sodus and we had good business for "Boy Friend." Played November 11.—C. W. Mils, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

BOY FRIEND: Jane Withers, Richard Bond, Arleen Whelan—I regret to say that this did not do the business anticipated on a Sunday playdate. It gave us an average Sunday business, to be exact $3.00 (three dollars) more than the Sunday previous, which is better than a drop of $3.00. I might add that the $3.00 increase came from adults. Can it be that the children object to having Jane Withers become romantic at this stage of the game. The picture itself is on a par with the usual Jane Withers pictures.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

HOLLYWOOD CAVALCADE: Alice Faye, Don Ameche, Stuart Erwin, Buster Keaton—This is a good audience picture, well produced, and it pleased all. Business was a lot below average. Running time, 96 minutes. Played November 12-14.—K. A. Spears, Roxy Theatre, Winlock, Wash. Rural patronage.

JESSE JAMES: Tyrone Power, Henry Fonda, Nancy Kelly, Randolph Scott—We've played this picture twice now. The creditors were tickled to death we played it again. When they saw the crowds, we couldn't put them off. Again we say play it, brother. It still carries lot of BO—Harland Rankin, Plaza Thaetre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

STORY OF ALEXANDER GRAHAM BELL, THE: Don Ameche, Loretta Young, Henry Fonda—These biographical pictures are more or less flops at the box office here and this one was no exception. Played November 10.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

SUSANNAH OF THE MOUNTIES: Shirley Temple, Randolph Scott, Margaret Lockwood—We still like Shirley but our business was the lowest we ever had for any of her productions. Played November 8-9. —C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

United Artists

FOUR FEATHERS: John Clements, June Duprez, C. Aubrey Smith, Ralph Richardson—Very good action picture but didn't do much at the box office. Played October 27.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

MADE FOR EACH OTHER: Carole Lombard, James Stewart, Charles Coburn—This is my personal reaction about the picture, which is only one man's opinion and, of course, I can be all wrong. After seeing this picture, some young folks may be scared stiff to get married. According to this story, James Stewart had a position that must have paid better than a fair salary. A lawyer who is interested with important law cases don't work for peanuts. If one in that position has such a heck of a time making ends meet even before the first baby comes, what can the average factory worker or clerk expect after they marry. This picture had no pulling power for us.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

MAN IN THE IRON MASK, THE: Louis Hayward. Joan Bennett, Warren William, Joseph Schildkraut, Alan Hale—Swell in every way. Everyone liked it. Business was comparatively good. Running time, 111 minutes. Played November 17-18.—K. A. Spears, Roxy Theatre, Winlock, Wash. Rural patronage.

MAN IN THE IRON MASK, THE: Louis Hayward, Joan Bennett, Warren William, Joseph Schildkraut, Alan Hale—There isn't a thing wrong with this picture, action, cast and a familiar story but I just can't sell costume pictures regardless. If you can get them in, this picture will certainly please but there isn't any big draw in the title or picture.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

MAN IN THE IRON MASK, THE: Louis Hayward, Joan Bennett, Warren William, Joseph Schildkraut, Alan Hale—Good action feature but it is, of course, placed in the time of Louis 14th and being a costume picture it just naturally didn't do any business. Those who came all liked the picture but the trouble is not many came. Played November 3.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

STAGECOACH: John Wayne, Claire Trevor, Thomas Mitchell, Andy Devine, George Bancroft, Louise Platt—For want of something better, we picked up this top notch picture and cannot say enough in the way of praises. This picture, even though it was not new, did excellent business. Tops. Running time, 96 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

THEY SHALL HAVE MUSIC: Gene Reynolds, Jascha Heifetz, Joel McCrea, Andrea Leeds, Walter Brennan—Mr. Wm. R. Weaver, the reviewer of this total flop, had better have his head examined. After reading his comments on this washout, we booked this picture, much to our sorrow. Our comments strictly from the box office standpoint are to pay for this picture and shelve it. Just no good. Those that came enjoyed it but believe me they were few and far between.—Running time, 101 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

THEY SHALL HAVE MUSIC: Jascha Heifetz, Andrea Leeds, Joel McCrea, Walter Brennan, Gene Reynolds—This will not please 20 per cent of your small town patrons. It is away over their heads as far as the music goes. The picture is produced okay and it has a fair story. But I suppose a highbrow musician such as Heifetz would not condescend to play something that was even slightly recognizable by the average audience. Further it was the top allocation on the contract. I want no part of any like this in the future. It might be worth that kind of money where they support symphony orchestras but I have yet to find a single person, except the morning musical bugs, that listen to that type on the radio in this town.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

Universal

ALL QUIET ON THE WESTERN FRONT: Lew Ayres, Slim Summerville—This is still the most moving preachment against war that has ever reached the screen but its box office draw has sadly deteriorated. The commentator doesn't help the picture any. Played November 16.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

FAMILY NEXT DOOR, THE: Hugh Herbert, Joy Hodges, Juanita Quigley, Eddie Quillen—This was doubled with "Man About Town" and it brought forth a lot of hearty laughter. It may not be artistic enough to please the highbrows but a picture that can make them laugh as this did is worthy of a place on an exhibitor's program, especially one who uses double bills.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

HERO FOR A DAY: Charles Grapewin, Anita Louise, Dick Foran—This is a good program picture that will please all classes, and timely for the football season. Play it.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

LITTLE ACCIDENT: Baby Sandy, Hugh Herbert, Florence Rice, Richard Carlson, Joy Hodges—We used this feature on our bargain nights and it seemed to please most of the patrons. Baby Sandy is really a cute kid and we will try to set one of the others even if we have to go back to last year's product. Will probably satisfy more people than some of the new punks.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

TWO BRIGHT BOYS: Jackie Cooper, Freddie Bartholomew—A good programmer on bargain night. Plenty of action with a good cast and the picture didn't cost a fortune so we showed a profit and ain't that something?—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

UNDER-PUP, THE: Gloria Jean, Nan Grey, Robert Cummings, Virginia Weidler, C. Aubrey Smith—A very good picture that pleased our patrons very much. Average business but can't expect a new star to break house records. The little lady can sing and does an acceptable job of acting. Play it. Priced in the wrong allocation but what pictures aren't?—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

Warner Brothers

DODGE CITY: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Ann Sheridan, Bruce Cabot, Alan Hale, Frank McHugh, Victor Jory—Here is the greatest box office draw the Casino has played in 15 years. Turned away as many as the theatre held. This, gentlemen, has never been done since our theatre was built. It's dynamite.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

HELL'S KITCHEN: "Dead End Kids," Margaret Lindsay, Ronald Reagan—Just as the doctor ordered, these "Dead End Kids" outdraw specials two to one. We can't get enough of them.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

Miscellaneous

LAST MILE, THE (World Wide): Preston Foster—A fair picture that should be double billed. Played it with western picture to very satisfactory business. If they like prison pictures, play it.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

DREAMS ON ICE: Color Rhapsodies—A nice little cartoon but nothing to rave about. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

HOLLYWOOD SWEEPSTAKES: Color Rhapsodies—Here is a cartoon that is a cartoon. Good anytime as it is excellent. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

MOUNTAIN EARS: Color Rhapsodies—Where has this man, who is now making these cartoons, been all these years. This one and "Hollywood Sweepstakes" are as good as anything we have ever run including the Disneys. Excellent. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Iinks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ASH CAN FLEET: MGM Miniatures—We ran this after "Thunder Afloat" and it really is a good advertisement for this feature.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

CAIRO, CITY OF CONTRAST: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—A very interesting picture, one of the best we have ever shown. When our audience says a travelogue is good, it must be excellent. Running time, nine minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

CAPTAIN SPANKY'S SHOWBOAT: Our Gang—A good Gang comedy that rated a lot of laughs.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

DAY OF REST: Robert Benchley—Fairly entertaining.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

DAY OF REST: Robert Benchley—Our patrons like these Benchley shorts. Some are terrible but most of them have their entertaining moments.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

DAY ON TREASURE ISLAND, A: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—An awful cheap trip to the San Francisco Fair. Worth a playdate and be sure to see it yourself.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

FAILURE AT FIFTY, A: MGM Miniatures—Entertaining one-reeler.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

FAILURE AT FIFTY, A: MGM Miniatures—A very good short that is off the beaten track. Play it.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

LITTLE GOLDFISH, THE: Cartoons—As good as they come. Play it. On a par with Disney's cartoons.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

LOVE ON TAP: MGM Miniatures—An interesting short subject which features some excellent dancing by a well trained group of girls. Most any audience will enjoy this one. Running time, 11 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

MENDELSSOHN'S WEDDING MARCH: MGM Miniatures—This one-reeler will please the music lovers.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

PRACTICAL JOKERS: Our Gang—Well received. Our Gang is losing the draw it used to have.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

PROPHET WITHOUT HONOR: MGM Miniatures—This company does not turn out poor shorts with the exception of the two-reel musicals. This short, historical, is outstanding. Runnig time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SET 'EM UP: Pete Smith Specialties—We played this up with one-sheets in all the prominent places in the drawing area and feel that it was well worth the effort, as this is a short that will draw all the bowling fans in the house. Extra good. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Bluebook School

Conducted by F. H. RICHARDSON

[Based on the Second Revision of the Sixth Edition, Bluebook of Projection]

Bluebook School Question No. 4 was: "For what reasons is it essential that projectionists have information concerning details of all equipments employed in professional projection? From what available sources may such information be obtained? What detailed information is necessary before a projectionist will be able to operate successfully a theatre sound system?

The answer to these queries was compiled from three excellent answers submitted by J. R. Prater, State of Washington, W. E. Limmroth, Texas, and L. Johnson, Iowa. Concerning the first section, Mr. Prater says:

"For best results it is essential that projectionists have rather complete information concerning that projectionists have rather complete information concerning all details of all equipments, and of all parts employed in equipments entrusted to their care. This on the broad ground that they be enabled to cause them to function dependably, efficiently, without waste of power and in unnecessary wear, and to secure from them the best results they are capable of producing.

"In the very nature of things it is utterly impossible for projectionists to accomplish this unless they know precisely what duty each equipment performs and in just what manner it performs it, as well as exactly what attention and care each equipment and each part of each equipment requires.

"In addition to full detailed knowledge of the equipments they are then in charge of, wise conscientious projectionists will study and familiarize themselves with other projection shipments, both visual and sound, to the end that they be capable of offering intelligent advice concerning in any changes it may be proposed to make in his own, or the modernization thereof."

Of the second section, L. Johnson says: "First of all, I am glad to say my Bluebook of Projection has been invaluable, in that it has taught me basic, fundamental principles upon which all projection equipments, both visual and sound, operate. Without this fundamental knowledge to start with, very much effort is wasted. Any real understanding of equipments and 'what it is all about,' is hard if not impossible of attainment. Second, comes the instruction book sent out by manufacturers with almost every piece of equipment. It contains, or should, instructions concerning that equipment alone. Each projectionist should obtain them, study and keep them on hand. They are free. Third, service engineers, if any, can, and if they be real 'service' engineers, will supply much information of large value. Fourth, certain necessary information may be gleaned from the name plate of each piece of equipment. Fifth, in case an installation be taken over from a projectionist having previous charge of it, it may be possible to secure from him much data concerning it. Sixth, intensive study of wiring diagrams of amplifiers and other electrically or magnetically operated equipments has large value. Seventh, much knowledge may be obtained from very cautiously made tests. However, such tests should be made with extreme caution, and only after making very certain that no damage will occur. In the aggregate very great harm has been done by experiments and tests made upon delicately adjusted equipments. Don't 'monkey' with your equipments unless you are very certain you know exactly what you are doing." (With every word of this I thoroughly agree.—F. H. R.)

As to the last section of the question, W. E. Limmroth says: "In order to be assured of ability to provide maximum results with maximum safety and efficiency, projectionists must (1) know the location of all switches, what circuits they control, and the exact effect of their opening and closing. In starting the show he must know the exact order in which the switches must be closed, or opened, when the show closes after the last performance. Switches having more than one contact must be thoroughly understood; that is to say, exactly what contact does and if it be necessary to allow a period of time to elapse before making the second contact, just why that is so. The projectionist must know the correct reading of all meters and, if abnormal, what he must do to correct the same. Projectionists must know all points requiring lubrication and the lubricant and amount best suited for use at each such point. He must know location, purpose, use and normal adjustment of all rheostats, volume control, change-over switch and fader. Must understand the relation between monitor volume and house volume—that is to say, approximately what monitor volume corresponds with normal house volume when the house is full, half empty or almost so.

He must understand threading so that action and sound will synchronize properly. He must thoroughly understand all elements of both visual and sound mechanisms. Different installations differ widely in both construction and arrangement. Without using the many cuts and 700 pages employed in our excellent Bluebook of Projection, it is impossible to list the many details, all of them important, if perfection in results is considered—exciter lamps, P. E. cells, replace faulty or failing tubes and so on."

Did space permit, this could be carried much further. I believe, however, all readers will appreciate and understand that while just one small, imperfect item may not spoil a show, still it does at least to some extent injure it. The real bona fide projectionist aims at perfection in results. He is willing to do all possible things to obtain it.

Bluebook Question No. 9

(A) Name the functions of a wiring diagram. (B) Name six methods by which grid voltage supply may be provided in an amplifier. (C) What plate voltage do amplifiers require?

IN THE BRITISH STUDIOS

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Plans for Five

Unwilling to wait for new legislation or a reaffirmation of the old, convinced that a product shortage will bring about a greater need for British films, John Corfield, chief of British National, has matured plans for five films, the first of which goes into production immediately. Release of all of the five will be through Anglo-American Film Corporation.

On the studio floor at Walton on Thames at present, is "Laugh That Off," a Tommy Trinder musical which is being directed by John Baxter. Trinder is a radio comedian of no small popularity. With him in the film are Jean Colin of the "Mikado" cast, and Geraldo and his Band, topliners of radio.

That concluded, work will start on a contraband story of the present war called "Black-Out," with Conrad Veidt and many of the team of actors and technicians who made "Spy in Black." Co-operation of the Admiralty and the Ministry of Economic Warfare has been secured for sequences showing the work of the Navy in dealing with contraband. The picture will be made at Walton with Michael Powell directing and Freddie Young, who photographed "Mr. Chips" at the camera. Production commences in the middle of December.

"Black-Out" is to be followed by a fictional story dealing with the German Freedom Radio Station. The picture, as yet untitled, will bring together Diana Wynyard and Clive Brook, for the first time since they appeared in "Cavalcade." The story is by Louis Golding, author of "Magnolia Street," and is based on facts obtained from a German refugee who was intimately connected with the formation of the original German Freedom station. Brian Desmond Hurst will direct.

Next comes a screen version of a local stage hit, "Gas Light," by Patrick Hamilton, author of "Rope," which Anthony Asquith has been invited to direct. Diana Wynyard will be seen in the role originally taken by Gwen Francon Davies. Alistair Sim has also been engaged for one of the leads, while negotiations are in hand to secure Emlyn Williams for the role of the husband.

Austin Melford, the stage star and writer, is at work on another of the "Old Mother Riley" comedies which will star Lucan & McShane.

Radio Production

Foremost among the American corporations to prepare to meet their Quota commitments, RKO Radio now announces that a full production unit will be installed and maintained in England in the immediate future. William Sistrom, who made "The Saint in London" here, will be in charge.

It is anticipated that negotiations, personally supervised by George Schaefer, will culminate in the use of a number of front rank British stars currently in Hollywood. An all-British technical unit will be employed. This arrangement was strictly adhered to in the production of "The Saint in London."

To emphasize the star note, the Gainsborough version of "Charley's Aunt," with "Big Hearted" Arthur Askey, top line radio comedian of Britain, already is retitled "Charley's Bighearted Aunt." In support of Askey the cast includes his partner, Richard "Stinker" Murdoch, Graham Moffatt, Moore Marriott, Felix Aylmer, Wally Patch, Jeanne de Casalis and Donald Calthrop. Marriott, whose senile comedy has a considerable public in England, will be seen as the college "scout."

Askey's radio show, "Band Waggon," is being broadcast every Saturday. This program on Saturday nights is listened to by so many millions that picture houses all over the country complain.

Edward Black is producer, with Maurice Ostrer in charge of the unit. Walter Forde directs the film, which is on the floor at the Shepherds Bush Studios of Gaumont British. General Film Distributors will handle it in this country.

Roland Culver and David Tree, who play the two chief rivals for the affections of Ellen Drew in the film version of "French without Tears," are to be built up into a new British comedy team. Mario Zampi, of Two Cities Films, who produced the picture, intends to present them in a follow-up to their present success.

"They have made a very big hit with the public," says Zampi.

Zampi, who has just finished producing and directing a Douglas Wakefield comedy, "Live and Let Live," at Sound City studios, Shepperton, soon is launching a new British production program of four films. It will include, apart from the Roland Culver-David Tree subject, an Empire story, "Business as Usual," and a musical.

WARTIME THEMES HAVE THEIR DAY

While some British producers are bent on getting away from the war and offering slapstick comedy, romance and conventional drama as wartime entertainment, many are seeking inspiration in the battlefields and the political backgrounds against which the cannon are thundering.

After the success of "The Lion Has Wings" come announcements of films about the convoy system, about wartime radio, totalitarian dictators and the Secret Service.

Film of Convoys

Producer Michael Balcon of Ealing, listening to a broadcast by an anonymous "eye witness" describing an aerial attack on a convoy, decided there and then to make a film at the Ealing Studios titled "Convoy," dramatizing this formidable aspect of modern warfare. The heroism of the men engaged, literally, in "bringing home the bacon" to the British breakfast table will provide, thinks Mr. Balcon, a film subject not only of engrossing entertainment but of powerful propaganda.

Official co-operation will be sought of the Ministry of Information and the Navy so that camera units may travel aboard convoy vessels.

Dictator Picture

An English version of the Czechoslovak anti-dictator film, "The Power and the Glory," is to be made in Britain by Leon Hepner of Anglo-French Film Corporation. It is based on a story by Kerel Capek, author of "R. U. R." and "The Insect Play." The original was the last film made in Czechoslovakia before the Nazi invasion.

Mr. Hepner's program also includes a story built around the evacuation. The original is by director-author Adrian Brunel, who has set a small boy evacuee as his hero. The idea is that the advent of town children to the country may lead in time to a return to the land.

"Happy Event," the first feature made in Dufaycolor, is filmed almost entirely out of doors. It deals with the birth of a racehorse and traces its life up to the time it enters the Grand National. "The King's Empire," although a tour of the entire British Empire, is by no means a travelogue, for it also explains how the City of London and the business houses affect the colonies.

Itemized

The Deutsche Freiheitsender, or German Freedom Station as it is known to British listeners, is to be dramatized in film form by Brian Desmond Hurst, British director.

George Formby, Britain's top line box office star, will go to France in the New Year as a member of the Navy, Army and Air Force Institute organization, to help you entertain the troops.

Production is likely to start at Denham again in the very near future on two pictures for Legeran Films, and for release by General Film Distributors. They are "Kings Messenger," in which it is hoped Ralph Richardson will star, and "Old Bill," written around Bruce Bairnsfather's character.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

NEITHER JUDGE NOR JURY

Accompanying an entry reported here recently—and highly effective, by the way—was this from the contributor:

"You no doubt will look at this and say, 'What is so marvelous about this that it should be entered for an Award?' "

For the theatreman's peace of mind, no such comment was forthcoming.

Personally or professionally, privately or publicly, no one in this department acts as judge or jury to pass on the merits of ideas forwarded to your Round Table by the man on the firing line. Each exploitation received here is treated as grist to the contributor's mill. Personal opinion is relegated to the editorial page. For the rest, as near as possible, usual journalistic procedure is followed.

The main function of this corner has always been to act as a clearing house for ideas that have been proven in the field. A man puts over a job of work, approves it sufficiently to send it on. If the idea is entered for Quigley Awards consideration, it is turned over to the judges. In either case, we publish it. That goes for a unique method of herald distribution in the smallest hamlet as it does for an old-fashioned sockeroo in the biggest city.

Study of the thousands of contributions that have poured across this desk has warmed our admiration, heightened our respect for the continuously progressive attack waged by the able theatremen in the face of countless obstacles. If any comment regarding his efforts is to be made, this is it.

IT'S OFTEN GOLD DUST—

It was the old-reliable pet and impersonation contest that tied up Omaha traffic recently on the campaign put over by Ted Emerson and Don Allen for the Marx Brothers' "Circus Date". What brought the crowds, as elsewhere reported, was a street parade eight blocks long, sponsored by the local World-Herald, chamber of commerce and humane society.

That the "pet" stunt is one of the most venerable in the book in no wise deterred the Tri-States theatremen from working it for top returns. Says Emerson:

"As you know, I have always maintained you can pull one of the old ones out of the bag, dust it off and cash in on it at the box office."

Obviously, the age of an idea doesn't count. It's the "dusting off" that does.

STILL DOING THE JOB

Public presentations of Quigley Awards to winners in recent weeks emphasize continued acceptance of the Competitions by executives as an important contribution to the encouragement of exhibition manpower. Pictured last week were the ceremonies in Atlanta, where Moon Corker took the bows. This issue shows the proceedings in Hartford on behalf of Paul Binstock, manager of Warners' Lyric. In both instances the winners were prominently honored.

In the very beginning, it was set down that the purpose of the Awards was to bring recognition to the exceptional jobs being done by the skilled worker in the field. The ceremonies in honor of these outstanding showmen add lustre to the Competitions, now in their sixth successful year of uncovering the bushels under which so many boxoffice lights have been hidden.

A MAN OF MANY PARTS

Recently, in the news, was Irwin Zeltner, manager of the Bobby Theatre in Brooklyn. When a bad fire broke out next door, Zeltner mounted the stage, calmly announced a breakdown of projection, suspended the show, marshaled patrons safely out the exits.

The theatreman is a man of many parts which, when called upon, he plays without much ado. The finest expression of service, to our way of reasoning, comes about in those times when such quick-thinking is the only answer.

Would THE GERMAN ARMY dare MURDER A WOMAN?
Nurse EDITH CAVELL

Reproduced at right is miniature battlefield made of plaster and planted in the lobby of the Paramount, Atlanta, Ga., by Billy Pratt for "Cavell". Toy soldiers, tanks, ambulances, horses, aeroplanes and other war paraphernalia were spotted about the setpiece. For ballyhoo, nurse and two soldiers with back banners paraded streets.

Candid camera pictures were taken of girls, arm in arm, with lifesize cutout of Rooney, in the downtown area of Toledo as part of Wally Caldwell's campaign on "Babes in Arms" at Loew's Valentine. Ushers advertised the stunt with muslin chest banners reading: "Have yourself photographed with Mickey. 30 of these snaps will be posted in theatre lobby; identify yourself and receive guest tickets." In addition, girls were handed cards carrying picture plugs, playdates, etc.

Kansas City Honors Infant Baby On Premiere of "Child Is Born"

Featured in Jerry Zigmond's campaign for the world premiere of Warner Brothers' "A Child Is Born" at the Newman in Kansas City, was a competition arranged with the Star to select a baby in the local territory to be honored at the premiere. Winner was also appointed the 1940 baby for the Universal newsreel and received bank account to start its career. Infant was chosen by a jury of seven nurses from local hospitals. Age limit was between six months and a year and paper cooperated by giving the tiein a tremendous sendoff.

Other items in the drive included special ceremonies at the Medical Academy for the city's oldest doctor who had delivered the most children. Baby diapering contest also brought wide publicity, as did tieins with local dairies for imprinted milk bottle collars, department store displays, six full pages of co-op ads, one-sheets on milk delivery trucks and bumper strips on taxi fleets.

Gold Brick Hunt Staged By Conner for "Wizard"

Breaking with a story in the local dailies two days ahead of opening of "Wizard of Oz" at the Avalon Theatre was Marlowe Conner's "gold brick hunt." Readers were advised to search for these bricks which when found and presented at theatre would serve as admission. Each carried copy pertaining to the picture which when collected and assembled in the lobby spelled "Follow the yellow brick road to the Avalon and see," etc.

Locating a local midget who had appeared in the film, Conner constructed an animated lobby display consisting of lifesize cutouts of the various characters which were suspended from rubber bands and manipulated by boy in back pulling strings. The midget who was on duty in the center of the display conversed with patrons on his experiences while making the picture.

Irwin Ties Show Girls To Jay-Walking Campaign

No sooner had the girls of the "French Follies" show arrived in Duluth for George Irwin's stage show at the Lyceum, than they joined the police traffic bureau's anti-jay walking campaign then in full swing. Attractive girls distributed cards, front of which read: "Am one of the 48 girls in Count Berni Vici's 'French Follies' at the," etc., reverse side stressed the anti jay-walking campaign which included message from the police force.

Local newspapers made much of the stunt, running stories and art work on the girls, in all of which the stage show was prominently mentioned.

Merchant Tieups Aid Saxton on "Circus"

Support of leading department store was enlisted by Billy Saxton at Loew's Century, in Baltimore, for "At the Circus," store sending out 50,000 circulars in envelopes bearing cut of the Marx Brothers, theatre and title. Another merchant tieup was effected with distributor of popcorn in that territory, which brought 20,000 inserts on the brothers in as many bags of peanuts. This company controls the entire setup at the fights, wrestling matches, football games and special events, so Saxton secured excellent coverage on this stunt.

Advance exploitation for his lobby consisted of a replica of a circus wagon and peanut stand, with an upside down man bally out front entertaining patrons week ahead. Further bally featured a two man false elephant parade on the downtown streets. In cooperation with the Baltimore News Post a special show was held for crippled children, Sunday American carried a pictorial layout in advance entitled "Those men are back again" and department store used blowups of the stars for their windows and mounted stills on counters throughout the store tying up the picture and merchandise.

Chakeres Holds Employees' Week

Turning his theatre over to his employees for a week, Mike Chakeres at the Regent, in Springfield, Ohio, offered cash prizes to the employee selling the most tickets in his theatre, and an additional cash prize to the man selling the greatest number of tickets at any of the five other local units of the Chakeres Theatres.

Two weeks ahead 100 window cards were put in down town stores, rest rooms, etc., with copy reading: "Stop, buy your tickets here for Employees Week, Regent Theatre, and go see 'Hollywood Cavalcade.'" The "stop" and "go" copy was in red and green. Opening night, arc lamps were planted out front with boy in attendance to open doors.

Strachan's "Good Deed" Tied to Local Drivers

Through the cooperation of police department, and local daily, J. Knox Strachan at Warners' Laroy, in Portsmouth, Ohio, knocked off seven front page breaks in as many days, as part of his hunt for the city's safest drivers. Policemen jotted down examples of safe driving each day in addition to the circumstances surrounding the case and to the outstanding "good driving deed" of the day guest tickets were awarded. Additional publicity was garnered through the publication daily of the winners together with stories on how they had averted a tragedy.

Tri-Staters Tie Paper to Parade for 'Circus' Date

Turning out gratifyingly into one of the biggest publicity breaks obtained in Omaha was the old reliable pet parade stunt arranged for "The Marx Brothers at the Circus" by Ted Emerson, Tri-States Nebraska zone ad head, with Manager Don Allen for the date at the Omaha. Co-sponsored by the local World-Herald, tieins were made with the Chamber of Commerce, the City Recreation Department, Humane Society and other organizations for participation. The procession, eight blocks long, included thousands of youngsters with their pets of all descriptions, bands, drum corps, clowns and a real circus calliope. Theatre and picture banners were scattered profusely throughout the parade.

Prizes in the amount of $100 in cash and merchandise were offered in various classifications such as most unusual pet, homeliest, best looking, etc. Other prizes were available for funniest clowns, youngest and oldest pet owners, dog with the longest tail, dog with the shortest tail, best decorated cage and best dressed pet. Offer of special cash prizes for the best doubles of the Marx Brothers brought all kinds of impersonators who furnished comedy by cutting capers along the line of march. Paper ran daily stories and photos covering all angles of the tiein, the cooperation bringing comprehensive publicity for the event.

Babes in Arms Admitted Free

For "Babes in Arms," at the Omaha, the theatremen tied the same paper in on a stunt wherein "babes in arms" from 60 years to 60 hours were admitted to the picture as guests of the management. However, in order to cash in on this invitation, it was necessary for parties bringing "babes in arms" to carry them into the theatre and hold them on their laps during the entire performance. For a newspaper shot, Emerson was able to secure a couple willing to be photographed in the theatre, being fortunate enough to obtain the leading football star and Homecoming Queen, guest at the annual Creighton College alumni celebration.

PORTABLE RADIOS TUNED TO KYSER

Six attractive girls, carrying portable radios and walking a considerable space apart, covered the streets of New Orleans as they tuned in on Kay Kyser's broadcast during his radio hour, all of which was part of Manager Vic Myer's "That's Right, You're Wrong" campaign at the Orpheum. Radio sets were appropriately labeled and girls wore novelty caps after the manner of Kay's graduation cap.

Band and cheer leaders of numerous preparatory schools were tied into Myer's promotion, with frequent plugs at the week's football games.

HIGH PRESSURE AD COPY AVOIDED IN "WIND" NEWSPAPER CAMPAIGNS

Public Knows "What", Says MGM, Stressing "When - What - How"; New York Ads Break 19 Days Ahead

by A-MIKE VOGEL

Assuming the public knows all of the "what" about "Gone With the Wind," the initial boxoffice advertising now launched by M-G-M tells nothing but "where" and for "how much" and "when."

Also precedent is broken by the first show advertising in this or any world that contains no adjectives.

The merchandising as represented by the newspaper copy reflects a consciousness that when they bought the title they bought ready-made advertising.

There's high-pressure in the selling of "Gone With the Wind," but it does not percolate through to the customers.

Reports on advance sales indicate that the customers are needing no urging—for the opening and first look, anyway. After that, the picture will be on its own.

Title Lettering Tied to Novel

In illustration of the remarkably reserved copy is the five columns on 210 lines, reproduced on this page, the initial ad for the New York openings at the Astor and Capitol theatres. To be noted is that no space has been wasted upon adjectives or exploitation. Stressed is the carefully detailed information on the policies to be pursued at both houses. The same attentions were emphasized in the follow-up ads.

Little art is used. There is an atmospheric decorative spot on top. The copy face is Weiss, a modern cutting of an old-style face and keyed with the period of the story. Lettering of the title, reminiscent of the distinctive title lettering of the book, was created by Howard Dietz as a direct tie-in between novel and picture and to serve as identification in all advertising copy.

Same Treatment for Other Dates

The newspaper campaign for the New York dates broke 19 days ahead, with the 1,050 lines here illustrated running in three papers. Follow-ups of the same size and treatment, with slight changes in copy and layout, appeared within the next three days in five of the metropolitan dailies. In the latter, it was additionally noted that the picture "will not be shown anywhere except at advanced prices—at least until 1941."

Although the total lineage budgeted for the New York advance campaign was not revealed, indicative of the cost is the $1.10 per line rate in the Times and $1.70 per line in the tabloid Daily News. By way of comparison, the average weekly lineage used by the Capitol is 1,000 lines.

The inaugural copy theme and presentation are being adapted in the added situations selected for earlier engagements. Similar campaigns are intended for all other dates and, according to M-G-M, every effort will be made to keep the campaigns in these channels of advertising treatments.

Holds "Women" Contest

In advance of opening of "The Women" at the Star Theatre, in Heppner, Oregon, Elaine Furlong distributed contest blanks on which were listed 10 quotations from various books, all of which pertained to the ladies. To those correctly supplying the title and author, guest tickets were awarded. Each herald carried cast, playdates and picture plug. In addition, special colored programs were printed for the date with cut of each of the stars.

Broadcasts from Lobby

Through the intervention of A. Frank O'Brien, city manager for Wilmer and Vincent in Richmond, Va., arrangements have been completed with radio station WRTD to make daily broadcasts from a doll house in the lobby of the Colonial Theatre. Pleas are made for old toys, clothing, games, etc., etc., to be used for the annual Christmas party to the underprivileged of the city. Newspapers have covered the stunt in addition with the theatre coming in for plugs.

Exploitation Briefs Here & There

Starting week in advance, A. D. Eichenlaub of the Fox Wilma, in Missoula, Mont., ran teaser ads in local daily, the words "They're Coming" heralding the approach of the opening of "Only Angels Have Wings." Local news commentators interviewed the theatreman day ahead of opening, giving the picture excellent breaks. In conjunction with the Western Montana model airplane contest, which was held on opening day of picture through the efforts of Eichenlaub, announcements were made during the local news broadcast over WGVO four days ahead of playdate. For his outdoor exploitation, two usherettes rode a bannered tandem bike around town, in addition jalopy with appropriate copy was also driven about town and traffic warnings with picture copy were spotted at intersections throughout the city.

In connection with the opening of "Star Maker" at the Rex, in Sheboygan, Manager J. C. Ebersberger tied in with local merchant who featured an amateur show in his store and which was conducted over Station WHBL. With age limit from five to 14, cash prizes were awarded to runners-up, first prize winner receiving a trophy from Bing Crosby and Linda Ware. Store devoted windows and ads to the show.

Tieup was also effected with the Oldsmobile agency for fleet of bannered cars to parade throughout city ahead of run, music stores cooperated, featuring hit tunes from picture, and letters were sent to members of the Civic Music Organization stressing the Damrosch sequence end.

Special screenings of "The Wizard of Oz" were held three weeks ahead of opening by Manager L. J. Wegener, at the Palace Theatre in Burlington, Ia., to which teachers were invited and promises secured for plug in the classrooms. Merchant tieups were numerous, including music shop, book store, department stores featuring Garland dresses, etc. For his newspaper coverage, Wegener ran a coloring contest, with guest tickets going to those youngsters best coloring outlines of the various characters in the picture. Cutout figures from 40 by 60's mounted on beaver board were displayed on street corners and at elevators in office buildings and sidewalk in front of theatre building was painted with yellow brick road, appropriately lettered with "Follow yellow brick road to see," etc.

On the same picture, Bernard Davis, at the Victor, in McKeesport, Pa., built a scarecrow and tinman which were planted in the outer lobby week ahead. Appropriate cards were made up and tied around the necks of both figures. Window displays were secured in leading five and tens consisting of books and records on "Oz" with cutouts also featured in each store. Cooperation was also secured from school officials who permitted the posting of notices on bulletin boards and mention in classes.

Jones Secures "Smith" Plug From Governor of Texas

Personal endorsement of his "Mr. Smith" date at the Texas, San Angelo, Tex., by Governor O'Daniel, was used effectively by Jno. D. Jones, Concho Theatres, city manager, in the form of a quarter-page ad occupied mostly with reproduction of a letter from the state head boosting the picture.

Idea was conceived by the theatreman during a broadcast by the Governor in which the picture received favorable comment. Jones then wrote to His Honor, asking for permission to use his name in the advertising. The Governor not only gave permission but also in his letter suggested various copy lines to attract wider attention. In addition to the ad, Jones also planted the tiein for extra publicity in the local press.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Stilt Walker Aids Lampe on "Cavalcade"

Young man dressed in the accepted cameraman's garb, with old type crank camera on a tripod was used in front of department stores and on busy corners ostensibly snapping folks as part of Gus Lampe's "Hollywood Cavalcade" date at the Keith Theatre in Syracuse, N. Y. In addition, a stilt walking ballyhoo was used with man and woman carrying appropriate copy on signs plugging picture, theatre and playdates.

For "Jamaica Inn" Lampe ran a contest on which cash and ticket prizes were awarded. Listed on blank run in paper were the names of ten outstanding characters in history such as Caesar, Lincoln, Columbus, etc., and contestants were asked to check the name of one which they would like to see Laughton portray. Also required was a brief letter giving the reasons why.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Book Street Bally Sells "Rains Came" for Tully

Capitalizing on the book angle of "The Rains Came," Ralph Tully at the Central in Biddeford, Maine, made up a large size book and had man cover principal streets few days ahead. Securing advance advertising, Tully had the book in display in the lobby 10 days before opening. Book stores' cooperation was enlisted with display of colored stills and book jackets from the photoplay edition. Bookmarks were distributed widely in lending libraries, business district, dentists' and doctors' offices as well as stores and high schools.

As part of his campaign on "The Real Glory," Ralph covered all schools ahead and distributed to youngsters silver foil badges entitling them to become members of the Gary Cooper "Real Glory" Brigade. Badge included theatre selling message.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Stoltz "Cavell" Want Ad

Classified copy with a different twist was used by Manager Arnold Stoltz, for "Edith Cavell" at the Avon, Utica, N. Y. Using about 35 lines on one column, with plenty of white space, copy read:

"For Sale. Iron Cross which I won in the last war for bravery. Reason: I have just seen Nurse Edith Cavell, at the Avon Theatre. Write Box 21-X, this paper. Best offer takes it."

Local dance school was promoted by Paul Binstock to hold an amateur show consisting of 40 talented children on the stage of Warner's Lyric, in Hartford, as part of the theatreman's advance for "Star Maker." Special trailer was used two weeks ahead, lobby display consisted of 40 by 60 announcement card with photos of the entertainers, school sent out heralds publicizing the show and Station WTHT gave it several plugs. Highlight, however, of the the stunt was wire addressed to Paul and received from Bing Crosby which read: "Glad to hear you will give local kids a chance when 'Star Maker' shows." Wire in addition to being reproduced in local dailies was blown up by Postal Telegraph and placed in prominent store windows.

Christmas Gift Ticket Books Featured by Major Circuits

Adopted successfully in different situations for Christmas giving by patrons is the gift admission, either in book or single form, and disposed of by direct sale at the boxoffice and by tieups with local merchants.

Books of tickets, in three and five dollar denominations, are now featured by all RKO theatres, the tickets good for admission in all of the circuit's theatres from coast to coast. Books are decorated with Christmas covers and, for information of buyers, complete lists of RKO theatres in all cities are available.

In the Philadelphia zone, the Warner houses are emphasizing gift ticket books for children, with space on each admission for name of child, if desired. The Loew's theatres in the New York metropolitan area arrange special kid shows in cooperation with local merchants who sponsor the events during Christmas holidays. Theatres distribute special card tickets, sold to the merchants at regular prices, who in turn distribute these to patrons, orphanages, etc. For two weeks ahead, theatres display lobby poster, carrying names of all merchant-sponsors.

Hudson Ties Dairy To "Wizard of Oz"

An effective tieup was arranged by Dan Hudson, manager of the Strand, in Duluth, Minn., with leading dairy which included distribution of "Wizard of Oz" broadsides in every grocery store in town and a display of "Oz" glasses. Two cooperative ads totalling 24 inches and paid for by the merchant broke day ahead of opening.

Also received were announcements over store's WEBC radio program, tieup was stressed on theatre stage and for lobby display, small table was set up with the glasses and card advising folks to purchase same at cooperating store. Stunt was also plugged during cooking school classes. Half dozen standees of the characters in the picture were spotted about lobby in advance and nailed to front doors current with run. Entire cost to Hudson for the dairy tiein was printing charge on herald distribution.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Fitzpatrick Inaugurates Rooney-Garland Fan Club

In conjunction with Station WATR as his advance on "Babes in Arms," Ed Fitzpatrick of Loew's Poli, Waterbury, Conn., formed a Mickey Rooney-Judy Garland fan club, covering the city with hundreds of window cards, 40 by 60's on display in lobby as well as all locations and advance notices in city schools. Opening day of picture membership cards were distributed, candy kisses passed out and for a special lobby stunt, giant Postal and Western Union blanks containing printed message to the stars was available for signatures of the fan club members.

Week ahead of his double horror bill "The Return of the Frog" and "The Demon Barber of Fleet Street," Fitz stationed a nurse in the lobby at small table containing sedatives, etc., explanatory card was prominently displayed. Old-fashioned barber's chair was also on display in the lobby which was done entirely in green and blue lamps to give spook effect; skeletons and daggers were hung from all chandeliers, walking ghost bally was used and during run of trailers a green spot circled the house and followed two ushers dressed in white sheets who circulated through the audience and across stage.

Irwin's Chuckle Contest Aids "Roaring Twenties"

Through the cooperation of the Duluth Herald and News Tribune, in advance of "The Roaring Twenties," George Irwin, at the Lyceum, in Duluth, planted a chuckle ad contest. Rules required entrants to lift a full line from four different ads carried on the classified page and put them together coherently. Guest tickets went to the first 30 submitting most humorous chuckles.

Entire false front was constructed for the occasion, playing up the excitement and action angles and cutouts of Cagney and Lane for the romance. Blowup of Hellinger's foreword on the picture was planted in the lobby week ahead, underlines carried in all larger ads ahead and imprinted napkins were spotted in leading restaurants.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Street Toe Race Held For "On Your Toes"

With entrants secured from local dancing schools, Manager Pat McGee at the Paramount, in Syracuse, held a race from the busiest intersection to the theatre entrance, girls walking on their toes the entire distance, dancing shoes and guest tickets going to winners. Papers carried art work and stories on the ingenious stunt.

Workers in factories and department stores were reached with special displays on bulletin boards, the store executives offering passes for prizes in special sales efforts during their "On Your Toes" week. Art work was secured in papers on Zorina week ahead and art in the Sunday roto section broke with the opening.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Morrelli Hosts Star

On the morning of Tex Fletcher's arrival for a personal appearance at the Bristol, in Bristol, Conn., Manager Victor Morelli took him on a tour of the town, starting at the City Hall, where he was officially greeted by Acting Mayor Thomas O'Brien. Several downtown stores carried welcome banners with theatre and playdate mention, merchants paying cost and the star was taken to the newspaper to visit the boys and spin a few yarns. Papers covered the personal with stories and art work.

FP Canadians Aim to Set New Record for Sale of Books

Encouraged by a 20 percent increase in the sale of Christmas tickets as gifts in last year's campaign over the previous year, N. L. Nathanson and J. J. Fitzgibbons, Famous Players-Canadian heads, have again given approval to the circuit drive now in process and aimed to set new records in the current campaign. To assist managers and theatre staffs, a manual of suggestions has been issued by Jim Nairn's ad department, highlights of which are here set down. Ten percent commission is allowed.

Merchants' counter sales are favored, especially stores whose business and locations provide best tieins. Managers are advised to make weekly visits to these spots to stimulate sales and to see that the counter advertising furnished by the circuit is displayed. Merchants can be interested in gift tickets for purchases over a certain amount. Newspapers, insurance companies and other businesses with large staffs have also been found good sources for sales.

Children's tickets have proved to be good sellers and lobby copy to this effect is approved. Local clubs interested in child welfare also make profitable contacts as do public and Sunday school teachers to use the tickets as prizes.

Personal Solicitations Favored

Personal solicitations by managers have returned good results. One theatreman in making the rounds found auto dealers open for these tickets. Another manager sold blocks of tickets to charitable clubs which sold them through members, using the 10 percent commission for club funds. A department store bought one manager's entire allottment for premiums to promote sales during the holiday season. Another store bought a block for giveaways to the employees.

Another good medium proved to be hospital sales, switchboard operators selling tickets to doctors for gifts to internes and nurses. Junior Leaguers used them and other women's organizations built up club funds through the commission allowed. Coal companies were among other businesses to fall in line, giving the tickets with orders delivered within a certain period near Christmas.

Letterheads, Trailers Available

As in previous years, two-color letterheads with gift banner copy across the top are available for managers, as are typical selling letters used last year. Animated trailers are again favored, two different types furnished to prevent them from growing "stale." Newspaper copy in the regular ads and in special small ads brought many buyers.

Tickets will be honored until July 1, in the theatres where they were sold. As a convenience, orders are to be accepted for delivery in other towns where the circuit operates.

Full credit in the circuit's managers' sharing plan is given for sales and a 10 percent commission allowed to the staff for outside sales. This compensation has been found to bring highly satisfactory results.

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1939-40 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

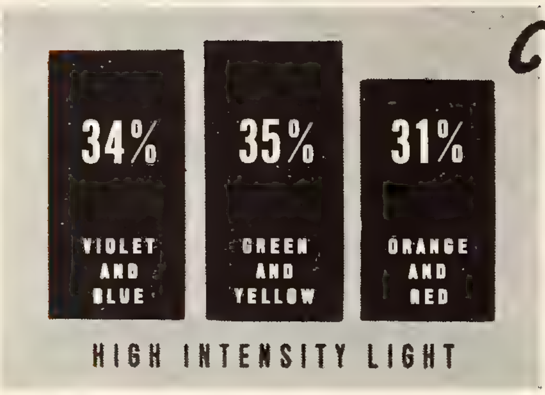
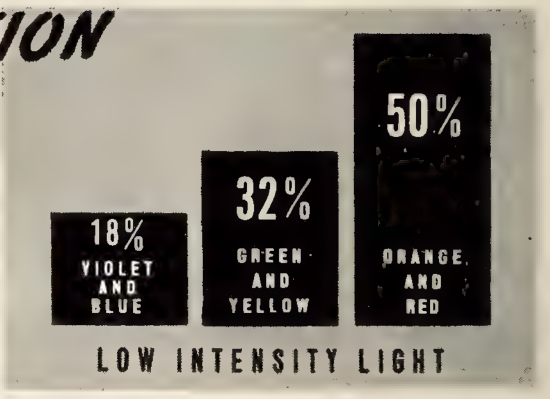
A GLANCE AT THE FIGURES BELOW WILL SHOW WHY MORE THAN ONE THIRD OF THE THEATERS IN THIS COUNTRY HAVE ADOPTED HIGH INTENSITY PROJECTION

COLOR COMPOSITION

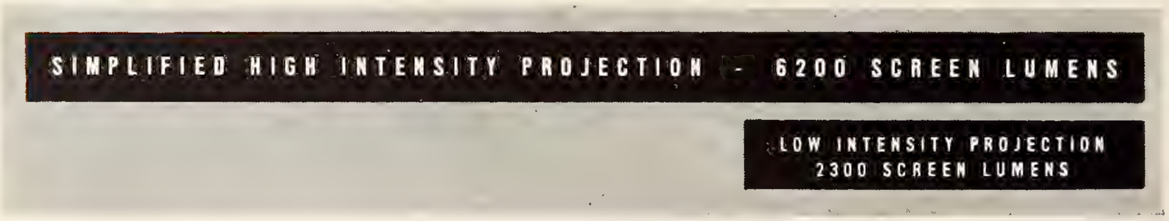


The even color balance of high intensity projection light gives natural and pleasing screen reproduction of color features.

Lack of blue and excess of red in low intensity projection light distort the natural hues and beauty of color features.



VOLUME OF SCREEN LIGHT 2.7:1



Simplified High Intensity projection provides 2.7 times the volume of screen illumination obtained from low intensity lamps. This gives a clear screen image at a comfortable level of general illumination.

EFFICIENCY OF LIGHT PRODUCTION 2.5:1

Simplified High Intensity lamps provide 2.5 times as much screen light per watt as low intensity. You cannot afford to retain low intensity projection when a few cents more per day will give you snow white projection light in more than twice the volume.

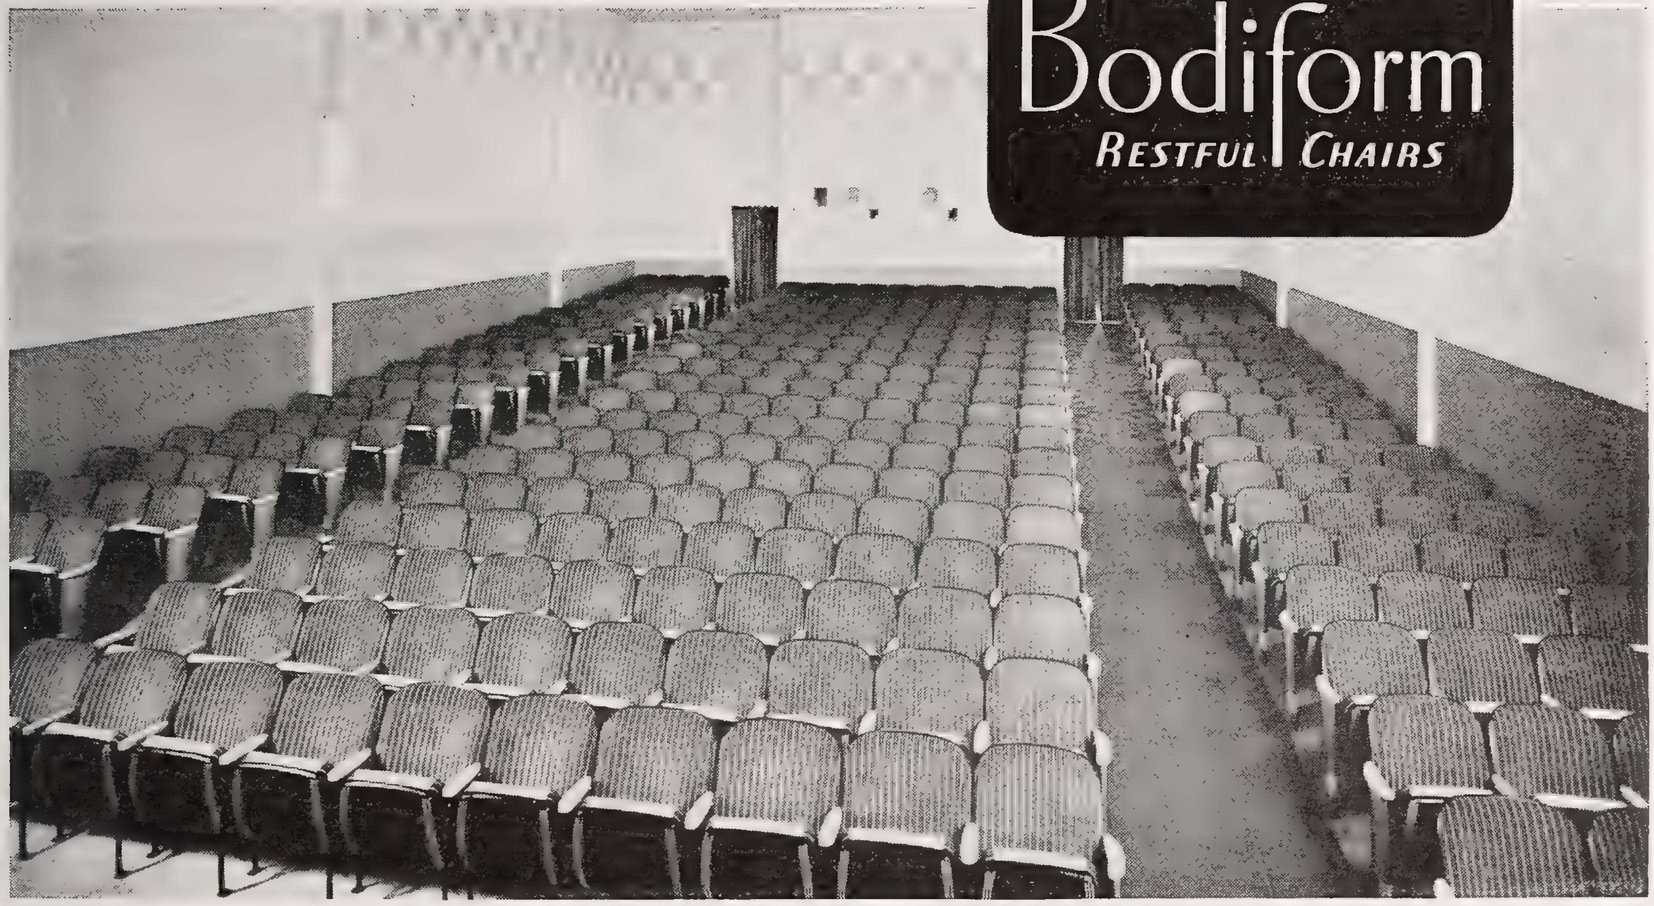
RESTFUL CHAIRS



Interior of Lux Theatre on Treasure Island at the San Francisco Exposition showing American Seating Company Bodiform Chairs

"BOTH the patrons and the many theatre men who have visited our theatre have been enthusiastic over the clear-row feature and have given us many compliments on the extreme comfort of the chair as well."

That's what J. A. Harvey, Jr. of the Harvey Amusement Company writes us about the new American Bodiform Chairs installed in the Lux Theatre at the Fair Grounds on Treasure Island.

Other theatre owners write us about the beauty of these new chairs. Still others about the way they lower housekeeping costs. From all these hundreds of enthusiastic letters we can draw only one conclusion—the new American Bodiform Chair is an unqualified success.

As Mr. Harvey said elsewhere in his letter—"I offer three cheers to the American Seating Company for actually bringing out something new and a real improvement in seating." Sounds worth investigating, doesn't it? The way to get the most modernization for least money is to get in touch with our representative at once, or drop us a line.

Messrs. Fox and Custer Overcame Local Restrictions—with This Result

■ When E. R. Custer and Floyd Price decided to expand their group of theatres by building a fourth, they chose a location in Charleston, W. Va., where restrictions had previously prevented theatre construction. They succeeded in having the restrictions removed. Both had ample experience in showbusiness, Mr. Custer having been with Paramount, and a district manager for the Schine circuit, as well as an independent operator; while Mr. Price had operated theatres in Ohio for 25 years. The result of their combined efforts was this new State theatre. The auditorium has walls finished with velour in burgundy, rust and henna. The sides of the ceiling and underside of the lighting trough are trimmed in several shades of blue, in contrast with deep flesh color on the main ceiling field. Blue is also the color of the mohair covering the backs of the Irwin chairs, which have spring-edge seats with 1-inch rubber pads under ivory leatherette. (Incidentally, note the "reversed" floor slope.) . . . The theatre front is faced with structural glass, ivory and black along the entrance level, and cream and red above. The vertical sign is buff and red porcelain enamel. The marquee, carrying Adler silhouette letter attraction boards, is lighted with neon and incandescent lamps. The State seats 620, and is reported to have cost $75,000, including equipment and furnishings, most of which were installed by National Theatre Supply Company. Projection room equipment includes Simplex E-7 projectors and Type A sound system, Peerless Magnarc lamps and Hertner transverter. Lounges are furnished with Royalchrome metal chairs and settees. Designers and engineers were the F. & Y. Building Service, Columbus, O.

Regulators, Not Law, Seen Voltage Remedy

SOMETHING NOT quite according to Hoyle is indicated by the belief, notably among Hollywood engineers, that much of the fluctuation of sound volume which exhibitors have been complaining of, is due to local line voltage fluctuation. The complaints, filtering through to the studios, are reported to be coming from all sections of the country, whereas the utilities in about two-thirds of the States are commanded by law to keep voltage fluctuation within a certain limit, as low as 2% in some, 10% in some others, according to the Edison Electric Institute of New York.

The complaints, that sound tracks are not uniform with respect to volume, arise at this late day in the brief but lively history of sound pictures as a result of controlling the sound in the track, rather than through the fader.

It is pointed out that sound reproduction will not be appreciably affected by voltage ranges between 110 and 120. Above 120, tube life is severely shortened; it is the dipping below 110 which affects sound quality. At 105 volts, this impairment of quality would be likely to become highly noticeable (equipment varies somewhat in this respect), which level would represent a fluctuation of 4½% in a community where service is at 110.

It appears, however, according to the findings of the Institute, that even where fluctuation limits are prescribed by law, it is difficult to enforce these restrictions—in fact, some laws, it is said, provide no penalties.

If the studio engineers are correct in their reply to exhibitors' complaints that sound tracks are not uniform, their diagnosis means the installation of voltage regulators as the general remedy, and their use in far greater number of theatres.

Value of Inspection Cited in Liability Case

A HIGHER COURT decision in a liability case which contains valuable comment with respect to the responsibility of the theatre operator for the safety of his patrons is that recently handed down by the New York Court of Appeals in the case of Edith and Moe Nabson versus the Mordell Realty Corporation, New York City theatre operators. Edith was injured by a splinter from an auditorium chair. A lower court awarded her damages, but the appeal court reversed this decision, pointing out factors which often apply to various causes of injury in a theatre.

"While the [theatre] seats are constructively in the possession and control of the theatre owner, they are in the temporary use and under the control of the patrons while being occupied during these performances and are subject to possible injury during such use. Reasonable opportunity to inspect them necessarily exists only during certain parts of each day."

The italics are our own. Elsewhere:

"If the defendant, as it did in this case, offered proof of systematic inspection and repair, the question would be for the jury to determine whether it had been negligent," and the jury, added the court, would have to decide if the defect could not have been discovered by such inspection.

Referring to a case (Stelter vs. Cordes, 146 App. Div., 640) in which a patron of a bowling alley sued over an injury caused by a splinter, the court also said:

"The court . . . held that because there was no proof of the existence of the splinter for any period of time before the accident, so that proper care might have afforded defendant an opportunity to remove it, or to show that it was of such probable origin that proper inspection could have discovered it, no negligence was shown."

Disney Characters For Attraction Boards

SIGNIFICANT IN the light of today's fuller use of the marquee as an advertising medium, with attraction boards adapted to "typographical" treatment comparable to that of printed advertising, is the anticipated acquisition by the Wagner Sign Service, Inc., of Chicago, of a license to reproduce for attraction boards, figures of Mickey Mouse, Donald Duck and any of the other Walt Disney cartoon characters.

It is the intention, according to Ernest Wagner, head of the company, to make Mickey Mouse and Donald Duck figures first, and to follow with others as demand advises. The characters will be reproduced in cast metal in heights corresponding to 24-inch attraction board letters, for attachment to Wagner silhouette panels. The width of these characters will be approximately 15 inches.

Still planning others. Officials and executives of the Interstate circuit (whose Austin theatre is featured in following pages) go over plans for yet another Houston theatre while in that booming city for the opening of the new Interstate Alabama theatre. Shown on the site of the new project (obviously an outlying section!) are (left to right) R. J. O'Donnell, vice president and general manager; I. Adelman, an executive; Jake Elder, chief of construction and maintenance; Al Lever, Houston city for the opening of the new Interstate Alabama theatre. Shown on the site of the new project Raymond Willie of the executive staff. The new Houston project is one of five Interstate theatres being planned, while one other is under construction. The circuit has built twelve theatres during the past two years, and now is operating 147 houses.

A Circuit's Basic Scheme for

¶ The Interstate circuit's new Austin theatre in an outlying middle-class residential section of Austin, Tex., pictured and described on this and the following two pages, is the first construction employing a plan and architectural scheme to be basically followed by Interstate in building other theatres of similar size and location. The Austin seats 713 on two floors. In the design of the Austin the fundamental aim, according to Jake Elder, chief engineer and supervisor of construction and maintenance for Interstate, was (1) to eliminate the necessity of daytime lighting (regarded as the special problem of the average small theatre); (2) to provide a compact arrangement of foyer with associated lounge and toilet facilities so as to achieve greatest economy of plot; and (3) to provide every mechanical aid to effective picture presentation plus every refinement of appointment at an installation and maintenance cost compatible with expected income. . . . The Austin is of hollow tile and steel frame construction, with brick and tile stucco walls, and facade facing of stucco and porcelain-enameled metal. Housing only the theatre, the building contains 157,470 cubic feet and was constructed at a cost reported as approximately $55,000, with common labor at 40c to 50c per hour, masons $1.50, and carpenters $1. Architects were MacKie & Kamrath, Houston.

FRONT AND VESTIBULE: Upper facade is white stucco with 1-inch maroon porcelain-enameled metal mouldings in decorative square formation, the mouldings matching in color the maroon porcelain enamel base. Above the base, extending into vestibule, is cream-colored porcelain enamel (all porcelain metal installation by Texlite). Both marquee and signs are of maroon porcelain enamel. Sign letters are to a point 10 feet above the sidewalk, and extending into the vestibule, is cream-colored porcelain enamel (all porcelain metal installation by Texlite). Both marquee and signs are of maroon porcelain enamel. Channel sign letters have outline lighting in powder gold neon, and a center line of neon in powder green. This lighting is operated on a three-point flasher. Marquee trim is also green neon. Silhouette type attraction boards are lighted by mercury vapor lamps, while the marquee soffit, which is off-white porcelain enamel and extends into the vestibule, carries 64 exposed 25-watt incandescent lamps. Front display frames are of wood with maroon finish and lighted with white neon all around. The vestibule is essentially a mere depression, more or less triangular in shape, at one side of the front, bringing interior to the front wall of the building (see floor plan). The box office is built into the right side at the sidewalk. Entrance doors are of wood, painted maroon.

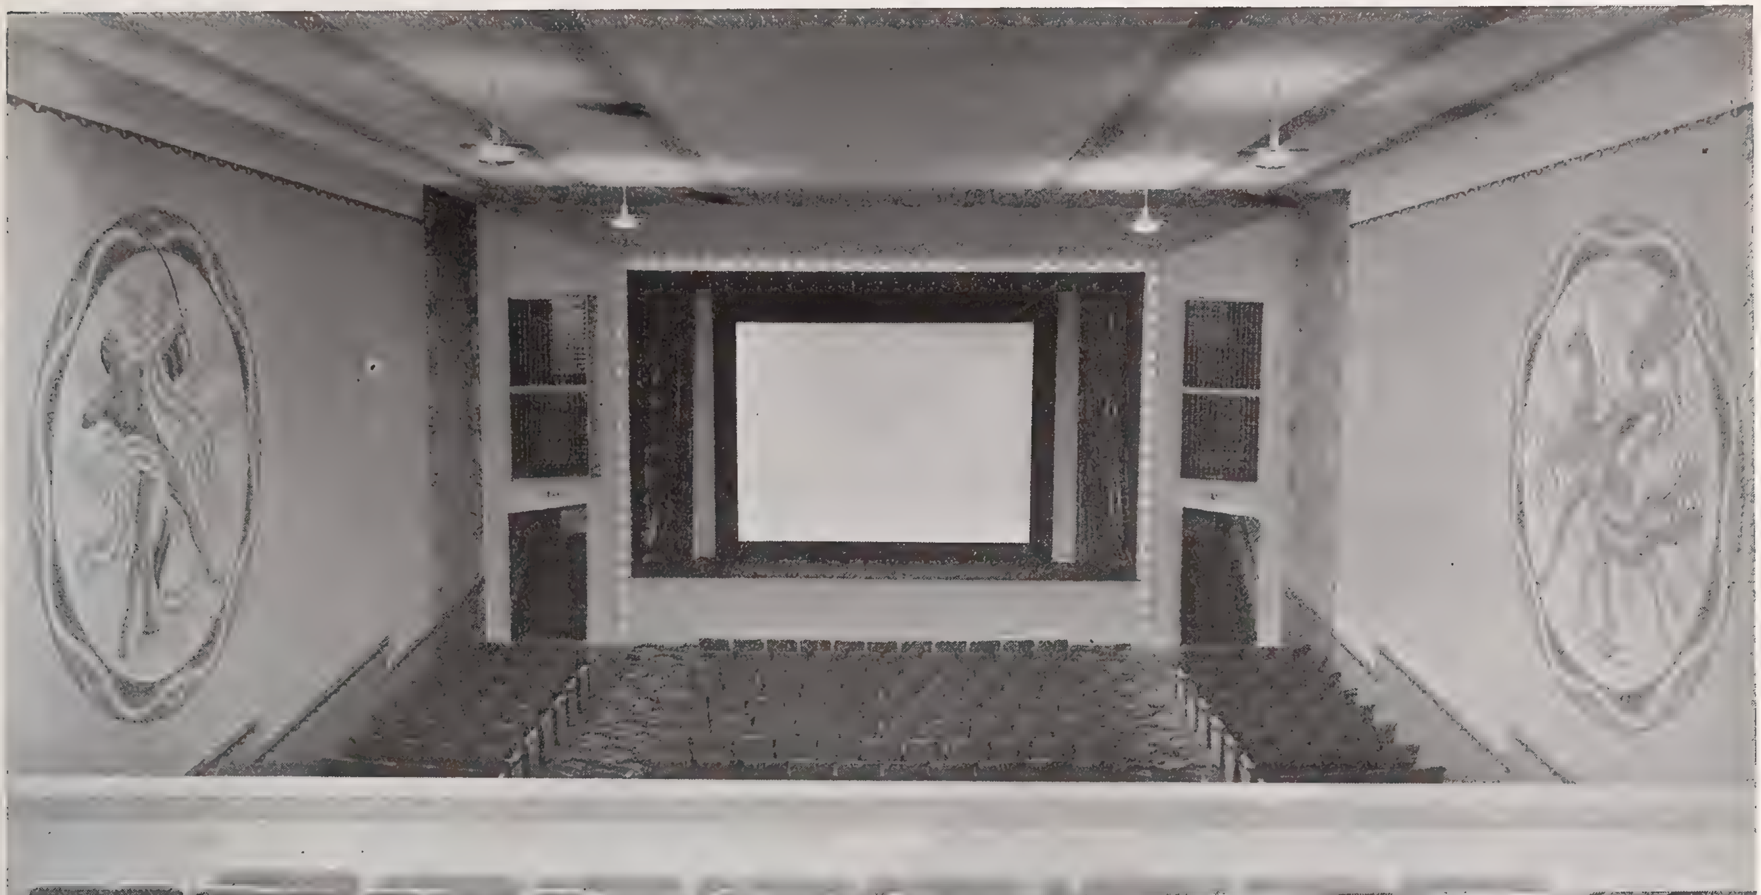
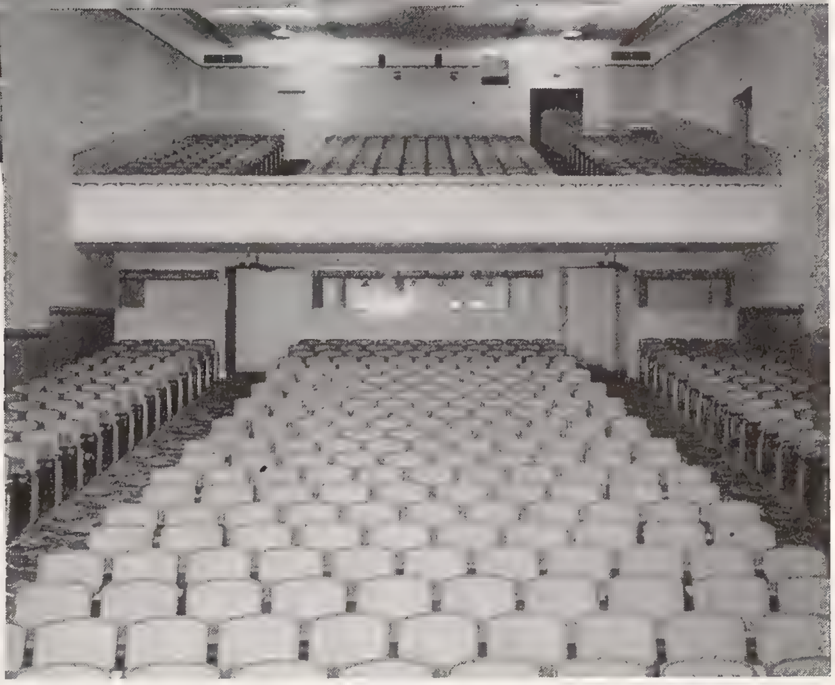
Small Neighborhood Theatres





AUDITORIUM: Entrance from the foyer is into shallow standee space substantially separated from the seating area by construction, the openings of which are provided with Venetian blinds. The general design of the auditorium, which includes a balcony extending over most of the foyer (the projection gallery is between it and front building wall) is extremely simple, both walls and ceiling being unbroken, and sparingly ornamented. The entire auditorium, except for the walls immediately adjoining the screen area, are finished in acoustic plaster, with ceiling bands, and wall decoration (which includes a large circular mural of modern style on each side wall) is executed in casinite, a casein paint which, sprayed on, has minimum effect on the absorption characteristics of acoustic plaster. Casinite is used also to tint the entire walls, both side and rear, a light rust color. The circular figure stencils are done in rust, maroon, blue and taupe, as also are panels flanking the proscenium wall. The ceiling is in the natural color of acoustic plaster and trimmed with double bands, one canary yellow, the other blue. The fascia of the balcony parapet, also finished in acoustic plaster, is painted light blue. Illumination is entirely by ceiling luminaires of indirect bowl type and all lamped with yellow incandescents. For the ceiling there are two rows of five each. Bowls are of spun aluminum. Similar fixtures, but of shorter suspension, are used under the balcony and in the standee area. None are on dimmer circuits. . . . Seating: The seating scheme, which places 240 of the 713 chairs in the balcony, provides staggering of chairs throughout the middle main floor bank. Unlike seating in other Interstate theatres using the stagger method, all chairs are of comparable width, superior vision being achieved by placing eleven chairs in one row (starting at the rear), and ten in the next, carrying this alternation throughout the bank. The middle bank thus has an uneven aisle line. It will be noted also in the picture that seating is not on a radial plan. Rows are spaced 32 inches, the majority of the chairs are 20 inches wide. With the distance from the rear to the screen 79 feet, and that from the first row to the screen 10 feet, the screen image is 17 feet wide. Chairs have end standards ornamented only by enameled panels in robin's egg blue, while both backs and seats are covered in tan Redo leatheratte. Stage drapes include a rayon plush curtain in pale tan, and rayon legs, valance and border in turquoise blue. The screen curtain is left open throughout performance hours, and no curtain control equipment is provided. Aisle carpeting is the same as in the foyer and elsewhere.

FOYER AND LOUNGE AREA: Entrance from vestibule is directly into a carpeted foyer (see floor plan). Foyer walls are in sand-finished plaster painted light blue; the ceiling is smooth plaster painted off white and ornamented with a painted stencil design having a circular border around which are placed square frosted-glasted and chrome-framed light boxes carrying canary yellow incandescent lamps. At intervals suggested by the shape of the foyer (see plan) are wall panels consisting in modern murals representing Woman as a beautifying force in nature, painted against a silver ground. Carpeting is a modern abstract pattern, the design of which, in its suggestions of leaf and stalk, may here be associated with details of the murals. The ground color of the carpeting is rust, while the figures are tan, taupe and black. Serving as a general lounge, the foyer is furnished with chrome metal chairs and settees with pleated cushions in blue and gold mohair. The staircase balustrade is of wrought iron, painted silver. . . . Both men's and women's lounges (see plan) have plaster walls painted light blue, off-white plaster ceiling, and illumination by ceiling light boxes. Carpeting and furniture are identical with those in the foyer.

HEATING AND VENTILATING: The Austin theatre has a simple ventilating system with evaporative (air-washer) cooling. The air is introduced through grilles at each side of the proscenium arch, and exhaust air is accelerated as necessary by an exhaust fan of 25,000 cubic feet capacity, delivering to ductwork from the rear of the auditorium. Heating is by a hot blast furnace with fan distribution.

PROJECTION: The projection room, located over foyer area, is 18 feet wide and 12 feet deep. Walls are done in sand-finish plaster, the ceiling in acoustic plaster. The motor-generator space is immediately beneath the projection room.

Some Theatre Cleaning Don'ts

● One way of knowing what to do is of course to know what not to do. And these suggestions are based on direct observation of practices

By S. BRAVERMAN

PROPER CLEANING of the theatre is something of an art. There are many different surfaces, requiring different methods. A surface improperly cleaned may be damaged, leading to needless expense for renovation. Imperfect cleaning may give the theatre a dingy, unattractive appearance; it can also result in soiling the clothes of patrons, and a demand for compensation. Inefficient cleaning may waste the porter's time and involve unnecessary expense for cleaning materials. The methods used should not be left to the decision of porters.

Advice about cleaning the theatre may be either positive or negative; that is, counsel as to what should be done, or warning as to methods that are dangerous or otherwise undesirable. The current discussion will be confined to a number of conspicuous don'ts.

First of all, don't neglect the outside of the theatre in the hope that rain will keep it clean. Rain leaves a deposit of dirt, as can be seen on any window or windshield. Dirt wastes illumination. It dulls the brilliant appearance of the marquee, attraction boards and so on.

It Leads to Deterioration

Strange as it may seem, even stainless steel will rust if sufficiently neglected. Both stainless steel and chromium acquire white coats of corrosion that give them a dull appearance. They should be oiled or waxed occasionally. When used as borders of attraction frames, they should be waxed weekly. Of course, lamps used for outdoor illumination need occasional washing, to preserve the full brilliance of their light, quite as much as the lamps which are used indoors.

Don't neglect roofs, whether of the theatre or of the marquee. Rubbish leads to rusting. Rags that may have been thrown away on a roof, dead leaves, and similar trash, clog drains and lead to more or less leakage, rusting and subsequent expensive repairs.

Neglect of snow is a point especially timely at this season of the year. There are chemical compounds that can be scattered when a storm starts, which will melt the snow and avoid the necessity of shoveling it. In some locations they should be used on roofs as well as on the sidewalk. Where it is necessary to pile snow, a pusher is usually more efficient than a shovel. A steel pusher lasts longer than one made of galvanized material.

Snow, incidentally, should not all be piled at the curb to make room for sidewalk patronage. A large, healthy gap should be left at the curb also, to admit patrons who come by car. Melting the snow as it falls, by use of a suitable compound, avoids the need for any kind of piling. The compound also prevents formation of ice, which may lead to slipping and subsequent claims that the theatre has neglected the safety of its sidewalk.

Interior Floors

Interior floors present not one problem, but many. Don't use the same type broom on all floor surfaces. A broom stiff enough to do an efficient job on concrete is too stiff for terrazzo and will eventually harm it.

There are brushes for mats which are much superior to mops. Rubber and linoleum, further, should be washed only with neutral soap. An alkaline soap softens them, making them more subject to wear. In the case of rubber tile, alkaline soap hardens the material and produces a tendency to crack.

Scattering of green sweeping compound prevents raising of dust which, if not prevented, complicates the problem of cleaning other surfaces; omission of the compound is therefore not an economy, but simply an avoidance of expense at one point which produces a greater cost in connection with some other operation.

Carpets should never be washed with soap and water. Even a neutral soap is sufficiently caustic to weaken the fibers to some extent, especially if it remains in contact with them for a considerable period of time. And since it is very difficult to rinse out soapsuds completely, prolonged exposure of the carpet to the caustic is to be expected. Moreover, since the soapy material is slow-drying, the jute backing is kept wet for a lengthy period, which tends to soften it. Materials that form "soapless lather" should be used for carpets. They clean effectively and dry completely in less than an hour.

Toilet Rooms

Dirt in a toilet room is more readily visible than anywhere else in the theatre. It is more objectionable. It is most likely to be a source of odor.

Don't believe that the washroom has been thoroughly cleaned because it is clean to the eye. If there is odor, the place has not been thoroughly cleaned; the porter has neglected to go beyond eye-level to the traps and plumbing.

Don't believe that all strong-smelling substances sold for toilet room use are disinfectants. Many of them merely hide one odor with another and have no germ-killing power at all. There are odor-destroying chemicals available that chemically kill off the source of the odor and, incidentally, any germs that may be associated with it. Some of them are safe to use on plumbing.

However, some odor-combatting compounds, and cleaning compounds, are acid enough to corrode the plumbing over a period of time, involving needless repairs which may prove quite costly.

Don't neglect receptacles for sanitary napkins; they are an ultimate economy.

And don't buy cheap liquid soap. Any supplier can meet competition by making liquid soap as cheap as the customer likes; he merely dilutes it with more water. There is no reason to pay for shipment of water at all. Buy the concentrate and dilute it yourself.

Cleaning Rags

Rags are used for cleaning many parts of the theatre, and some managers think it is economical to buy the cheapest. Don't! Just as a single broom is not suited to different types of surface, neither is a single rag. The rag that is right for wiping polish or oil is not the rag to use on glass. It is cheaper in the long run to use the right rags, and instead of throwing them away, accumulate a small quantity and send them to the wet-wash laundry. The cost is insignificant; the same rags can be used many times, and the theatre will have the right rag for every purpose. In the course of a few months you will pay less than for the very cheap, unlaunderable kind of rag.

MR. BRAVERMAN, now a specialist in cleaning materials for businesses serving the public, was formerly a showman, both as an independent theatre operator and as a circuit manager. He will be a frequent contributor to Better Theatres' columns on cleaning and sanitation, beginning with the January issue.

Training Ushers For Bigger Jobs

How the service staffs of RKO's Cincinnati theatres are instructed at monthly meetings

USHER TRAINING that goes in purpose considerably beyond the needs of the immediate job has been started for the staffs of RKO's theatres in Cincinnati by Joe Goetz, assistant division manager. The training is given in special monthly meetings of the ushers employed by the eight RKO houses in the Cincinnati metropolitan district. The duties of ushers, and how to perform them efficiently, are pointed out; but in addition, the young men are addressed by various community leaders in vocational and personal matters for the purpose of directing them into channels leading to bigger jobs, either in showbusiness or out of it.

The first meeting, for example, was addressed by Mayor James Garfield Stewart of Cincinnati. The ushers and chiefs of service, numbering about 100, were told:

"You young men are in exactly the right environment to acquire, not only the fundamentals of showbusiness, but also to broaden out into other fields if you so desire. You have constant contact with the public, which affords valuable experience, and by initiative, observation, strict application you will develop a technique which it would otherwise be rather difficult to acquire. Executives are always on the lookout for the young man who has really got what it takes, and that young man can be you if you are constantly on your toes."

Others whom Mr. Goetz scheduled for these meetings are Eugene Weatherly, chief of police, who was asked to talk on crowd psychology and what to do in emergencies; and a representative of the telephone company, to discuss personality values in the correct answering of the telephone. Barney Houston, Cincinnati fire chief, was also asked to talk on fire hazards and to conduct a fire drill.

Service chiefs and ushers being addressed by Mayor Stewart of Cincinnati.

Mr. Goetz comments: "Although the meetings have been in progress but a short time, we already can see considerable improvement in the way members of our service staffs go about their duties. We anticipate highly beneficial and permanent results from these meetings."

Incidentally, meetings for the cashiers of RKO's Cincinnati theatres are also being inaugurated to develop habits of courtesy, and to instruct them in detection of counterfeit money, in some phases of box office acounting, and in other details relating both to their routine of work and their contact with the public.

. . . an Usher Who Went to the Top

An interview with Joseph R. Vogel, who has been designated a director of Loew's, Inc.

JOSEPH R. VOGEL, who has just been elected to the board of directors of Loew's, Inc., recently completed thirty years of service with the organization. From part-time (after school) usher at Loew's Yorkville theatre in New York, at the age of 14 back in 1909, to general manager of all Loew theatres outside of New York, and of the famed Capitol and Astor theatres in New York, is Mr. Vogel's success story, to which his directorship now adds still another chapter.

With Loew's thirty years.

Few men have held theatre positions at such an early age as Joe Vogel: from 14 to 16, a part-time usher; at 17, treasurer and assistant theatre manager; manager of the Fulton theatre in Brooklyn at 18. Then in 1921, at the age of 26, he was made the first manager of Loew's State on Broadway. And from 1923 on he has been a theatre executive at the Loew home office. Interviewed there he recalled early experiences.

"When I started ushering the single-reeler was the 'feature' picture. Vaudeville was the main part of the program, with $50 the top pay for an act. Just the same, the toughest job the manager had was to get the people out of the theatre. The film was always put in the 'chaser' spot—an act or two would be left out of each performance, and when the film came on, patrons would leave, thinking they had seen the whole show.

"The first five-reeler we played was 'Queen Elizabeth,' starring Sarah Bernhardt. The question was whether to run the picture altogether, or to put in an act of vaudeville between each of the five reels. Yes, sir, believe it or not, it was decided that the audience would not sit through five reels, so an act was put on after each reel! Of course, it didn't take long to find out that this was wrong.

"In fact, pictures quickly became the main attraction, and vaudeville acts were then booked only to help a weak picture. And now the big stage performers want to know what the picture is before they take an engagement!"

Pointing out that the theatre manager today has a much bigger job than when motion picture first became important, Mr. Vogel said:

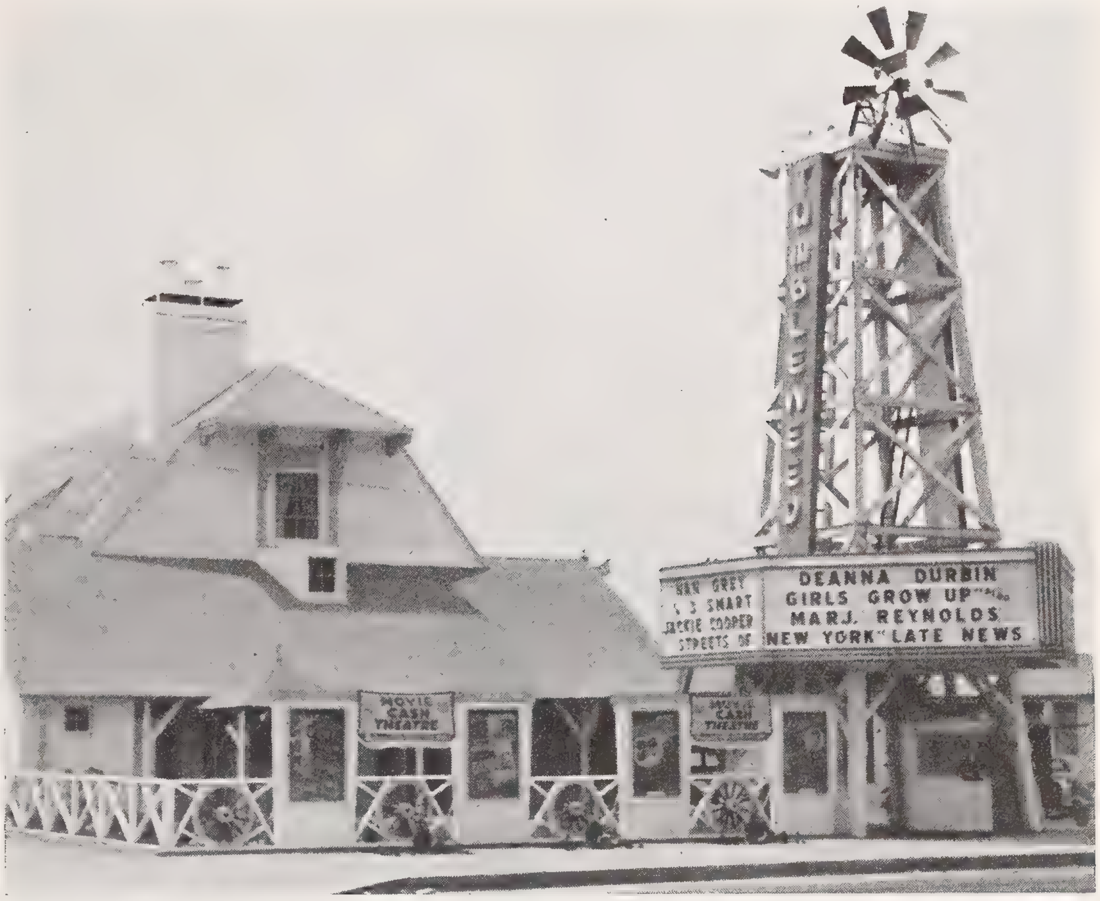
"Managers, assistant managers and ushers should take part in regular conferences to improve the operation of their particular theatre. The live-wire usher who studies, takes courses at night, and uses every means to learn the rudiments of theatre operation, in every department, is the usher who will get somewhere.

"The theatre manager who knows something of salesmanship and has learned how to make his theatre attractive and efficiently operated is the successsful manager. All other things being equal, the public will go to the theatre that is kept in the best condition, from both an appearance and an operating viewpoint.

"During the depression years, Loew's never stinted on maintenance. In the long run, there is no real economy in cutting down on theatre maintenance. Ultimately, even more money than would have been necessary has to be spent after a theatre has been allowed to run down. The only sound policy is one that calls for keeping the theatre physically fit at all times."

BELIEVE IT OR NOT—

This Is a Theatre!

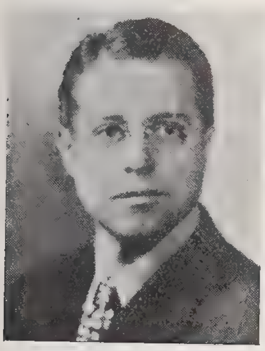


. . . yes, and a fetching one to the city-farmers of Five Points, who gather here for mental and emotional subsistence—plus

THE PROBLEM that faced James Edwards, Jr., of the Edwards Theatres Circuit, when it came time for him to protect a location 20 miles outside of Los Angeles, known only as Five Points, was just a bit different from others. Just as the name indicated, it was a five-point intersection of highways, and that is all, but surrounding this intersection was a community of small homes. The federal government had tried one of its subsistence projects in this area, where a home owner had his acre or half-acre of ground, a cow, some chickens and a low-cost but attractive residence. It was one of the many social experiments for housing, but the entertainment of this population had to be handled privately.

This provided a none too easy task for the theatre operator and his architect. The theatre operator's problem was to build a low-cost theatre, as the size of the community would not justify a large expenditure. The Government, in providing the type of community it had built up, had really increased the taste and discrimination of the immediate population. While they were not large money-makers, as a group, they were home-loving, discriminating persons who had moved out of the city to the country fringe—were trying to assimilate rural ways, but after all were still city folk.

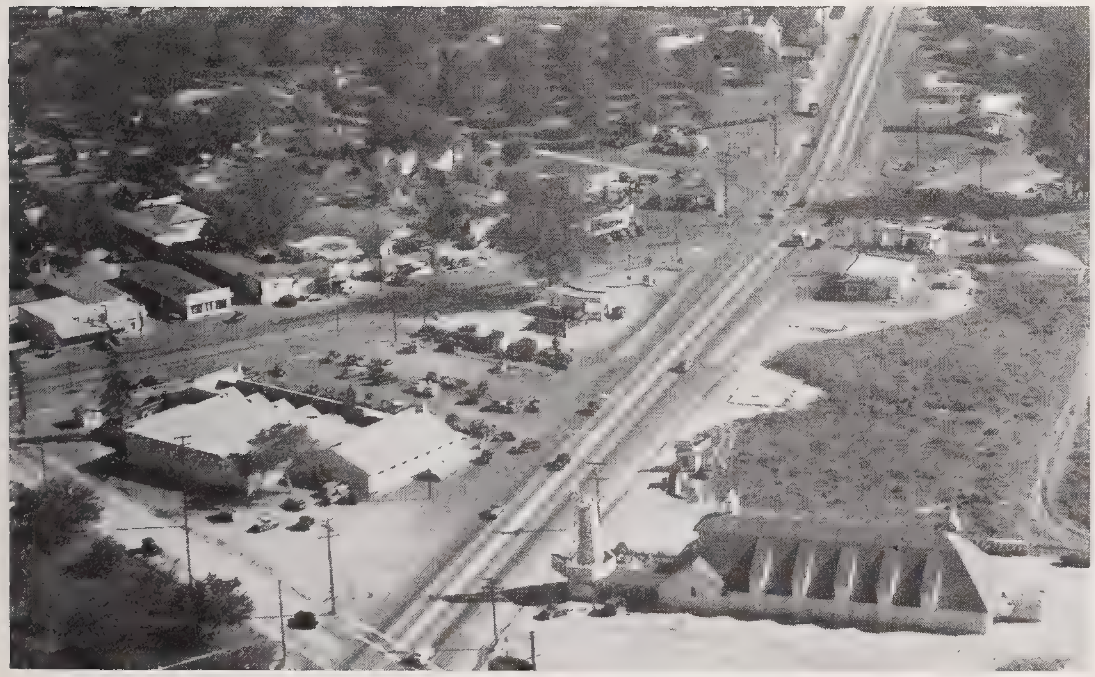
HE OPERATES IT



James Edwards, Jr.

HE DESIGNED IT

S. Charles Lee



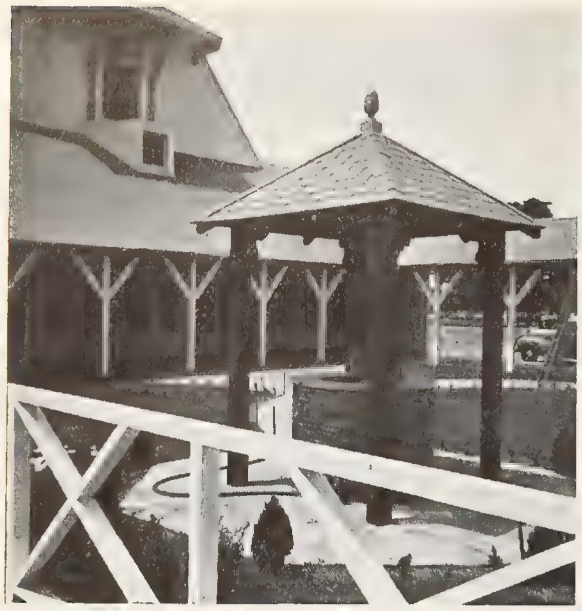
And here's the town for which it was built (theatre in right foreground).

Analysis of the budget and the area to be covered by the building left the architect—S. Charles Lee of Los Angeles—with funds to build a shell which appeared to be nothing more than a barn. A barn? The idea crystallized. Why not build a barn project that would be "artistic," and clever, and would afford more entertainment by reason of its novelty than a cheap "modernistic" or similar type of building, where the price would reflect itself in weak substitution of materials? Thus came the idea of the Tumbleweed Theatre.

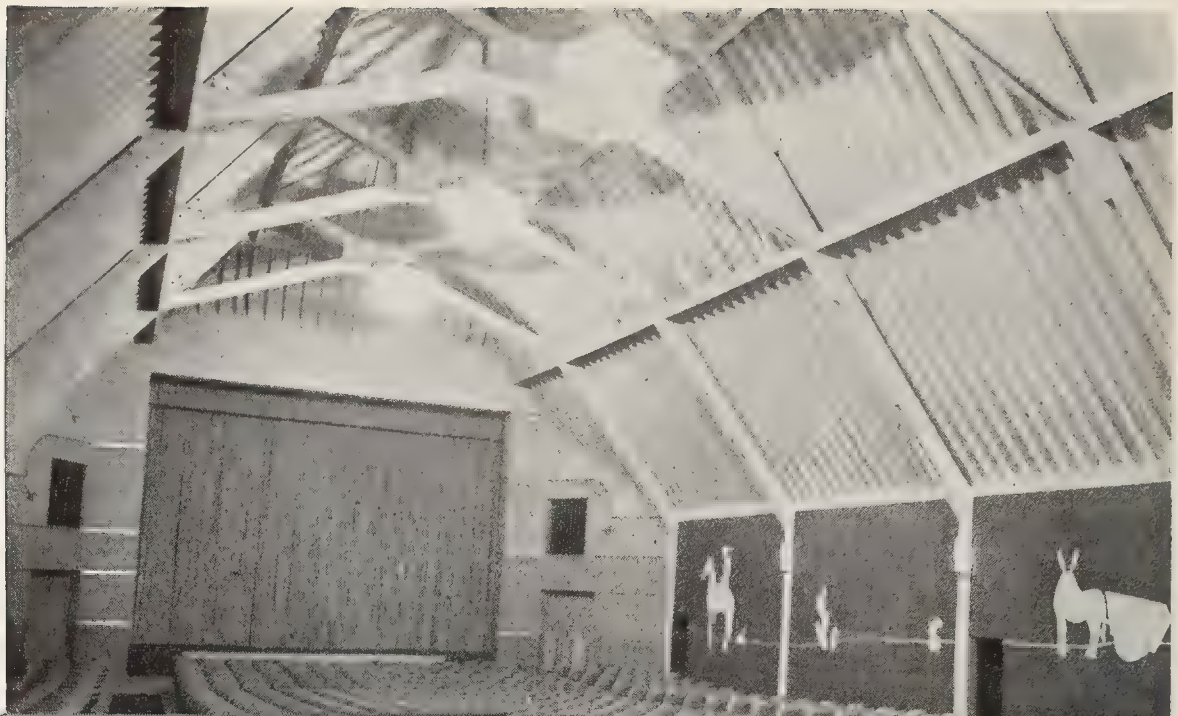
It's the Fifteenth

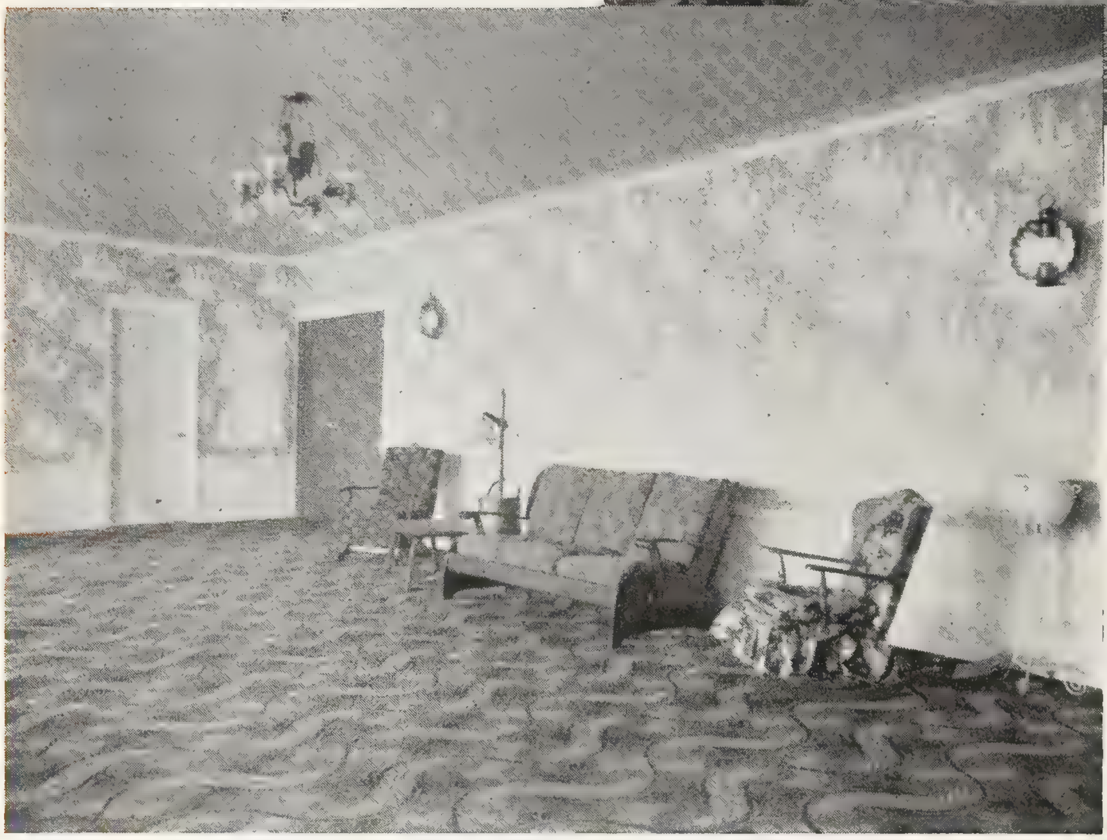
But just a word about "Jimmie" Edwards. Entering the Theatrical world only nine years ago, and with but a few cents in his pocket, the story of James Edwards, Jr., reads like one of Alger's. Graduating from high school in 1925 with no idea of what to do with himself, he took a job as a dish washer until he could decide what he did want to be. Ambitious, he saved most of his salary in order to take advantage of any opportunity that presented itself. After a few weeks of washing dishes, he easily talked himself into leasing an empty piece of ground across the street from a theatre, and started a parking lot.

It immediately became a success. Branching out, he leased several other parking lots



The wishing well in the "barnyard."





The foyer-lounge, done in farmhouse style. Top: General view of the auditorium.

in and around Los Angeles. They, too, were successful.

Then, in 1939, he leased the long-dark Mission theatre in Montery Park, California. Came crowds—and he began to sell his parking lots and taking over unsuccessful theatres. In the short space of three years he owned and was operating seven theatres, all money-makers.

Now thirty-three years old, "Jimmy" Edwards owns and operates fifteen theatres.

But the Tumbleweed is different. To return to its creation—

The building was set back from the street and a patio barnyard was created in front. In this yard were arranged cast plaster ducks and ducklings, an old oaken bucket and a wishing well. A windmill was obtained, built on a pump tower, operated by an electrical motor. At night this windmill is ablaze with neon and can be seen for miles. A luminous marquee, with Adler silhouette attraction boards, was built around the base of the mill tower and a box office built below. This forms the main entrance motive to the theatre.

Ordinarily a building of this kind would have high side walls in order to get proper distance below the trusses for picture size. This obstacle was overcome by building the roof on the underside of the trusses and building false buttresses on the exterior, which enhanced the elevation and solved the interior problem.

Construction and Design

The exterior color scheme is white, yellow and blue. The general building is white. The trim around the box office is canary yellow. The roof is blue. The fence along the outside was built of a combination of wagon wheels and poster cases. The wagon wheel spokes were painted red, the rims of the wheels yellow and the balance of the fence in white trimmed with yellow.

The foyer presented a major problem. What kind of a scheme could be used that would be up-to-date, but still have a farmhouse character. This was solved by finishing the walls in a soft blue and white wall paper having a farmer and farmerette pattern, by providing a dado painted white, and making the furniture typical farmhouse type. Rocking chairs, living room couches and butter-churn floor lamps were adopted. The type of lighting fixture used is designed as a weathervane. A men's room sign is built in an inverted horseshoe; the women's room sign is built around an oil lamp.

The auditorium was quite a problem, too. It needed as much acoustical absorption as possible in the side walls; therefore, these walls were made of Acoustipulp, tinted magenta. Rural cutout ornaments, depicting burros pulling carts, Indians on horseback, cactus and tumbleweed plants, were made of white Masonite and applied to the wall.

The ceiling of the auditorium was formed of the roof trusses and was painted white and yellow. Lighting fixtures are in the shape of wagon wheels, the rims of which are glass, with work lights in the center. During the performance three colors of lights are used in the glass rims of the wheels.

Ventilation is accomplished by introducing fresh air in the front of the auditorium and removing it from the rear. The chimney on the front of the building is actually used as an exhaust port for the ventilating system. It is Mr. Edwards' policy to heat his California theatres with radiators. This is done with a gas-fired Warmolator with a Bunsen burner type of flame which is built in a metal casing in the wall.

The Tumbleweed has a capacity of 850, and the general contract involved less than $20,000, it is reported.

THE STRONG MOGUL

High Intensity Automatic

REFLECTOR ARC LAMP

Projects a volume of light even beyond the normal requirements of theatres that demand a tremendous increase in light value to maintain a satisfactory level of illumination.

The higher efficiencies attained through the use of the Mogul result in this increased light intensity without a corresponding increase in operating costs. In fact, this improved projection is attained at a lower cost per light unit.

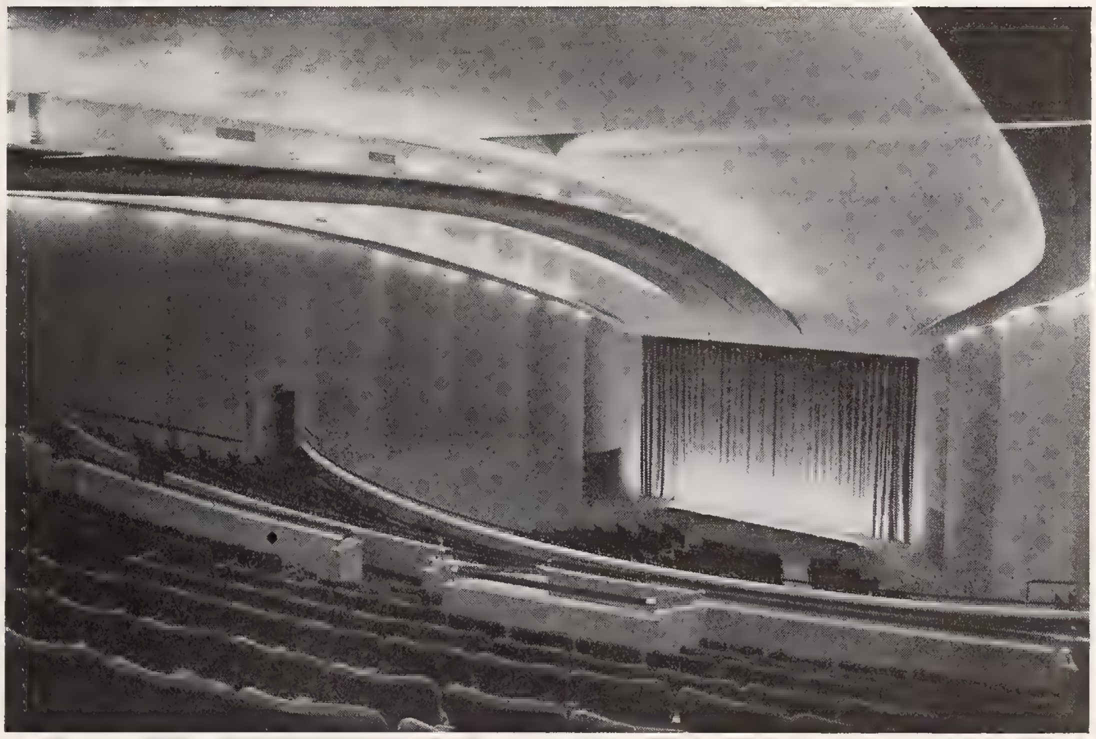
Theatres Planned for Exact Sound Control

[Comment on the theatres now forming a part of the University of Wisconsin's Union Building has been so markedly in praise of their acoustics, that attention has been attracted to them for methods adapted to the commercial theatre. A number of them, including a new method of non-uniform placement of material, are noted in the following article. In general, the approach made to the acoustic problem in designing these auditoriums shows with what certainty acoustic science today can deal with theatre sound control. In charge of the acoustic design and treatment was C. C. Potwin, whom the Architectural Forum recently referred to editorially as "one of the country's foremost authorities on acoustical correction." Lee Simonson was theatre consultant to the architects of the project, Corbett & MacMurray. The designer was Michael M. Hare.—G. S.]

AUDITORIUM treatments which have received widespread attention from both designers and specialists in the theatrical arts, are those of two theatres which were recently added to the facilities of the Wisconsin Union, a recreational center at the University of Wisconsin in Madison. While the theatres are adjuncts to an educational institution, they include motion picture exhibition in their purposes, and many of the fundamental principles of acoustic design employed in them are fully as applicable to the commercial motion picture theatre.

The main theatre, with a seating capacity of 1,300, was planned fundamentally to insure the best possible hearing conditions for direct speech, sound motion pictures, and symphony music. From both the acoustical and visual standpoints, the balcony-type of auditorium was selected.

In order to control the reverberation time initially, and to avoid too large an amount of acoustical treatment, the enclosed volume was fixed at 170 cubic feet per seat. This figure is slightly higher than would have been adopted for an auditorium of 1,300 seats to be used only for sound motion pictures because of the fact that it was also necessary to plan for



The main theatre of the Wisconsin Union is shown above. This auditorium is convexly shaped, the walls being designed to disperse sound reflections, while the ceiling is especially formed to carry sound to the rear seats. Below is pictured the so-called "Play Circle," a smaller theatre.

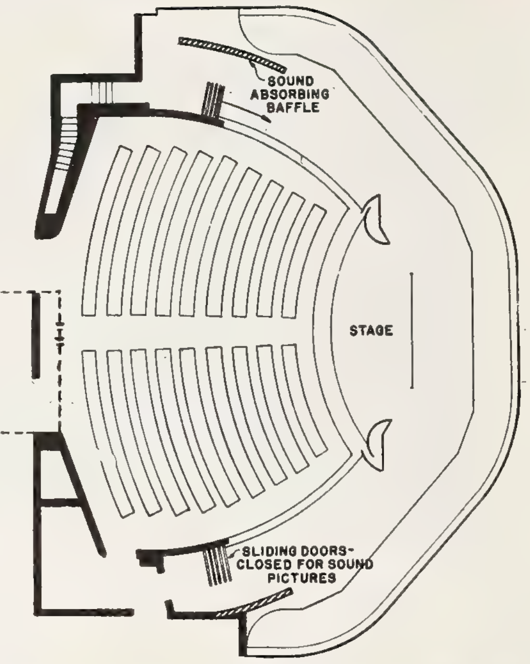
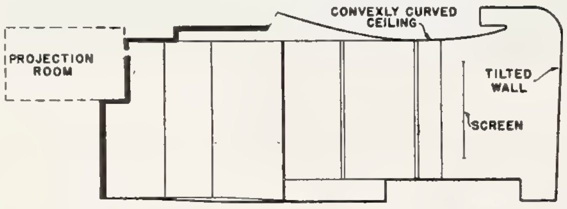
In the drawing of the floor plan of the main theatre are indicated the convex forms employed along the side walls of the forward area, also the division of the rear wall into flat sections. The longitudinal section shows the manner in which the ceiling has been formed to disperse sound toward the rear seats, and also the convex shape of the balcony soffit to improve hearing conditions in the seating area below. Additionally to be noted is the tilted glass partition at the rear. . . . At right is shown the floor plan, and below a longitudinal section of the small "Play Circle," with its stage-end curvature broken into flat divisions.





symphony orchestra presentations, which require a relatively large cubic-foot volume per seat; however, it is important to note that as a result of the fixed volume, only 750 sound absorption units of acoustical treatment were needed in this comparatively large auditorium.

Structural Shaping

With respect to internal shaping, the ceiling is especially formed to carry sound with the utmost clarity and naturalness, to seats farthest from the stage. A ceiling of this type is most beneficial for stage presentations, although it also has possibilities for motion picture theatre designs. A large part of the wall areas are convexly shaped and tend to disperse sound and direct it toward absorbent areas. Such forms are particularly adaptable to the motion picture theatre, wherein sound diffusion is almost always an important element of design.

The balcony edge and the forward part of the underbalcony ceiling are also especially shaped for sound control. The rounded balcony edge disperses objectionable sound reflections; no acoustical treatment is used on this surface. The forward part of the balcony soffit is sloped to improve hearing conditions in the seats under the balcony. Attention is also called to the fact that the balcony rear wall is designed in straight segments, and not in a concave curve following the form of the seat banks. Thus, with proper acoustical treatment of the rear wall, positive assurance is gained that concentrations of sound energy will be avoided.

Another unusual and interesting detail of design consists in a sound-proof, sliding glass partition at the rear of the mezzanine, which permits the use of a part of this section as a discussion room during performances. This arrangement is one which can also be employed advantageously in commercial theatres in which glass is used in connection with the design of the standee rail. The glass is tilted in such manner that sound will not reflect back from it to the seating and thus cause echoes.

New Placement Method

A new method of acoustical treatment has been applied in this theatre. It involves distributing the sound-absorbing material unevenly over the walls, instead of placing it in a compact mass on single surfaces. This method, which has been found to give exceptionally fine results, particularly when it is used in conjunction with surfaces which diffuse sound (reflect it in many directions), would seem to be a method likely to be regarded as a major advance in the acoustical planning of motion picture theatres.

The material used for this non-uniform placement of material is 1-inch rock wool blanket, which is covered with perforated board. This combination of materials was selected because it would provide the proper quality of sound absorption at the low, middle-range and high frequencies relative to the absorption provided by seats and other furnishings, and also because it would blend most satisfactorily with the decorative treatment of the interior. All panels are recessed so that the outer face of the treatment is flush with the furred plaster walls.

Small Theatre Treatment

A small theatre called the "Play Circle," seating 200 and used for the study of dramatics for motion pictures, lectures and radio broadcasting, has design features which can also be applied to the commercial motion picture theatre. The tilted walls, used in this particular instance to control sound reflections backstage, may be applied to specific types of problems in the design of the motion picture theatre auditorium, where the control of objectionable sound reflections becomes a paramount requirement. The convex curved form used for the ceiling instead of the walls in this case disperses sound and prevents the up-and-down travel of reflections between the floor and the ceiling. This type of shaping can often be used to advantage for the forward part of the ceiling in the motion picture theatre when there is to be considerable open space between the first row of seats and the screen.

The acoustical treatment used in this small theatre is 1-inch rock wool blanket installed in a non-uniform pattern on the rear surfaces behind a thin decorative fabric covering. Acoustical plaster is also used on part of the ceiling and is tapered in thickness from ¾- to ¼-inch.

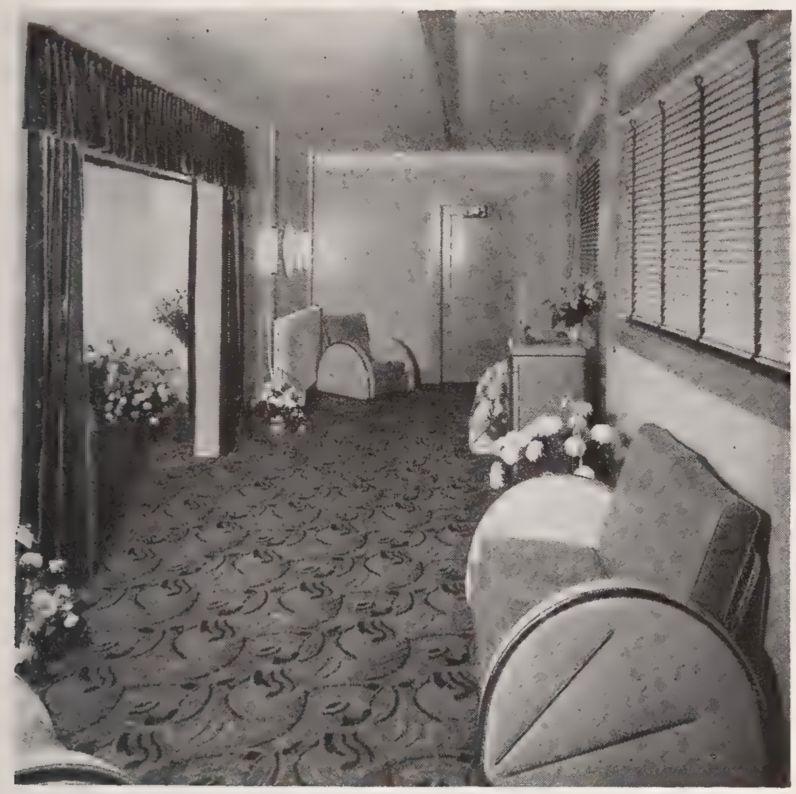
CONCEALED-FRAME METAL PIECES



THE DESIRE to add an effect of luxurious comfort, and "warmth," to the other qualities of metal furniture, whose durability is always in its favor for premises serving the public, has steadily extended the types of metal furniture adapted to theatre lounges and foyers. In the foyer of the recently remodeled Pix theatre in Beatrice, Nebr., an interesting model is used having the ends completely finished off in upholstery material.

Occupying area comparable to standee space, this foyer is treated as a general lounge, off either end of which are the toilet rooms. The treatment, which is practically the same as that of the carpeted lobby leading into it, is simple—plaster walls unornamented except for a 30-inch chrome-rimmed mirror, flanked by white coated lumiline lamps, at each side of the lobby arch. Furnishings and lighting, however, are colorful, in warm tones. With this cheery treatment, the durability and ease of maintenance of simulated leather is taken advantage of in the upholstery of the furniture.

Consisting of two chairs and two settees in Royalchrome models, the pieces have seats and backs covered in sand-colored leatherette, while the metal arm rests, or end-frames, are concealed in an enclosure of antique (veined) ivory leatherette. In general design, the foyer is as simply modern as the furniture, while the upholstery coloration harmonizes, in lighter tones, with walls and ceiling of pale blue and drapes of dark blue velour. Carpeting is red flecked with black.

NEW MODELS IN TUBULAR FRAMES OF SATIN ALUMINUM

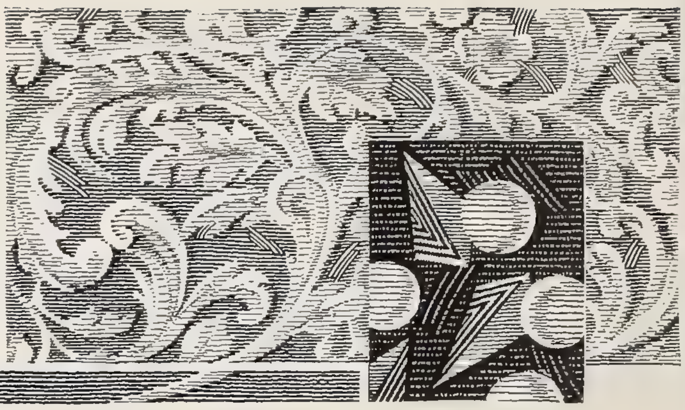
CARPET Selection & maintenance

Foyer and lounge floors, and stairways, are always conspicuous—keep them well groomed.



Fitting the Pattern to the Space

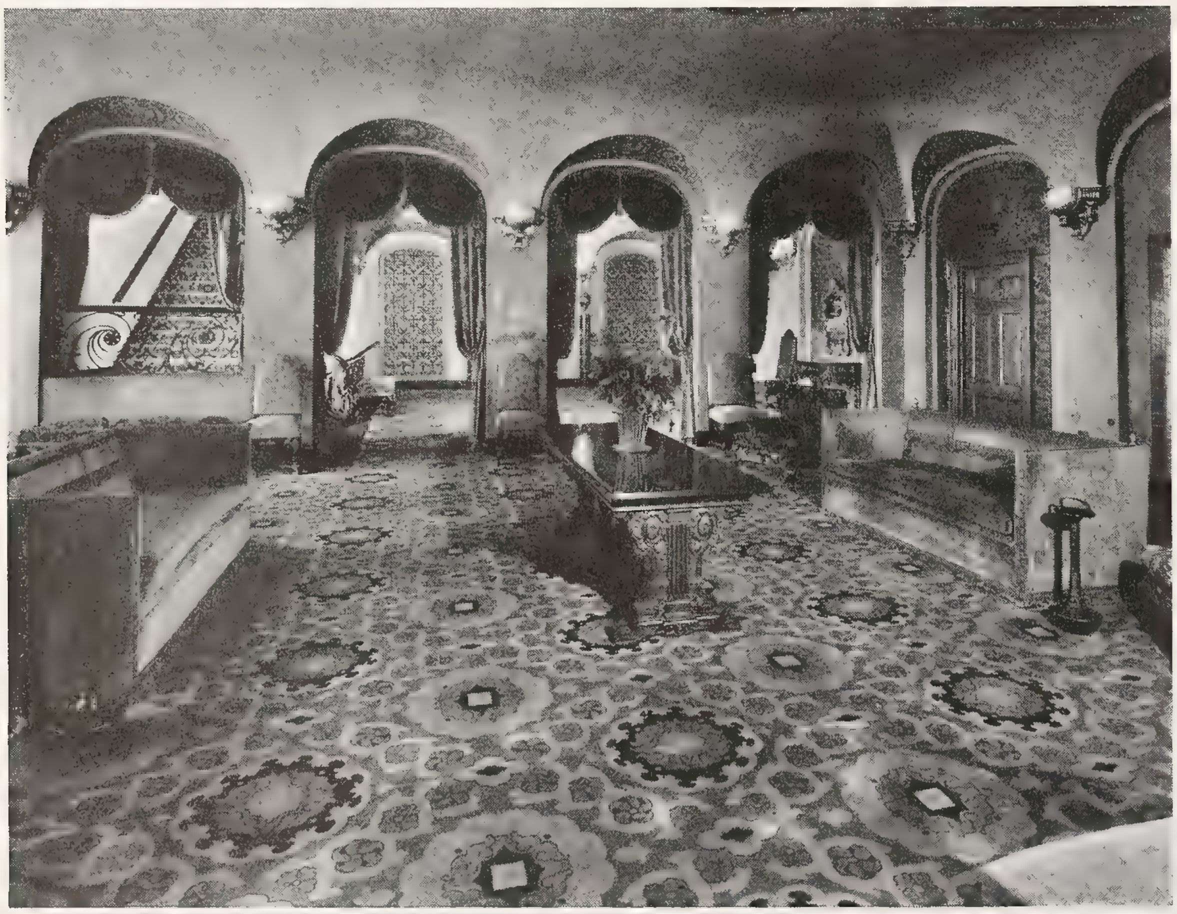
¶ How showmanship calls for consideration of style and size of each theatre division

THE SELECTION of carpeting for the theatre is an exercise of showmanship. The whole theatre layout, from front to auditorium, from projection room to screen, seating scheme, lighting, air-supply equipment, and so on, is of course a machine of showmanship—a merchandising and marketing medium. The motion picture theatre today is a complex correlation of functions—to get 'em in, to provide a stimulating, safe and comfortable environment, and to produce mechanically a satisfying theatrical entertainment. As such, the theatre is all of a piece. And every detail counts.

The carpet is a conspicuous detail. It covers a large part of the total area of a properly furnished theatre, is prominently in the focus of the eyes of patrons entering, waiting or using the lounge and toilet facilities, and leaving the theatre. It contributes mightily to both first and last impressions; it can make or break the interior treatment. The selection of the carpeting therefore is not a matter to be dealt with casually, nor to be skimped on.

To choose one pattern for the entire theatre naturally simplifies the task, and may make the job somewhat cheaper in first cost than it otherwise would be, by increasing yardage in that design and keeping fabric waste at a minimum. And the single pattern selected may well be perfectly adapted to every division of the theatre to be carpeted.

Often, however, this is not the case—and there are good reasons why that should be so. In general, with respect to carpeted areas, the theatre is divided into several compartments, each more or less different from the other in (1) purpose, (2) amount of traffic, and (3) decorative treatment.



A highly ornamental treatment in a period design which, while representing a style popular some years ago, well illustrates the consideration of scale in carpet selection. Note the large figures, even in the connecting details, and the long repeats of the Renaissance pattern (the carpet is an Alexander Smith "Crestwood" Velvet) in the spacious foyer-lounge area with its "heavy" arches and furniture.

Differences Between Divisions

These divisions are foyers, lounges, the auditorium. They vary, of course, from theatre to theatre. Some houses have considerable foyer area, including mezzanine or balcony corridors and stairs leading to them; others have moderate foyer space immediately associated in plan with the auditorium. There may be a main lounge, with a lounge each for men and for women, or retiring room area may consist in only a cosmetic room for women, and a toilet room for men. Nevertheless, there are functional differences between two or more areas of most theatres, and these differences are usually expressed in the design.

Additionally, they are different in dimensions, which introduces the carpeting factor of scale. And the difference in the amount of traffic that each area is subjected to, means that the carpeting in one area will wear out faster than that of another—or that the carpeting of one division—say, a women's lounge—may be of a somewhat cheaper grade than that of foyer area, where it never pays to lay carpeting that is not of the finer grades of leading mills in types of weaves—for example, Velvet and Wilton—definitely adapted to heavy traffic conditions as well as to the average theatre budget.

Scale Considerations

The effect of specific decorative treatment, including that of furnishings, on the selection of carpeting is clear enough. It is plain that in a theatre having foyers in a somewhat ornamented modern style, and a women's lounge in relatively plain, "homey" treatment, the lounge needs carpeting fundamentally different in design from that of the foyer. What seems to be less apparent is the factor of scale.

If a lounge, for example, that is a great deal smaller than the main floor foyer area —and it practically always is—has carpeting of a pattern with figure details and repeats as large as those adapted to the size of the foyer, the whole lounge treatment becomes noticeably out-of-scale, and a room that might have been charming—remember, charm is part of what this business is selling—is awkward-looking, or at best, just so-so and therefore without effect. Part of the money spent on that lounge, in treatment, and in rent and maintenance, is wasted.

Scale involves the height as well as the horizontal dimensions of the carpeted area. Furniture also affects scale—in a lounge a fair percentage of the carpet is covered by chairs, settees, tables, floor lamps, and so on, whereas the floors of foyer areas are likely to be quite clear. Furniture has the effect of cutting a room up into smaller divisions, thus reducing the room in scale.

Foyer area extending across the rear of the auditorium seating and consequently relatively narrow, yet, because of the great breadth of the auditorium, also very long. This carpeting represents an excellent selection in pattern (colors are not being considered), for note how the figures, while good-sized in scale so as to reduce the apparent distance across the auditorium, yet are small enough to be in keeping with the width and height of this foyer area; and additionally, how the design effects lines which are laid so as to carry the eye from front wall to standee rail, making the foyer seem wider than it actually is.

Some theatre operators already make it a practice to select carpeting for each division of the theatre precisely according to the style of treatment and the dimensions of that division. As the man in charge of the physical theatre for one important circuit puts it:

"You're striving for a certain effect, and if you don't get it, you're wasting your time and money. Carpeting is a big factor in getting that effect. Sometimes it costs a little more to vary the design, but what you're spending your money on is showmanship."

NEW CARPETINGS FOR TWO THEATRE INTERIOR STYLES

■ Here are two new carpet patterns which, while brought out together, have been designed to meet the needs of two distinctive styles of interior treatments. Both by the Mohawk Carpet Mills, one of these new carpetings (illustrated at right) is a Velvet weave of modern classification, while the other is a medium-priced Axminster suggestive of Early American fabrics and ornamentation. Each is characterized by ground coloration of wood tones. Against its light tan background, the "modern" carries a graceful, yet firmly traced design of curved forms shading from dark brown almost to black, interlaced with red "plumes." These devices are traditional enough in basis, but the interpretation is modern, and the resulting pattern is accordingly adapted to a wide range of interior treatments. In its general "feeling" and moderate scale, it is also adapted to all carpeted areas of the theatre. . . . Not so the Axminster, which is of a grade and a small scale immediately indicating the moderate traffic and the dimensions of a lounge, and of a design suggesting a general interior treatment tending toward the Colonial or rustic. Such treatments for lounges are of course quite in order even in theatres otherwise more or less modern, as witness the women's lounge of the Illinois theatre in Jacksonville, Ill., illustrated below. Its maple furniture of rustic design is of a type popular for homes today. With such furniture our Axminster carpet, in its ground coloration of wood tones, is in direct harmony, while its block formation and brilliant, stylized flowers provide a floor of decorative interest and color in a room whose walls and ceiling are neutrally light and entirely plain, as is commonly the case in lounges done in this style. . . . . In serving to associate the Velvet with modern treatments in general, the sketch above, an original design by Charles C. Burton of Paramount, offers at the same time a specific foyer-lounge treatment in which the slightly curvilinear pattern, red plumes and wood-tone background of the carpet would be echoed in curved glass block "windows," a round-corner ceiling cove, a stylized plumed bird in white metal mounted against red architectural glass, and wood panels.

Theatre PLAN & FORM

THE BASIS OF PLANNING

INSUFFICIENT emphasis has been placed upon the engineering aspects of theatre planning. The oft-repeated story about the theatre that was once constructed in which the projection room was missing when the building was completed sounds funny today, but many a newer theatre building has lacked essential provisions for successful picture presentation. While these provisions may not be as fundamental as the projection room, they nevertheless are of great importance. Proper auditorium acoustics, lighting and air-conditioning are the engineering considerations inadequately provided for in all too many theatres today.

Unified Planning Needed

We have had the idea that these requirements could be supplied merely by purchasing the necessary equipment or fixture or fabric and placing these in the most available space. This is a mistaken idea. Actually it takes more time and study to incorporate these elements into the planning of the theatre than it does to plan the architectural and structural elements.

In the modern motion picture theatre, acoustics, lighting and air-conditioning should be built in as an integral part of the structure. Carefully studied surface shapes avoid excessive surface sound absorption. Studied built-in ducts insure efficient air distribution. The very shape and formation of the interior surfaces become the basis for the lighting provisions.

Mechanics Part of Structure

The architect is still the key man in the planning of the motion picture theatre, but he must collaborate with competent engineers for a successful job. The architect must translate engineering requirements into finished architecture. The theatre's mechanical and technical provisions must be hidden within a pleasing, efficiently functioning unit. Use of extraneous added ornamentation is usually a sign of lack of coordinated study of the engineering and architectural problems. The modern airplane and locomotive, even the average gadget in the home, has become a thing of beauty, plus greater efficiency, with the ornamentation omitted.

The exhibitor is now dealing with a wiser public, whose conception of what is well-functioning is pretty much its idea of what is good-looking. In addition to this, the motion picture is a modern art which certainly cannot be effectively sold in an obsolete setting.

These columns are regular features of Better Theatres dealing with methods by which the theatre may be planned as efficiently as possible for the exhibition of motion pictures. Both Mr. Schlanger and Mr. Potwin are consultants on inquiries from readers seeking counsel on the planning of theatres.

Shaping and Pouring The Auditorium Floor

SPECIAL care is needed in the laying of the incline of the main floor of a theatre. Wood floors are not adapted to the slope necessary for good sightlines, because for best results the pitch of the floor for the most part should change for each row of seats.

The levels of the various rows should be set to within a ¼-inch of absolute accuracy, and if possible better than that. A leveling instrument should be used. Faulty workmanship will result in the loss of sightline clearances.

Concrete floors should be laid in alternate strips, a strip being equal to the back-to-back spacing of the chairs. After the alternate strips are poured, finished and set, the wood form boards can be removed, leaving the concrete already laid to act as the form and finishing line for remaining alternate strips.

Pouring Over Fresh Fill

If the floor is to be poured over a fresh earth fill, great care should be taken to tamp down properly and roll the earth. The earth should be filled and rolled in layers no greater than 6 inches of height at one time.

Floor slopes should not be determined for sightline clearances by graphic methods. The proper level for each row of seats can be calculated accurately mathematically, whereas the graphic method is subject to serious errors.

Incline Requirements Vary Widely

It is not advisable to copy the levels of a floor slope from one theatre to another since the conditions in each case are almost certain to vary and therefore definitely to affect the clearances.

A uniformly sloped floor—that is, a floor in which the rate of slope is the same for each row of seats—is entirely unsuited to proper sightlines.

It is the opinion of the writer that one should pour the floor so that the level given for each particular row will continue and be the same for the entire length of the curvature, or arc, of that row. This means that a line taken straight across the width of the theatre would never be level. This condition results in what is sometimes called a "bowl" floor.—B. S.

ACOUSTICS in Form & Decoration

by
C. C. POTWIN
Consultant in Acoustics

THE BALCONY PARAPET

A SEEMINGLY insignificant, yet a very important surface to be considered in the acoustical design and treatment of the motion picture theatre is the forward wall, or fascia, of the balcony parapet.

At the time theatres were first being corrected for sound, it was discovered that reflections from the balcony parapet frequently contributed to inferior acoustical conditions. Usually presenting a flat surface from 3 feet to 4 feet in height directly in the path of the direct sound from the horns, it tended to reflect the high frequencies quickly to the front seats, often creating the effect of an echo.

If this vertical flat surface were curved across the width of the theatre, as was frequently the case when it was designed to follow the curve of the seat banks, it tended further to concentrate these reflections toward the front center bank of seats, thus magnifying the echo effect.

Bulging or Broken Surface

Today it is possible in new design work to shape the balcony parapet so as to prevent the formation of objectionable sound reflections at this surface. By convexly rounding it so that it gives the visual effect of bulging out slightly at the center, the high frequency reflections are dispersed or scattered and do not reflect back directly to the front seats as they would if the surface were truly flat and vertical.

Another design possibility is to shape the surface as a projected angular form, with the upper and lower sides of the angle both facing away from the screen. A corrugated effect consisting of small angular or convex units worked into the design of either the vertical or horizontal form of this surface can also be used to disperse high-frequency reflections.

The adoption of any one of these methods of acoustical design often leads to the development of an interesting architectural detail for the balcony facure.

Correction with Materials

When the balcony parapet facing is flat and truly vertical, it should almost always be acoustically treated and the material used should have a high sound absorption value in the upper range of frequencies. For the flat balcony parapet of normal height—that is, between 3 and 4 feet—this treatment can usually be placed, if desired, in a band 2 feet in width, centered on the surface and extending over its full length.

BUT WILL TELEVISION IN THEATRES (IF AND WHEN) BE ONLY THE THEATRES'?

ONE of the problems now puzzling theatre television interests is what to do about the possibility that patrons could tune in on the program in their own home. A game or fight of national interest, reproduced by television as it takes place, has been considered television's chief attraction for theatre audiences, and various methods of preserving secrecy have been discussed.

Metropolitan theatres may be able to obtain the program through a short telephone line connection to a coaxial cable; and while it will be some years, at least, before the majority of theatres will be within practicable telephone distance of such cables, they can be reached by radio. It has been suggested that the secrecy of such transmissions may be protected by devices similar to the "scramblers" that have long been used for transoceanic radio telephone.

Television interests nevertheless wonder if any merely technical method of preserving secrecy will prove effective if the public insists on the right to receive pictures of interesting events in the same way that it now receives radio descriptions of them.

Thus the latest of all entertainment developments, television, would appear to bring the theatre right back to where it started, depending for its patronage on the skill and showmanship of its presentations and the attractiveness of its atmosphere.

A few years ago air-conditioning showed signs of expanding too rapidly. The less restrained members of that industry saw a boom among stores and residences. And sometimes this resulted in rushing equipment developments beyond the rate of speed normal for such things. This attitude has been on the wane for some time, and now it is good to note such expressions as those of Mr. A. R. Stevenson, Jr., of the General Electric Company, before a group at Lehigh University.

"It is correct," he said, "to visualize a tremendous growth in air-conditioning, but it will be a more gradual, healthy development than is sometimes anticipated. There is a certain law of gradualness, and the more worthwhile a thing is, the longer it may take to mature."

This can give the theatre operator confidence in air-conditioning methods available today, and in the engineering character of the men behind them. There has been some confusion among theatre operators as to just what would be most efficient as well as economical for them—they rightly didn't want to go overboard, and most of them couldn't afford to. So far as the principal air-conditioning equipment manufacturers are concerned, reliable counsel is now available, plus methods which provide for most financial situations now met with in the theatre business, particularly when it is considered that equipment assuring comfort in the theatre has become an absolute necessity.

Noted in the trade press: Mr. Walter E. Green, head of the National Theatre Supply Company, announces the sale of 55 complete Simplex sound systems in the month of October. He calls it a record. We call it good news, significant news. The smart operators are "carrying on."

Also noted in the trade press: Mr. Barney Balaban, head of Paramount but still one of the Chicago B & K Balabans, predicts, "In the future, theatre operators will be content to build smaller community houses, seating from 1,200 to 1,800." They have been content for the past five or six years to build theatres seating from 600 to 900. The motion picture returned to the neighborhood and small town these many, many months ago. The future has been with us for quite awhile.

Noted in the lay press—specifically, New York's World-Telegram: Therein Mr. Heywood Broun, columnist and man of great girth, wonders if there are "cinema temples where the seats were not designed for midgets." We are reminded of New York's Normandie theatre, where seats measure, as we recall, 24 inches in width. Then there is the Waldo, in Waldoboro, Maine, where Broun-modeled patrons are directed to special seats, as broad of beam as themselves. It is to be noted, however, that motion picture theatres, with rare exceptions, are not operated for people either physically or intellectually on Mr. Broun's pattern. They definitely cater to folks with average minds and posteriors.

Direct-Concealed Lighting As an Economical Method

• An architect specializing in theatre design examines illumination practices from the point of view both of costs and luminous effect

By BEN SCHLANGER

THE COST OF indirect lighting installation, and the upkeep and current consumption costs, make indirect lighting really prohibitive for the average exhibitor. The more economical lighting method—that of direct lighting—is therefore in more common use. It is generally believed that indirect lighting is the softer and more attractive lighting, therefore many exhibitors are tempted to spend extra amounts of money to obtain such an effect. Unfortunately, high maintenance and current consumption costs result in more or less neglect and resultant deterioration.

The plaster or metal coves which form an important part of indirect lighting become laden with dust because of inadequate help, or because they are difficult to reach. Lamps which may burn out for one reason or another are hardly ever promptly replaced. Usually after a few months of operation, the exhibitor resorts to using every other, and sometimes every third, lamp in the cove to reduce his light bills, which he finds have mounted to unexpected levels. The resultant shadows and spottiness caused by this attempt to economize, and the loss of efficiency due to dust accumulation on the lamps and coves, are reason enough to discourage the use of indirect lighting. Yet it is true that even a new installation, properly maintained, is needlessly expensive because other methods of effective lighting have proved more efficient.

Diagram A and B shows some of the possible placing of light sources for direct-concealed lighting. Note the shielding of the light in both instances as indicated by the line of sight. The light source, however, actually is either above or below the shielding point in order to allow a direct spill of light. . . . Diagram C shows the completely indirect lighting cove, in which case the light spill is onto a ceiling surface only, relying on this surface to re-reflect into the auditorium, or whatever the room is.

It is not difficult to understand the principles of direct and indirect lighting and their relative degrees of efficiency. A brief history of the art of lighting is worth reviewing to help in the explanation of these principles. Starting with the use of the first incandescent electric lamps, lighting was of most simple, direct form—that of exposed, clear, transparent glass lamps that proved to be the most efficient means of delivering a maximum amount of the light energy created by the light source. Then frosted glass lamps, and secondary light diffusing glass enclosures, were employed to reduce the glare which the light filament in the lamp produced. This step resulted in a reduction in the amount of light energy delivered.

Indirect Lighting

While the light source was made less objectionable as to glare, the objection of exposed light sources still remained. This lighting is known as the diffused direct type. Indirect lighting was subsequently introduced as a means of concealing the light sources, thereby overcoming the glare produced by high brightness surfaces of the lighting fixtures.

Indirect lighting is used in the form of isolated fixtures or in continuous coves. The lamps in all cases are enclosed in materials which completely hide the lamps, or in some instances allow only a very small percentage of the light to pass through. Loss in light is considerable since the light sources are pocketed and the light that is produced must come wholly from the surfaces, such as ceilings and walls receiving the light from the lamps. The surfaces, if white, can at best reflect only about 70% of the light; this loss, plus other losses mentioned, accounts for about a 50% total loss.

The new tendency in lighting practices is to combine as much as possible the advantages of efficient direct lighting, and of hidden source lighting, a type of lighting which may be called concealed direct light. Light shields are created which hide the lamps so that they cannot be seen from positions in which persons sitting or moving about in a given space are likely to be.

Concealed-Direct Methods

There are many forms of this type of lighting now in use. The lamps are usually enclosed at the top and on all sides, with the bottom open for light spill, and sometimes one or more sides of the lamps are exposed to provide for additional light spill. The object is to enclose as little of the lamp as possible, keeping in mind that the lamps must not be exposed to view from anticipated viewing points. This type of lighting becomes a definite part of the architecture because the physical shapes of the space enclosure must be designed to make possible the various shields required to conceal the lamps.

The commonest form of direct-concealed light is recessed ceiling, or "down-lighting." In this form the lamps are not visible unless you walk over to the point near the fixture and look up into it. Small shielding louvers are sometimes added to conceal further the brightness source so that you would have to be directly under the fixtures to see the lamp. Another form is that in which the light is spilled through a small hole, varying from approximately 2 to 4 inches in diameter, depending on a reflector placed above the lamp to focus a maximum amount of light through.

Direct-concealed lighting is not limited to point sources of light. It may be used in continuous lines, as is commonly found in indirect lighting.

The following general design principles should be kept in mind in connection with direct-concealed lighting:

1. Consider the area to be illuminated.
2. Place the light source close enough to this for efficient illumination.
3. Determine all the viewing points from which the lamps will be visible.
4. Create shields to eliminate visibility from all these viewing points but at the same time be careful to leave as much "open-ness" around the lamp as possible.

Direct-concealed light may also be used at walls near the floor or ceiling, as well as in the ceiling itself, as the drawing indicates.

INTER-SPACE LETTERS

FOUR-INCH letters, associated with special frames which attach to the regular frames, have been added to the line of silhouette type attraction board equipment of the Wagner Sign Service, Inc., of Chicago. As shown in the photograph, the small letters, which obviously increase the flexibility of the attraction layout and further adapt marquee and similar space to "typographical" variation, occupy inter-linear space, attached in the same manner as the larger letters, to their own lighter "frames," which in turn are attached, in the manner of the letters, to the main frame.

Inspection and Maintenance

THEATRE CHAIRS of modern construction need very little maintenance, but they do need some. If the chair deteriorates too rapidly, the fault usually is not in the chair, but in neglect. If the chair is loose, odds are long that the cause lies with ill-advised economy in the original laying of the floor. (See May issue of BETTER THEATRES for discussion of chair anchorage). Improvements based on the experience of many years have resulted in designs that call for little more than reasonably satisfactory theatre conditions to assure continued preservation of the chair's usefulness and appearance.

One of the first requirements in auditorium chair maintenance is to apply the well-known stitch in time. This merely involves planned, regular inspections. Responsibility for this should in most theatres, be permanently assigned to one certain member of the staff. That not only will eliminate "buck-passing" over defects, but the person appointed will be in a position to acquire familiarity with the characteristics of chairs through daily experience. In most situations his work will involve thorough, routine inspection of all seats wherever located, although occasionally special inspection of heavily used seating.

Regular inspection commonly includes check of (a) loose floor fastenings, (b) loose seats, (c) noisy backs, (d) noisy hinges, (e) tight hinges, (f) condition of seat bottom, (g) uncomfortable upholstery, and (h) worn fabric. Other items are of course to be added as local conditions warrant—paint deterioration, for example.

ing the standards, with special attention to end standards. Methods of improving the anchorage, when needed, vary with the type of fastening and the nature and condition of the floor—the manufacturer of the chair should be consulted if necessary.

Raising and lowering each seat will determine whether any is loose, the remedy being tightening or replacing the seat mounting screws, or tightening the screw holes with wood plugs or "liquid wood."

Noisy backs are found by shaking and remedied by tightening the holding screws, bolts or clips.

Noisy hinges, which reveal themselves whenever the seat is raised and lowered to check its tightness, may call for mere lubrication, preferably with a grease gun, or for some renovation of the hinge parts. Tightening the bolt may prove an entirely adequate remedy and one which can be made permanent by riveting the bolt. Occasionally worn parts may have to be replaced, particularly the cushion which prevents jarring when the seat is raised or lowered.

Rough seat bottoms call for careful inspection by sight and sometimes by touch, or they may be reported by patrons complaining of torn stockings. Roughness should be sand-papered or filed down, and burrs on screws filed smooth.

Seats uncomfortable to sit in are found—by sitting in them; when the condition is not extreme the indicated re-upholstering can sometimes be postponed by moving the chair to a little-used portion of the house.

Worn upholstering is detected by appearance. Modern fabric repair kits provide means of inexpensive repair of some leatherettes. Inexpensive replacement of soft fabrics and antique leatherette is to be provided for by purchasing, preferably when new seating or upholstery is installed, extra yardage of the fabric.

The backs of the chairs, which are by the General Seating Company and were installed by the Scott Ballantyne Company of Omaha, are in coral mohair. The seat covering is Naugahyde rubber-base leatherette in an antique finish. Seats are of spring-edge type, the backs padded. Cooling With Refrigerants Other Than Chilled Water

Further outlining what equipment does in a series of "plain talks" on theatre air-conditioning methods

By CARL F. BOESTER

LAST MONTH we discussed in this series how chilled water circulated in coils absorbs heat from the air. Now we shall learn how a refrigerant in coils can do likewise.

We have learned that it takes heat to change water to steam or vapor, which we termed air-moisture, and that to change this low-pressure steam back into water, it is necessary to extract the heat because it is the heat that supports the water in the air as air-moisture.

In order more clearly to understand the advantages of refrigerants other than water, let's discuss some of the characteristics of water.

A long time ago as kids in school we learned that water boils at 212° Fahrenheit. If we apply the heat of a flame to the water (sensible heat), until the water temperature becomes 212°, the water boils at that point and the application of more heat does not make the water boil any harder.

We know that the additional heat being applied must be going somewhere, and it does—in the evaporating, or boiling off, of some of the water. If the application of heat is continued long enough, all of the pan of water will be evaporated. Thus, after a temperature of 212° is reached, any additional heat supports the water in the air, as it boils off, in the form of air moisture. (This is called, incidentally, the "latent heat of vaporization.")

Now if we weld an air-tight lid on the pan of water, and thus lower the pressure of the air over the water in the pan (vessel or tank) to less than ordinary atmospheric pressure—or even to a substantial vacuum—the water will boil at a much, much lower temperature than 212°. In fact, if the vacuum is great enough, the water will boil at a temperature of 50°! In such a case, if at the time we enclosed our pan of water with an air-tight lid the temperature of the water in the pan was 70 or 80° the water will boil itself off into vapor until its temperature is reduced to 50°. It is this principle that accounts for the fact that eggs cannot be boiled on Pike's Peak. The atmospheric pressure at that altitude is so light—that is, somewhat approaching a vacuum—that as heat is applied to the water, the water vaporizes so rapidly that it can never reach 212° F. or anything like that temperature. Therefore, there isn't enough heat in the water to cook the egg.

Boiling at Low Temperature

Now, with almost a vacuum (extremely low air pressure) over our tank of water so that the water boils at a temperature of 50°, it becomes easy to heat up this water to a higher temperature, say 60°, merely by applying heat from air at a temperature of from 80° to 90°. If we pump the water out of our tank, run it through a fin coil and then back to the tank (or if we have the water in a fin coil and maintain sufficient vacuum in the coil so that the water will always boil in the coil at a temperature of 50°, and will continue to do so even though the heat being applied is only that of warm 80° air passing over the coil) we have the first step in our air cooling cycle.

You remember that we said that heat always flows from the warmer substance to the cooler, whether that substance is a gas, a liquid or a solid. In this case the heat of the air (gas) passes to the coil (solid), and from the coil to the water (liquid)—in other words, from the substance higher in temperature to that lower in temperature. Now, the heat of the air, when added to the water, raises the water temperature and causes it to boil, and the water vapor thus boiled off into vapor (steam) is carried away by the vacuum, to be condensed into water again, and in condensing, the heat in the steam is given up.

The aim of all this discussion about boiling water is to explain (by reference to water, a medium with which we are all familiar) the function of a refrigerant. There are refrigerants, such as ammonia and Freon, that are more efficient than water for absorbing heat. And so these substances are used instead of water.

How Refrigerants Cool Air

Let's trace the complete refrigeration cycle with Freon rather than water in the fin coil over which the air to be cooled passes. We maintain a vacuum in the coil so that the Freon will boil at, say, any temperature over 40°. (To be specific, there is a pressure in our coil of about 37.3 pounds, for one of the characteristics of Freon is that it boils at a temperature of 21° below zero at atmospheric pressure, a temperature too low for air conditioning purposes. For this 37.3-pound presssure in our coil, the boiling point of Freon is 40°.)

Now, if the temperature of the room to be cooled is 80° and we pass this air over the coil, the 80° heat is more than enough to cause our Freon to start boiling and evaporating in our coil. (That is why coils are also called "evaporators.") On the coil we have two connections—an inlet, and an outlet. The outlet is connected to the device which is at all times striving to pull a vacuum in the coil—just a plain pump, referred to in refrigeration as a "compressor."

What the Compressor Does

Each time the piston of the compressor moves down in the compressor cylinder, it creates, or strives to create, a vacuum, and the vapor (corresponding to the steam of the water), which is produced by the boiling of the refrigerant due to the heat of the air around the coil, rushes into the empty compressor cylinder because of the vacuum created there by this down stroke.

The compressor also has a check, or intake, valve which makes it possible for the vapor (boiled refrigerant) to enter the cylinder, but prevents it from getting back into the coil.

On the upstroke of the piston, the refrigerant vapor, which has entered the compressor, is compressed (squeezed), so that its pressure is raised many times above its entering pressure. As its pressure is raised by compression, its temperature is also raised. We might describe this process by saying that heat occupying large space and without much force, has been compressed, or concentrated, into smaller space and therefore has more pressure. There is still the same amount of heat as there was when the refrigerant vapor entered the compressor at fairly low temperature and pressure; the difference is that in compressing our refrigerant vapor, we have raised the temperature at which it entered the compressor (say, around 40°) to a temperature of 105°, with a pressure now of 126 pounds, instead of 37.3 pounds.

What the Condenser Does

The Freon gas is then, at this temperature and pressure, discharged by the compressor into another coil (called a "condensing coil") over which city water is flowing. The heat taken from the air by the Freon has to be disposed of. If the temperature of the water (from the city mains or from a cooling tower) is 75°, the heat flows from the 105° compressed refrigerant vapor, to the coil and to the 75° water. When the heat leaves the refrigerant vapor at this pressure, the refrigerant immediately changes from a vapor to a liquid, and we again have liquid Freon, relieved of the heat it picked up from the air. That heat, which was originally in the air that was cooled, has been finally transferred to the city water, or cooling tower water. The final disposition of that heat will be either the sewer, if we use city water; or the outside air, if we use a cooling tower water for this purpose.

Thus we see that a summer cooling plant is really a simple heat pump, pumping heat from the area to be cooled.

Repeating the Process

The final step in the cycle occurs after the liquid Freon leaves the condensing coil. The Freon then drains into a receiver, where it remains until the first coil we described—the evaporator or cooling coil—needs more Freon. When needed, the Freon now in the receiver—which is still at the 126-pound pressure—enters the evaporator or cooling coil through a valve known as an expansion valve. The pressure drop or the valve resistance is such that the pressure of the refrigerant is reduced from its 126 pounds (to which it was raised) to the 37.3 pounds.

The Freon then is again evaporated into vapor as it absorbs the heat out of the air, is again drawn into the compressor by the vacuum, where its heat is again compressed in intensity so that the refrigerant vapor is rejected to the condensing coil and there resumes its liquid state. The entire cycle is thus quite simple.

The important function of moisture condensation is accomplished by the refrigerant-cooled coil in identically the same manner as it is by a finned coil fed with chilled water—the process explained in last month's article.

We implied in that article that there were other ways of extracting moisture from the air. One method (called "*ad*sorption") involves passing air over certain substances which have an affinity for water, such as silica gel, activated alumina, activated carbon, and certain of the ordinary salts. Just as the salt sticks in the salt shaker on rainy days because it has *ad*sorbed some of the air moisture, so we may extract air-moisture by blowing air through beds of any of these named materials. We need not consider this process here; it is, as yet, not entirely practical and the equipment, for it costs more to buy and to operate than does equipment for the more usual methods we have described. Nevertheless, it has definite possibilities for the future.

Next month's article will discuss cooling by *ab*sorption, also the use of cooling towers to dissipate much of the sensible heat; and when, where and how to use evaporative cooling, or "washed air cooling."

[The author is an air-conditioning engineer, with headquarters in St. Louis, who has made special studies in the air supply problems of theatres. He is discussing the equipment phases of attaining "breathing comfort," the principles of which were explained earlier in this series of "talks."]

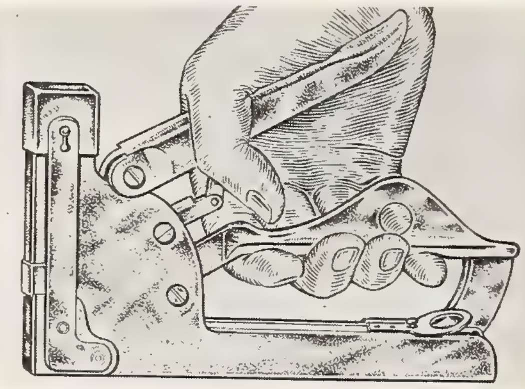
New Handy Tacker For Bill Posting

A NEW hand-operated tacker, for laying carpet, posting advertising copy, etc., has been marketed by the A. L. Hansen Manufacturing Company of Chicago. It is designed to reach into cramped corners and to utilize four different sizes of tacks. The tacks, of staple shape, range from 3/16-inch to ½-inch in length, and are ⅛-inch wide. The machine can be opened for access to the mechanism without use of tools.



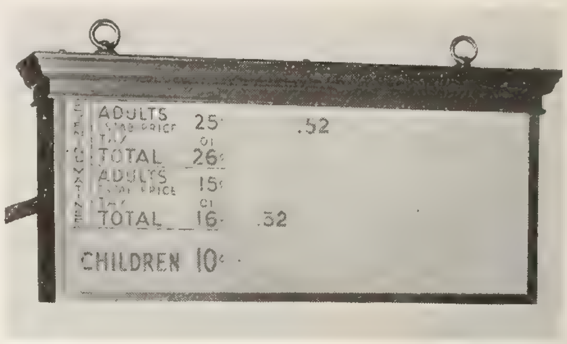
Rewinder "Drive Dog"

A REWINDER "driving dog" essentially similar to a lathe dog, has been brought out by GoldE Manufacturing Company of Chicago, to replace the collar and driving key used in existing rewinders.

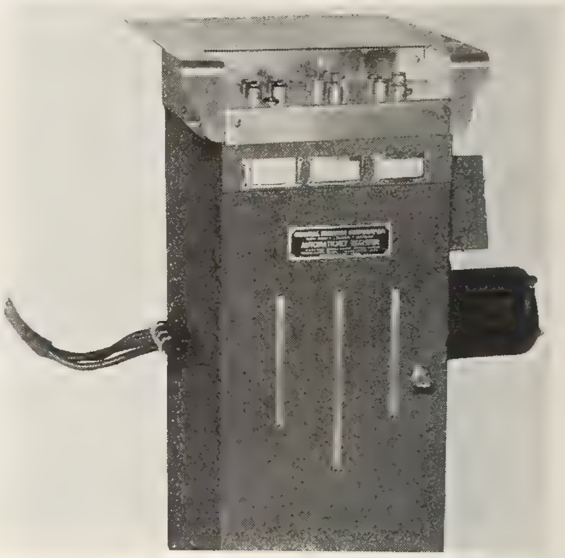
The driving dog, which is made of cast bronze, applies driving pressure at some distance from the center of the reel and is intended to eliminate drive key repairs which have been become more common since the heavier 2,000-foot reels were introduced.

Admission Charge Indicator for the Box Office Window

AN AUTOMATIC ticket dispenser and sales register designed to offer an extra service to patrons and to prevent irregularities among employes, has been brought out by the General Register Corporation of New York. The device consists in an indicating panel for display in the box office window. When ticket dispensing machine keys are depressed, the machine delivers the required tickets in the usual manner, but simultaneously flashes the total amount of sale on the indicator in illuminated 1-inch letters. This automatic display of the price to be paid is counted on to prevent mistakes or disputes about change, and also to discourage the cashier from attempting to sell tickets otherwise than through the machine. Additional indicators can also be installed in the manager's office or other remote locations, if desired.



Indicator and (below) dispenser with attachment.



The indicator, in addition to flashing the amount of each transaction, displays a fixed panel face showing the schedule of admission prices. Price changes are effected by removing this face and substituting another one. The rear of the indicator is so constructed that the cashier can at all times determine, by glancing at it, whether the indicator is working correctly.

The register and indicator are supplied both in standard units and in custom-built models suited to any unusual requirements of size, design, or decorative features necessary to match with the design of the box office.

Economical Mirror Maintenance For Effective "Suprex" Carbon Arcs

● The fourth and last of a group of articles dealing with the cost of proper screen illumination, based on data representing actual operating conditions

By HENRY D. BEHR

EVERYONE CONCERNED with theatre operation pays close attention these days to operating costs, and the problem of mirror depreciation deserves more than passing attention. To be conservative in following through our comparisons here, we use 24% as yearly accumulative light loss. This makes allowance for error or variation in different theatres, and also for the fact that care in striking the arc, and high maintenance standards, are applied in some theatres, while in others they are not.

Tests and operating experiences bear out the estimate that the use of a glass mirror shield results in an initial loss of light amounting to about 8%, but examinations of unprotected mirrors averaging twelve months of service have revealed a reflectivity drop ranging from 18% to 40%. Of course, there will be cases in which, by extra care and cleaning (without any protective method), light loss may be held to a comparatively low level for a one-year period; this is particularly true if care is used to protect the mirror for a sufficient period while and after the arc is first struck.

Decrease of Reflectivity

No fixed rule can be laid down as to when to replace reflector mirrors, or to install protective guards. There are too many variables to be reckoned with. An unprotected mirror will have, on an average, a 12% monthly drop in efficiency over a period of one year; with installation of a guard every four months, the average loss of light may be held to the same percentage. When the mirror is *un*protected, light drop will range from zero (at the outset) to 24%, whereas with the protected mirror the drop may be controlled and will range from 8% to 16%, which includes the initial loss of 8% characteristic of the glass protective medium.

A glance at the table shows that 16% of light drop may be reduced by more frequent replacement of protective guards (see Table A and Chart 1).

If reflector mirrors were consistently replaced (or refinished) to restore reflectivity, when they cease to give satisfactory service, that would be an ideal procedure; in actual practice, however, this is seldom done because a manager will hesitate to put through requisitions too frequently for $40 or $50 for fear of home office consequences.

ror depreciation, of course, may be compensated for by increase of arc current. In a high-intensity arc, using the 7 x 6-mm. "Suprex" trim, an increase of arc current within the recommended operating range of 42 to 50 amperes produces an increase in screen illumination of approximately twice as great proportion as the increase in current. This means that the maximum efficiency in light production is obtained at the upper limit of the recommended current range. When carbons have been operated at upper burning limit of trim, it is impossible to compensate for light drop. Larger carbons must be used and burned at correspondingly higher amperages. Lowering arc current from 50 to 42 amperes gives 16% power saving but 32% light loss.

To offset the 24% decrease in reflectivity assumed for an unprotected mirror at the end of twelve months, the arc current would have to be increased about 12%. If the minimum recommended arc current, 42 amperes, gives satisfactory screen light with a new mirror, 47 amperes would be needed to give the same amount of screen light at the end of one year. Since this carbon trim cannot exceed 50 amperes the tables are worked out on basis of start at 42 amperes. When arc is operated in excess of this, carbon and current figures in the tables will be proportionately increased. Assuming 300 hours burning per month, mirror depreciation then would cost:

	@ 3¢ KwHr	@ 4¢ KwHr	@ 5¢ KwHr
Increase in power consumption	$14.70	$19.60	$24.50
Increase in carbon consumption	35.20	35.20	35.20
Annual mirror replacement	40.00	40.00	40.00
Annual Cost	$89.90	$94.80	$99.70
Average Monthly Cost	7.49	7.90	8.31

Operating with a glass mirror guard replaced every three months, the initial arc current required to offset the 8% loss of efficiency caused by a new guard would be 43.7 compared to 42 amperes. The cost:

	@ 3¢ KwHr	@ 4¢ KwHr	@ 5¢ KwHr
Increase in power consumption	$13.60	$18.10	$22.60
Increase in carbon consumption	32.60	32.60	32.60
Annual mirror shield replacement	32.00	32.00	32.00
Annual Cost	$78.20	$82.70	$87.20
Average Monthly Cost	6.52	6.89	7.27

Power and carbon costs are based on the data given in a table presented with an earlier article in this series [July 22d issue] for the 7 x 6-mm. "Suprex" trim.

By a similar method of calculation, the cost of mirror guard depreciation, when replaced every four months, would prove to be as follows:

	@ 3¢ KwHr	@ 4¢ KwHr	@ 5¢ KwHr
Increase in power consumption	$14.80	$19.70	$24.60
Increase in carbon consumption	35.60	35.60	35.60
Annual mirror shield replacement	24.00	24.00	24.00
Annual Cost	$74.40	$79.30	$84.20
Average Monthly Cost	6.20	6.61	7.02

Replacement of the mirror guard every six months would entail:

	@ 3¢ KwHr	@ 4¢ KwHr	@ 5¢ KwHr
Increase in power consumption	$17.30	$23.00	$28.70
Increase in carbon consumption	41.50	41.50	41.50
Annual mirror shield replacement	16.00	16.00	16.00
Annual Cost	$74.80	$80.50	$86.20
Average Monthly Cost	6.23	6.71	7.18

The Cyclex PROJECTOR LAMP

BEFORE the advent of Cyclex it was considered impossible to obtain the best of projection without a substantial increase in the cost of operation. Never before was the excellence of projection and economy closely associated. The numerous installations of Cyclex in all parts of the United States during the past few months have proven that, without a doubt, Cyclex produces the finest projection, and at the same time effects a substantial saving over the operating cost of old Low Intensity type of projection.

Proven facts about Cyclex

- Produces pure white light.
- Operates at less cost than Low Intensity.
- Projects a steady light upon the screen.
- Utilizes the light produced by both carbons (therefore more light output with less power input).
- One Power unit replaces generator or two rectifiers.
- The most dependable power source ever developed for motion picture projection.

The following tabulation gives a comparison of annual cost figures:

	@ 3¢ KwHr	@ 4¢ KwHr	@ 5¢ KwHr
Unprotected mirror....	$89.90	$94.80	$99.70
Mirror guard replaced every three months..	78.20	82.70	87.20
Mirror guard replaced every four months..	74.40	79.30	84.20
Mirror guard replaced every six months....	74.80	80.50	86.20

The difference in cost of offsetting mirror depreciation by increase of arc current and various intervals of mirror shield replacement, does not vary over a wide range for the four methods described. The indication is, however, that the use of mirror guards, replaced every four months, is the most economical practice. From the owner's standpoint, the expenditure of $8 three times a year to protect the mirror is preferable to spending $40 a year for new mirrors.

What Can Be Done About It

Chart C shows the percentage of current increase at the arc required to maintain the screen light at a level to equal the original mirror reflectivity. Note particularly that the current increase on unprotected mirrors ranges from zero to 12%, whereas with the mirror guard replaced every four months, it is from 4% to 8% annually. There are a number of courses open to the exhibitor and projectionist, which may be summarized as follows:

1. Protect mirror for longer period after striking arc.
2. Make replacements of mirrors at intervals of at least eight months (1,200 hours use). It is not unusual to find some in use two years or more without attention.
3. Resort to some method of arresting deterioration of mirror, such as use of mirror guard.
4. Step up arc amperage (which cannot be done if theatre is operating at upper limits of particular trim).
5. Permit deterioration to continue and become steadily worse.
6. Increase carbon size.
7. Install arc lamps of higher intensity, which means scrapping present equipment.

It is not to be understood that the preceding data provide a sure cure for screen light defects, since there are other factors. It is intended to bring attention to one of the important elements of operating over-

Gentlemen:

We thought you might be interested in learning about the success we have been enjoying with your HS metal reflectors.

In our Sussex Theatre reflectors were quite a problem because of the unusual angle of projection and two years ago we installed a pair of your reflectors in that house. Today these reflectors are giving the same excellent service that they did when first installed. There is not a pit mark on them and they have not depreciated in any way.

Naturally, after giving your product this test, we are installing your reflectors in our theatres as fast as we have occasion to discard the old type reflectors. We are already using your refelectors in six of the ten theatres that the writer operates for this and other companies.

Enclosed please find pictures of the houses. The pictures that are marked are the theatres now using HS reflectors. (The picture in the upper left corner is of my first theatre which, of course, no longer operates.)

We wish you continued success.

Very truly yours,

COMMENT ON PROJECTION AFFAIRS

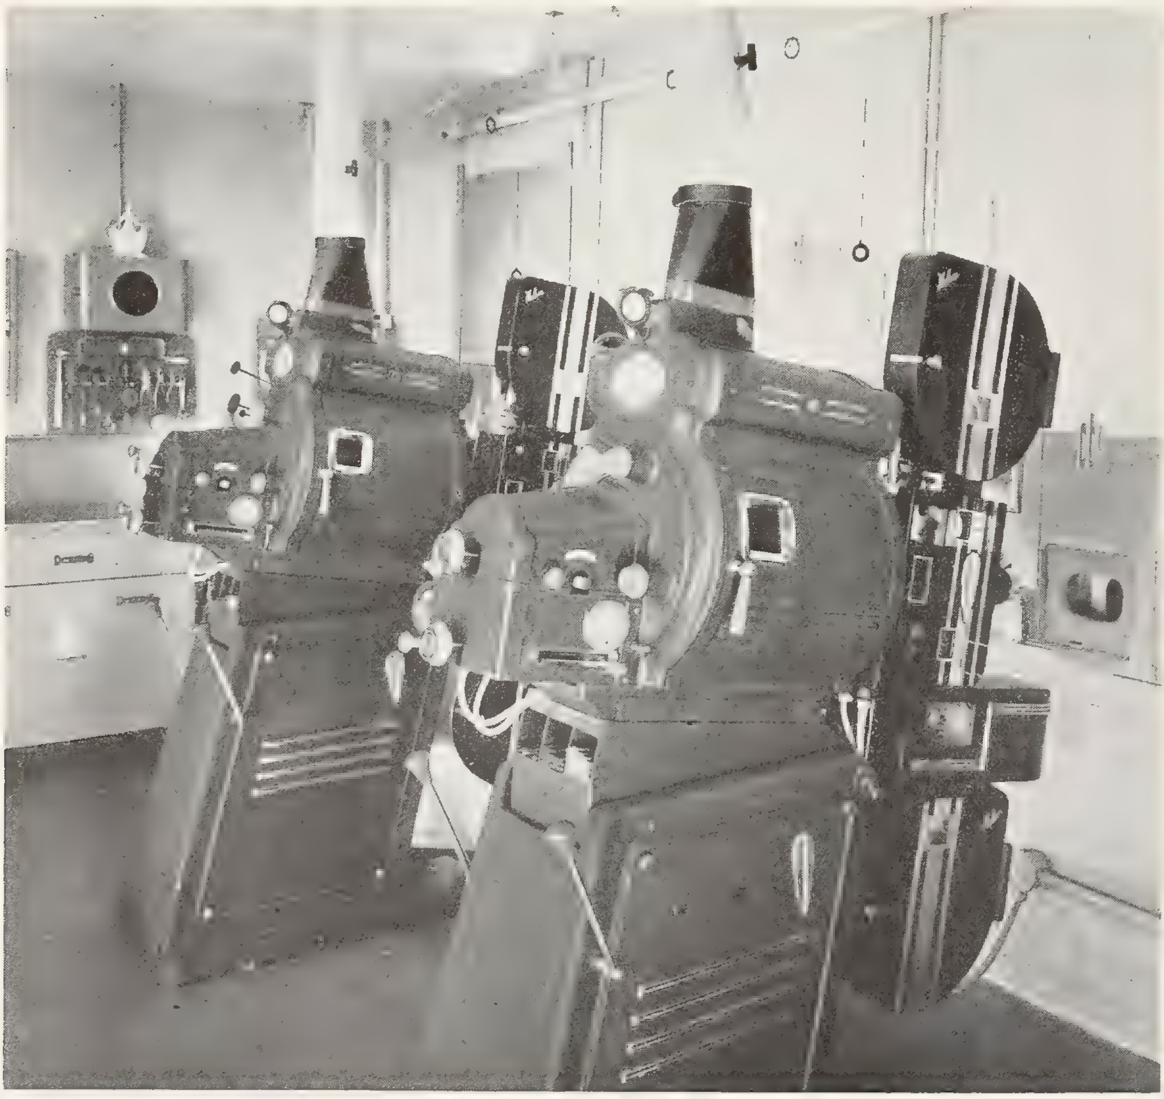
and answers to inquiries . . . By F. H. RICHARDSON

WHY THERE SHOULD BE A MAN BESIDE THE WORKING PROJECTOR

AT A RECENT meeting of the Projection Practice Committee of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, the question of danger in having a projector working without a man at its side, was discussed at considerable length. While the official acts of the committee may not be published elsewhere than in the SMPE Journal, it may be said here that it was plainly evident most of the committee membership present believed that in very many projection rooms, projectors are permitted to operate with no one immediately in charge; that is to say, it was the general opinion, resulting from information received, that save in exceptional cases, no special attention is paid to the advisability of having a man immediately beside the working projector, ready for instant action in any emergency, or to correct a fault in either the light source or the projector.

Many of the committee members present clearly showed their viewpoint to be that the duty of one of the men in the two-man rooms is to be immediately beside the working projector every moment it is in operation, and as much as possible in one-man rooms.

Further, it was very evidently the opinion of a number of the members that absence from the working projector, except when some emergency compelled such absence, was the most important reason so many theatres reverted to the one-man room; that in the very nature of things, when exhibitors or theatre managers entered the two-man projection room and time after time found no one in charge of the working projector, the natural reaction was to ask, "Why pay two projectionists? Evidently the working projector requires no attention while it is in operation. One man can give it all necessary service while it is idle. Why then employ the second man?"



View of the projection room of the Interstate circuit's new Alabama theatre in Houston, Tex., showing its installation of Brenkert projectors, on Brenkert base, and equipped with Brenkert Enarc lamps and Nelson magazines. This installation was made by the Southwestern Theatre Equipment Company of Houston. The sound system is RCA Photophone. The Alabama seats 1,100.

This, of course, is the wrong attitude. Obviously, from every point of view, a projectionist stationed immediately beside a working projector is good practice. A powerful light surce is pouring light and heat upon a highly inflammable substance, with an audience of hundreds present. To let it be unattended is to ask for trouble.

Several opinions were expressed that to permit a projector to operate unattended is to invite performance faults and perhaps costly repairs.

It was suggested that yet again I discuss the matter in my Comment, in an attempt further to impress upon men in theatre projection the utter folly of such lax performance; that aside from adding to the fire hazard, it also adds to the possibility for extended periods of screen image faults that would be immediately corrected were a projectionist beside the projector.

More than this, I hereby indulge in a bit of warning: Unless one man in two-man rooms remain constantly at his post beside the working projector, except when some emergency compels his temporary presence elsewhere, there will be additional one-man rooms in plenty!

A UNIQUE PLAN OF "PAY AS YOU ERR"

STUART NOLAN, projectionist of the Flyn theatre in Burlington, Vt., presents a unique plan which may have considerable value in projection rooms in which more than one projectionist is employed. Friend Nolan writes:

"This outburst is prompted by Projectionist Marion Stout's letter, appearing in your Comment in the November 11th issue of BETTER THEATRES. Mr. Stout, an Alaska man, commended your proposal that projection of the name of the projectionist on the screen at the beginning of each show would cause him to feel added responsibility and to exert greater care to avoid faults.

"Whether or no I agree with this idea matters not. The plan has one weakness that makes its practical value very questionable; namely, the powers-that-be will not adopt it at this time, if ever. However, it would be unseemly to upset the argument unless I feel able to offer some reasonable substitute, which I now propose to do.

"The plan is short, easily understood and, here at least, has worked out so well, after a somewhat extended trial, that nothing has been noticed by our audiences that could be translated into a preventable fault in the projection room. The plan is as follows:

This is a projection room in a key house. Three projectionists are employed, each working alone. This means one regular man, who happens to be myself, and two relief men for continuous days, etc. We have a box in the room into which each man must pay 10c per month, in addition to which each man is in honor bound to pay a thin dime each time he makes an error, regardless of whether or no it is visible to the audience.

"The fund runs for a designated period, at the end of which time it is awarded to that one having made the least number of errors. The box is divided into a compartment for each man and is sealed. Our present box expires the day before Christmas, at which time one of us will receive a bit of extra coin because he has been alert."

Of course, such a plan necessarily is dependent for its success upon the honesty of each participant therein, but one would hardly believe any man would be "small" enough to "welch" on paying in his dime. Nolan says it positively has worked in the Flyn theatre. At least a trial would cost nothing except the making of a box with suitable compartments and slots—a cigar box, for example—and an occasional dime in penalty for carelessness.

While it is quite true that the plan of screening the name of the man in charge of projection has not been generally adopted, probably because of its small cost in film, I must insist that were it put into effect the beneficial results would far more than outweigh its cost. Moreover, I hold that the projectionist is justly entitled to have that bit of spotlight.

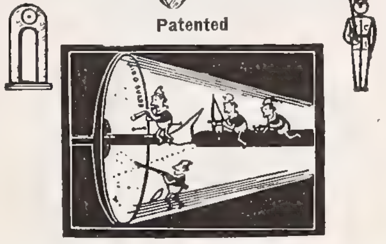
DEVICE FOR MEASURING APERTURE TENSION

WILBUR FLAHERTY, Ft. Dodge, Ia., projectionist has sent a description of an instrument which he has devised to measure aperture tension. In a letter accompanying diagrams, he says:

"The scale is in the shape of a watch, about 2 or 3 inches in diameter; 1 is the pointer mounted on shaft 2, which extends through the case 3, and has a small knob or wheel (7) on the other end of shaft 2. Numeral 5 indicates a pinion or gear running free on shaft 2, and engaging the teeth on rack 9; 6 is a clutch disc engaging the face of pinion 5, and keyed to shaft 2. The lower end of the rack frame extends downward to its end (14). A spring (compression) is keyed to 9 at 13. This is the spring which measures the pressure of the pads. A small spring (8), weaker than spring 10, urges 2 and 7 to the left; 16 is a yoke with an oblong hole or slot which just fits over the hub on 6. Spring 10 urges the

"MIR-O-GUARDS" Yield Screen Illumination Profits Through Replacements and Cash Profits Through Mirror Life Extension

MIR-O-GUARD
Patented



"MIR-O-GUARDS" protect reflectors against pitting, unavoidable with most carbons especially of Suprex and similar type.

"MIR-O-GUARDS" prevent fumes, lampblack and other carbon combustion products from reaching reflector proper, and moderate all fluctuations in temperature, thereby minimizing danger of breakage or cracking.

"MIR-O-GUARDS" enable silver of reflecting surface of mirror to retain original brilliancy, color and strength indefinitely, and reflectors last for years because shielded from heat.

"MIR-O-GUARDS" low cost enables theatres to stock quantities and replace them whenever ultimate deterioration visibly influences light on screen.

"MIR-O-GUARDS" were thoroughly tested by Projection Practice Committee of Society of Motion Picture Engineers. . . . The Committee discovered "that the focus was just as good with or without the guard. The loss of light was negligible; we couldn't measure it.

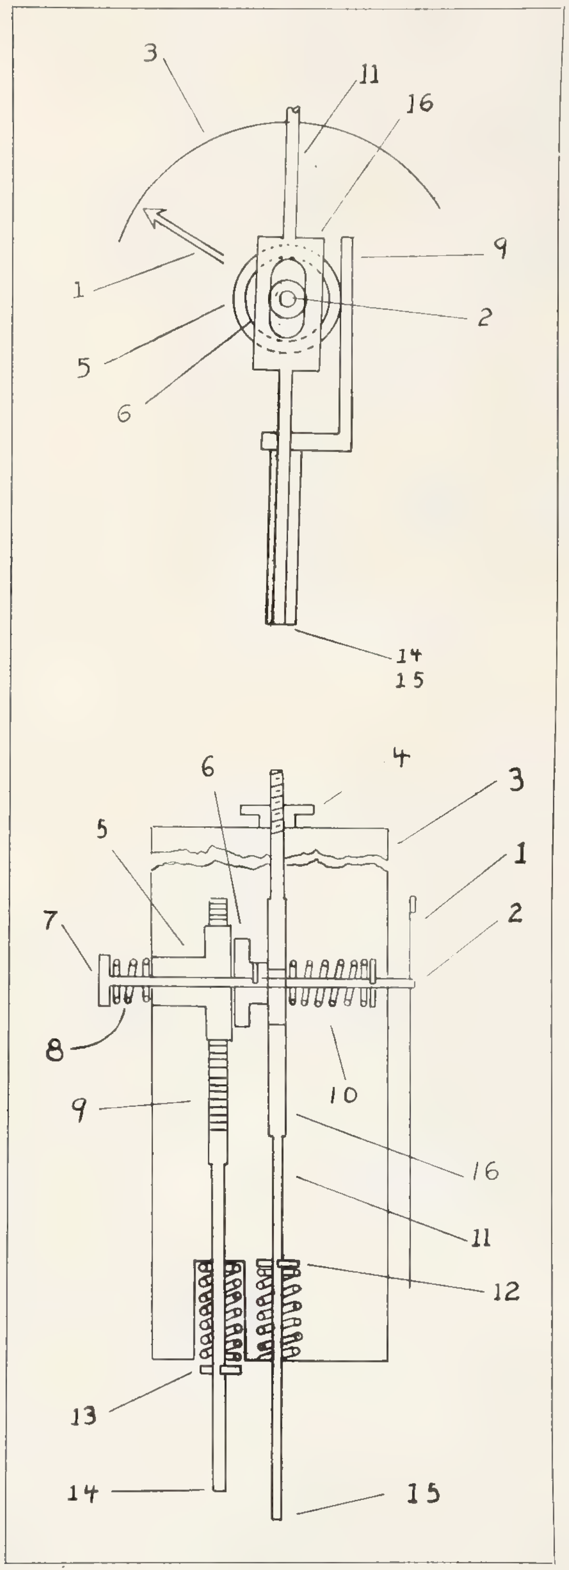
yoke 16 up against and over hub on 6; 16 extends upward at 11 and is threaded to receive nut 4. Yoke extends downward to point 15, and has spring (tension) keyed to it at 12. This spring has only enough pull to return 11 and 16 back to position; 11 and 16 will slide upward, with pressure applied to 15; 14 will also move upward with pressure applied to 14. An adjusting nut (4) governs the amount of upward motion of 16 and 11 necessary before hub of 6 will slide into slot and thus disengage clutch action of 5 and 6. When 14 and 9 are moved upward, the rack turns pinion 5 and shaft 2. Thus pointer 1 assumes a position in proportion to pressure applied to, and motion of, 14 and 9.



"To use the scale, remove the film trap door from the projector and lay it on a table with the pads upward. Hold the scale in a vertical position and place point 14 on the pad, over the spot where pad spring engages the pad on its lower side. When placed in this position, point 15 will rest on the face of the film trap door. Push downward on the scale (using care to see that the fingers do not interfere with the motion of nut 4 and shaft 11 upward) until a snap will be heard. This snap will be the clutch disengaging. Look at the pointer (1) and read directly on the face of the scale the grams (or units) necessary to move pad downward a predetermined distance. This reading will tell how hard the pads are pressing on the film in the gate.

"To reset the scale, pull wheel 7 to the left and turn the pointer back to zero. This will allow 16 to slide down to its original position.

"When the scale is in zero position, 6 is engaged with 5, and any rotation of 5 is transmitted to 6, 2 and 1. When 16 moves upward far enough, hub of 6 will slide into slot in 16, and the stronger spring 10 will pull 6 to the right, freeing the clutch and preventing rotation of 2."

While I have not had opportunity to test this device, I recommend that projectionists correspond with Brother Flaherty if further information is desired. He adds, "Anyone can use it, and the results obtained from the reading will be accurate." Like the rat hole Abe Lincoln spoke of, it will bear looking into.

A CURIOUS CASE OF INTERMITTENT FLICKER

M. JACKSON of the Strand theatre in Alexander City, Ala., writes, "We have read your articles for a number of years and now ask your help on a problem we seem unable to solve. Using Strong lamp (low-intensity) served by two bulb rectifiers, pulling 30 amperes, we have always been troubled by a slight rectifier flicker; not bad, but a definite flicker nevertheless.

"Our power is from a large station, but is distributed through a locally controlled plant. There are several mills here and the voltage fluctuates badly. During matinees, when the mills are in full operation, the light becomes more or less amber, with unsatisfactory results. At night when the mills are closed down it is white and quite all right, also, insofar as brightness is concerned.

"A short while since we purchased, on approval, two rotating shutters, one for each projector. They are two-blade affairs, the master blade being perforated with many small-diameter holes, the other blade containing a blue gelatin filler. Results were astonishing. Screen illumination was increased even more than the 27% the makers of the shutter claimed. Even in afternoons it was satisfactory, closely resembling high-intensity.

"But—and here is the real problem—a strange, intermittent flicker appeared upon the installation of these shutters. Thirty times each minute there is decidedly objectionable flicker. One second it appears, the next there is none, and so on ad infinitum. Were it present steadily we might consider installing a generator to eliminate it. As it is we do not know what to do. We have discarded the shutters spoken of, but dislike giving up their advantages if there is any way they may be retained."

Something is badly overloaded in the afternoons. It seems improbable it would be in the circuit supplying your local station, though even that is of course possible. It may be the local power distribution station main transformer, though that, too, is unlikely. We therefore conclude the point of overload probably lies between the local station transformer and your theatre. May be circuit wires or may be a transformer. At any rate you have every possible right to demand that the point of overload be located by local station men, which they may easily and quickly do merely by using a suitable voltmeter, and that the fault be promptly remedied. The power your contract calls for is not being delivered.

As to the shutter, it is noted you had a slight flicker before, which you attributed to the rectifier, which could hardly be possible if you have a double action rectifier and 60-cycle current. I suspect you are being served with low-cycle current, probably 25-cycle, under action of which some cycle flicker might be present. However, it would seem to me the intermittent effect must be due to the fact that the shutter action of the projector gains or losses slightly on the rate of cyclage, so that at one interruption by the master blade it opens the lens while the arc is just at the low point in intermittent action; the next minute it gains or loses slightly—enough to open the lens at the high point.

Try this: During projection, alter projection speed very lightly, which may be done in your case, I believe, by pressing the rim of the flywheel with the thumb. Note the effect. If the flicker disappears or its time changes, you have your answer and a d. c. generator is the answer to the flicker trouble.

As to the light, it would seem satisfactory if the overload trouble were cleared up, or you could install high-intensity, which probably would be the best procedure, anyway.

LIGHT FOR COLOR AND FOR BLACK-AND-WHITE

JOHN L. GARRISON of St. Louis, writes, "Colored productions are increasing in both quantity and quality. Recently much argument has arisen regarding the comparative amount of light required for the best results with black-and-white and with colored film. Some able projectionists hold that much more light is necessary for color projection (which seems reasonable to me), whereas other equally capable ones hold otherwise. So I come to you, asking which argument is right.

"May I also ask where I may secure reliable information on projector carbons, their amperage ratings, proper combinations, etc.?"

There are two reliable sources of information concerning carbons—the Bluebook of Projection, and the book "Projector Carbons," issued by the National Carbon Company, Cleveland. The latter is free to any projectionist or theatre owner or manager.

Black-and-white films today demand approximately 15 foot-candles at screen center for best results in theatres having long viewing distance, with this reduced as viewing distances become less. As for color films, I have found (during researches made awhile back) that Technicolor film is so prepared that best results may be expected only when each square foot of screen surface has 10 foot-candles of light incident upon it. If it has more, some of the color will be "washed" out; if it has less, the color will lose in beauty, tending to become "muddy."

If there are 14.4 foot-candles at the center, illumination will average about ten.

Economical Maintenance Of "Suprex" Arc Mirrors

head, one that in the case of circuit operation, will in the aggregate amount to substantial sums of money paid out for mirror depreciation and excess carbons and current, as well as for increased wear and tear on machinery.

The tables and examples apply to glass mirrors and operating conditions as encountered with "Simplified High-Intensity Carbons." We must not overlook the fact that losses will occur, though in smaller measure, in connection with operation of hi-lo and low-intensity arcs. Heat plays havoc with these, rather than pitting. Protection of the reflector mirror on these arcs is not so important, especially with low-intensity, which use a small mirror. Periodic tests will indicate the time to replace because of scorching, blistering or peeling.

When sound fails, or projection routine is definitely interrupted, the theatre manager as a general rule takes quick action to resume performance and avoid necessity of paying out refunds. Luckily, the conditions described herein will not cause an actual interruption; however, no one is able to estimate the losses to this industry caused by patrons remaining away from theatres because of unsatisfactory performance resulting from insufficient screen illumination. Exhibitors who desire to remain in business should take a little time from booking and other problems to investigate the causes. Every projectionist is anxious to maintain a high standard of projection quality. It is up to theatre managers and supervisors to promote a spirit of co-operation in the handling of these technical problems to the benefit of the industry in general, and for their own best interests in particular.

[The author is unusually well fitted to deal with this subject. Mr. Behr was formerly associated with the Paramount theatre organization as a specialist in power cost adjustment, and he is now in charge of projection for the Wilmer & Vincent circuit.]

THE KEYSTONE OF YOUR FUTURE

MOTION PICTURE HERALD

MARTIN QUIGLEY, Editor-in-Chief and Publisher

Vol. 137, No. 11

December 16, 1939

WHITHER?

THE destiny of the motion picture industry, as today constituted, was this week tossed into the crucible of experiment with the presentation of "Gone with the Wind" in Atlanta.

While this issue of Motion Picture Herald is in transit, the world, or what is left of it, will be reading, hearing of the impact of the most pretentious, most ambitious, production of the art upon an audience indigenous to the mise en scène.

More immediately important than what the public thinks about it will be what the motion picture industry thinks the public thinks.

Atlanta and Georgia and the South are, as we know at the moment, in such an emotional dither as has not been had since the firing on Ft. Sumter. Superficial and immediate manifestations will all be plus.

Basic, and important for a long while, will be the import of what happens in the consciousness of the whole exhibition mechanism, whether it be producer controlled or independent.

Percentages, playing time, prices and all policies are at stake.

Less immediately, but exactly, the autonomy of exhibition, if there is any, is at stake, too.

For quite a while Hollywood has been calling the turn, telling, and why. Hollywood got the power, the say, by reason of having the creative outlook and no one to contradict but some bookkeepers.

All of today's attention in both the art and the industry is in the high white heat of competition at the top for the big and the grandiose.

Creeping, creeping, creeping come little fellows with little pictures in 16 mm. Areas vacated by the splendid march of the movies upward and onward from their nickelodeon dawn will yet be occupied by lesser entertainment at a price.

Today's impending turning point reminds one of the time when the issue was "program" vs. "feature," then it became "special" vs. "program feature," and more recently "A" vs. "B." Now it is apparently to be "Super-stupendous" vs. merely "Colossal."

The customers are, meanwhile, still buying movies.

ABOUT DIRT

LAST week in the newspages of Motion Picture Herald we presented certain observations of Mr. Damon Runyon from his syndicated column, by special permission of the copyright owners, in which he remarked on the propriety and decency of the newspapers and the motion picture—as compared with the stage, mostly the New York stage, also as compared with the current state of the novel.

In the course of his most pointed remarks Mr. Runyon chided the dramatic critics for their seeming indifference and inattention in their reviews—they the while discreetly not quoting the "hot" lines. Mr. Runyon, and with considerable merit, seemed to feel that the dramatic critics of the stage ought to get indignant in behalf of common decency.

It just so chances, the stratifications and special states of the newspaper industry being what they are, that almost never does an un-Hearst paper pay any visible attention to what is said in a Hearst paper. Reasons for that are outside our current discussion, but anyway the only response came from Mr. John Anderson, dramatic critic of the New York Journal and American.

Mr. Anderson's answer, made with charming candour and his decided facility, was in effect: "It's no use."

NOW let Mr. Runyon take over, as he says: "Nonetheless, we are inclined to think that if the weight of influence that slugged the movies a few years ago ever happens to hit the stage head-on, it may knock even Mr. Shakespeare bowlegged. We refer to the millions of organized church people of the United States, still the dominating factor in this country, no matter what you hear to the contrary."

Mr. Runyon attributes the escape of the stage from such attentions from the cause of common decency to the fact that "the stage nowadays is confined to a small area and a comparatively small audience . . ."

Showmen of the motion picture will be a-remembering much, and among other phenomena the rise and decline of Miss Mae West—whose career proves a case for Mr. Anderson, for Mr. Runyon, and for the motion picture.

Currently there are experimentations, for the screen, in sight with material of alleged social import, one taken from printed page, another from the stage. Both have sold to what Mr. Runyon mentions as "small area" and to "a comparatively small audience." Both may be inspirations for motion pictures in rather another category, translations in terms of decency for fame won with indecency. That would be, will be if, legerdemain.

We shall be seeing.

One of Mr. Runyon's sharper lines, speaking of the stage, was: "You would think that the producers would exercise caution as a matter of self protection."

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS

ABRUPTLY in the full flight of life, Mr. Douglas Fairbanks, who loved life so well and so thoroughly lived it, has left it. The end came unexpectedly, early Tuesday, a quick curtain on a career which was so specially and typically of the motion picture.

Mr. Fairbanks is to be remembered ever in the annals of the screen alike for his pictures and for his contributions of a blithe spirit, a manner of working that was not quite nonchalant but dashing, assured and merry. His love of work and his love of play were quite akin, no little interwoven. Unlike the many there were limits to his interest in money and his concern about it. He had a notion of enough.

He played his part until the lights were struck. He did not stay for fading aftermaths or vain pursuits of former glories. The most of what the world has to remember him by is cheerful.

This Week in the News

"WIND"

THE COST SHEET of labor and war continues the subject of producer and distributor attentions; headlines again tell of trust suits and extended playing time, of exhibitors' repeated demands for a "new shake" in trade practices and for a stoppage of Hollywood stars' air appearances; trade headlines continue, too, to report on block booking and Senator Matthew Neely, Allied States, Congress and the concern of some important corporate managers over what might happen to block booking in Congress, come this January.

These pages and those following duly record the aforementioned matters of motion picture. The big news of the week, however, concerned a single motion picture—"Gone with the Wind," which, Friday evening, is to be seen by the public for the very first time, at a ten-dollar-a-seat opening at Loew's Grand theatre, Atlanta. This is the "Wind" distributor's key house in the South of the picture's setting, the original setting coming to life again Friday in the fabrication of a replica of an old Southern mansion to cover the front of the theatre, in the Civil War days, atmospheric trimmings put up about the town, in Metro's transportation from Hollywood to Atlanta of actual "Wind" studio sets and props.

The story of the arrival of "Gone with the Wind," after four years of promises, preparation and production is laid out in detail, starting on page 23. For the picture's exhibitor customers, committed and potential, a Showman's Review of the $4,500,000 production, selling to exhibitors at 70 per cent of the house gross, appears on page 24.

Important "world premiere" attention also is to be received by Max Fleischer's feature color cartoon, "Gulliver's Travels," Paramount, on Monday evening in Miami. The story of "Gulliver" appears on page 23; a Showman's Review is on page 25.

"AP" reviews "Wind"

NEVER—that is, hardly ever—does the august Associated Press encourage its writers to expressions of opinion. Now and then on special provocation it is permitted. One of the occasions was the Hollywood previewing of "Gone with the Wind", when 900 persons of the press on Tuesday saw 220 minutes of it at the Four Star theatre. Thereupon the "AP" served its 1,400 papers with a wired review, saying:

> "Gone With the Wind," Margaret Mitchell's best seller of the pre-war South, was previewed today.
> For nearly four hours—the longest screening in film history—the critical audience sat and laughed, wept and clenched its collective hands in anger while a cast of superb actors gave superb performances. Vivien Leigh carried one of the most difficult roles the screen has ever handed a performer with utmost credit. She was in virtually every scene.
> Clark Gable gave what may be the best performance of his career. Olivia De Havilland, Leslie Howard, Thomas Mitchell and others were excellent.
> The closest any one came to stealing the show from the fiery Scarlett was the performance of Hattie MacDaniel, the buxom Negro mammy. She had many fine scenes and made the best of them. Ernest Haller's Technicolor photography was as fine as any Hollywood has seen.
> Only drawback to the picture is its length. Most of the audience was distinctly groggy when it was over, but even that seems unimportant when entertainment is as splendid as this.

Weekly J. R. Item

JAMES ROOSEVELT is expected to make an announcement of his considerably discussed, and sometimes denied, new deal in the films, in the course of a few days. Indications are that it will be production, but "not features."

It is to be recalled that while he was in New York recently he ultimately said that he was "on a leave of absence," to indicate that he was not charging the Goldwyn payroll for his trip and time; also that Fred Storm, inducted to the Goldwyn publicity organization from Washington, under Roosevelt auspices, was in town for the while, officially indicated to be tending to Goldwyn publicity projects. About a week ago he left the movies to join the Stern papers in Philadelphia and was succeeded by Edwin C. Stein, recently managing editor of Paul Block's Newark Star Eagle and one time with the New York American. Mr. Stein in his newspaper connections wrote about the screen. He is in New York now working "Raffles."

Meanwhile the Associated Press solemnly conveyed, a week ago, that Mr. Roosevelt "was elevated to the presidency of the Samuel Goldwyn Studio Company, today (Friday). He retains his post as vice-president of Samuel Goldwyn Productions, Inc."

In New York Lynn Farnol, public relations, United Artists, offered a bet of a bottle of Clicquot against seats for "Gone with the Wind" that Mr. Roosevelt was "not leaving." Results later.

Meanwhile out in Hollywood some "after the Storm" readjustments were taking place. John Peere Miles, who had been replaced by Mr. Storm replaced him again as studio publicity director for Goldwyn, and Jerry Dale who departed when Mr. Storm blew in, returned as Mr. Miles assistant. Status quo ante resumes.

Time Watches

THE MARCH OF TIME editors have been watching "The Ramparts We Watch" into the "dawn's early light." First feature length film made by the Time-Life-Fortune - March - of - Time - Henry R. Luce group has been "all shot" but is "still being edited behind tightly locked doors." No special staff is handling the film, which will be released through RKO, but the regular production staff men do the editing in the wee small hours, after their work on the monthly "March of Time" issue has been completed.

"The Ramparts We Watch" is included in the RKO release schedule, but no date has been determined yet. Thousands of feet of film has been shot around New London, Conn.

The editors are building their documentary feature on their interpretation of the book "Ramparts We Watch," by Major George Fielding Eliot. The book discussed the problems of national defense, and the general world unrest contributed to interest in the book. The publisher, Reynal & Hitchcock, declined to give the number of copies that had been printed.

The producers hope that "The Ramparts We Watch" is to be something of a "Gone with the Wind" in documentaries. Any way it will be the longest and most expensive documentary film ever made.

Canada's war effort will be pictured "for millions" on this continent and overseas in a March of Time half-hour film which is being prepared in Canada. A director of the producer is known to have been in Ottawa conferring with the Canadian Film Board and the project has advanced so far that camera crews are already on the job photographing men in action in the army, navy and air forces, and obtaining pictorial records of what is being done in the many plants engaged in war production.

Another feature of this picture is the presentation of those in the "front line" of Canada's defensive forces, the Dominion's important economic weapons and its resources.

A $200,000 Present

REVISED ESTIMATES on Wednesday put a new light on the cost of the Hollywood studio union wage increases.

The 10 per cent wage increase granted December 5th to three internationals in the studio basic agreement will cost producers approximately $200,000 before Christmas in back pay, it was disclosed on Wednesday. The pay raise was made retroactive to August 25th.

Gratitude

PAUL MUNI, interviewed in Boston, back on the stage in "Key Largo" after seven years of cinema, has been quoted by the Associated Press as saying that "motion picture films were, to a considerable extent, 'tripe'." Also that "right now high class pictures virtually have to be subsidized, just like a symphony orchestra."

"Key Largo," now at the Ethel Barrymore theatre in New York, appears a success, but, if one is to judge by the reviews, an author's success, belonging to Maxwell Anderson, with Mr. Muni in the assisting position.

Motion picture persons were inclined to be mindful that Mr. Muni is today considerably elevated on a pedestal erected by the screen. He is today not alone the product of his own genius but also in part the product of such contributors as Perc Westmore, a considerable number of most able directors, some able screen writers, and the lavish support of such factors as Warner Brothers and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Maybe Mr. Muni deems that none of his pictures were "tripe," but there is one critic extant who considers that Luise Rainer saved one big instance.

Mr. Muni's Boston utterance suggests he is not as good at the ad lib as when reading lines written for him. Or did he?

$35,000 for Free

MOTION PICTURE theatre owners will note that Miss Shirley Temple, the ten-year-eight-months old star who is so happily familiar to their box offices, will, come Christmas Eve, "succumb," after six years, to the persistent lurings of radio broadcasters and advertisers and go on the air as a "guest" performer, the very last of Hollywood's "big names" so to break down.

Practically everyone in Hollywood of active talent importance broadcasts and rebroadcasts week after week for soap suds and salt, pineapples and pipes, and, of course, nice "fat" fees. None of that for Shirley, however. She'll broadcast for oil and sweet charity.

Twentieth Century-Fox sales officials who sell Shirley's motion pictures from over Tenth Avenue way in New York's Hell's Kitchen, will tell you that Shirley, or, at least, her mother and dad, who keep a pretty strict eye on their daughter's commercializations, have turned down an offer, described by the same Fox officials as "bona fide," for a payment of $35,000 to her for a single sponsored radio appearance—sponsor unnamed—also on Christmas Eve. Fox calculates that there have been "hundreds of thousands" in offers turned down by the Temples as made by air advertisers for the child star's radio program services in the six years she has been making feature pictures, almost always for Fox.

Now, however, she will go to the air, for Gulf Oil, which sponsors the "Gulf Screen Guild Theatre," the entire talent proceeds from which are turned over by the numerous guest film stars to the Screen Actors Guild, for the aid of needy Hollywood actors —the fund getting $10,000 every week from oil.

Shirley will make her debut on the air as a singer. Maurice Maeterlinck's "The Blue Bird," children's story, will be her vehicle. Mr. Maeterlinck later will send shortwave greetings to Shirley, and CBS networks listeners, from his home in Belgium. Fox is to produce a "Blue Bird" motion picture.

Meanwhile motion picture theatre owners are becoming more and more vociferous in their condemnations of film stars' sponsored air appearances. Ray Branch, Michigan exhibitor leader, this week proposed an "open declaration of war" against the practice, as reported on page 57, and Harry Brandt, head of New York's ITOA, who frequently has sounded off on the subject, also this week said (on page 57) that he had promises from owners of 10,000 theatres to boycott pictures of stars who insist upon continuing with air engagements.

How Much Woo?

MOTION PICTURES have been attacked for many and many a reason—but never for the lack of romance.

Radio, aspiring competitor, was criticized this week by 600 Westchester clubwomen for too much romance. According to the women, who attended a New Rochelle Woman's Club Forum, the excess of woo on the airwaves is an "insult to intelligent women." They voted, unanimously, to urge the radio to broadcast more programs on home-making, on child training.

Mrs. Ida Bailey Allen, "home economist," told the clubwomen that she had been told by radio executives and program sponsors that "American women are not interested in hearing about home-making."

Bioff, Kaplan, and Nick

WILLIAM ("WILLIE") BIOFF, studio union leader, Samuel ("Sam") Kaplan, former "czar" in New York projectionists' circles, and John P. ("Big") Nick, deposed head of the St. Louis projectionists, this week regained their "news" importance.

Chicago authorities apparently having failed to press extradition on a 17-year-old charge against Mr. Bioff, he was released from arrest, in Los Angeles, on Tuesday, by Municipal Judge Wilbur C. Curtis, after several weeks on $1,000 bail. The leader of the coast unions of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and other American Federation of Labor studio unions had been arrested on November 24th, on a telegraphic warrant from Chicago authorities, who discovered, under the written proddings of syndicated columnist Westbrook Pegler, that Mr. Bioff had failed to finish a Chicago jail sentence, after freedom on an unsuccessful appeal.

Thomas J. Courtney, state's attorney, said in Chicago Tuesday night that the case against Mr. Bioff was pending before Illinois Governor Henry Horner, and that hearing for an application on an extradition warrant was scheduled for December 19th.

In New York, Samuel Kaplan, once the president of the country's largest projectionists' union, the New York Local 306, of the IATSE—a man removed from office in 1932, a server of six months in jail for coercing members, and barred from holding office for five years—this week was campaigning for a position on the union's executive board. Joseph Basson and Michael Berkovitz are running for president. Elections are on December 27th. Mr. Kaplan may run for president at the next election, in two years.

For the third time, attempts to try John P. Nick, former head of the St. Louis projectionists' Local 143, have ended in a mistrial. Mr. Nick's third trial for extortion of $10,000 from the city's theatre owners ended Monday, a few hours after opening, when George H. Weber, a venireman, told Judge Robert Aronson that "a stranger" had tried to bribe him into "going easy" on Mr. Nick. Trial was re-scheduled for January 8th.

The introduction was filmed in the Museum in New York where the explorers for many years made their headquarters between treks to far and unknown lands. To be released by Columbia, the picture will be ready for showing at that company's sales convention in January.

OPTIMISTIC. David Rose, head of Paramount production in England, on his way to conferences in Hollywood tells the press in New York that his company plans to continue film production in Britain, and will make "five or six" there this season. Expanding on war conditions, he saw no reason to fear for the future of the industry in England and predicted a return to normal as soon as war time problems can be adjusted.

SIFT EFFECT OF LABOR AND WAR COSTS UPON BUDGETS

Paramount Saying Goodbye to "B" Films; Kent Sees 25 Per Cent Reduction in Production Expenditure Coming

by JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Product—that all-important item to every producer, distributor and exhibitor, today is receiving more attention for this time of year than many and many a season, in the matter of sources and costs, quality and quantity, markets and policies for the season that is to follow.

Both Hollywood and New York are at the moment deep in conversation; the subjects: Labor and war costs and studio budgets; The "Class B" film, should it be eliminated, curtailed?; Reducing production costs—some estimating by 25 per cent—without affecting quantity or quality; Selling plans for 1940-41; Production abroad; Longer runs for longer pictures, etc., etc.

All or any of these matters, as they bear on next year, have in the past two weeks sent more corporate and management chiefs traveling to or from New York and Hollywood for conferences in studio or home office, than at any time on record, at a time when the present season of 1939-40 is but one third spent.

Resulting therefrom this week were expressions from Sidney Kent, that production costs must be cut—at least 25 per cent—without cutting quantity or quality of product; from Nicholas M. Schenck, that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will not trim its product totals, despite foreign losses; from Paramount studio chieftains, that Class "B" features, earmarked as such, will be suspended, with a corresponding cut in total releases; from William Sistrom, speaking for RKO, David Rose, for Paramount, and Robert Kane, for Fox, that their companies will resume production in England, despite the war.

Hollywood's expression of the day: "longer and better playing time" from exhibitors for its pictures, heard frequently ever since Joseph M. Schenck, last September, called for exhibitor aid for lost European markets, was reiterated Monday by Mary Pickford, talking of returning to production for the second time since her starring silent years. Miss Pickford traces the trend of longer pictures and longer playing time back two years to Mr. Disney's "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs."

Miss Pickford, too, is looking for the end of the Class "B's," as reported in an interview with the United Artists co-owner, on page 46.

The three biggest reasons of the day for extended runs, of course, are David Selznick's Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer release of "Gone with the Wind," Max Fleischer's Paramount release of "Gulliver's Travels," and Walt Disney's RKO release of "Pinocchio." More new sales policy and procedure reports on each appear on pages 23 and 29.

The relation of war costs to labor costs and production costs are to be proven by the producers on or about February 15th, when they are to present their case before representatives of 15,000 studio craftsmen in Hollywood. They hope to prove that the 10 per cent wage increases recently granted a dozen unions should be rescinded because of film rental losses and monetary restrictions in the warring European markets.

Product-wise, two things are certain at this time: Circuit sales are in no unfavorable position, despite labor troubles, code troubles, troubles in the Federal Courts; There is no product shortage, nor will there be for some time to come—Motion Picture Herald on December 2nd (page 13) reporting that as of December 1st, 223 features had been completed in the first three months of the season, out of 500 promised for the year; 116 had actually been delivered; 107 were "in the can," ready for release; 41 more were in work.

Kent on Costs

Production costs must be reduced at least 25 per cent, Sidney R. Kent, president of Twentieth Century-Fox, said Friday in New York before leaving for product and policy conferences at Movietone City.

"Present world-wide conditions make it necessary to readjust the whole financial structure of production," he said.

Mr. Kent, however, added that this does not mean that Twentieth Century-Fox will make fewer pictures for 1940-41, or that quality will be lowered. But it does indicate, he said, that expenditures will have to be geared to a reasonable level.

"We can't say now how many pictures we will make or what the budget will be," Mr. Kent offered. "This will depend on future revenues. These factors will be determined during the year. No long-range plans can be made because no one knows what will finally happen to our foreign markets as a result of the war."

In connection with discussions among industry executives regarding the production of "fewer but better" pictures, Mr. Kent said that it does not necessarily follow that a smaller production program results in superior quality. He said he is aware of cases in the past where companies drastically reduced the number of pictures, but turned out inferior product.

Regarding possible salvaging of the industry's trade practice Code he said that Federal Government action had made the majors possible targets for futher prosecution, but that individual action by the companies was feasible and to be desired where it was possible.

Mr. Kent is understood to be studying a plan to call a world-wide 20th Century-Fox sales convention to include all overseas managers, as well as those in U. S. distribution, next year, in the event the European war is still on.

He said that business in England, at last reports, was off between 30 and 40 per cent, and that it was in a precarious position.

Robert Kane, the company's British production chief, arriving in New York Saturday from England, said the company will make a

Film Chiefs Say "No", La Guardia Insists "Yes" on Mayor's N. Y. Production Plan

Mayor LaGuardia's campaign to bring the motion picture studios to New York has just about reached a deadlock, with the major producers saying "No" and certain other interests backing the Mayor with "Yes." Nicholas M. Schenck, president of MGM, after a 20-minute conference with Mayor LaGuardia, denied that Loew's or MGM would cooperate with the plan to bring production to New York. Mr. Schenck termed the visit "just social." But he did say that pictures could be made in the East if suitable subjects were found and "if we needed an artist playing here who wouldn't come to Hollywood, we could use him between matinees." A "tremendous investment and a $20,000,000 studio" in California makes it impossible to make pictures in New York "at this time."

It had been reported that Nelson Rockefeller had "provided" office space in Rockefeller Center to the new LaGuardia sponsored Chamber of Commerce, headed by Clendenin J. Ryan, Jr., former aide to the mayor. Mr. Rockefeller's office issued a formal statement saying he "had no interest in the move to bring film production East."

Howard Hawks, producer for Columbia, said on his arrival in New York that New York had no chance to compete with Hollywood as a motion picture production center. Mr. Hawks said, "Three companies own about 60% of the stages in Hollywood. I don't see how New York could ever become a major producing center unless those three moved here."

Meanwhile Mayor LaGuardia continued to boost his plan. He said, "We have a most ambitious plan that will make Hollywood look sick if we can tempt the producers to come here. We have been in conference with every branch of the industry." The Mayor had one more comment, "And I want to make it clear that even if the industry does come, I shall continue to live with own wife."

King Vidor, Hollywood director, backed the Mayor's plan.

RESUMING PRODUCTION IN ENGLAND

minimum of three pictures in England next year. He said the company had completed its program in England this year and had every intention of resuming production on April 1st.

Mr. Kane said that it was unlikely that the "frozen" money of American distributors in England would be used by them for production, but that the proposed credit bank might make production possible. The credit bank, he said, would be financed by government and private capital.

Mr. Kent while on the coast will also confer on distribution, advertising and publicity plans for "Grapes of Wrath," "The Blue Bird" and other forthcoming Fox product.

The company's product plans for the next season will be delayed until January or February, it is understood.

No Product Cuts for MGM

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer plans to make the same number of pictures next season as they will in this—44 to 52, said Nicholas M. Schenck president of Loew's Inc. as he arrived in Hollywood this week for product and policy discussions with studio chiefs.

"Despite the great losses in the foreign market, we can't let that influence us to the extent that we shall make fewer and cheaper pictures," said Mr. Schenck.

Edwin Aaron, assistant to William F. Rodgers, M-G-M general sales manager, has been appointed "captain" of this year's wind-up sales drive for the company.

Mr. Aaron will leave New York early in February on a two months' tour consulting with district and branch managers.

A bonus plan will be instituted in the distribution department, to enable all employees of exchanges which attain or exceed their quota to participate in cash prizes.

Paramount To Suspend "B's"

Paramount will suspend the making of so-called "in-between" pictures, better known as "B's." The company intends to confine production to "A" films for 1940-41 season. Consequently, Paramount's new program will comprise fewer pictures than usual. The program may be reduced to 45 pictures, from a usual yearly output of 58 to 62.

Paramount's decision came as a result of last week's conference in Hollywood between studio chieftains and eastern executives, including Y. Frank Freeman, Barney Balaban, Russell Holman and Stanton Griffis. Harold H. Hurley, who has been in charge of the "B" product, will be assigned other duties in production.

Paramount will go ahead with production in England—"we will make as many as we possible can"—and it anticipates comparatively slight difficulty in production and distribution, despite the war, David Rose, Paramount's supervisor of production in England, said in New York this week, preparatory to leaving Tuesday night for Hollywood, where he will cast, and obtain technicians, for his coming English pictures. Mr. Rose arrived in New York last week from Europe. He plans to remain in Hollywood until the first week of January; then to sail for England on January 15th, on the Dutch liner, Statendam.

"I think we can make five or six pictures in 1940," Mr. Rose said. "They will be something more than just quota pictures," he declared.

Business is only slightly below "normal" in English theatres, Mr. Rose said. It is upon this condition that the new "Gullivers' Travels" will be released there, he explained. Two prints of the color cartoon feature were to be flown, via Clipper, to England this week. The picture will open at one of Paramount's two West End (London) theatres, the Carlton, or the Plaza.

16 MM. ASSOCIATION DEFENDS ITS MEDIUM

Disputing the claim of exhibitors, that 16 mm. competition is threatening them, and that the competition is conducted sometimes unfairly, the Allied Non-Theatrical Film Association of New York, a unit composed of 16 mm. distributors and dealers, moved this week for a "better understanding between the non-theatrical and theatrical film industries."

Production in England

Warner Brothers is among the first of the American companies resuming production in England. Five feature productions are scheduled for the Teddington studio between now and spring. One of them, "The Briggs Family," is now shooting. A. F. Solomon is in charge of production, succeeding Sam Sax.

RKO, too, will resume production in England early next year with William Sistrom, producer, in charge of production. Mr. Sistrom will fly to England January 2 to prepare for the new production.

Alexander Korda, who arrived in New York from the coast over the week-end, was scheduled to sail Thursday on the Rex for England. He is returning to England to put "Hunting of the U-Boat" into production for London Films, and to finish the scoring of "Thief of Bagdad." He is to return to the U. S. in February with prints of both films.

RKO in Sales Drive

RKO Wednesday announced an annual billings contest, to be known as the "Ned Depinet Drive" and to be launched on January 27th, closing May 10th. Herb MacIntyre, northeastern district manager, has been appointed captain and has been called in from the field to organize the campaign.

The company, this week, announced its feature release schedule through May 10th, listing 25 pictures. "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" is set for December 29th; "The Swiss Family Robinson" for January 26th; "Pinocchio" for February 23rd. Other important film release dates are "Vigil In the Night," February 16th; "The Primrose Path," March 22nd; "My Favorite Wife," April 12th; "A Bill of Divorcement," May 3rd; "Tom Brown's Schooldays," May 10th.

Four divisional sales meetings will be held by Columbia during January, with A. Montague, general sales manager, presiding at all.

The meetings will be devoted to discussions of product scheduled for next release, including "His Girl Friday," "Too Many Husbands," "Tree of Liberty" and others.

The first sessions will be held on January 6-7 in Washington, with Sam Galanty, division manager, heading delegates from Cincinnati, Cleveland, Pittsburgh and Washington branches. Home office executives who will attend include A. Montague, Rube Jackter, Louis Astor, Lou Weinberg and Max Weisfeldt. Mr. Montague and Mr. Jackter will be the only home office representatives to attend the other three meetings.

The second conference will be held in Chicago January 13-14 and will take in the mid-west and central divisions, of which Phil Dunas and Carl Shalit are division managers, respectively. Branches to be represented include Chicago, Detroit, Milwaukee, Des Moines, Minneapolis, Kansas City and St. Louis.

The third meeting is scheduled for January 17-19, in Dallas, for the southern division, which includes Atlanta, Charlotte, Memphis, Oklahoma City and New Orleans. Sam Moscow is in charge of this territory.

The final conference will take place in San Francisco January 27-28. Branches which will be represented, headed by Jerome Safron, division manager, include Denver, Los Angeles, Portland, Salt Lake City San Francisco and Seattle.

Warner Circuit zone managers concluded a meeting Tuesday in the home office in New York with a dinner to Joseph Bernhard, general manager, at the Hotel St. Moritz.

Zone managers who attended included: James Coston, Chicago; Nat Wolf, Cleveland; I. J. Hoffman, New Haven; Don Jacocks, Newark; Moe Silver, Albany; Ted Schlanger, Philadelphia; Harry Kalmine, Pittsburgh; John Payette, Washington; Herb Copelan, Atlantic City, and Howard Waugh, Memphis.

From the home office: Clayton Bond, Ed Hinchy, Leonard Schlesinger, Harry Goldberg, Frank Phelps, Nat Fellman, Abel Vigard, W. Stewart McDonald, Harry Rosenquest, Louis Kaufman, Herman Maier and Frank Cahill.

Warner theatre managers in Chicago will hold their last general meeting of the year with zone manager, James E. Coston, on his return from New York next week.

BRANDT WANTS A MILLION ANTI-NEELY LETTERS, YET SEES BILL'S PASSAGE

New York Exhibitor Leader, on Campaign Tour, Urges Pressure on Congress; Threatens Boycott of Stars on Radio

United States Postal clerks in Washington and at way stations leading thereto are promised a busy winter ahead, Harry Brandt, a local circuit operator and local exhibitor organization leader in New York, promising literally to flood Senator Matthew Mansfield Neely and other Congressmen with a round 1,000,000 pieces of mail protesting Senator Neely's legislative proposal to make block and blind selling of motion pictures illegal. Regardless of the 1,000,000 letters, Mr. Brandt sees passage of the bill.

Mr. Brandt made known his ambitious plans to some California exhibitor members of the Independent Theatre Owners of South California who gathered last Friday at the Victor Hugo Restaurant in Los Angeles to hear him "kill the Neely bill."

On Tour of Country

Mr. Brandt had arrived in Hollywood after visits to several key cities to enlist individual and organized exhibitor support for his ostensibly self-appointed task of preventing Congressional enactment of the block booking measure for which Allied States Association and the Motion Picture Research Council has been campaigning for years.

Mr. Brandt, from New York, ended his nationwide campaign tour with word to Hollywood that his pockets also carried plans for boycotts, by 10,000 theatres, of film stars who appear on the air.

He also, for the record of producers, distributors, other exhibitors and the press:

Reiterated his many times spoken antagonism for the Neely Bill;

Declared that he expected an early announcement by distributors of an arbitration plan which was hampered by Department of Justice maneuverings at the time the industry's fair trade practice code was drawn;

And said that he had received assurances from all production heads of Hollywood companies that all future contracts with players would contain clauses prohibiting their appearances on the air.

On Way to Dallas

Energetic, rotund Mr. Brandt arrived in Hollywood Dec. 2, and left last Sunday, after what he said was a visit to all Hollywood production heads about the affairs of the business, for Dallas to continue his swing about the country telling exhibitors to fight the Neely bill.

Highlight of his visit to the coast was the luncheon tendered him by exhibitors in the Los Angeles territory at the Beverly Hills Victor Hugo restaurant at which, after excusing himself to the two women present for some comparatively mild language, he let down his oratorical hair and condemned the Neely bill from bow to stern and port to starboard, blasted the system of film stars appearing on the radio, expressed his hope for arbitration machinery in the industry and damned the exhibitors who don't belong to their local organization.

Repeating the same talk that he made in 17 key cities on his way to the coast, Brandt turned to the subject next dearest to his heart and declared that he had received, in his week's visit, promises from production heads of companies that all future contracts with players would prohibit their appearances on radio programs.

FAVORS FEWER BUT BETTER PICTURES

Howard Hawks, motion picture director, stopping off in Chicago this week while en route to New York from the coast, said that Hollywood would be better off if it did away with the "B" type pictures and spent all of the budget on fewer but better pictures. He said that the elimination of block booking would be a big help to the industry and would tend, in the long run, to help eliminate double features.

Mr. Hawks, who just finished "My Girl Friday" for Columbia, while in New York will confer with Ernest Hemingway, author, who plans to write an original story and also do the dialogue for the director's next film.

Threatens Boycott

"Of course," he said, "there are a lot of free lance players who control their own destinies and by means of their high powered agents, obtain radio work. The studios cannot control their air appearances if they work for several weeks at $2,500 a week at one studio, lay off for a while and get $2,500 for a radio show, and then report to another studio.

"But we can tell that star or featured player that he or she can be made an example of, in a way that would eliminate him or her from films.

"I have in my brief case—and I have been showing them to company heads this week—letters from 600 exhibitors, representing 10,000 theatres, affiliated and unaffiliated, backing this campaign to keep them off the air.

"If a star appears on a radio show, we send them a letter explaining our position and telling them that we have an investment in his or her name, and that by going on the air, they are dissipating our investment. We ask them what they intend to do about it. In my brief case, I have letters from many agents of stars and freelance players, but I won't meet with any of them.

"If these free lance players continue to do radio shows, they can be eliminated entirely from the motion picture industry.

"And I say to you, if the current free lance players are completely wiped out, it wouldn't do a bit of harm to the industry."

Asks Letter Campaign

He told the 35 local exhibitors assembled at the luncheon, of which Albert Galston, president of the ITO of Southern California, was chairman, that exhibitors should go to their landlords, their employees and all the persons they do business with and ask them to write five letters each to Congressmen assailing the Neely bill as being dangerous to the industry.

"The Neely Bill," Mr. Brandt declared, "is the most pernicious piece of legislation ever promulgated against an industry. It is written by people who don't know our business, and it will thoroughly hogtie us.

"If the bill passes, I see a lifetime of work going into discard. It affects production, distribution and exhibition ruinously.

"Not only independent theatre operators will suffer. Even the affiliated houses will be endangered. And I have found in my trip across the country that affiliated owners know so god damned little about the bill that it's appalling.

"It's no trick for a first run house, giving away autos, and thousands of dollars in cash, and charging low admission prices, to draw customers in. It doesn't require showmanship for that.

"During the last 10 years, every industry in the entertainment world has advanced. The only improvement in the motion picture industry has been the Walt Disney innovation. There must be a radical change in the industry—from inside, not the outside.

"It cannot be done with outside supervision and regulation, which the Neely bill attempts to do."

Hits Moral Argument

Pointing out that adherents of the bill are claiming that it will improve the moral quality of pictures, Brandt scoffed at that statement.

"Passage of the bill will create a cancer that will destroy the entire business."

Before entering the luncheon room, Mr. Brandt met with A. H. Giannini who, he said, told him that he "would not lend a nickel" to producers without a release under the Neely bill.

Describing present pictures as "stinking," Mr. Brandt said the output of Hollywood would be ten times worse in the event the bill passed, for producers would not be able to obtain release deals until pictures were finished, for distributors would be wary of any release contracts because of the clause of the proposed law calling for supplying of a complete synopsis to exhibitors. Violation of the bill, if it is passed, would be made a criminal act, he said.

Sees Huge Loss

Mr. Brandt, introduced as an exhibitor with some 80 odd theatres in Greater New York, whose gross business last year was $11,000,000, declared he foresaw a loss of $2,000,000 this year in gross revenue for his enterprises.

What the industry needs is a system of arbitration under which the independent exhibitor can get together with the affiliated house operator and the distributor to thrash out mutual problems. Under a fair system of arbitration, the independent exhibitor has nothing to fear, he declared.

Relating the history of the exhibitors' attempts to obtain a system of arbitration in conjunction with the proposed trade practice code, which he described as being "purely economic," he told of the statement of Thurman Arnold, assistant United States Attorney General, in charge of the anti-monopoly drive, and of Paul Williams, Arnold's assistant, that they would approve an arbitration plan for the industry if the distributors agree before hand not to use it as a defense in the government anti-trust action.

"I expect a statement in a short time setting up such a system of arbitration," the exhibitor said, "and if it is not forthcoming, I shall be the first witness in the government suit and God knows I have a lot to tell."

Mr. Brandt related his meeting with Mr. Arnold. According to him, Mr. Arnold charged that the majors wanted to drag out the suit, in the hope of a change of administration in 1940.

Mr. Brandt predicted the passage of the Neely Bill, and said his houses would be for sale, when it was passed.

He criticized clearance in New York City. When some of his theatres receive pictures, he said, they're "reissues."

MAJORS OPEN TALKS ON NEELY BILL; WASHINGTON SEES A 50-50 CHANCE

Informal Meetings Held to Discuss Line of Attack; Pettijohn, Palfreyman Speak; House Stand on Passage Unknown

Fifty-fifty chances of enactment of the Neely anti-block and blind selling bill during the second session of the 76th United States Congress, which opens at noon on January 3rd, are seen in Washington.

While Capital observers have been weighing the potential position of the legislation, its chief organized opposition, the large motion picture producer-distributors in the past few days, have been studying their position, thereto, in secret session in New York.

Informal Meetings Held

Without any previous announcements, or subsequent disclosures, various corporate and management executives of the large film companies have been meeting intermittently in the large board room of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, at 28 West 44th Street—undoubtedly remembering that Senator Matthew Mansfield Neely, at the first session of this Congress, last summer, forced a vote on the floor, winning Senatorial passage; remembering, also, that there has been much talk of late by various of the bill's proponents about bringing the bill to the early attention of the legislators in January after their convening. All of which, naturally, would warrant the attention of the film executives at this time.

In one of the first public denouncements of the bill in the majors' campaign of attack that is about to start, Charles C. Pettijohn, the Hays organization's legislative expert, and David Palfreyman, its exhibitor organization contact, were to talk about the possible effects of the bill, Thursday, to an assorted audience of motion picture and other press agents, trade and newspaper writers, accessory manufacturers and dealers, assembled in Stouffer's Restaurant, at 44th Street and Fifth Avenue, directly around the corner from the Hays headquarters. Other than that an "authoritative analysis" was promised there was no word from either Mr. Pettijohn or Mr. Palfreyman as to the nature of their contemplated disclosures.

Position Not Improved

Washington opinion this week held that since the adjournment of the regular session last August, the motion picture industry has done its position no good. "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" was cited as not endearing the industry to some members of Congress, several of whom at the time of its preview, October 17th in the National Capital suggested it was "good ammunition" for proponents of the block booking bill.

Nor has anything transpired in other film branches which would tend to temper the "storm." Representatives of the groups supporting the Neely bill have been active in bringing before the attention of Congress the fights between distributors and exhibitors over the ill-fated trade practice code, the difficulties encountered by the Department of Justice in bringing the New York anti-trust suit to trial, the initiation of additional trust suits by the Government and by a score of independent owners, and the various other "incidents" that have occurred in the industry.

Too, efforts of the Department of Commerce to develop a "program of reform" for the industry appear to have reached a stalemate, although Department officials insist they are continuing their studies. Nevertheless, months have elapsed since any representatives of the industry came to Washington on that particular matter and, so far as can be learned, no meetings are projected for the near future.

THREE NEW THEATRES PLANNED AT 'ARMISTICE'

Two Oklahoma City men are considering building theatres in that city and a Blackwell, Okla., exhibitor, who has a small chain of theatres in the northern part of the state, is also considering a house for Oklahoma City.

These men have expressed the opinion that, if the war continues, the construction of additional theatres in Oklahoma City will not be desirable due to the fact that increasing cost of living will leave less money in the patron's pocket for entertainment. Furthermore, if the United States were drawn into the conflict, they feel that there would be a great loss of patronage.

All this is considered in Washington to be good grist for the mills of the Neelyites, but opponents of the legislation claim there are entries on the other side of the ledger which should not be overlooked. Among these are the many worthwhile pictures which have been included in recent product, the readiness of the industry to respond to any demand by the Government for aid in maintaining the delicate balance of a neutral nation in a world at war, and the severe economic blow dealt the industry by the war which, under the impact of block booking legislation, might reach disastrous proportions.

Vote Not Canvassed

The fate of the Neely bill, as a matter of fact, rests with that large proportion of the House membership which seldom engages in vocal pyrotechnics but casts the votes that make majorities. With respect to such a controversial subject as motion pictures, few in Washington are willing to attempt to predict what this group will do.

Since the coming session is not the beginning of a Congress, there will be no need to go through the formalities of electing a new speaker and House leaders, but little or no business will be transacted during the first week, in which will be received the annual message of the President and his annual budget message, the former outlining the legislation he desires and the latter suggesting the funds which should be appropriated for the multitudinous activities of the Government.

Technically, however, there is nothing to prevent the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee from holding a meeting to consider the Neely bill on the opening day of the session. It is more likely, though, that some time will pass before the Committee decides upon its program for the session.

Chairman Wants Hearings

Chairman Lea is understood still to be adamant in his position that before his Committee passes on the bill it should hold full hearings at which all interests may present their views. Such hearings would consume considerable time and there are a number of measures pending which the chairman, at least, considers of more importance, among them the bill for Government control of oil production, asked for the last session by the President and now being whipped into shape by a subcommittee which this week held hearings in New Orleans and plans further hearings in Washington in January.

While proponents of block booking legislation will urge early action on the bill by the Committee on the ground that its prompt adoption by Congress would support the Department of Justice, which is demanding abolition of block booking in its New York anti-trust case, opponents are urging that action on the measure be deferred until it is learned how the Federal Courts look upon the practice.

Washington feels that, in the last analysis, time itself will be a major factor in determining the fate of the Neely legislation. Administration and Congressional leaders alike are anxious that the coming session be adjourned as early as possible, both because of the approaching Presidential campaigns and as a means of preventing too much interference with the Administration's neutrality and defense plans.

To bring about an early conclusion of the session, efforts will be made to avoid, so far as possible, the consideration of any highly controversial questions not pertinent to the legislative program. The Neely bill is not a part of that program.

State Official Ruled Powerless In ASCAP Musical Issue

Attorney-General John E. Martin, of Madison, Wis., has informed Secretary of State Fred R. Zimmerman that the latter has no power to investigate violations of the state statute providing for the licensing of music copyrights. Martin said the Secretary of State's authority is merely administrative and that he may only issue licenses and collect fees.

Zimmerman sought the opinion after Charles E. Broughton, editor of the Sheboygan Press, in an editorial, urged the Secretary of State to take action against ASCAP for alleged violation of the State statutes which require the organization to obtain a license before operating in Wisconsin.

Sees British Production Resuming Before Long

Film production in England will get going again before many months, Carroll Levis, British radio and screen star, said this week in Chicago. He added that cheaper pictures would probably be made. He said stage plays in London are doing better than for many years past and that acting talent has been excused from war service.

MPPDA Meeting Postponed

The quarterly meeting of the board of directors of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America has been postponed to December 20th on account of the absence from New York of many of the directors. Among those now on the Coast are Nicholas M. Schenck, Sidney R. Kent, Murray Silverstone, Harry M. Warner and Jack Cohn.

U.S. NOW TURNING TO PATENT POOLS; "SHOWDOWN" DUE ON TRUST TRIAL

Justice Department Turns Attention to "Clarification" of Patent Regulations; Two More Anti-Trust Suits Are Filed

The United States Department of Justice's prosecution of industry under the Clayton and Sherman anti-trust acts, which has been keenly perceptible in the motion picture business, particularly, in the past twelve-month, is to be extended in the direction of patent pools, to "the use of patents, patent pooling agreements and patent licensing agreements by which certain industries in the United States are controlled and dominated by one or several large companies."

Opens Fire Immediately

U. S. Attorney General Frank Murphy, in his Justice Department headquarters in Washington, Sunday night, disclosed that the Government on Monday morning would bring a civil action in the Federal District Court at Toledo, Ohio, against 13 corporations and 103 individuals in the $160,000,000 glass container industry—as an opener in attacks against patent pools. Furthermore, after the turn of the year, he said, a Federal Grand Judy in New York will open investigations into the entire patent pooling structure.

Two more anti-trust suits were filed this week against the majors, one by the 395 Amusement Corporation in Brooklyn, N. Y., and the other by W. H. Odom, in Georgia.

While the Department of Justice was turning its attention to the matter of patents in corporate operations, the motion picture industry's lawyers and Department of Justice counsel in New York were attempting to arrive at a satisfactory date for starting the trial of the Government vs. the majors in the key New York anti-trust case. Federal Judge John Knox has demanded a "showdown" on a date by this weekend.

As attorneys for the distributors and the Department of Justice were going into a joint conference Thursday advance indications were that a trial date satisfactory to both would be set, in which case designation of a date will rest with Judge Knox, to whom the conferees were to report Friday.

It was further indicated that the Government attorneys were looking for a February date for trial opening, but that film counsel was suggesting a date in April or May.

By this week, almost all of the defendants in the New York case had filed lengthy interrogatories. Paramount and Warners filed theirs Wednesday afternoon; those of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Twentieth Century-Fox were to be filed Thursday. Columbia, RKO and United Artists had previously filed theirs.

Department Claims Evidence

While the Department of Justice in the announcement of its patent pooling plans did not specify the industries at which it would aim its investigation, it was considered probable in Washington that the radio industry, and possibly the motion picture industry also, might be involved, in view of the indication that the inquiry is expected to result in a series of proceedings in different industries "in which there will be raised every type of practice under the patent law that the department considers contrary to the policy of the anti-trust laws and in violation of such laws."

Facts now in the possession of the Department, it was said, indicate that patent rights have been used to divide fields into non-competitive spheres, establish price-fixing schemes, divide markets into exclusive geographical areas, limit production and quality, restrict the use of products, require that outsiders purchase non-patented materials and service, enforce tying in provisions, prevent the investment of new capital in industry, and in general to restrain trade and eliminate competition.

SCREEN GUILD AIR SHOW IS RENEWED

A new contract was signed in Hollywood last Friday continuing the "Gulf Screen Guild Theater," which brings to microphones "the greatest stars of radio, stage and screen and adds $10,000 a week to the Motion Picture Relief Fund" says C.B.S.

To date the program, which first went on the air January 8, 1938, has earned $352,000 for the fund. When $500,000 has been accumulated a new home for aged and indigent film workers will be built. The goal will be reached early in 1940, says C.B.S.

It also appears that certain owners of patents, by threatening customers of alleged infringers and by concerted action in patent suits, have destroyed the markets of competitors, and in some instances, notwithstanding expiration of basic patents, control and domination of an industry has continued through alleged patent improvements.

"The necessity for clarification of the line at which proper usages of patent rights end, and monopolies and combinations in restraint of trade in violation of the anti-trust laws begin, has become imperative as the methods of production have become more complex," the Department declared.

"Certain industries in fact revolve their entire manufacturing and distribuiton functions around patented processes and devices. Other industries have either grown around or become integrated through a single patent holding company not in the business of manufacturing and distributing, but created and operated solely for the purpose of enforcing licensing restrictions."

The practices which will be investigated, it was said, have not heretofore been presented for judicial determination. Many abuses in the use of patents, it was declared, were brought out during an investigation of that subject by the Temporary National Economic Committee.

Trust Suit "Showdown"

The Department of Justice was reported considering an application for a "pre-trial" on preliminary issues, to hasten procedure in the New York case.

It was disclosed, two weeks ago, that both sides had entered into a stipulation, removing the case from the regular court calendar. It had originally been placed on the calendar last Spring, through the filing of an answer to the Government's bill of complaint by Adolph Ramish, of San Francisco, who was named a Universal defendant, but who has not been associated with the company for the past two years.

The Columbia interrogatories were served on William P. Farnsworth, special assistant to the United, States Attorney General. There are over 60 pages, about 50 separate queries.

They are in several respects similar to those served by United Artists. Paul Williams, also special assistant to the Attorney General, said early last week that the Government would answer the UA queries "within 60 days."

Two More Suits

The 395 Amusement Corporation, operators of the Gloria Theatre, Brooklyn, filed suit in Brooklyn federal court Tuesday, charging conspiracy and violation of the anti-trust statutes, against the Randforce Amusement Corporation, Samuel Rinzler, Louis Frisch, William Yost, 20th Century-Fox, RKO, Columbia, Warner Brothers, Paramount, Universal, United Artists, Vitagraph, the Big "U" Film Exchanges, and Republic Film Exchanges.

Specifically, the suit charges that Mr. Yost built the 1,800 seat Clinton, on Clinton and Mills Street, in that borough, and that the Randforce Circuit acquired the house last month. It is charged that because of a conspiracy the 600 seat Gloria is unable to obtain product and loses $200 weekly.

Joining the legion of those charging the majors and large circuits in various sections of the country with violation of the Sherman and Clayton anti-trust laws, W. H. Odom, former exhibitor of Milledgeville, Georgia, filed an anti-trust suit in Atlanta federal court on Tuesday against the eight majors and Roy Martin, circuit operator of Columbus, Ga.

The complaint asks for $15,000 damages, and charges that the majors conspired with Mr. Martin to deprive Mr. Odom's theatre of product. According to the complaint, Mr. Odom was forced to sell his theatre to Mr. Martin, at a loss.

Two anti-trust actions in Texas against the Interstate circuit, Paramount Pictures, and other majors, have been set down for trial in Dallas federal court, in January and February. The case of Paul Scott, former owner of the Village, in Dallas, will begin January 22nd; that of L. L. Dunbar will begin February 8th. Federal Judge William H. Atwell, in Dallas, set the docket this week.

Chicago Trust Defense Briefs

In the Government's contempt suit in Chicago against Balaban and Katz and the majors for violation of a 1932 consent decree, it was said on Monday that defense attorneys were filing 90 pages of findings, and 75 pages of objections to the Government briefs. On Thursday, the defense attorneys were scheduled to file 12 pages of conclusions in law. The Government has 15 days to file a reply brief.

Meantime, there were reports, denied by both sides, that the other suit against the circuit and the majors, that by the independents, might be dropped, and a new clearance system for the city worked out.

Oklahoma Hearing Asked

In Oklahoma City, where A. B. Momand is charging anti-trust law violations against the Griffith Amusement Company and the majors, in a long-pending $4,500,000 case, the defense filed an application this week in Federal District Court for a further hearing on a motion to dismiss the action.

Baltimore Case On

In Baltimore, on Monday, the defense in the suit by the Westway Theatre against the Durkee theatres and seven majors, lost a dismissal motion. The motion had claimed that the Westway, and its owner, Lea Homand, had not shown that his house had been damaged by clearance practices, that he had failed to show any "restraint of trade," and any violation of the Sherman anti-trust law.

Stars, Studio Officials, Executives Outdone in Celebration by Civic Officials and Wildly Enthusiastic Populace

David Oliver Selznick's production of Margaret Mitchell's long story of the Civil War Period in the Deep South for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, opens for first public inspection at Loew's Grand Theatre in Atlanta Friday night.

The production has been four years a-coming, the longest theatrical motion picture for public consumption, its 19,800 feet running 220 minutes; one of the most costly to make, $4,500,000—$3,957,000 for the negative alone; and the most expensive piece of product ever made available to exhibitors, who will pay 70 per cent of gross box office intake, playing on an average all-time high of 82 cents an admission, compared to the normal average of 30 cents, and on a guarantee from the distributor that at least a 10 per cent profit will result. in Atlanta

Attention of the motion picture world was focused on Atlanta as the hour neared for the world premiere of "Gone with the Wind" at 8:15 P.M. Friday in Loew's Grand Theatre.

Not since 1895 when the Cotton States Exposition opened in Atlanta has this town been so plumb crazy. For four days, since the celebrities began arriving, the citizens have been staging a celebration that eclipses anything ever held here.

On Thursday night there was a charity ball at Atlanta's municipal auditorium under the auspices of the Atlanta Junior League. Tickets —5,200 at $10 each—were sold out in minutes. More than 2,000 persons stood in line for hours, hoping. Scalpers were asking as much as $200 a pair.

Kay Kyser's band played and staged a "premiere dance" at the auditorium Friday night.

Studio Delegation Arrives

Among the stars from Hollywood are Vivien Leigh, Clark Gable, Carole Lombard, Olivia DeHavilland, Laura Hope Crews, Ann Rutherford, Evelyn Keyes, Alicia Rhett, Ona Munson and Claudette Colbert.

Executives arriving include Victor Fleming, director of "Wind"; David O. Selznick, the producer; Louis B. Mayer, MGM vice-president; Howard Dietz, MGM publicity and advertising director; Joseph R. Vogel, MGM board member; T. Robert Rubin, vice-president; Thomas J. Connors, sales manager; Oscar A. Doob, Loew's advertising chief; William F. Rodgers, MGM general sales manager; William R. Ferguson, exploitation chief; Nicholas Schenck, president of Loew's; Howard Strickling, MGM studio advertising chief, and others.

John Hay Whitney, financial backer of Mr. Selznick, chartered a plane to bring a party.

The actual "celebration" got under way at 10:15 A.M. Thursday when an old lamppost, shattered by shells during Sherman's march to the sea, was relighted on famous old Peachtree Street. A gas line was run to the old light.

Shortly after noon, Hollywood's stars and state and city officials paraded, with 21 bands, through downtown Atlanta to the Georgian Terrace hotel—where the stars are staying—for a welcoming ceremony presided over by Mayor William B. Hartsfield. The stars were presented with Wedgewood china tea and coffee sets, especially designed. Then they met the press. Thursday evening was a Junior league Ball. Clark Gable and Vivien Leigh led the grand march after a program by Enrico Leide. Kay Kyser played for dancing. The ballroom scene was one from "Wind"; 8,000 attended at two dollars per, to look upon sets transported from the studio.

Friday morning the visiting celebrities and the governors of ten southern states, from Georgia, the Carolinas, Florida, Alabama, Tennessee, Mississippi, Texas, Virginia and Oklahoma, were to be the guests of Atlanta at a private exhibition of the city's million dollar painting of "The Battle of Atlanta." Also participating were 20 U. S. Congressmen.

Later some of the stars attended a luncheon sponsored by the Better Films Committee of Atlanta, to which 700 were invited.

Friday afternoon there was to be a tea party at the Governor's mansion, followed by a cocktail party for the stars and Miss Mitchell, by the Woman's Press Club.

The entire town is in elaborate decorations for the event, all in the spirit of the 1860's.

Eight newsreel cameras are to record on sound and film all of the doings of the premiere. At least one nationwide broadcast was scheduled, by NBC and CBS, from 10:30 to 11 P.M. Thursday, CST. Plans were under way for another Friday night.

700 Reserved by Studio

Loew's Grand seats 2,000 persons. Seven hundred tickets had been reserved by studio officials for stars, executives and press. The remaining 1,300 were sold at $10 each, proceeds going to Atlanta's Community Fund. It was claimed that 25,000 had made requests for opening night tickets.

All tickets for the first three weeks of the showing have been sold. No passes. Advanced sales total $70,000. Prices range from $1.50 to 75c.

The front of Loew's Grand took on the form of an old Southern mansion.

Governor E. D. Rivers of Georgia proclaimed

"FANTASIA" THIRD DISNEY FEATURE

The third Walt Disney feature-length cartoon, the successor to "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" and "Pinocchio", will be based on a symphonic arrangement by Leopold Stokowski titled "Fantasia". The recordings were made last March by the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra under the directorship of Stokowski.

Hal Horne, vice-president and eastern representative of Walt Disney Productions, left last Friday for the Coast to confer with Mr. Disney on the third feature which is in production and planned for release in September, 1940. Mr. Horn said that this is the first motion picture for which the score was recorded before camera work started.

Feature Cartoon Based on the Jonathan Swift Story To Have Premiere at Three Theatres in Miami Monday

Max Fleischer upset an inkwell on the parlor rug 20 years ago and out poured Betty Boop. Betty Boops and Popeyes have been coming from the Fleischer "Out of the Inkwell" drawing boards ever since, but all for single reel motion picture animations, until now. On Monday evening will arrive a full length motion picture color cartoon in sound anent the travelings of the adventuresome Captain Lemuel Gulliver in the south seas starting on the 5th day of November, 1669, as recorded by Jonathan Swift fancifully in 1699. (Review on page 25.)

This second feature cartoon of the industry will be shown for the first time to the public Monday evening, in Miami at Walter Lynch's Sheridan theatre, and to overflow "world premiere" crowds at Mr. Lynch's Colony and Community theatres nearby.

The motion picture's third feature cartoon, "Pinocchio," produced by Walt Disney, for RKO, who made the first, "Snow White," will follow some time in January. This week RKO disclosed terms and policy for "Pinocchio's" exhibition—50 per cent rental, extended runs, single picture policy only.

See Enormous Grosses

Last week it was announced that "Gulliver's Travels" was being sold on a separate contract and that each deal was individually handled with no set minimum price or percentage figure. Leon D. Netter, vice-president of Paramount Theatres Service Corporation, predicted a $3,000,000 domestic gross. This week Barney Balaban, president of Paramount, said he believed all estimates of domestic grosses made up to date on the Max Fleischer cartoon were "much too low." He said the film offered no controversial problems and was certain to draw enormous foreign grosses.

To Have Triple Premiere

"Gulliver's Travels" will have its premiere in three Florida theatres next Monday night. The demand for tickets forced the company to add a third premiere theatre, the Community at Miami Beach. After the opening the picture will have continuous runs at the Sheridan and Colony, Miami Beach.

A girl between 5 and 8 will be crowned Princess of Lilliput. Miami's Chamber of Commerce, sponsor, will also distribute 6,000 balloons adorned with characters in the picture. Paramount's eight-foot giant, Dave Ballard, personifying "Gulliver," will bring the prints and will be a judge.

Socialites will stage a ball at the Rooney Plaza Hotel, the entrance of which is being transformed into a Lilliputian Castle and the gardens into a Lilliputian village.

Paramount has made arrangements with the Technicolor officials to deliver 120 prints of "Gulliver" for Christmas bookings instead of the 41 prints originally agreed upon. Neil F. Agnew, vice-president and general sales manager, said 20 prints were being delivered daily.

Dave Fleischer, director of the cartoon, is in New York from Hollywood where he completed the final cutting and editing. After the

SHOWMEN'S REVIEWS

This department deals with new product from the point of view of the exhibitor who is to purvey it to his own public.

GONE WITH THE WIND

(Selznick-MGM)

Epic Drama in Technicolor

by WILLIAM R. WEAVER
Hollywood Editor

"Gone with the Wind" is a bigger and better "Birth of a Nation"—a kindred triumph for this day and time.

Every year since its founding in 1932, Quigley Publications' FAME, official Audit of Personalities in the entertainment world, has rated David O. Selznick as Number One producer on the brass tacks basis of verified box office grosses obtained by showmen exhibiting his pictures. Three distributing systems have dispensed them during that time. No theory of chance can explain that record. Consistency can and does. "Gone with the Wind" is consistent in whole and in part, in conception, execution and from any seat in the auditorium, with all the number one pictures the number one producer ever made, plus.

Stripped of statistics, personalities and percentages, all of which have nothing to do with the case after the first half dozen minutes of running time, "Gone with the Wind" is, from the showman's point of view, simply and magnificently a bigger and better "Birth of a Nation."

It is not the same story, but it is a story about the same events and times and their influence upon the same civilization and its people.

It is told in much the same tone of voice and with the same smashing effect. Quite possibly neither producer nor distributor will relish the inevitable comparison of "Gone" with "The Birth," although none could be more honorable.

The film is, however, here and now, for today's screen, almost precisely what that one was, for a dawning art a quarter century back.

The Selznick transcription of the Margaret Mitchell best seller is almost literally a page-by-page presentation of the story nearly two million people bought her book to read. It is also a most literate and faithful transcription, begging no issues, dodging no hazards, a tremendously dramatic screen play by the late Sidney Howard directed for the most part by Victor Fleming, in lesser part by George Cukor, who started it, and Sam Wood, who finished.

Vivien Leigh makes it come alive and keeps it vibrantly interesting from opening shot to fadeout. She is alternately and unpredictably tempestuous, cool, cowardly, heroic, generous, avaricious, tender, venomous, shrewd, stupid, a natively mercurial personality forced this way and that by need, circumstance, ambition, envy, hate, selfishness and a distorted devotion, but mostly by emotions she never fully understands. The role and her handling of it are worthy of all the publicity about them and more.

Only slightly secondary in story importance is the Rhett Butler assignment given Clark Gable in compliance with the practically unanimous demands of persons canvassed in a Gallup poll. This stalwart performer, never out of the top 10 in MOTION PICTURE HERALD's exhibitor poll of money making stars, might have been born for this spot. He portrays a man of unbridled emotions, including lust, and unfettered tongue. He employs force and a liberal ballast of liquor as means of contriving to have his husbandly way with a wife who has forbidden him her bedroom, and he leaves her, at the picture's end, with the statement, in reply to her question as to what will become of her, "I don't give a damn."

Olivia de Havilland plays a gentle lady of the Old South, faithful to tradition and loyal to family, a character in sharp contrast with that of Scarlett. In similar contrast to the robust crudity of Rhett Butler is the gentlemanly but dreamy nobility of the Leslie Howard characterization. Brilliant in the relatively minor but strong footage allotted to her performance as the generous and patriotic madame whose elegant brothel continues prosperous when all of Atlanta has been impoverished by the war is Ona Munson, already on the screen in other pictures made since she finished this role, and likely to be seen in many more hereafter.

Individual acting achievements are many. Thomas Mitchell turns in a series of graphic bits as the Irish plantation owner made mad by the war, Victor Jory packs into two brief appearances as a former slave driver turned carpetbagger, a complete picture of the terrorists he typifies, Harry Davenport plays a doctor of the old school vigorously, and Laura Hope Crews is brilliant as a fussy matron. Hattie McDaniel, as Scarlett's colored mammy, sets a new high in that department, winning spontaneous midpicture applause of the Hollywood preview audience.

The story of "Gone with the Wind" is no thumbnail sketch. The author used 475,000 words to tell it and didn't waste any, but a bit of information as to what it's about is necessary for a showmanly approach to the business of selling tickets to the customers. It is important for a showman to know, for instance, that the siege, capture and burning of Atlanta are described in such detail and on such a scale as no camera has presented a comparable calamity until now.

It is well for showmen to know, also, that there is candor in dialogue when the story demands it, that a girl about to deliver a laboring mother's baby commands a pickaninny to bring clean twine, a scissors and plenty of hot water.

It is a circumstance to know about that much of the second section of the picture has to do with the having of babies and the not having of them, the heroine's yenning for her best friend's mate and his indecision in the matter, and that, although passion pounds steadily throughout the picture, only the hero's suggested but unseen intimacy with the generous madame and a plantation hand's seduction of a girl not shown until he's corrected that matter matrimonially will be difficult to defend against possible moral protest. Mr. Gable's eloquent "damn" is so completely in character as to seem indispensable.

Depth and breadth and sweep of the picture are beyond anything the screen has seen.

The picture is bigger and better than any of its parts and one of the best of these is Technicolor, here so completely a part of the whole and yet so vital to the success of it as to command a new and more prominent place in the calculations of producers and in the advertising copy of exhibitors. Yet "Gone with the Wind" is not properly to be broken down into constituent elements. One does not ask what Rembrandt's paints were made of, or what quarry furnished Angelo his stone.

"Gone with the Wind" is, finally and utterly, a David O. Selznick production, the best of all Selznick productions and, in view of the Selznick production record as number one producer for the past eight years, that would seem to be all that anybody ought to be wanting.

Previewed at the Four Star Theatre in Hollywood at the showing for the press only, attended by 900 men and women, variously special writers for magazines, newspapers, wire services and syndicates—probably the hardest boiled audience ever assembled before a screen. The challenge of pretention and promise in the production and promotion of "Gone with the Wind" had the spectators militantly ready to say "just another movie." Instead, they thrilled and wept and cheered and applauded. The picture with its 220 minutes took them like Sherman took Atlanta.

Presented by Selznick International in association with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. From Margaret Mitchell's novel, "Gone With the Wind." Produced by David O. Selznick. Directed by Victor Fleming. Screen play by Sidney Howard. Released by Loew's, Inc. Production designed by William Cameron Menzies. Art direction by Lyle Wheeler. Photographed by Ernest Haller. Gulliver's Travels

(Paramount-Fleischer)

Second Feature Length Cartoon

"Gulliver's Travels," the second feature length subject created out of the magic process of drawings animated in motion pictures, reaches the screen with showmanship timeliness for the coming holiday season. The fabulous reputation of this great fairy story, together with the avid interest of the public in the process which makes it possible as a screen story, insures a vast and expectant public for the re-telling in cinematographic form of a fanciful tale that has travelled literally to the ends of the earth and amongst all of the people who inhabit it.

Paramount's "Gulliver's Travels" is a free-handed narrative of the amazing account written originally by Jonathan Swift, which in its own day was a bitter political and social satire and which in its fanciful outline survived to become a classic story of the English language. The producers of this motion picture version may not have looked into the subject beyond a study of the illustrated picture books that have long been fixtures of children's nurseries, but that, perhaps, does not matter.

They have the essentials of the tale and have transcribed them handsomely, tunefully and wittily to the screen. This synthesized version bothers very little with characterization and undertakes little or no temperamental or cultural differentiation between the Giant and the Lilliputians. The Giant is simply a very large person who has come to Lilliput Land. He has been made genial, kindly and considerate, which should do much toward allaying any possible apprehensions that the sensibilities of the children will be assailed.

The picture is vividly challenging in Technicolor, which of course it needed very much to be, because without benefit of the range of the palette it would have been difficult indeed to create the spirit of make-believe which galvanizes and actuates this oft-told tale. Prince David and Princess Glory step alive and radiant out of the picture books, and the producer, with a sharp eye to the necessities of entertainment, has endowed them with the living and tuneful voices of Lanny Ross and Jessica Dragonette. There are several song numbers of pleasing character, including "Faithful Forever" and 'Hap, Hap, Happy Day," which are charmingly rendered. The musical background is of appropriate merit.

Max Fleischer as the producer and Dave Fleischer as the director are not imitative of contemporaries in the art of drawings animated in motion pictures. Theirs is a comic-strip mode of treatment, and while there are those who prefer the more artful and less bizarre, there is no gainsaying the fact that the newspaper comic strip, which is the lineal ancestor of this subject, is ravenously consumed by the millions. These millions of comic-strip devotees should find plenty to slake their thirst in this strip of some eight thousand feet.

The Fleischer style, well known for many years to a great public, is readily identifiable in "Gulliver's Travels." The usual grotesqueness is present in all of the characters, with the exception of the Giant and the Prince and Princess. One might expect Popeye to peek around the corner at any moment. There are comical situations and lines in generous measure.

"Gulliver's Travels" would be expected to be a nourishing item for the theatres at any time of the year. It is especially strong in its appeal as a holiday attraction when a joyous program of common appeal to all ages is especially in order. Paramount has extended itself in the way of making the American public conscious of the approach of "Gulliver's Travels," which helps mightily but does not do the whole job for the theatres. There still remains in the case of this and every other subject the necessity for a corresponding local effort.

On the local effort theatremen have much to work with. Pictorially the possibilities are very great. This subject, coming at Christmas time, is heavily laden with opportunities for gadgets and tieups. There are so many ready means of inviting public attention that it will be principally the exhibitor's burden to select which devices will work best where they are needed most.

"Gulliver's Travels" will be found a pleasurable experience. The story and the characters and the fanciful nature of the tale are known to even more people than ever have heard of "Gone with the Wind."

It will not be necessary for the exhibitor to promise that for the occasion he has captured the moon and the stars.—M. Q.

Judge Hardy and Son

(MGM)

Family Comedy Drama

This time the Aurania Rouverol characters are employed by writer Carey Wilson in a sort of three-decker story that departs some from the format of the series. The best of the three stories told is that one nearest the original design: a comedy of errors and coincidences in which young Mr. Hardy has girl and money troubles. The picture gets a fine start and a fine finish from this sequence of events.

Lightly sketched into the background of the picture is a slightly heavy account of the intervention of the senior Hardy in the economic affairs of an elderly couple whose daughter has married well and left them in poverty. Although the talented Maria Ouspenskaya is set into the cast briefly to give this phase of the picture strength, it carries less than the usual impact of a Judge Hardy incident.

The severest departure from the series norm is an extensive section of serious drama set into the middle of the picture in a manner to black out for a long stretch the comedy aspect. In this long sequence Mrs. Hardy is bedded with pneumonia which plunges the family into protracted and prayerful despair. All this is somberly handled and, of course, well acted. Some present at the preview were manifestly suffering with the family. Others were restive.

Master Rooney's best moments come at the start and the end of the picture. The final fifteen minutes are typical and excellent.

Previewed at the Village theatre, Westwood, Cal., with Nicholas M. Schenck and Louis B. Mayer in attendance and many a volunteer eagerly informing them in the foyer afterward that the film is the best of the Hardy series.—W.R.W.

Mexican Spitfire

(RKO Radio)

Slapstick Comedy

"Mexican Spitfire" is an exhibit with few equals for those who have always contended that the chase, the case of mixed identity and the custard pie are fundaments of screen humor.

Herein the three are served up by a Lupe Velez with all her old verve, and a Leon Errol who is perfectly at home in his dual role of a non-conforming American husband and an English lord. In addition, a variant is added in Errol's impersonation of his own role as the rich member of the English aristocracy. All three of his portrayals added up to a completely hilarious audience total at the preview showing.

Joseph A. Fields and Charles E. Roberts, writing the screenplay from a story by the former, have provided a vehicle which is completely adaptable to slapstick farce, in telling of the difficulties of a nice young man and his Mexican wife. The two, as played by Donald Woods and Miss Velez, are reunited after liberal use has been made of the techniques referred to above.

The film was directed by Leslie Goodwins, with Cliff Reid producing and Lee Marcus production executive.

Thou Shalt Not Kill

(Republic)

Melodrama

A very unusual motion picture story, in which a Protestant minister is placed in the position of hearing a confession of murder by a Catholic youth who believes him a priest of his own faith, is contained in "Thou Shalt Not Kill."

When the small town's bad boy, "Allen Stevens," is brought to trial for the murder of "Julie," with whom he had been seen quite frequently, things look very dark for him and "Mary," whom he really loves. "Reverend Chris," the lad's benefactor, by chance pulls "Gordon" from an automobile wreck and the lad, thinking he is dying and, seeing the clerical collar of the minister, confesses the murder to him, thinking he is a Catholic priest. "Reverend Chris," torn between respect for another religion and desire to save an innocent life, goes to "Father O'Reilly," who declares the confidences given in confession are sacred, no matter under what conditions. "Reverend Chris" goes to the confessed murderer, now recovered, and gives him a penance which he says might have been given by a priest—that the guilty youth admit his crime. The youth agrees, goes with "Reverend Chris" to the former's boathouse where he attempts to kill the minister. The plot fails, and "Gordon," guided by what he thinks is a supernatural voice calling him, confesses to the murder and attempted murder.

Married and In Love

(RKO Radio)

Love's Post Mortem

This is a tale of college infatuation, whose principals are brought together some time later when both are married to different persons. The plot entwines the pair's future happiness possibilities, and then abruptly shows them that they have made no mistakes in their choices.

Alan Marshal, Barbara Read, Patric Knowles and Helen Vinson enact the principal roles in the refreshingly told story and screenplay by S. K. Lauren. John Farrow as director kept the Robert Sisk production to a minimum of extraneous matter and a maximum of human interest.

"Leslie Yates," a successful doctor, thinks that he is still in love with "Doris," his college love now married to "Paul Wilding." "Leslie" decides to tell his wife, "Helen," who has suffered that he might succeed, that he loves "Doris" when "Paul" finds out about their rendezvous. Confronted by the three of them, and knowing "Leslie's" infatuation, "Helen" tells the story of her and "Leslie's" love, making all realize that they have not made mistakes in choosing their mates.

South of the Border

Autry Western

"South of the border, down Mexico way," is the wording of the lyrics of one of this season's most popular songs. Quite some time before the song had attained its great popularity in this country Gene Autry was singing it on his tour of the British Isles. It is the theme song of this Republic picture and the story has been built around the lyrics—that is, the beginning and the ending conform to the lyrics, the in-between time having to do with action, main ingredient of any western.

The story is enacted entirely south of the border. There is quite a deal of singing including songs other than the theme. Autry does most of it abetted by Smiley Burnette and little Mary Lee. This western is also unusual in that it has two feminine leads, June Storey, who has appeared in several of the Autry series, and Lupita Tovar, who plays the girl of the theme song.

"Gene" is a federal agent who has been sent to contact an American consulate in Mexico for instructions. At a fiesta he meets "Dolores" and the meeting blossoms into a romance. "Gene" is sent off to another part of the country to help quell an uprising and he fails to keep an appointment with "Dolores." After the sequences involved in the uprising, which is a story in itself, "Gene" returns to find "Dolores" but she has entered a convent, as in the words of the song.

Melodrama

Scene of this melodrama is China and the time is 1937. The Nationalist government is still in reasonably complete control of the country but bandits are at large in various parts of it, while a war going on in "the South" is referred to conversationally. Things that have happened in China since then make what happens regrettably less important, save as pertaining to the lives and safety of the persons immediately concerned.

Those concerned are a United States consul appointed by McKinley and forgotten completely ever since, a newspaper reporter out of a job and a girl from Brooklyn masquerading as a Russian wife of a dead American in hopes of obtaining a passport from the consul. Everybody finds out the truth about everybody else in the course of an attack on the consulate by the bandits and a rescue by the Nationalist forces.

The film is peopled by players whose names make good marquee reading. It was once titled "Girl From Brooklyn."

Negro Melodrama

Produced primarily for exhibition in localities where Negro patronage predominates, this metropolitan melodrama of life, love, crime and music is enacted realistically by an all Negro cast. Best name, from the box office angle, is Shelton Brooks, writer of "Some of These Days" and other famous popular songs, who wrote two of the three musical numbers in the film and appears in it singing a specialty to his own piano accompaniment.

The story is about a night club owner who runs a poker game in the back room and manages a gang of safe-crackers who murder a watchman early in the picture, pay for the crime in the melodramatic finale. The love equation involves the killer, the hero upon whom he attempts to fasten the guilt and the girl singer they both want to marry. The place is such a place as Harlem is in New York or 31st street in Chicago or Central Avenue in Los Angeles, and the players speak and act as the people in those places do. This circumstance gives the film veracity in unusual degree.

Here and There

Continuing the interest of previous issues of this annual series, the reel shows a dentist who carries his office and equipment with him; a man and his wife who paint with sand, modernizing an ancient art of the Navajo Indians; a dairy farm in operation in the heart of London; an Amish community in Pennsylvania; and, in a concluding sequence, the hobby home of Charlie Ruggles in Hollywood where the screen comedian owns and operates a canine beauty parlor.—Running time, 11 minutes.

"WIND" EXPLOITATION ON OWN TACK

a public holiday throughout the state on Friday.

All Atlanta theatres entered into the spirit of the festival.

The Fox is displaying a reproduction of the Tara home of Scarlett O'Hara and its marquee has a welcome to Clark Gable and the others from Hollywood.

First-run theatres booked in special attractions, the Paramount and Capitol stage shows.

Players in the "Wind" were to be introduced during the intermission from their seats.

Atlanta newspapers for weeks bannered stories across front pages. A Confederate veteran was chosen to act as "sponsor" for Miss Leigh, and a Civil War widow to be Gable's partner on Friday.

$200,000 To Be Spent by Metro for Promotion

The promotional expense of "Gone with the Wind" will be determined city by city as the picture plays. There are seven cities which in the next few days will be playing the picture, on either reserved seat or non-reserved seat policy. In New York, $25,000 minimum will be spent in newspaper advertising; in Los Angeles, $8,500; Boston, $8,500; Atlanta, $5,000; Cincinnati, $2,500; Harrisburg, $1,000; Reading, $1,000.

There will be additional expenditures for exploitation, lobbies, programs and in some cases billboards. MGM calculates this program will cost them $200,000.

Concentration will be on the admission price, the times of engagements and screenings.

The following campaigns will start three weeks in advance of openings, especially where seats are to be reserved.

In Atlanta five weeks of advance sale brought the total to $70,000 before the opening. In New York it is estimated by opening time, Tuesday night, the Astor advance sale will be close to $50,000, though at a slightly lower price scale at the nearby Capitol, where there will be a television opening.

A form of idea-posting will be used. In some cities on the entering roads, there will be billboards reading: "You are now entering ————where 'Gone with the Wind' is playing."

"The amount of advertising appropriation will not set a record," said Metro. "More money has been spent on many previous productions."

Parties are in preparation by various Junior League organizations. Several nights have been bought out by charitable organizations. There will be no charity previews, however.

Each town that plays "Gone with the Wind" will have a radio campaign.

Howard Dietz had a staff of exploitation men working in Atlanta for weeks. William R. Ferguson, exploitation manager, made four trips to Atlanta. Working on the campaigns, in addition to the home office staff, have been Frank Whitbeck, studio publicity head; E. B. Coleman, Atlanta; Carleton Duffus, Reading; James Ashcraft, Harrisburg; Bert McKenzie, Boston, and J. E. Watson, Cincinnati.

Paintings have been made of prominent scenes for lobby display.

Practically all advertisements will carry the phrase, "'Gone With the Wind' will not be shown except at advance prices at least until 1941." At least 37 major tieups involve cooperative advertising.

Pick Additional Runs For "Wind" in New York

Loew's Paradise, Valencia and Metropolitan in Brooklyn will have the first New York subsequent runs starting from four to six weeks after the opening at the Astor and Capitol, Tuesday.

The picture is expected to run at least six weeks at the Capitol. The $2.20 run at the Astor may extend to late in 1940, according to MGM.

Following the opening of 10 test engagements in seven key cities by December 29, there will be no other engagements until January 18. On that date and on January 25 it will open in the additional 25 exchange centers. Starting February 1, regular runs in other key cities will follow. Loew theatres will have priority, then regular MGM accounts.

BLAME MOTHERS FOR JUVENILES' ACTIONS

As a sequel to a campaign to prevent unaccompanied children from attending late-hour shows in Columbus, Ohio, 12 mothers, charged by the juvenile court with contributing to the negligence of their offspring, were placed on probation with suspended sentences, after officers in a surprise raid found 12 children under 14 years of age conducting themselves unbecomingly at a midnight show in a downtown subsequent-run theatre.

The campaign was inaugurated following numerous complaints of children's misbehavior at these performances.

Wood Attacks, Rodgers Defends 70% Rental

The first adverse reaction on MGM's 70 per cent rental terms on "Gone with the Wind," comes from P. J. Wood, secretary of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, in Columbus, who, in the organization's current service bulletin, compliments Metro on "the straightforward announcement of its selling policy," but points out that by no stretch of the imagination is the company entitled to the terms from the average exhibitor, who "will find it impossible to justify the out-of-reason" increase if the selling policy is adhered to. Mr. Wood urges exhibitors to demand that Metro in the contract agree not to sell the picture under any more advantageous terms to any other exhibitor for at least 18 months after the announced selling plan goes into effect, and that if this provision is violated, MGM will rebate twice the rental paid.

He suggests that exhibitors further protect themselves by filing copy of the printed announcement of admissions with their local newspapers, Chambers of Commerce and Better Business Bureaus.

Mr. Rodgers called Mr. Wood's criticism unfair.

"Gone with the Wind" has not yet been offered generally, he said, and added: "Wood says nothing about MGM guaranteeing a profit (of 10 per cent) to every exhibitor who will play the picture on the announced terms."

Troy Orr has been appointed studio advertising manager for Universal, under John Joseph, succeeding J. Albert Hirsch, who resigned to return to New York.

'Pinocchio' Terms Like 'Snow White'

opening at the Paramount he will go to Miami to confer with Max Fleischer on their second cartoon feature for Paramount release.

In Detroit arrangements have been made for showing to American Legion, Federation of Women's Clubs and hospital groups. The United Theatres is running a contest for high school editors in writing advertisements for the picture.

Longer Playing Time Asked

"Pinocchio," Walt Disney's second feature color cartoon, will be sold on terms similar to those asked for "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," Ned Depinet, RKO vice-president, said. All rentals will be 50 per cent of the gross box office receipts; also a single feature policy is required as well as longer playing time.

"Snow White" was also sold on a 50-50 basis and the picture was restricted to a single bill. For that picture the exhibitor was asked to charge one price to all: the regular adult price. No decision has been reached yet for "Pinocchio."

The most important change in the "Pinocchio" selling policy is the drive for longer playing time. The records of "Snow White" showed, according to Mr. Depinet, that in more than 75 per cent of the theatres it was not played long enough to reap the full benefits of its popularity.

"Snow White" opened with a record breaking five-week engagement at the Radio City Music Hall where it grossed nearly $600,000, half the production cost.

Of the sales arrangements for "Pinocchio" Mr. Depinet said:

"While it was our original intention to roadshow 'Pinocchio,' the picture itself being of definite roadshow caliber, we have decided, as a result of requests from thousands of theatres, to make it available at an early date, in order to permit every exhibitor to take advanage of the tremendous demand.

"I know that it will outdistance the box office records set for the first Disney feature."

"Pinocchio" will not be sold on a flat rental basis to any theatre. Because it cost more to produce than "Snow White," RKO is relying on wider distribution and increased patronage to outdo "Snow White's" $8,000,000.

Release in February

The world's premiere of "Pinocchio" will be in January and the release date is February 23, at the peak of the publicity campaign. Hundreds of stores are now featuring merchandise inspired by the new Disney picture and magazines and newspapers are giving the picture editorial treatment.

One feature of the pre-release attention will be a Christmas Day presentation over CBS. Cecil B. DeMille, producer of the "Lux Radio Theatre," will present the original cast in a radio dramatization from 9:00 to 10:00 P. M., EST.

"Pinocchio" is based on the Italian classic of the same name, written by Carlo Lorenzini, under the pseudonym of Collodi.

Several million copies of a 16-page gift book are being distributed by merchants. The brochure carries space for local imprint.

One hundred and fifteen department stores in key cities are distributing a "Pinocchio" Album of Gifts.

Academy Gets New Directors

The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Science—of which the late Douglas Fairbanks, Sr., was an organizer, and the first president—on Tuesday elected 15 new board members, who are to meet Tuesday to choose officers.

Named to the board were Frank Capra, Ronald Colman, C. B. De Mille, Howard Estabrook, Clark Gable, Frank Lloyd, Mervyn LeRoy, Robert Riskin, David O. Selznick, Douglas Shearer, James Stewart, Norman Taurog, Walter Wanger, Sam Wood and Darryl Zanuck.

Frank Capra, president of the Academy appointed John Aalberg, sound director of RKO Radio studios, as a committee of one to ascertain what changes, if any, should be made in this year's rules to govern the Academy Award for achievement in Sound Recording.

At the same time a committee of film editors, including Harold J. McCord, of Warner Brothers, chairman, Anne Bauchens, Martin Cohn, Gene Milford, Murray Seldeen, Blanche Sewell and I. James Wilkinson, was appointed to consider rules for the Academy Award for Achievement in Film Editing and a committee of art directors to consider any changes in the rules which should be adopted to govern the award for art direction. This committee, under the chairmanship of Bernard Herzbrun, consists of Lionel Banks, Hans Freier, Cedric Gibbons, John Victor Mackay, Jack Otterson, Hans Peters, Van Nest Polglase and Bertram Teitelbaum.

Meanwhile a committee of special effects technicians met Monday night to discuss rules governing the Award for Special Effects. Last year the Award for Special Effects was granted to Farciot Edouart, Gordon Jennings and Loren Ryder for the outstanding photographic and sound effects in the Paramount production "Spawn of the North."

Max L. Hymes, for the last nine years controller for Movietone News, Inc., has been indicted on a charge of stealing $141,000 from the company during five years. He had been held in $25,000 bail on a short affidavit charging suspicion of grand larceny. District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey's office prepared to try the case. The controller is charged with "padding" expense accounts and losing the money on horse races.

Reade Retains Theatre

Walter Reade, New York and New Jersey circuit operator, said this week that he had retained control of the Paramount, Asbury Park boardwalk theatre, for another 10 years. He said he had given the city $70,000 in bonds and $13,584.73 in cash, covering all rents and arrearages in connection with the house. Mr. Reade said he had incurred a $300,000 loss in the operation of the theatre, but will "try again."

Houses Close in Albany Area

Seven upstate New York theatres have been closed in the Albany territory. Four of them, Schine Circuit houses, will be opened again at Christmas. They are the Regent, Amsterdam; Pontiac, Ogdensburg; Strand, Syracuse, and Palace, Watertown. Additionally, Rossi Brothers closed the Strand, Schroon Lake. The other houses closed are the Mount Pleasant, Schenectady, operated by Morris Silverman, and The Empire, Watervliet, which may be reopened shortly.

Alfred N. Sack, of the Sack Amusement Enterprises, has concluded a deal with Dr. Herbert T. Meyer, Gateway Productions, for distributing "Bad Boy," starring Johnny Downs and Rosalind Keith, for the Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Chicago and St. Louis territories and also for the eight Southeastern states.

Federation Drive Meeting

The members of the Amusement Division Committee of the New York and Brooklyn Charities held a luncheon meeting on December 12th at the Hotel Astor. David Bernstein, Major Albert Warner, co-chairman, Martin Quigley, License Commissioner Paul Moss and William Klein, attorney, gave the principal addresses.

The activities of the industry on behalf of the Federation were praised by Mr. Quigley. He described the method of voluntary support of these institutions as being truly American in spirit and action and contrasted this method of handling charity cases with that in Europe, where it is controlled by the governments.

"We have advanced from a total contribution of $30,000 some five years ago to the splendid showing of $175,000 last year," Mr. Bernstein said. "This year we expect to go even beyond that."

Others who spoke briefly were Marvin Schenck, one of the co-chairmen of the Artists Committee and Harry Buxbaum, chairman of the Exchanges Committee.

Among those who attended were: Julian Abeles, Max Blackman, Leo Brecher, Leopold Friedman, Harold Goldgraben, Herman Gluckman, Leon Goldberg, Milton Green, Monroe Greenthal, Arthur H. Israel, Joe Lee (20th-Fox), Bertram Lebhar, Milton Maier, Charles H. Moses, B. S. Moss, Eugene Picker, Sidney H. Piermont, Harold Rodner, Herman Robbins, Budd Rogers, Ed. Schnitzer, Max Seligman, Sam Shain, Charles Sonin, Sam Rosen, Max Rudnick and Robert Wolfe.

Sam Rinzler and David Weinstock of the Independent Exhibitors Committee expect a record attendance at the committee's luncheon next Tuesday at the Astor.

Canadian Composers' Unit Appeals for Higher Fees

Judgment was reserved this week by the Copyright Appeal Board of the Canadian Government on the application by the Canadian Performing Rights Society, Ltd., for increased 1940 fees.

The society wants its fee for the broadcasting of musical compositions increased from eight to 14 cents for each privately owned radio receiver. The appeal board last year rejected such a fee as excessive.

At the hearing this week the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, and the Canadian Association of Broadcasters, the latter representing independent stations, opposed the society. Colonel O. M. Biggar, Toronto lawyer, argued for the society. Canada is the only country in the world in which composers are underpaid, he said.

Talley to War Scene

Truman Talley, general manager of Movietone News, was to sail Thursday on the Italian liner Rex for Europe and war coverage conferences with his staff, to be gone a month. Bonney Powell, Movietone cameraman, accompanied Mr. Talley. Both carried gas masks "made in U. S. A."

BATTLE LINES FORM IN RADIO OVER LOOMING ARMSTRONG REVOLUTION

PART II

Large Broadcasting Systems Set in Opinion; Change, If Any, Must Come Slowly; Method Would Affect Rebroadcasts

by MARTIN QUIGLEY, JR.

The battle lines on the question of Major Edward H. Armstrong's "static-less" frequency modulation radio system are being formed. Lined up on one side are Major Armstrong and his followers who believe that all existing radios and stations must be junked—the sooner the better. Facing this group are the broadcasting men who hold that the radio industry is already established on amplitude modulation and for economic reasons alone any change, if it comes, will take time.

Some of the most important radio engineers are in the middle, facing the fire of both sides.

High Fidelity Claimed

The Armstrong frequency modulation system was described in detail in the first part of the article on this subject, in Motion Picture Herald, December 9th, page, 29. According to radio authorities, the system eliminates man-made static and gives excellent high-fidelity reception. Many engineers believe that the FM method of broadcasting will eventually make the replacement of the 40,000,000 radio sets and $75,000,000 worth of regular transmitting stations necessary.

The economic and technical difficulties facing the Armstrong system and the views of the major networks on the new method are indicated in this second section of the article. Also the connection and possible effect of FM on television and facsimile and the Telephone Company are shown.

Forty Stations in East

Public reaction to FM this Spring will help to decide the future of Armstrong's system. Ramifications of the FM system in television, facsimile and in relaying broadcasts and in reducing power costs may be of great value to the radio industry even if the public is not interested in buying FM receivers for regular programs.

CBS, NBC, WOR of the Mutual Broadcasting System, the Yankee Network in New England, WQXR, the General Electric Company in upper New York State are among the networks and stations either using or planning FM transmitting stations. Within a few months about 40 stations in the East will be using the Armstrong system.

WOR's chief engineer, J. R. Popple, is one of the enthusiastic supporters of Major Armstrong's system. WOR expects to begin FM operations by the first of the year. Mr. Popple believes that the new scientific advance will receive public acceptance because it gives better quality reception. He holds that frequency modulation will affect the radio industry in much the same way that the advent of sound changed motion pictures. As much as 99 or 99½ per cent. of the radio sets, Mr. Popple said, that are now in use are less than ten years old and the public likes modern radio sets and keeps buying the latest models so the period of transition from AM sets to FM will not be long or difficult.

BRITISH MAY TAX AD ACCESSORIES

Foreign departments of the New York home offices heard reports this week that the British Parliament may approve a new revenue tax on advertising accessories imported into the country. Details were unavailable but several companies began preparations for advance shipments of accessories to Britain in anticipation of the expected new duty.

CBS has applied for permits to erect two FM stations. Edwin King Cohan, director of engineering, praised the contribution that Major Armstrong has made to the art. However he cautioned against expecting too much from the system. AM transmission in the very short waves, which are free of natural static, has made considerable progress, said Mr. Cohan. However, he added, the difficulty remains that AM cannot entirely eliminate, in any wave length, so far is now known, man-made static.

High fidelity reception, Mr. Cohan pointed out, requires a good receiving set, a good loud speaker and a good cabinet.

NBC to Build Station

The NBC plans to begin operation of an FM transmitter on top of the Empire State Building within the next few weeks. O. B. Hanson, vice-president and chief engineer, held that Major Armstrong's FM system was a great development and improvement over the present AM (amplitude modulation) method. But Mr. Hanson pointed out that a number of reasons stand in the way of an immediate acceptance of Armstrong's system by the radio industry. In the first place he referred to the economic difficulty: people now listen over AM receivers and a growing FM audience will not be composed of new listeners but will consist of the present broadcast audience. Therefore, Mr. Hanson said, advertisers cannot be expected to pay more for the same total number of listeners.

Mr. Hanson pointed out that the average price of radio receivers sold during the past 12 months was about $20 and high fidelity FM or AM receivers cannot be produced to meet such a market price. The great mass of listeners to date have not shown any appreciation of the fidelity now available to them as attempts to market high fidelity receivers have not met with response, according to Mr. Hanson. But if the public buys FM receivers in quantity and prefers them, the NBC will serve them through FM transmitters even though it means duplicating the transmitting facilities and maintaining the existing equipment worth hundreds of thousands of dollars. Mr. Hanson pictured as the good radio of the feature one that would operate on all waves and pick up AM, FM and television. In time, he said, the AM control might be eliminated if the frequency modulation systems prove themselves and become widespread.

Less Power Needed

The Armstrong system is of particular interest to broadcasters, Mr. Hanson pointed out, because it reduces substantially the amount of power necessary for transmission to render noise free reception and also permits the development of cross country radio relays as an alternative to telephone lines for interconnecting stations. This will make possible what had been considered too expensive—a national network of television stations sometime in the future.

Related Fields Affected

The effect of Major Armstrong's FM system has not been felt by broadcasting stations and networks alone but it is also influencing the related fields of television and facsimile transmission. Even the American Telephone and Telegraph Company is experimenting with FM. In the early days of radio the Telephone Company was cool to the new medium of communication which was regarded as possible competition. A legal battle was averted when the Telephone Company reversed its decision and agreed to lease telephone wires to make broadcasting networks possible.

Armstrong's FM operates over a wide band, five times the width of the regular broadcasting band and there is not room for a larger number of stations on different wave lengths, although stations can operate on the same wave length about every 300 miles. This partly explains why the Telephone Company has an FM station under construction in New Jersey. FM might have some applications to telephone work and the Company wants a wave length if that is found to be the case. But FM is a more serious threat to the Telephone Company.

The radio industry is also interested in narrow-band FM, as distinct from the wide-band FM system developed by Major Armstrong. Narrow-band FM is expected to have the same effects as the wide-band system and also would make room for many more stations operating on different wave bands, a fact that would please the FCC. The narrow-band FM systems are still in the experimental stage and their effectiveness is yet to be proved.

Television to Benefit

Television is also influenced by FM developments. The two are rather closely related in some ways: both operate in about the same wave-lengths and growth in one may temporarily retard the other. However, in time, both will probably benefit because, according to Major Armstrong, both the sound and sight part of television will be much more satisfactory if transmitted by FM and FM makes television relays much simpler and more economical.

Hence FM helps television materially and will make it greater competition for motion picture theatres, it was pointed out.

Both FM and television operate on waves that travel in approximately straight lines. This explains why the transmitters are mounted on the highest points possible. The NBC television station is on the Empire State building and the CBS on the Chrysler building. Both will probably have the same points for their FM stations. Major Armstrong's station at Alpine is 1,000 feet above sea level.

Television has been called a threat to the motion picture and facsimile to the newspaper. The Armstrong FM system not only is expected to make radio much better and hence stronger competition, but will also improve television and facsimile and perhaps hasten the day when they will become competition, according to the opinion of men familiar with FM and competent to gauge its future. Leading radio engineers feel that the decision rests with the public and the Federal Communications Commission: if FM radio sets are bought and people like the new and better transmission, AM will yield in the march of progress.

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS DIES IN HIS SLEEP

Star, Producer, and United Artists Co-founder Began Career with Triangle Films in 1914

Douglas Fairbanks, Sr., actor, producer, and world traveler, a founder-partner of United Artists, died in his sleep at one a.m. Tuesday in his Santa Monica Beach home in California. Death followed a heart attack.

Had Stage Career

Mr. Fairbanks, born May 23, 1884, in Denver, Col., educated at Denver City schools and the Colorado School of Mines, forsook engineering to become an actor on the vaudeville and legitimate stage. At the age of 30, in 1914, after several years on the stage he started on a motion picture career in a film entitled "The Lamb."

His entrance into the infant picture business was not an auspicious one. The Triangle Film Corporation, with David Wark Griffith, Thomas H. Ince and Mack Sennett as the leading lights, had just been formed. While Mr. Griffith was busy in California the Triangle chiefs scouted for talent in New York. Adams and Charles Kessel and C. O. Bauman signed the actor for Triangle. Mr. Fairbanks had been sought for pictures before when Daniel Frohman decoyed him into the Famous Players studio but that had come to naught. Now he was signed by Triangle for 10 weeks at $2,000 per week and Mr. Griffith wasn't any too pleased.

Mr. Fairbanks was relatively unknown and Mr. Griffith had plenty to do. Terry Ramsaye, in "A Million and One Nights" says of that relationship: "Griffith was not pleased with the new star's athletic tendencies. Fairbanks seemed to have a notion that in a motion picture one had to keep eternally in motion, and he frequently jumped the fence or climbed a church at unexpected moments not prescribed by the script. Griffith advised him to go into Keystone comedies."

Years later, in 1925, in an article that appeared in Vanity Fair Mr. Fairbanks said: "The art of the screen is almost purely emotional—as a painting, an opera, or a church service is emotional. Without sacrificing this most important value, it can not teach, philosophize, too much, or, in short attempt to address itself, as words do, to the thought processes."

From 1914 to 1917 Fairbanks appeared in Triangle productions, including "Double Trouble," "Reggie Mixes In," "His Pictures in the Papers," "The Americano," "The Habit of Happiness," "The Matrimaniac," "Flirting with Fate," "The Good Bad Man," "The Half Breed" and "American Aristocracy."

Joins Zukor

In 1917 Adolph Zukor's star was in the ascendency and Triangle's was dimming. Zukor gathered into Artcraft all the major stars of Triangle and among these was Mr. Fairbanks.

Douglas Fairbanks meanwhile had been driving himself upward into the top rank of stardom by dint of ability and crafty management. It was around that time that Charles Chaplin had signed that $670,000 contract and Mary Pickford had topped that with a million dollar contract signed by Mr. Zukor. Mr. Fairbanks was much in the company of these stars and publicity copy inspired by Benny Zeidman went forth containing the phrase "Doug will soon be in the same class with Charlie and Mary." He soon was.

In the World War the Treasury Department down in Washington had sought the help of motion picture stars to sell the Liberty Loans. The stars included Fairbanks, Chaplin and Miss Pickford. They made personal appearances at meetings and little trailer pictures of them were added to theatre programs. This activity established acquaintance between the stars and William G. McAdoo, Secretary of the Treasury, and his publicity engineer, Oscar Price. It was Price who had suggested in those days: "Why don't you folks get together and distribute your own pictures?

DOUG THE FIRST

Incorporated in 1919

The idea bore fruit early in 1919. In McAdoo's Santa Barbara bungalow the old friends of the Liberty Loan campaigns talked it over. The friends included Mr. Fairbanks, Miss Pickford, Mr. Chaplin and Mr. Griffith. From this and subsequent meetings the United Artists Corporation of Delaware was incorporated in April of 1919 with Mr. Price as president and Mr. McAdoo its general counsel. These two withdrew from the company shortly and were followed by Mr. Griffith but Mr. Fairbanks, Mr. Chaplin and Miss Pickford continued on, the star's death on Tuesday marking the end of the triumvirate of partner-founders of United Artists that existed through many changes in the company's corporate and talent personnel.

As his own producer and star, Mr. Fairbanks made such popular films as "His Majesty the American," "The Mollycoddle," "The Mark of Zorro," "The Three Musketeers," "Robin Hood," "The Nut," "The Thief of Bagdad," "Don Q, Son of Zorro," "The Black Pirate," "The Gaucho" and "The Iron Mask."

"The Black Pirate" was made in 1925 and was the culmination of several years of tentative experimentation by Mr. Fairbanks with color. The film attempted to subdue hues and tones to escape the bold garishness which had characterized most color film products.

Mr. Fairbanks and Mary Pickford, nee Gladys Mary Smith, were married on March 27th, 1920. He was 36, she 26 and for both it was a second marriage. Fairbanks first wife was Beth Sully, who bore him a son, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., on December 9, 1907, in New York, and the son followed his father to stardom in motion pictures. Miss Pickford had previously been married to Owen Moore, the actor. Their marriage and Pickfair, the picturesque estate outside Hollywood, which they had built, was much in the public print.

Fifteen years later they were divorced. In 1936 Mr. Fairbanks married Lady Sylvia Ashley, former English actress, who was at their Santa Monica Beach home when death came to the actor-producer. Mary Pickford has since become the wife of Buddy Rogers, former screen actor and now a band leader.

With the advent of sound Mr. Fairbanks co-starred with Miss Pickford, then his wife, in "The Taming of the Shrew," all-talking film.

Following the completion of "Reaching for the Moon," Mr. Fairbanks made a trip around the world and decided to combine business with pleasure. He made a film record of his travels and released this film December 12, 1931, under the title "Around the World in 80 Minutes with Douglas Fairbanks." This went so well that he decided to go into this sort of thing seriously. His next was "Mr. Robinson Crusoe."

He joined Alexander Korda's London Films in 1933 and was instrumental in the Korda alliance as a partner with United Artists. He appeared in "The Private Life of Don Juan" for London Films in that year.

In 1938 he formed a new company, Albion Films, and planned to make two or three films in Hollywood for United Artists release.

Catholics Renew Decency Pledge

The congregations of Roman Catholic churches all over the country on Sunday repeated the pledge of the Legion of Decency, which was inaugurated six years ago by the bishops of the United States and which is renewed each year.

The pledge follows:

"I condemn indecent and immoral motion pictures, and those which glorify crime or criminals.

"I promise to do all I can to strengthen public opinion against the production of indecent and immoral films, and to unite with all those who protest against them.

"I acknowledge my obligation to form a right conscience about pictures that are dangerous to my moral life. As a member of the Legion of Decency, I pledge myself to remain away from them. I promise, further, to stay away altogether from places of amusement which show them as a matter of policy."

The Legion of Decency is supervised by an Episcopal committee composed of Archbishop John T. McNicholas of Cincinnati, chairman; Archbishop John J. Cantwell of Los Angeles, Bishop Hugh C. Boyle of Pittsburg, Bishop John F. Noll of Fort Wayne, Ind., and Bishop Stephen J. Donahue, Auxiliary Bishop of New York.

Of 11 pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week four were approved for general patronage and seven were approved for adults. The films and their classification follow.

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "The Great Victor Herbert," "Henry Goes to Arizona," "Inspector Hornleigh on Holiday," "Two Thoroughbreds." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "The Cisco Kid and the Lady," "Destry Rides Again," "The Devil Is an Empress" (Le Joueur D'Eches) (French), "Fugitive at Large,""Goose-Step" (Beasts of Berlin). "The Return of Dr. X," "Tear Gas Squad."

PRESSURE FROM LABOR EASES OFF; CIO ABANDONS EXHIBITION INVASION

Minor Negotiations Proceed in Peace as Storm Raised by Studio Unions Subsides; Both Sides Await February

The motion picture business this week enjoyed the quietest week in many a month on its labor front. The producer-distributors received no sweeping strike ultimatums for large scale salary increases from any of the big union groups, such as marked those which in recent weeks gave some 15,000 studio craftsmen wage raises. The comparatively small group of the Screen Publicists Guild got higher rates, in peaceful negotiations, and negotiations were going forward quietly with exchange workers on a new basic pact.

A 15 per cent wage increase for extras and a new classification of extra work will be asked of the producers by the Screen Actors' Guild, it was decided at a meeting in Hollywood Monday night. Negotiations will open Tuesday.

Increases To Be Arbitrated

The week also brought out that the 10 per cent increase in basic wages granted last week to the 4,000 Hollywood members of the Teamsters & Chauffeurs, Electrical Workers and Carpenters & Joiners Internationals at Atlantic City is subject to arbitration for its continuance beyond next February as in the case of the 10 per cent increase recently granted to the IATSE and the A. F. of L. studio unions not covered by the five year basic agreement. Provision was made at the Atlantic City meeting for a reopening of the wage question in February to let producers show whether industry conditions at that time make it impractical to continue the increases. The burden of proof will rest on the producers. If no agreement is reached at the conferences starting February 15th, the question will be submitted to arbitration.

Negotiations with the three Internationals covered in the Atlantic City meeting will be held in the East immediately after the wage issue is settled with the IATSE and other A. F. of L. studio crafts in Hollywood. If the question is submitted to arbitration, several weeks would be consumed in that process and the negotiations in the East would not get under way until March.

The position of the producers at Atlantic City, as it was in Hollywood, was that the increases should not be granted at this time because of declining foreign business and new restrictions on the withdrawal of currency.

Screen Publicists Win Raise

The Screen Publicists Guild reached a final agreement with producers over a collective bargaining contract on December 7th and attorneys are preparing drafts for signature of company heads. The Guild threatened last week to join the IATSE if the producers did not yield to their demands. The agreement provides for a minimum weekly salary to press agents with three or more years experience and the salary provision is retroactive to October 9th as the Guild had asked. In some case the pay increase amounted to 100 per cent, according to the Guild.

The agreement was reached after a long conference between Joseph M. Schenck, E. J. Mannix and Y. Frank Freeman for the producers and Bill Edwards, president of the Guild and George Bodle. After the meeting a short statement was issued which said in part:

"The Guild wishes to express its gratitude to Joseph M. Schenck for his important contribution in bringing about the agreement and for his sympathetic understanding throughout the negotiations."

Exchange Talks Continue

Negotiations on a new wage agreement for the Film Exchange Employees Union began in New York on December 7th. The Union has about 3,500 members in the 31 exchange centers. The conferences were held at the Warner Brothers office. A base contract for the whole country is being negotiated to take the place of the first agreement made two years ago. Wage increases are being asked. The conferences were continued through the week.

Equity Asks Increase

Actors' Equity will seek a $10 increase to the present minimum of $40 next season for performers on the legitimate stage in New York, according to Paul Dullzell, executive secretary. Equity asserted that few actors in first-grade Broadway plays are now receiving less than $50 a week and that the increase would affect only performers in "shoestring" productions.

Under the terms of the ticket code contract between the League of New York Theatres and Equity, the latter must give 90 days notice before requesting any changes in the basic employment contract and must wait an additional 90 days before placing such changes in effect. No change could be made before June 9th and the basic agreement expires at the end of the

EMPLOYERS UPHELD IN HIRING RIGHTS

An employer has the right, under the National Labor Relations Act, to hire union or non-union workers, according to a ruling made December 11th by the New York Federal Circuit Court of Appeals. This decision overrules the order of the National Labor Relations Board, directing the National Casket Company, Inc., to reinstate seven employees with back pay.

Judge Thomas W. Swan in the prevailing opinion wrote: "The purpose of the act is not to compel an employer to hire members of one union rather than another or union men rather than non-union men. We do not understand, therefore, that an employer may not, under pain of committing an unfair labor practice, select an A. F. L. member in preference to a C. I. O. member or a non-union man in preference to either if all three are applicants for the same position."

The dissenting opinion of Judge Learned Hand did not question of the general principle of the majority decision but was on the application to the particular case.

Notice That Charter Applied for by New York Union Has Been Withheld Taken as Signal of Withdrawal

Components of John L. Lewis' Congress for Industrial Organization appears to have abandoned ambitious plans, at least in New York, to organize non-unionized motion picture theatre employes, original moves in that direction having brought attacks by William Green's American Federation of Labor, in line with the two national organizations' fights up and down the country, in nearly every important field, for union supremacy. Not that the CIO was accredited with having much chance of dominating motion picture unionism, what with the strong hold in production and exhibition already held by the AFL's IATSE and other film and studio union affiliates.

Charter Withheld

Word that the CIO had withdrawn from organizing theatre employes, including non-IATSE projectionists, at least in New York, came unexpectedly Monday through correspondence between the Empire State Motion Picture Operators Union, an independent projectionists union in New York, and the CIO's United Retail and Wholesale Employees of America, which undertook the task of organizing theatre employes for the John Lewis group.

The CIO's United Retail and Wholesale Employees union had chartered the Theatrical Service Employees, Local 258, in June of this year, given it jurisdiction to organize all theatre employees—projectionists, ushers, cashiers, doormen and theatre matrons. When Service Employees Local 258 began to organize projectionists in some independent theatres in the New York area, Empire State Operators complained against the "invasion" to the State Labor Relations Board, and also to the national CIO and to the Theatrical Service Employees' parent Wholesale and Retail Employees Union.

Empire and the Wholesale-Retail Employees Union subsequently entered into negotiations, on September 1st, for the issuance of a charter to Empire by Wholesale-Retail Employees, as a result of which the latter agreed to sever relations with the Theatrical Service Employees, Local 258.

Although Empire and Wholesale-Retail Employees at the September meeting did not arrive at any conclusion with respect to a charter for Empire, Empire says that, nevertheless, it left with the impression that Wholesale-Retail's severance of ties with Theatrical Service Employees would be affected, according to William Santarsiero, recording secretary for Empire.

Believing, as a result of later events, that the severance would not be made, Empire, three weeks ago, asked Wholesale-Retail Employees for a "showdown," and this week received word from John Cooney, secretary of Wholesale-Retail, that "our organization (meaning, the CIO), has withdrawn from the field of organization among the motion picture operators in New York."

EQUITY REVISING RULES ON AGENTS

present Broadway season, May 31st, 1940. Equity has turned over the matter to its attorneys to prepare a written report. The League has made no official statements on the wage increase demanded by Equity.

Actors Equity is also revising the rules governing agents. Action is expected within a few weeks. The Equity council has made several announcements to members that its rules have been violated. Agents, on the other hand, claim that Equity's rules are too strict. The agents seek the right to charge a uniform 10 per cent. At present Equity members may hire only agents holding permits from Equity.

Equity has divided agents into three classes: 1.—Employment agents who may charge no more than five per cent of an actor's salary for a period not to exceed 10 weeks; 2.—Special employment representatives who must be prepared to give more personal and more expert service than employment agents. These must personally negotiate all details of the contract and obtain a salary of at least $125 a week for the actor and may charge five per cent for the run of the play; 3.—Personal representatives who must guarantee to use the actor's service for a minimum of 20 weeks' employment during a season and at not less than the actor's average salary for the past three years. In no case is the minimum permitted to be less than $100 a week. Only agents in this class can charge ten per cent. Very few agents have permits for the third category.

Fourth Trial for Nick

The fourth trial of John P. Nick, St. Louis former head of the Motion Picture Operators' Union, charged with extorting $10,000 from theatre owners, is scheduled for January 8th. The first two attempts to try Nick ended in mistrials and for reasons that were not explained Circuit Court Judge Oakley discharged the jury of the third trial. Certain members of the Union, Local 143, IATSE, asked for an injunction forbidding Nick and his business agent, Clyde A. Weston, from taking any part in the union's affairs. The judge granted that request on December 6th.

Projectionist Reinstated

The Empire State Operators Union won a point in its dispute with United Theatrical Service Employes Union when Louis Katz, acting for the State Mediation Board, decided that Walter Underhill, Empire projectionist, who was dismissed last November was entitled to reinstatement at the Grand, Brooklyn.

American Investors Union

Bernard Reis, accountant for the Associated Actors & Artistes of America who served in the same capacity in the Loew's stockholders' action, has been appointed executive director of the newly organized American Investors Union. The purpose of the organization is to analyze security issues in the amusement and other industrial fields. The board members of the new group include: John T. Flynn, financial writer; George Seldes; Paul Kern, president of the New York Civil Service Commission; New York City Councilman Robert Straus and Colston Warne, professor of economics at Amherst.

Providence Theatre Signs

Loew's State, Providence, is the first theatre to sign with Local B-129 Theatrical Employees, IATSE affiliate. The agreement, reached after over a year's negotiations, was announced by H. M. Addison, New England division manager for Loew's and Albert Byrnes, head of the local. The contract runs until Labor Day, 1941 and provides a six day week for all affected, ushers, doormen, cashiers, porters and other front house employees. The union officials believe that the other Providence theatres will soon sign.

New Haven Union Elects

Local 74 of the IATSE, covering employees in New Haven, Ansonia and Derby, reelected the following officers: John S. O'Connell, president; Daniel B. Cummings, business agent; Charles McBride, vice-president; Robert Watson, secretary; Charles Langley, treasurer. Edward O'Connell, Si Rudnick and James Carter are executive board members.

Photographers Election

Local 644 of the international photographers, IATSE, reelected all their officers last week. The officers are: Howard Muller, president; Charles Downs, business agent; Frank Kirby, treasurer; and Jay Rescher, secretary. There were no opposing candidates.

Nominated for 25th Term

Clarence King, treasurer of Musicians Local No. 6, San Francisco, for the past 24 years, has been renominated without opposition for his 25th term. Walter A. Wener, president for 18 of the last 19 years is opposed by Elmer Hubbard whom he defeated by 54 votes in last year's election.

WQXR Workers Vote

The National Labor Relations Board has announced that the operators, engineers and technicians of the Interstate Broadcasting Company, Inc., owners of WQXR in New York, would vote within 30 days to decide whether they would be represented by Local No. 913, Radio Broadcast Technicians & Engineers Union, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers (AFL) or by the American Communications Association (CIO) or by neither.

Networks Act as Agents

The National Broadcasting Company and the Columbia Broadcasting System through their respective Artists bureaus have closed contracts with the Screen Actors Guild and the American Guild of Musical Artists under which the networks have permission to act as agents for actors and artists in the motion picture and concert fields.

Newsreel Union Asks Increase

Negotiations between the International Photographers Union (newsreel cameramen) and the newsreel companies have been going on for some time. The new contract is reaching final form. On Tuesday the newsreel company men met with Pat Casey, labor contact man, and discussed the requests made by the union. Included in the compromise agreement is a 10 per cent wage increase to all cameramen earning $100 or less a week and a flat raise of $10 to the men getting more than that figure. The increase will be retroactive to the early part of October. The newsreel companies are not in favor of giving severance pay, feeling that this would make it difficult for them to keep staffs at maximum efficiency. The union wanted a flat 10 per cent increase, severance pay, traveling expenses and a number of other points. The union also wished to cut down on the exchange of prints. This will probably be done except where government regulations or some other factor makes such a policy necessary.

Congressional Committee Attacks NLRB For "Messy" Rulings, Citing IATSE Case

A special House committee formed to investigate the National Labor Relations Board heard William M. Leiserson, the newest board member, sharply criticize methods and rulings of the board and assert that Nathan Witt, secretary of the board, was unfit and unfair. Mr. Leiserson also stated that he had refused to participate in a number of cases which he considered to have been handled before he was appointed to the board.

Mr. Leiserson testified against the board's handling of the IATSE case in which the board ordered an election in the major motion picture companies which was won by the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees (an A. F. of L. group). Another case, involving Universal Films, was also called "messy" by the board member.

The objection against the handling of the IATSE case was that the decision was based on "partial and unintelligible oral recitations of the secretary and his assistants. They didn't know the facts in the cases, and their conversation showed they would not understand the significance of the facts if they did not know them." There was no specific identification of the case in mind.

The House committee, under the chairmanship of Representative Howard W. Smith, is all set for a lengthy series of hearings, at which the activities of the board will be deeply probed. It is possible that the investigation will require as much as three months, and it is likely that the handling of West Coast cases will be a feature. Some cases involving the motion picture companies will be reviewed, it is believed.

The committee on Tuesday heard a memorandum by a regional director to the effect that John Boettiger, publisher of the Seattle Post-Intelligencer, and son-in-law of President Roosevelt, had criticized a decision of the board concerning his newspaper, which is Hearst's publication. Mr. Boettiger is a former assistant to Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America.

COAST OWNER CONFERENCE GROWS; WICHITA CLEARANCE CODE IS SIGNED

Northwest Units Joining New Congress; Meetings Set in Virginia, New York, Philadelphia; Brandt To Speak

A Pacific Coast Conference of independent theatre owners is proceeding rapidly with organization, enfolding various units of exhibitors formerly allied with other state or national organizations, or still allied with them, and groups of exhibitors without any affiliation. Oregon exhibitors have joined, under the name Independent Theatre Owners of Oregon; the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of the Northwest has become the Washington Independent Theatre Owners, in the Conference.

Meanwhile, exhibitor organization activity in other parts included the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Virginia's legislative committee meeting in Richmond; the national Allied States Association casting about for a 1940 national convention site, and favoring Atlantic City; a New York Allied state meeting in Buffalo; a meeting of the independent theatre operators of Philadelphia scheduled for Thursday, the guest speaker to be Harry Brandt, president under the name Independent Theatre Owners Association, who has been talking around the country against the Neely Bill.

Form Oregon Independents; Affiliate with Conference

The Oregon group was formed in Portland last Wednesday, after a meeting in which Robert Poole, executive secretary of the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners, addressed members. Fifteen directors were elected to represent all outlying situations, as well as Portland.

George Hunt was elected temporary chairman of the day; Robert White, of the Robert White Theatres, Portland, was elected chairman of the board of directors, temporarily.

The group decided on a "no officers" policy, the chief executive to be the executive secretary. On the board were named Mr. White, Jesse Jones, and Ted Gamble, of Portland; Bill McKevitt, of Newport; Wesley Johnson, of Eugene; Avery Combs, of Newberg; Milton Odem, of Redmond; Mr. Hunt, of Medford; W. A. Graeper, of Portland; Ray Grobacher, of Portland; Dude Smith, of Tilamook, Oscar Phelps, of Hillsboro; Ray Stumbo, of Salem; Art Kolstead, of Hood River; Don Myers, of La Grande.

It was claimed 80 out of the state's 132 theatres are represented by the new unit.

Coast Independent Group's Seattle Unit Organizes

The initial meeting of the new Seattle, Washington, unit of the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners was held last week. The organization had been the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of the Northwest. Its new name is the Washington Independent Theatre Owners. Its executive secretary is James Hone, an executive of the old unit. There will be no officers; merely a board of directors, and the executive secretary.

Directors are Leroy Johnson, Paul Westlund, L. O. Lukan, B. F. Shearer, John Lanz, Seattle; S. Dean, Tacoma; W. G. Ripley, Longview; Fred Mercy, Jr., Yakima; Howard McBride, Spokane; E. W. Grossbeck, Enumclaw; M. Kenworthy, Moscow, Idaho; Charles Grieme, Wenatchee; C. L. Gwinn, Centralia; Ed Halberg, Port Angeles; Michael Barovic, Puyallup.

Virginia MPTO Legislative Committee in Richmond

The Virginia MPTO's legislative committee met for the first time in Richmond last Wednesday, discussing routine organizational matters, and the coming session of the legislature in January. The committee went on record for the adoption of a statewide uniform safety code, with the qualification that it be not too drastic.

On the committee were Morton G. Thalheimer, vice-chairman; Charles A. Somma, chairman; Sam Bendheim, Jr., Harold Wood, Allen Sparrow, A. Frank O'Brien, Herman Rubin, Sydney Gates, Hunter Perry, J. Ellyson Loth, Rives S. Brown, Nat Glasser, A. Julian Brylawski Elmore D. Heins, R. C. Overbey, Charles Roth, Ben Pitts, and C. C. Lincoln.

New York Allied Opposes Neely Bill

Allied of New York, meeting Wednesday at Buffalo, voted opposition to the Neely Bill on the ground that it would be "detrimental to the independent owner." Max Cohen, president, described it as "the greatest form of suicide we could ever get ourselves into."

The meeting also heard Mr. Cohen report on the completion of a state trade practice code with distributors. (See column 3.)

Officers elected were: Mr. Cohen, president; Ray Pashley, vice-president; Joseph Rosenzweig, treasurer; Thomas Di Lorenzo, assistant treasurer; Abe Levy, secretary, and the following regional vice-presidents: Irving Sherman, New York; Mitchell Convery, Albany; Rapp Merriman, Syracuse; William Tischoff, Rochester, and Herman Lorence, Buffalo.

The organization completely revamped its constitution and by-laws.

At a meeting of the Albany unit the previous day plans were made to hold monthly sessions.

National Allied May Meet in Atlantic City

National Allied may meet in Atlantic City in 1940 convention, it was said this week. The organization has not held a convention in the East for several years. The national board meeting in Washington next month, will decide the location, and the date. The annual convention is usually held late in May or early in June.

Brandt Talks to Quaker City Independent Owners

Harry Brandt, president of the New York Independent Theatre Owners' Association, returning from a visit to the coast studios and from talks with exhibitors throughout the country, sounding out sentiment on industry problems and the Neely Bill, was scheduled to address a luncheon meeting of Philadelphia's independent exhibitors Thursday, at the Warwick Hotel.

Texans Protest Neely Bill at Dallas Meet

A meeting of Texas exhibitors, against the Neely Bill, was to have been held on Tuesday at the Baker Hotel, Dallas, at the behest of Roy Walker, president of the Theatre Owners' Protective Association. Theatre men from four Congressional districts had been expected.

Kansas Exhibitors Adopt Local Agreement; Distributor Trade Pact with New York Allied Announced by Max Cohen

Wichita, Kansas, exhibitors this week made effective a new clearance schedule and fair trade code, and a virtual Utopia in exhibitor-distributor relationship in New York was pictured by Max A. Cohen, president of the State Allied Theatre Owners, in announcing on Wednesday at the unit's convention in Buffalo that he had completed negotiations with eight distributors for the establishment of a state fair practice code.

State Machinery Set Up

Reporting the progress made by a committee at the last state meeting in Syracuse, November 1st, Mr. Cohen said the organization had succeeded in preparing the code for operation. Under it, according to Mr. Cohen, there will be a clarified and definite sales policy and cancellation clause, the last a graduated scale of 20, 15 and 10 per cent. He said there would be no more "forcing of shorts."

The Allied president reported that Paramount, Warners, MGM, Columbia, Monogram Republic, United Artists and Universal were parties to the agreement and that RKO and 20th Century-Fox were expected to follow.

Conciliation boards are to be set up in New York City, Albany and Buffalo.

15 Sign Wichita Pact

Signing of the Wichita agreement by operators of the 15 theatres in that city came three weeks after the independents, headed by O. F. Sullivan of the Civic theatre and president of the Wichita Independent Owners Association, started a campaign on clearance practices.

The clearance schedule materially shortens clearance between runs, and it penalizes the exhibitor using triples, or admission evasion schemes, a year in availability. The fair trade practice code eliminates all two-for-one admissions, one cent sales, script books of more than 10 per cent discount, premiums, and all plans or schemes whatsoever that would in any way be an evasion of the adult price.

The new clearance is effective on pictures completing their first run December 15 or after, and the code is effective December 24.

Contrary to impressions held previously, the arrangement was worked out "perfectly harmoniously" between the independents and Fox Theatres, declared Mr. Sullivan, this week.

Fox Theatres Corporation was under no compulsion by his organization; there was no "ultimatum"; merely an agreement between all parties, under a realization of mutual advantage, Mr. Sullivan pointed out.

"It is true we sent a form letter to the branch managers and general sales managers of all film companies, and to the Fox Theatres, requesting a conference. But no 'ultimatum' was submitted," Mr. Sullivan said.

"This is the first time in 15 years that all the independent theatre operators have gotten together," he added, "and have all agreed to a fair trade practice code—and when Elmer Rhoden, of Kansas City, southwestern manager for Fox Theatres, realized this, his spirit of cooperation was gratifying to our members.

"The very quick results we have realized have proven definitely that, if independent exhibitors learn to work together and eliminate unfair trade practices themselves, they will in many situations find that circuit operators will cooperate."

NOW PICKFORD SEEKS MORE PLAYING TIME

Makes Plea for "Modernization" of Exhibition Methods; Cites Potentialities of New Films

by WILLIAM F. CROUCH

in Chicago

Hollywood's familiar expression of "longer and better playing time," directed to all exhibitors, more frequently since producers started to talk economics and the international situation, was voiced again this week, this time by Mary Pickford, who was in Chicago on a visit. She cited "Snow White" and "Gone with the Wind" as two reasons for extended runs.

Asks "Modernization"

"Present exhibition methods are ten years behind the times," said Mary, former star who is returning to producing.

"What this business needs most is for exhibition to get caught up with production. Today we find the exhibition setup the same as it was ten years ago. In the meantime the production of pictures has advanced a great deal but the ways of showing them haven't kept pace."

The way the situation now stands, according to Miss Pickford, is that the good pictures do not get the amount of playing time they should. Good pictures get no more dates than the poorer ones in many cases, Miss Pickford contends.

Cites "Gone with the Wind"

Hope for a drastic change in this present system will come from the experiences encountered in the showing of "Gone With the Wind," Miss Pickford believes. The establishment of certain regulations that control the showing of this film which will be released generally next month, will have a great deal to do with exhibition policies in the future, the actress said. The method of exhibiting "Gone With the Wind' will bring about a reorganization of the present exhibition setup and help to bring it up to date, she believes.

Observing that Walt Disney in his handling of the exhibition of "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," started this new trend towards getting more playing time for good pictures, Miss Pickford says that MGM in handling their new picture which is of superspecial proportions will go even farther and this in turn will be followed by other producers such as Charles Chaplin with "The Dictator."

With world conditions what they are, the need for more revenue from each picture is greater than ever, she says; big pictures cannot succeed unless they are given longer runs. The producer has to have a chance to get every possible dollar out of a picture if the present high standard of films is maintained or greater standards of quality are achieved.

"Great Box Office Possibilities"

In Chicago to spend the holidays with her husband, Buddy Rogers, whose orchestra is now appearing at the Drake Hotel, Miss Pickford was most enthusiastic over the possibility of "Gone With the Wind" and other big pictures setting new styles in exhibition. She said that Hollywood executives who had seen it said it was the greatest picture they had ever seen. She also brought word from Hollywood that Charlie Chaplin's new picture was to be the finest he had ever made and that it would be of great boxoffice proportions.

Regarding her own plans Miss Pickford said that she expected to start a production company of her own soon after the first of the year. Her greatest problem, she said, was to get her husband to give up his orchestra work and start in the production end of the picture business or act in pictures which had suitable roles for him.

Financial arrangements for her company have been completed, Miss Pickford said. She has numerous story properties of her own which she plans to produce as well as options on several that are of interest.

Will Not Make "Kiki"

Regarding the story "Kiki" which she owns, Miss Pickford said that RKO was interested in buying the yarn for Jean Arthur. Miss Pickford would herself like to produce the picture with Danielle Darrieux in the title role. Chances for such a production were very remote, she observed. Miss Darrieux's commitments to other companies, if she returns to the U. S. from France where she now resides, would prohibit such a deal, it is believed.

What company would release Miss Pickford's proposed films has not been decided. In all probability it would be United Artists.

If "Gone With the Wind" makes it possible for a domestic gross of $10,000,000 to be reached as expected, Miss Pickford believes that other equally pretentious productions will be made as it will then be possible to have a system for exhibiting such pictures so that they can get the necessary grosses to warrant their production.

While in Chicago Miss Pickford and her husband will make plans for their forthcoming production venture. Rogers has been reluctant to act in pictures produced by his wife, but said that if several stories she has in mind have suitable roles he will play. On one thing he was adamant. "I'll never make another college picture." "I played college boy parts for ten years," said Buddy, "and I can assure you that although I've graduated from such roles, it wasn't with honors, at least not at the boxoffice."

Brandt Affiliate Buys Warner 1940 Lineup

Kaybern Theatres, independent circuit in New York, operated and controlled by Ben Knoble and Joe Katsch, on Monday signed for all Warner 1939-40 product, according to Carl Leserman, Warners assistant general sales manager.

The Knoble-Katsch Kaybern company is one of several New York independent circuits for which Harry Brandt interests handle film buying. The new deal with Warners was thought a sequel to attacks on Warner pictures and policies by the Brandt interests in the Independent Theatre Owners of New York.

Mr. Katsch signed the deal for Kaybern, Edward Schnitzer, for Warners.

Shoot Museum Scenes

Scenes for the forthcoming Osa Johnson picture, "I Married Adventure," were filmed this week at the American Museum of Natural History, New York. She appeared with Trubee Davidson, president of the museum. The scenes will form the introduction to Mrs. Johnson's picture, featuring her life with her late explorer-husband, Martin Johnson, in expeditions to the South Seas, Borneo and Africa. "I Married Adventure" will be an early 1940 Columbia release.

Walker Defends Film Industry At Club Dinner

The Variety Club dinner held at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel in Philadelphia Sunday night produced an unexpected highlight when Frank C. Walker, head of the Comerford Circuit and general counsel of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, addressed the gathering in what amounted to a vigorous defense of the motion picture industry. Among his listeners was Burton K. Wheeler, Senator from Montana, the principal speaker of the evening.

Cites Industry Record

Mr. Walker said that he had been in the film business for 15 years and that there was no industry in the country in which transactions with so much money involved were completed without contracts being signed as in the film industry. He said no other endeavor could match this record.

He urged that Senator Wheeler take back to his colleagues in Washington some idea of the type of executives in the motion picture business and said that no business had contributed so much to the educational, artistic and entertainment progress of the country as had the film industry.

Mr. Walker said the industry has always been on the defensive for reasons not apparent to him.

Also on the dais were Ted Schlanger, Jules Levy, Abe Montague, William J. Clark, John Harris, Jay Cooke, Louis Krouse, Gilbert Seldes, Dr. Leon Levy, Jack Kelly, George J. Schaefer, Senator Joseph Guffey, Joseph Bernhard, Jack Berisen, Harold Hoffman, Albert Greenfield, George Munger, Jay Emanuel, Earle Sweigert and Fred Waring. James J. Walker, former Mayor of New York, was toastmaster, and Milton Berle, ringmaster.

Postpone Pittsburgh Drive

A new state law has caused temporary postponement of an annual charity drive co-sponsored by the Pittsburgh Variety Club Tent No. 1, Station KDKA, and The Pittsburgh Press. Held yearly before Christmas, the city-wide Milk Fund Drive and the beneficiary institutions have been notified by John H. Harris, chairman, that the seventh annual campaign for funds to purchase milk for children in more than 30 institutions throughout Allegheny County, has been postponed until Spring, due to the uncertainty about the new state milk control laws that contain provisions about the selling of milk by dairymen and dsitributors below retail price.

The Club has taken on sponsorship of the opening night of "Ice Follies of 1940" at Duquesne Garden Christmas night, hoping to raise $6,000 to enlarge and redecorate the Club's quarters in the William Penn Hotel. The Club will hold its annual Christmas party for children December 23d in the Club's quarters.

Open New Tent

Tent No. 22 of the Variety Club of Oklahoma City, the newest unit in the national organization, opened quarters in the Penthouse of the Black Hotel in that city last week. The Club now has 85 members. The Tent will give a Christmas party for seven orphanages during Christmas week, according to William Moran, chairman of the party committee. Griffith Amusement Company trucks will transport equipment donated by National Theatre Supply for films to be shown the children. Gifts and candy for each orphan will also be provided.

Bill Rodgers and Al Lichtman, along with Howard Dietz, all at Metro, may have their "streamlinings" for Mr. Selznick's "Gone With the Wind," but Monty MacLevy, in New York, is streamlining, slenderizing, glamourizing on the wholesale, also figure conditioning to shape the contours of the ladies of the land in the best motion picture exploitation traditions.

Monty MacLevy—he once told us that the "Mac" is for "protection"—was chief of press agentry for Randforce Theatres, in Brooklyn, until, a few years ago, he turned his exploitation eye to his family's MacLevy Gymnasium, which then was holding forth for the attempted benefiting of a bunch of pluguglies, in Madison Square Garden's sports arena, New York.

Monty saw certain possibilities, and elevated the business from a single "gym" of the sweat-shirt, alcohol-rubbing variety, to that of the MacLevy Slenderizing Salon, lifted pinky class, with chromiumed machines of science for slenderizing, and exploitating the idea with such force that today he has eight slenderizing salons in Greater New York and 50 operated under his personal system, in the field. Paula Gould, also of film press agenting, is helping him.

He relegated harsh exercise and lettuce-leaf diets to the cemetery of horse-cars and kerosene lamps, and got up press books, Hollywood-style "leg" photos, mats, layouts, feature and news stories, exploitation tieups, radio interviews, window displays and whatnot. He feels that he's out of exhibition for good.

Add to the Hard-to-Believe Department the item from Texas Interstate Circuit's weekly managers' bulletin, describing how Welly Akin, in Abilene, went out to promote a wrecked automobile to tie in with the "Drunk Driving" one-reeler he was showing, and when he got to the wreck he found the bodies of the victims still in the car.

These are strange days, indeed. The Lyric Theatre, at Harrington, Arkansas, on Monday, will give free admission to every child presenting two rat tails. A public health stunt, or something, out of which should develop some first rate biological dissectors for Harrison.

Forrest Orr, the actor, was quite a semi-pro baseball player back in the 1900's. Third base was his spot and he used to play with the Wichita, Kansas, ball club. One afternoon someone offered to sell Orr the Wichita ball park, for the paltry sum of one dollar the acre. He wired his father back home in Dallas for the money, but the old gent turned him down. Today, on that very spot, stands one of the three largest oil wells in the world.

A Sign of the Times appears in the morning mail solicitation to buy a subscription to "Propaganda Analysis."

When Jules Rachman, convicted murderer of Harry and Sam Goldberg and one time Omaha showman, sought pardon board clemency last week, just seven years after the crime, one of the men speaking in his behalf—Hyman Zellen, Lincoln, Neb.—sought to minimize the importance of petitions, saying probably half of the people who signed protesting Rachman's release, didn't know what they were doing. He said he knew of a time recently, when a petition was circulated to hang the governor and there were some 300 or 400 signers.

Governor Cochran, present as a member of the pardon board, blushed.

The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer sales department is in receipt of a piece of touching correspondence from an exhibitor customer, to-wit:

A motion picture performance to buy "Kootie Killers" for French soldiers on the Maginot Line will be held Friday evening, December 22nd, at the Little Carnegie theatre, New York, where a benefit performance of the French picture, "Katia," will be held, the first war benefit screening for the purpose in the present conflict.

Wallis Warfield, now the Duchess of Windsor, heads Les Colis De Trianon-Versailles, which is putting on the show, proceeds from which will buy comfort kits for soldiers: cigarettes, sweaters, kootie-killer chemicals, gloves, soap, and such.

For the first time in years, Cinemactor Brian Donlevy "lives" in a picture, in "Allegheny Frontier." He was shot to death in "Barbary Coast" and "Union Pacific," hanged in "Old Chicago," shot to death again in "Mary Burns, Fugitive" and "Jesse James," drowned in "Crack-up" and trampled to death in "This Is My Affair," shot to death again in "Beau Geste."

Twelve years ago Thanksgiving Day headlines told of a bloody riot at Folsom State Prison in California. It occurred when the prisoners were marching into the penitentiary auditorium to see a motion picture. Screenings were immediately cancelled all around, as one means of punishing the rioters, and not a single film has been shown since for anyone. Now, 12 years later, the jail officials are going to lift the ban, and on Christmas Day the inmates will see their first film since the rioters started clubbing, shooting and stabbing.

The film will positively not be "Gone With the Wind;" authorities are a little timid on the power of suggestion.

The propaganda ministries of the "totalitarian" and "democratic" belligerents overseas will regret to hear of the flood of war films. They are having a hard enough time holding their audiences without encountering competition from the studios of Hollywood.

The Drew Pearson-Robert Allen columnists of United Feature Syndicate chronicle that White House favor means nothing to Edgar Bergen and his wooden Charlie McCarthy.

When the National Press Club made preparations for the annual dinner honoring the President, Mr. Roosevelt was asked what entertainer he would most like to hear. The answer was—Charlie McCarthy.

Bergen got a wire in Hollywood telling of the President's choice. A note of caution added that Bergen should not exploit this appearance.

To the dismay of Press Club officers, the reply came that Bergen was about to start production of a new picture and could not come, that he was busy on "Charlie McCarthy, Detective," for Mr. Blumberg's Universal.

Twentieth Century-Fox announces that John Steinbeck's story of "The Grapes of Wrath" is "so gripping," "so exciting," that they're going to film the entire picture in candid-camera fashion, so candid, they say, that "audiences will see freckles on the leading lady's face, whiskers on the star's."

Besides being rugged individualists, the Fox people are also diplomats, omitting the names of the leading lady with the freckles, the star with whiskers. As an extra service for our regular subscribers, however, we disclose their identities: Dorris Boden, Henry Fonda.

'Mill on the Floss,' on which more than the average is being spent in advertising for a foreign-made, got $12,400 on its first week at the Astor, ending Monday night (20), good, and is scheduled to go three additional weeks.

'Mill on the Floss ended its second week at the Astor Monday night (27) at $14,000, an increase over the first week. Thanksgiving, plus a remarkably good play from the kids, provided the lift. 'Mill' remains here a fourth week, after which it will be moved to another house, not yet set.

War Is Hell

Hollywood's self-appointed guardians of the public welfare this week completed the dissociation begun with the signing of the Nazi-Soviet pact, and plumped passionately for the cause of beleagured Finland. And as the Second World War spread beyond the England-France-Germany triangle, production hopes, up a bit last week, sagged again. Eight pictures were started compared to the previous week's 10, and three finished as against the seven of the week before.

Meanwhile another of the many special city elections by which the Los Angeles citizenry demonstrates the continuing success of its democracy was held Tuesday on issues involving the establishment of a municipal bus system, provision for a new bond issue for an airport and the prohibition of marble games, billiards and dice games and the like.

The three films completed were "Mr. Wong at Headquarters," Monogram; "The Biscuit Eater," Paramount, and "The Marines Fly High," RKO Radio.

RKO Radio also started two: "Bill of Divorcement" and "My Favorite Wife." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer began "I Take This Woman"; Paramount, "Golden Gloves"; Producers Pictures, "The Sagebrush Family Trails West"; Republic, "Village Barn Dance"; Twentieth Century-Fox, "Dance with the Devil," and Universal, "The Devil Is Yellow."

Shooting were 41 pictures, against 36 last week; 23 were being prepared, compared to 21 the week before, and 75 being edited, eight more than in the prior period.

Four short subjects were completed, all by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer; three were started, two by Columbia and one by Warner Brothers; the same number shooting; four being prepared, two by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and one each by Columbia and RKO Radio, and 10 being edited.

BLUE LAW BALLOT

Bitter was the pre-election name-calling this week on proposition number three in the most recent city special election. Concerned with the burning question of whether or not marble and pin games should be played, opponents of the act called others to arms with the cry to "Smash bigotry, injustice and intolerance!" Also effective, as ever, was the plea to "Protect the sanctity of your home!"

Opposed in the battle were the City Council, aided by the reform administration's spearhead, Mayor Fletcher Bowron, and, on the other side, the politically powerful marble machine operators' association.

Opponents of the measure also claimed that passage would ban Bingo, Screeno, and theatre give-aways generally.

With some 3,000 men working on an average of 16 hours a day apiece, the congestion at Los Angeles harbor is still increasing as a result of the Congress for Industrial Organization dock clerks' strike at San Francisco, now over a month old. With traffic diverted from the more northern port, over a dozen ships were reported still in the Los Angeles Outer Harbor waiting their turn at the docks.

COLUMBIA LOSSES HALVED; LOEW, KEITH DIVIDENDS; WARNERS ELECT

Circuit Dividend of $3.50 Paid Out of Operating Surplus; Cohn Reports Retention of Strong Working Capital

Columbia Pictures Corporation on Tuesday reported it was sharply reducing bank loans and that losses in operations had been cut from $233,612 in the third quarter of 1938, to $104,751 for the corresponding quarter ended September 30th, last.

Elections and Dividends

Preferred stockholders of Warner Brothers on Monday reelected directors at their annual meeting, while stockholders of both Keith-Albee-Orpheum and Loew's, Inc., received notices of dividend declarations.

The Keith-Albee-Orpheum dividend was declared out of operating surplus, and amounted to $3.50 per share on the seven per cent cumulative convertible preferred stock of the corporation for the quarters ended March 31st and June 30, 1937, payable on December 22nd, this year, to stockholders of record at the close of business on December 18th, this year.

The Loew declaration was the regular quarterly dividend of 50 cents per share on the common stock, payable December 30th. The declaration was made last Friday by the board of directors.

Directors of Technicolor, Inc., on Tuesday, declared a dividend of 40 cents per share, payable December 29th to stockholders of record on December 20th.

Columbia Pays $500,000

Bank loans of Columbia Pictures, amounting to $500,000 as of September 30th last, have been paid before maturity, Harry Cohn, president, informed stockholders in a letter received by them Tuesday. These loans were due to mature beween December 21st and February 7th next, Mr. Cohn said.

"Your corporation has maintained a strong working capital position with net quick assets on September 30th of over $11,000,000," Mr. Cohn informed the stockholders. "The consolidated balance sheet shows a ratio of current assets to current liabilities of more than 6.2 to 1."

Columbia's only funded debt consists of $1,250,000 serial notes due in 1944 which are being paid off in annual installments of $250,000.

For the quarter ended September 30th, 1939, the first quarter of its fiscal year, Columbia reports a net loss after all charges and provisions for Federal income and other taxes of $104,751.

This compares with the net loss of $233,612 for the corresponding period ended September 24th, 1938.

Sterling Exchange Arranged

During the summer when the outbreak of war appeared imminent, Columbia hedged its future receipts in sterling from Great Britain to a substantial degree by arranging loans in London in sterling which were then converted into dollars in New York, Mr. Cohn stated.

"Columbia recently effected important economies both in Hollywood and New York and considerable annual savings will result from these moves," it was said.

The present book value of the 367,161 shares of common stock stands at approximately $21.84 a share after allowing for the retirement of the outstanding preferred stock at $53 per share, which is the current call price. The preferred stock has a book value of approximately $160.00.

Columbia has in release at this time Frank Capra's "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," as well as "The Amazing Mr. Williams," starring Melvyn Douglas and Joan Blondell, and the Howard Hawks production, "His Girl Friday," in which Cary Grant and Rosalind Russell star, is to be released late this month.

Two pictures made in England, "U-Boat 29" and "Clouds Over Europe," are meeting with success in world markets generally, in addition to favorable reception in England, Mr. Cohn told the stockholders.

Warner Officers Reelected

The Warner preferred stockholders annual meeting Monday was in Wilmington, Delaware, in the offices of the Corporation Trust Company. Reelected as directors were Harry M. Warner, president; Albert Warner, vice-president and treasurer; Jack L. Warner, vice-president; Robert W. Perkins, secretary and general counsel; Joseph Bernhard and Waddil Catchings.

There was no quorum of common stockholders. The officers were named by 80,610 shares of preferred stock.

Presiding was former Federal Judge Hugh M. Morris.

"Hold-over" board members, terms expiring next year, are Samuel Carlisle, assistant treasurer; Stanleigh P. Friedman, vice-president; Sam E. Morris, vice president; Morris Wolf, and Charles S. Guggenheimer.

The directors were expected to meet again in Wilmington later this week, and to reelect present Warner Brothers officials.

Columbia Gross Income Up; Total Assets Reach $15,794,345

Consolidated income account of Columbia Pictures Corporation for the quarter ended September 30, 1939, compares with the corresponding quarters of the two previous years as follows:

	QUARTER ENDING SEPTEMBER 30, '39	QUARTER ENDING SEPTEMBER 24, '38	QUARTER ENDING SEPTEMBER 25, '37

Seek Plan Change

A group of independent theatre owners are expected to call on the Dallas, Tex., park board shortly to ask that a plan to provide free films in six Dallas parks through the co-operation of Karl Hobitzelle be abandoned and one to put the films in at least 14 parks, made by the Horne Film Company, be adopted.

Atlas in New Underwriting Offer to RKO

The Atlas Corporation submitted to Federal Judge William Bondy on Tuesday a new offer of underwriting on the RKO refinancing. The agreement provides for 500,000 shares of new RKO common stock at $3 per share. The proposed agreement has been approved by the RKO board of directors after "some difference of opinion" among the directors.

SEC To Pass on Plan

Judge Bondy ordered a hearing for Friday. At that time it is expected that the Securities and Exchange Commission will express its opinion as to the fairness of compensation and price.

According to the agreement an offer of shares must be submitted by December 31st to holders of unsecured claims and to Rockefeller Center, Inc. These creditors will be allowed 20 days to exercise their option to buy the stock. Within two days of the expiration date of the option to creditors, RKO must notify Atlas of the number of unsubscribed shares remaining. Atlas binds itself to purchase and pay for all unsubscribed stock at the $3 price within from two to seven days after the notice from RKO.

A number of important provisions are in the agreement which make it effective contingent on certain conditions. One clause gives Atlas the right to withdraw its offer if the U. S. Supreme Court grants a review to any application now before it to appeal the order confirming the plan of reorganizaiton. The Supreme Court will not act on the petitions for appeal before December 18th. If the agreement is not approved by Judge Bondy by December 23rd, or if RKO does not make its offer to creditors on or before December 31st, the agreement is void.

Compensation for underwriting the stock, which could amount to a maximum $175,000 according to Hamilton C. Rickaby, will be paid to Atlas on two computations. First, Atlas will receive $1,666, representing one-third of a cent for each share, for each day that expires between December 12th, date of the proposal and the date of notification by RKO of the unsubscribed shares; and second, Atlas will be paid 25c for every share of unsubscribed stock which it must pick up.

Floyd B. Odlum, head of the Atlas Corporation, outlined the agreement in a letter to RKO. It was explained that changing world conditions had necessitated a lower price than was offered in August.

Reisman Is Elected RKO Vice-President

Phil Reisman was elected vice-president in charge of foreign distribution of RKO Radio Pictures at a meeting of the RKO board held December 7th.

Mr. Reisman has been in charge of RKO foreign distribution for the past six years, during which time the company has established its own distributing organizations in 22 countries and the 23d will open in Singapore early in 1940.

Entering the industry in 1917 as a salesman for Triangle, successively Mr. Reisman joined the Goldwyn sales staff, returned to Triangle as manager of the Milwaukee branch. He was with the Hodkinson organization for a time and in 1920 joined Paramount. In 1925 he was made eastern sales manager and assistant to Sidney R. Kent. The next post was general sales manager of Pathe and a similar post with Universal. Mr. Reisman joined RKO in 1932 and was at first in charge of film buying.

University to "Collect" Propaganda

Material related to propaganda films will form part of the collection of the new Propaganda and Promotion Archives of Washington and Lee University. Propaganda material which is being turned out by foreign government and foreign and domestic "pressure groups" is being collected and preserved.

In answer to an inquiry on the relationship between motion pictures and the new Archives, Foster Mohrhardt, Librarian, said: "While no special effort will be made by the Propaganda and Promotion Archives to collect films (several motion picture 'repositories' are already in existence), press books, promotional material, analyses and criticisms of politically promotional films will be collected and preserved."

The Archives are housed in the Carnegie Library at the University and approximately 10,000 items of propaganda and promotional material have already been assembled. The research depository was established by Francis P. Gaines, president of Washington and Lee. The material was assembled by the librarian Mr. Mohrhardt and O. W. Riegel, director of the Lee Journalism Foundation.

Grand National Reorganization Again Delayed

Final decision on the fate of Grand National has been delayed once more and another hearing scheduled for December 15th before referee Peter B. Olney. The referee granted the postponement after expressing concern that continued operation losses of Grand National Pictures may prevent payment of even wage claimants in the event of liquidation. He also charged that Earle W. Hammons, president of Grand National and his attorney, Saul Rogers, were failing to cooperate with the creditors.

Financing Offered

A new turn was given to the proceedings when Leo Berger, who identified himself as a former European representative of MGM, appeared at the hearing and expressed a willingness to buy out creditors' claims and to extend the necessary financing. Mr. Breger said he was financially able to fulfil the task and that Grand National could then distribute the latest Erich Von Stroheim picture which is owned by "European interests anxious to keep the company alive." He did not identify the interests.

The adjournment was opposed by Joseph Dannenberg, attorney for the creditors' committee who said that T. Kennedy Stevenson, head of Erpi, had advised him that Erpi would not extend a $100,000 loan to GN unless Mr. Hammons first raised a $1,000,000 production fund.

However when members of the creditors' committee were polled on their stand on immediate liquidation, the vote was unanimous for another postponement. Referee Olney finally granted the adjournment.

Erpi Offer Heard

T. Kennedy Stevenson, head of Erpi, said his company was anxious to see the Grand National refinancing plan consummated and would cooperate to the fullest to help attain that end. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation has indicated a willingness to loan Educational $450,000 for Grand National refinancing provided $150,000 is obtained elsewhere. Erpi is willing to advance $100,000 of this amount if the proper preparatory arrangements are made. Earl W. Hammons has completed preliminary arrangements to obtain the other $50,000.

Mr. Stevenson said, "Erpi does not want this matter delayed and we are not contributing to whatever delay may have occurred. We have done business with Hammons for many years and we think his companies should survive. Frankly, we admire Hammons, his nerve and the fight he has put up."

At a meeting held last week Mr. Hammons indicated that he had made progress in obtaining a new revolving fund for production upon reorganization. The fund would approximate $1,000,000 and informal commitments have been obtained for $250,000 apiece from Alexander Berglos and Joseph Sussowitz.

Mr. Hammons said the stockholders' suit against Educational, Grand National, 17 individuals and 15 subsidiary companies in the New York State Supreme Court would be fought to the limit. Total damages of $40,000,000 were asked by two small stockholders whose stock ownership is of recent date. He attacked the motives behind the filing of the action and said the high damages were mentioned in the action only for their publicity value. He further explained that four separate actions, each asking $10,000,000 had been filed by the two stockholders. The suits, which have been brought by F. Reynault Fairchild and Sara Ruth Spewack, charge that the reorganizations are improper.

(Roach - United Artists)

Comedy

Fresh from their "Flying Deuces," Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy appear here as two testers in a horn factory who, fleeing the noise, go to sea in an old boat, with a convict for company, though not of their asking.

The touchy Mr. Hardy, who is driven berserk by noise, captures the criminal only to cause further complications of a typically Laurel and Hardy nature, which are matters of familiar delight to their devotees.

Gordon Douglas directed the Hal Roach production, having also handled such comedies as "Zenobia." The original story and screenplay was written by Gil Pratt, Felix Adler and Charles Rogers, the two latter having also collaborated on the Laurel and Hardy "Block Heads."

Ben Turpin, James Finlayson, Dick Kramer, Harry Bernard and Eddie Conrad are included in the cast.

Release date: To be determined.

Archie Mayo directed, as he did such films as "Youth Takes a Fling" and "Adventures of Marco Polo"; the picture being a Walter Wanger production.

STARS ON AIR DRAW NEW ATTACK; "CAN'T BE STOPPED," SAYS CANTOR

Ray Branch, Harry Brandt Lead Exhibitor Protest on Broadcasts; Film-Radio Comedian Sees Need for Improvement

The radio-film pot is boiling over, kindled by new firings of motion picture theatre owners against Hollywood film stars' air appearances on grounds of unfair competition to their box offices.

Exhibitors Declare War

Consciousness of the broadcasters of exhibitor attacks in the past several weeks, was accentuated this week by proposal for an open declaration of war against the practice, as made in behalf of theatre owners of Michigan belonging to Allied States Association of that state, by Ray Branch, the Allied president, and by the promise of a boycott "in 10,000 theatres," of the product of any star or player continuing in air shows, the promise coming from Harry Brandt, president of the Independent Theatre Owners Association, while on a visit to Hollywood. Remarks of Mr. Brandt, who has been campaigning against the radio practice, appear on page 16, in a report on speeches he made to California exhibitors and others.

On the other hand, "the interchange of radio and film talent," was described as being virtually impossible of stoppage, by Eddie Cantor, who, for years, has been reaping rich harvests in the dual capacities of air and screen star. However, he added, film stars receiving "fat" checks from broadcasters, will have to prove their worth.

The new arguments for and against broadcasting waxed heatedly this week even as a further development of screen talent on the air was seen by Transcontinental Broadcasting, the new Elliott Roosevelt air chain, that it will be open for business early on the morning of January 1st with 92 stations, to be the fourth national system, adding to Columbia, National and the Mutual networks.

Branch Writes Open Letter

Mr. Branch's declaration of war against screen stars on the air was contained in an open letter, to the trade press. Said the letter, in part:

"We must, of course, recognize the importance and the progress that has been made by radio; and only a fool would even ponder over the thought that it is not here to stay. But why can't the radio develop its talent in another field, the same as the screen did? Doesn't it appear, on the surface, that radio is incapable of developing its own talent? Otherwise, why do the broadcasting companies seek the screen for their talent?

"We must get together on this thing, or one of these great agencies will wipe out the other. And I am sure there is room for both."

Mr. Branch warned that a screen star "either should protect the investment" of the motion picture industry "or get out of the industry." Mr. Branch then asked:

"Isn't it unethical for a star to appear in two distinct fields of amusement, and to keep someone else talented, out of an opportunity for work?"

As for the producer's share in these maneuvers, Mr. Branch remarked, "If a producer cannot sign an exclusive contract with a star, then let's all rally to the aid of the producer, and create some new faces for the screen; people who will be glad to sign an exclusive contract."

COMMERCE CHAMBER IS CALLED IN AIR BATTLE

Not only movie theatres are worried about the Tums "Pot O' Gold," $1,000 radio giveaway, and the precedent it may be setting for other radio shows to emulate. This week, from Lincoln, Neb., the town which saw origination of the anti-Tums theatre insurance plan, wherein Bob Livingston, at the Lincoln Capitol, insures his patronage against loss if the patron is in his theatre instead of at home when called, went an appeal to the United States Chamber of Commerce to do something.

The appeal is being made by Earl Campbell, well known retailer in Lincoln, and an influential director in the national Chamber of Commerce. It is directed to the national Chamber head, W. G. Carey, Jr., and suggests that he bring pressure to bear through the Federal Communications Commission.

Mr. Branch continued: "If the stars were not gainfully employed, and receiving salaries commensurate with their ability, I would say there was an excuse for this double employment; but I think most any of us, at least of the exhibition field, would trade places with the stars, insofar as earnings are concerned.

"We had better have some round table discussion before it is too late to do anything about it, because radio is fast growing into a nightly succession of outstanding attractions, and is having a very telling effect on our box-offices.

"If we must go to war against this thing, let's do it before the enemy gets so powerful that we are licked before we start. And, in bringing this to your attention let me say in conclusion: all you have to do is to stay at home for one week, and tune in on the leading stations on your radio, and you will probably be able to figure out just why you are in the red, and you will find out that something has borrowed your franchise to take your business away from you—and that something will not be a competitive theatre, either."

Cantor Defends Stars

Mr. Cantor declared his belief in the continuance of screen stars on the air, last week, in Cincinnati, as a guest columnist, for one day, on the Cincinnati Post. Said Mr. Cantor:

"In all this 'to-do' about the screen stars' broadcasting, with radio producers quaking in their shoes at the squawks of the studios, it seems to me that we are losing sight—or sound, if you will—of the most legitimate complaint of all, the complaint from the public.

"The film exhibitor can't be blamed for his lament. He claims that radio competition to his business is depleting the contents of his pocketbook, but he is fearful that, if this great free show continues, he won't have the pants in which to keep a pocketbook. The producers' complaint is legitimate, too.

"But consider the public's complaint; that the stars on the air are not as good as they are in pictures. All other opposition fades in comparison with this indictment. The stars aren't stars on the air. And how can they be?

"The producer or exhibitor who thinks he can impede the progress of radio by curtailing, or even attempting to prohibit the stars' appearance on the air is crazy with the heat. The same producer has been quick enough to corral successful radio names for films. Imagine his surprise, after a bad picture had hurt one of those air personalities, if the producer stepped in with 'Wait a minute, Mister—we're not going to let our people be seen on the screen.'

"No, there will be no stopping this interchange of radio and picture talent. But a lot of both kinds will slide down the chutes of public opinion unless there are better pictures for radio people, and better radio programs for picture stars."

"Harmony" in FCC Halts Revamping

With conditions in the Federal Communications Commission "improved" under the new leadership of Chairman James L. Fly and a big political campaign in the offing, President Roosevelt was represented in Washington this week as prepared to abandon his plans for reorganization of the FCC.

Described as a "hotbed" of intrigue and disaffection under former Chairman Frank R. McNinch, the Commission, it was said in Administration circles, Monday, has achieved a considerable degree of harmony and is now operating efficiently and effectively.

The plan for reorganization of the Commission, contemplating its reduction from seven to three members, with practically all authority

Guests attended from as far west as Buffalo and the Canadian border.

A realistic motion picture angle was given to the affair when a Ten-O-Win wheel was rolled out to spin 50 awards to the theatre ticket holders. Jack Swartout of the American, Troy, presided, assisted by Robert Rosenthal of the Ritz, Albany.

FCC "Harmony" Halts Revamping

vested in the chairman, was proposed by ex-chairman McNinch last winter because of the difficulties he had encountered in his "purge." President Roosevelt early last session wrote letters to the chairmen of the Senate and House Interstate Commerce Committees that reorganization was desirable, and legislation was introduced but never acted upon.

The plan immediately met with opposition in Congress and the three-man board proposed in a bill introduced by Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Dem., Mont.), chairman of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, was opposed by Republicans, with Senator Wallace White, Jr. (Rep., Maine), countering with a substitute to enlarge the board to 11 members.

Opponents of the legislation charged it was designed to rid the FCC of critics of Mr. McNinch's policies, particularly Commissioners T. A. M. Craven and George Henry Payne who had voted against the "purge" of the commission's staff engineered by McNinch practically as his first step toward "cleaning up" the situation which had led to his transfer from the Power Commission.

Ill for a considerable number of months, Mr. McNinch resigned late this summer and was succeeded by Mr. Fly, formerly with the TVA, another of the Administration's "trouble shooters" but of a different temperament from his predecessor.

Western Broadcasters Approve Music Library

All but two of the 23 stations represented at the regional conference of the National Association of Broadcasters, 14th district, at Denver, last week signed to subscribe to stocks and to support Broadcast Music, Inc., being sponsored by NAB in its fight against ASCAP. Twenty-eight delegates representing 23 stations in the district, which includes Colorado, Wyoming, Idaho, Utah and Montana, were present. The two stations failing to sign for stock in Broadcast Music were KGIR, Butte, and KPFA, Helena, Mont., both represented by E. B. Craney.

Other matters discussed but not reaching the resolution stage included ASCAP, the musician's contract and the broadcaster's code of ethics. In attendance at the meeting arranged by Gene O'Fallong, 14th district director, were Neville Miller, president of NAB, and Paul Peter, director of research. Mr. Miller and Mr. Peter left immediately after the Denver meeting to attend similar conferences in Tulsa and Minneapolis, before returning to their Washington, D. C. headquarters.

BLONDIE BRINGS UP BABY: Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake, Larry Simms—Played with "Dead End Kids on Dress Parade." This is the best of the Blondie series. Business was better than average.—Stanley Lambert, Rialto Theatre, Racine, Wis. General patronage.

COAST GUARD: Randolph Scott, Frances Dee, Ralph Bellamy, Walter Connolly—This is good entertainment and, as a program picture, it gave a good account of itself at the box office. Running time, 72 minutes. Played November 5-6.—Dr. G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

MAN THEY COULD NOT HANG, THE: Boris Karloff, Roger Pryor, Robert Wilcox—A real thriller. Played on Saturday to pleased customers. Running time, 65 minutes. Played November 18.—B. F. Jackson, Delta Theatre, Ruleville, Miss. Small town patronage.

MR. SMITH GOES TO WASHINGTON: James Stewart, Jean Arthur, Guy Kibbee, Claude Rains, Thomas Mitchell, Edward Arnold, Eugene Pallette—How can you beat that Capra? If there is anyone I would like to meet and talk to in Hollywood, it is Frank Capra! Such understanding and treatment he gives to his productions! Business? Read any of your trade papers and magazines. Tremendous! Running time, 130 minutes. Played November 29-December 7.—Stanley Lambert, Rialto Theatre, Racine, Wis. General patronage.

U-BOAT 29: Conrad Veidt, Valerie Hobson—Great exploitation picture and timely. Story keeps patrons interested to the finish. Did exceptionally big business with this one. Running time, 79 minutes. Played October 27-31.—Stanley Lambert, Rialto Theatre, Racine, Wis. General patronage.

First National

OLD MAID: Bette Davis, Miriam Hopkins, George Brent, Jane Bryan—A wonderful picture. Will please in any spot and will get business. Running time, 95 minutes. Played November 23-24.—B. F. Jackson, Delta Theatre, Ruleville, Miss. Small town patronage.

SMASHING THE MONEY RING: Ronald Reagan, Margot Stevenson—Just a good little picture that was cut too short. This is a swell picture of shooting prisons and so forth but our patrons are all kicking because there is entirely too much of this stuff each season. Running time, 56 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ANDY HARDY GETS SPRING FEVER: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden, Helen Gilbert—This one is just as well done as the former "Hardy" pictures and in my judgment that is just what is wrong with it. These pictures are too much alike. As far as we are concerned, they reached their peak about three pictures ago and, although we had to pay more for this one than any of the earlier ones, it did not bring them in as well as earlier ones did. Running time, 85 minutes. Played November 18-19.—Dr. G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

ANDY HARDY GETS SPRING FEVER: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden, Helen Gilbert—Another of Metro's top pictures that had been shown and thoroughly advertised in every direction, so I would have been better off with a cheap new picture. Pleased those who came, however. The school play is a riot and the Hardy family is tops. Running time, 85 minutes. Played November 24-26.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

BABES IN ARMS: Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland, Charles Winninger, Guy Kibbee, June Preisser—This picture did business and we were satisfied, more so than some of the audience. The plot is awful thin and it will stretch the imagination of most, that this juvenile prodigy of Metro's is a Broadway producer and author, all in one. Preposterous. It looks as though Metro, to capitalize on Rooney, are going to put him to the front too much for his own good. I'd say that Fox killed off Shirley Temple with too many pictures a season. The public does not want the same personalities shoved down their throats too often.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

BABES IN ARMS: Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland, Charles Winninger, Guy Kibbee—The finest entertainment to come out of Hollywood in many months. Good business. Running time, 97 minutes. Played November 19-21.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

DANCING CO-ED: Lana Turner, Richard Carlson, Artie Shaw and His Orchestra, Leon Errol—A nice little picture that was allocated 'way too high for the draw it took. Errol does the best piece of work he has ever done in this little musical. All right for a short run on a double. Running time, 81 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

DANCING CO-ED: Lana Turner, Richard Carlson, Artie Shaw and His Orchestra, Leon Errol—Just a good little programmer that seemed to please on a double bill. Lana Turner seems to have wnat it takes, if they give her good productions. Business below average. Running time, 84 minutes. Played November 29-30.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

GOODBYE MR. CHIPS: Robert Donat, Greer Garson—I very rarely send in a report on films as I only believe that the films that are worth any remarks on I will send in. I have found a film that should have all due it and I will give you all I have to say on a picture that I think will never die as a film and will always be brought back for future generations to see and marvel at, Hilton's gentle masterpiece, "Goodbye Mr. Chips," a picture that is greater than a single person could explain. It is so wonderful that I think that it should be said that this picture will live in the hearts of men forever. It is so real, so lovely, beautiful that one cannot express it in adjectives as there are not enough of them to do so. The cast is superb. It was picked with care and when you witness the picture, you realize this. Robert Donat, English actor, is perfect for the part of the loveable "Mr. Chips." The lovely Greer Garson as "Mrs. Chips" is a newcomer to the screen and she should be given due credit as I sincerly believe she will skyrocket to fame on the success of the picture. Miss Garson is sweet, beautiful and has talent that might be coveted by many other young stars. She is just herself. Yes, Miss Garson, you will go far, I predict, and I hope so. "Mr. Chips" at the box office was just as pleasing for us as the picture. We did a fine business and cooperated with the schools and had study guides. Any exhibitor can get behind it if he has the will and the feeling. Running time, 114 minutes. Played November 5-7.—Albert Hefferan, Century Theatre, Coopersville, Mich. Small town and farm patronage.

HONOLULU: Eleanor Powell, Robert Young, George Burns, Gracie Allen, Eddie "Rochester" Anderson—This light, fast and entertaining vehicle went over here with a "bang." The boys were certainly surprised to think the Hays office did not step into the picture, literally speaking, of course, and refrigerate some of Miss Powell's dancing. While her grass skirt stepping was different and appealing in its own way, the routine she put on aboard ship was really something to see. The graceful, tuneful way in which she tapped, whirled and skipped (yes, with a rope) around the deck of the boat proved conclusively that, although she is lacking in acting ability, she is the best dancer in Hollywood, bar none. O, yes, there were others in the picture. Robert Young did an excellent job in his dual role; "Rochester" (it was his first appearance before our audience) made a big hit and the boys are clamoring for more "Rochester." Gracie Allen provided much of the comedy and her husband, George Burns, was also shown. I doubt if there is anyone who will not get plenty of laughs out of this one. Running time, 80 minutes. Played December 2.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation and Education, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

IT'S A WONDERFUL WORLD: James Stewart, Claudette Colbert—Very fine picture for which we enjoyed good business. We tied up with a local bread firm, giving away over 300 loaves of bread.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

KID FROM TEXAS: Dennis O'Keefe, Florence Rice—Very good western that did only average business. Opposition hurt us.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

LADY OF THE TROPICS: Robert Taylor, Hedy Lamarr, Joseph Schildkraut—Took an awful beating on this one. Had been shown north, south and east and it is not the type story my patrons like. Hedy Lamarr is charming and gives an excellent performance. Robert as the playboy with unlimited nerve and five hundred dollars does his best, but it was not good enough. Joseph Schildkraut is very good as the villain. It has an unhappy ending and they do not like that. Metro put this in the top allocation but it's only class B product. Running time, 91 minutes. Played November 17-19.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

MARX BROTHERS "AT THE CIRCUS": Marx Brothers, Kenny Baker, Florence Rice—Good comedy with plenty of action. Played to extra business on Friday and Saturday. Running time, 87 minutes. Played November 24-25.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

NIGHT AT THE OPERA, A (reissue): Marx Brothers, Allan Jones—This picture was top comedy when it was first released and it has not changed a bit. Everybody was well satisfied and had a pleasant evening. It just goes to show they want to laugh, not to cry or be bored to death. Running time, 92 minutes. Played November 22-23.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

6,000 ENEMIES: Walter Pidgeon, Rita Johnson, Paul Kelly, Nat Pendleton—Another small picture that not only has an excellent story but a real cast to back it up. This picture takes you back behind those gray prison walls, then gives you an interesting story. Running time, 62 minutes. Played November 24-25.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

THEY ALL COME OUT: Tom Neal, Rita Johnson—An exceptionally good picture. It will get extra business and please all. Played November 25.—B. F. Jackson, Delta Theatre, Ruleville, Miss. Small town patronage.

VIVA VILLA (reissue): Wallace Beery—Still some money left in this old timer. Poor print; many breaks and stops. Running time, 100 minutes. Played November 27.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

WIZARD OF OZ, THE: Judy Garland, Frank Morgan, Ray Bolger, Bert Lahr, Jack Haley, Billie Burke, Margaret Hamilton—One of the most beautiful pictures in the color class. Under good projection conditions it has a third dimensional effect. All parts were well cast and well acted by the players. There were lots of comments on the film from the patrons and there were more against it than for it. Their arguments were all the same. There is so little of it from the book. Running time, 101 minutes. Played November 19-21.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

DISPUTED PASSAGE: John Howard, Dorothy Lamour, Akim Tamiroff—Very much of a drag at the start of this picture, it picked up later on and it is only just a fair program offering. The book was widely read and we heard cracks that they had changed it too much from the original story. That I don't know, as I did not have any knowledge of the plot outside of what I saw in the feature.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

HONEYMOON IN BALI: Fred MacMurray, Madeleine Carroll, Allan Jones, Helen Broderick—Nice picture. Good for best days. Topnotch cast.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

MAN ABOUT TOWN: Jack Benny, Dorothy Lamour, Edward Arnold, Binnie Barnes, Eddie "Rochester" Anderson—They all came out, every man and woman about town. Give us more of these and we can't fuss about business. Played late to good business. Running time, 88 minutes. Played November 16-17.—B. F. Jackson, Delta Theatre, Ruleville, Miss. Small town patronage.

Republic

THREE TEXAS STEERS: Three Mesquiteers (John Wayne, Ray Corrigan, Max Terhune)—A finer action show to fit any program has this one to beat. This trio is coming along at a fast clip and without any interruption could go to the top. However, Republic doesn't seem to know what they want, as I have discovered that Ray Corrigan and Max Terhune have been dropped. These two are tops and give John Wayne plenty of competition in this show. Let's have more of Corrigan and Terhune with his "Elmer" and forget about experimentations with other has beens. Played November 14-15.—Don D. Mungello, Mary-Ann Theatre, Burgettstown, Pa. General patronage.

RKO Radio

BAD LANDS: Robert Barrat, Noah Beery, Jr., Andy Clyde—Played with "Pacific Liner." This picture should have been called "Death in the Desert." It had only six of them; you can't possibly get anything worse. Played November 27-29.—M. Bailey, Strand Theatre, Dryden, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

PACIFIC LINER: Victor McLaglen, Chester Morris, Wendy Barrie—Played as a double bill with "Bad Lands." Just another boiler room drama. Don't be on deck when your patrons are going out. Played November 27-29.—M. Bailey, Strand Theatre, Dryden, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

TIMBER STAMPEDE: George O'Brien, Marjorie Reynolds—About as good an action western picture as I want to see. George O'Brien sure pleases here. Give us more like it, RKO. Running time, 60 minutes. Played November 25.—B. F. Jackson, Delta Theatre, Ruleville, Miss. Small town patronage.

Select

HORROR SHOW COMBINATION, DEMON BARBER OF FLEET STREET: Tod Slaughter; RETURN OF THE FROG: Gordon Harker—This is the fourth horror show I have worked on; three in Chicago and one here. Worked the usual gags and did good for two days until the word of mouth got around. After the first show I locked myself in the office and was "out" to the patrons. I've been getting my haircut in Milwaukee ever since. Running times, 69 and 72 minutes respectively. Played November 7-9.—Stanley Lambert, Rialto Theatre, Racine, Wis. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

DRUMS ALONG THE MOHAWK: Henry Fonda, Claudette Colbert, Edna May Oliver—Good picture; good business. Color is excellent. Has plenty of action to please all. Running time, 103 minutes. Played November 29-30.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

HOLLYWOOD CAVALCADE: Alice Faye, Don Ameche, Stuart Erwin, Buster Keaton—Not a bad picture but there seems to be something wrong with it. Customers seemed to get a big kick out of the old sequences but, when the picture ended, many said they were a little disappointed. Just average business. Played November 26-28.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

JONES FAMILY IN QUICK MILLIONS: Jed Prouty, Spring Byington, Eddie Collins—I am very much of the opinion that our public are getting fed up on the Jones family. Eddie Collins was the only bright spot in this one. He caused some laughs. But the public was not here to see it, that is, not many of them. Very poor business and what do you think when they walk out on it? Only one thing, that they are losing their draw.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

PACK UP YOUR TROUBLES: Jane Withers, Ritz Brothers—Good picture; good business. Running time, 70 minutes. Played December 1-2.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

PACK UP YOUR TROUBLES: Jane Withers, Ritz Brothers—It seems that all the competition in the world cannot keep this girl down. Fox shoved Jane in a sadly misnamed picture with a broken down cast and yet she shows that she can deliver the goods. Give this girl half the breaks and just a fraction of the publicity given other stars and watch her go. Although the weather was terrible and stiff competition was in town, I refused to double feature this show and my judgment was backed up by people that came to see the show. Give her better stories and a few good supporting stars and she will deliver at least three of the proposed Zanuck A pictures. Keep fighting, Jane. Played December 3-4.—Don D. Mungello, Mary-Ann Theatre, Burgettstown, Pa. General patronage.

ROSE OF WASHINGTON SQUARE: Alice Faye, Tyrone Power, Al Jolson—Very fine show—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

SUSANNAH OF THE MOUNTIES: Shirley Temple, Randolph Scott, Margaret Lockwood, Martin Good Rider, J. Farrell MacDonald—The best Shirley Temple picture for some time. Shirley gives her usual good performance, ably assisted by Martin Good Rider and J. Farrell MacDonald. This pleased the western fans. Only complaint was from some of Shirley's small feminine admirers, who thought there were too many and too savage Indians. Running time, 78 minutes. Played November 10-12.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

TOO BUSY TO WORK: Jed Prouty, Spring Byington, Joan Davis—Good picture; fair business. Joan Davis is very funny. Running time, 60 minutes. Played November 28.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

20,000 MEN A YEAR: Randolph Scott, Margaret Lindsay, Preston Foster—Very good picture. People seemed to enjoy it. Airplane pictures never do business here.—Sammie Jackson, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

WINGS OF THE MORNING: Annabella, Henry Fonda, John McCormack—We brought this back again, thinking we might do some extra business but got badly fooled. Don't make film rental.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

United Artists

MAN IN THE IRON MASK, THE: Louis Hayward, Joan Bennett, Warren William, Joseph Schildkraut, Alan Hale—This one was entirely satisfactory to our patrons and did well at the box office. Running time, 112 minutes. Played November 12-13.—Dr. G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

THERE GOES MY HEART: Fredric March, Virginia Bruce, Patsy Kelly—The production has been so this season that we have gone back and picked some of these older pictures with fair success. This picture is all that any showman could ask for. Plenty of comedy interwoven in the story to make a swell show. Running time, 85 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

WINTER CARNIVAL: Ann Sheridan, Richard Carlson, Helen Parrish, Robert Armstrong—I did not find it interesting and our very small house the second night seems to indicate that the first night audience must have given it faint praise (if any). Running time, 100 minutes. Played November 25-26.—Dr. G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

Universal

HAWAIIAN NIGHTS: Johnny Downs, Constance Moore, Mary Carlisle—Step on it, boys, and you will do business on it. It's a young "Honolulu" and will please your customers 100 per cent. Running time, 68 minutes. Played November 26.—B. F. Jackson, Delta Theatre, Ruleville, Miss. Small town patronage.

HAWAIIAN NIGHTS: Johnny Downs, Constance Moore, Mary Carlisle—Played this on bargain night and it seemed to please. Nothing big but pleasing.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

Warner Brothers

DEAD END KIDS ON DRESS PARADE: "Dead End Kids," John Litel—Very good. The audience ate it up. Plenty of laughs and mixed with a heart tugging finale it was perfect for the patrons here. Had it hooked up with "Blondie Brings Up Baby," which is the best of the Blondie series. Business was better than average. Running time, 69 minutes. Played November 17-21.—Stanley Lambert, Rialto Theatre, Racine, Wis. General patronage.

ROARING TWENTIES, THE: James Cagney, Priscilla Lane, Humphrey Bogart, Gladys George, Frank McHugh, Paul Kelly, Jeffrey Lynn—The flaming pages of American history again invade the motion picture theatre to bring you one of the greatest pictures to date. The screen is at the height of its glory as it reflects to the public one of the grandest and most truthful stories yet seen. The musical score is worth the price of admission. Then add good sound, direction, photography, a perfect cast and the original story by Mark Hellinger. You couldn't ask for anything better. Give it your best days. Running time, 106 minutes. Played November 26-28.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

THEY MADE ME A CRIMINAL: "Dead End Kids," John Garfield, Ann Sheridan, Claude Rains, May Robson—First class production for a small town audience. Fine work done by the whole cast. Plenty of suspense and action. Play it any time. Word of mouth advertising will put it over. Running time, nine reels. Played November 23.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

BRITISH TRADE SEES QUOTA DYING, INDULGES IN VIEWING WITH ALARM

Skeptical View of Future Taken in London As Stanley Offers Only Vague Proposals; Exhibitor Guaranteed Films Seen

by AUBREY FLANAGAN

in London

With the first excitements of Mr. Oliver Stanley's new proposals for the adjustment of the British industry to wartime conditions dying down, the business in general and producers in particular have spent the last few days in taking stock of the situation, estimating the possibilities of the future. Excitement has died away to give place to a feeling of complete scepticism, in some places not unmixed with sheer dismay.

Future Course Uncharted

A concise summarizing of the general reaction is that there is nothing in Mr. Stanley's statement to justify the belief that conditions after next March will be any better than they are to-day, that they may in fact prove much worse. Until more specific and categorical schemes are propounded, the future, say the critics, is as vague as ever, for there is nothing in the Stanley statement, beyond promises of consideration being given to possibilities of this and that, to replace the now expiring Quota which, as recorded in these pages last week, is one of the first major casualties of the War.

Nothing has happened during the last week to suggest a revival of British production. No film has gone on the floor which had not been scheduled before the Board of Trade President's letter to the Films Council was published. Only movement of any note has been the long and earnest conferences between British exhibitors and British producers in examination of schemes of exhibitor guaranteed and co-operative production. The idea, still an idea at the time of writing, and not a concrete scheme, is still under consideration.

On the tapis, and on the strength of Mr. Stanley's own suggestion, are certain amendments to the existing Act, which of course covers other things than the mere Quota arrangements with distributors and exhibitors. Such changes, said Stanley, will be made as are desirable in the interests of British production.

Quota Production to Continue

For the next four months Quota production is due to continue and there is no reason to believe that foreign interests will shirk their legislative duties. Already RKO Radio, and Warners, for instance, have taken preliminary steps, the latter launching a film at Teddington. Precisely what Metro, Columbia, Twentieth Fox and Paramount will do has yet to be decided. Though the Act contains clauses permitting exemption from Quota commitments if emergency or War has prevented them being fulfilled, any distributor claiming such exemption would have to prove to the satisfaction of the Board of Trade that he was justified in such a claim. Wholesale bombings, or a state of siege might render production difficult if not impossible. There might be other difficulties. It is, however, practically certain that U. S. organizations here intend to go ahead with their current Quota productions.

Beyond that stage the matter is less easy to analyze. Closely reading the Stanley statement it will be seen that the proposals whereby American majors here, while not having to meet footage and cost stipulations in regard to the Quota, would have to spend an equivalent total on British films either by direct production or in the form of guaranteed loan, are not a definite promise of legislation.

REVIEW BOARD TO HOLD CONFERENCE

The National Board of Review will hold its annual conference at the Hotel Pennsylvania, New York, February 1–3. The keynote of the conference will be on the 50th anniversary of the motion picture. An article in the December National Board of Review Magazine says that "an attempt will be made to present authoritative speakers whose knowledge of the industry's achievements comes either from personal experience or careful study" at the conference.

"Immediate consideration will be given to the possibility of replacing the Quota provisions after March 31st, 1940 by alternative arrangements. . ."

No Assurance Seen

This, say the British production interests, is not an assurance that such a scheme will be carried out. Is it not within the bounds of possibility, they ask, that in the interests of Anglo-American amity, such arrangements may ultimately be found an impossibility?

Meanwhile British producers who so far have shown notable alacrity in utilizing the existing Quota period to their own ends, claim that the vagueness of the situation after March 31st debars them from securing Quota contracts for films covered by the period after that. It is, they claim, impossible to secure finance on such a basis of indeterminate vagueness.

Predict Shortage of Minor Product

Even, they protest, if such a plan as has been so piously floated by the superlatively diplomatic Mr. Stanley was ultimately carried into effect, there is no guarantee that American money would not be spent on a few very big films. The prospect thus causes the smaller independent concern, and, to some extent, exhibitor circles which fear an intensified shortage of product.

It is accepted as certain in all circles here that a very appreciable drop in the number of foreign films imported will follow the new industry proposals. The diminished revenue accruing to America from the British market will have equivalent effects upon the independently financed American producer, and make it unprofitable for the majors to send over here the smaller type of film which supplies the British picture house with its second feature.

Guaranteed Production Planned

Considerations such as these have inspired the current exhibitor-producer talks on guaranteed production, with for the first time in CEA history, independent producers like Richard Norton, George Smith and Michael Balcon, sitting round a table with CEA stalwarts, President Hinge, Vice President Harry Mears, Secretary Fuller, and intellectuals Sidney Bernstein and Kenneth Nyman.

The idea which has been mooted, and which has been developed into alternative schemes presented by Norton and Bernstein, and by trade statistician, now Government advisor on film affairs, Simon Rowson, is revolutionary. It calls for the guarantee by exhibitors, either through a newly formed organization or otherwise of play dates,—and in the case of the Norton scheme, of rentals. On the strength of such guarantees, claim the sponsors, it would be easy to secure at once and without the slightest difficulty, finance for production. The product shortage would be automatically countered.

The constitution of the CEA debars the Association from taking any active or practical part in any such scheme. It does not deter them from giving the provisional and paternal blessing it would need. Such a blessing in the form of an official imprimatur is more than likely. It would remain for the British Production Association and its members, and those exhibitor impresarios who have been actively associated with the idea, to get on with the job of translating it into practice.

Exhibitors Would Invest

The major difficulty of overcoming the blind booking clauses of the Films Act, say the sponsors, is soluble by the financial investment of exhibitors in the films they guarantee. Presumably a new organization, not remotely different from the late lamented British Independent Exhibitors (Distribution) Limited, would be formed, with exhibitors and producers participating. Exhibitors who were ready to avail themselves of the scheme and to secure product by guaranteed playdates, would, by a nominal investment, become part owners in the product and be removed from the clauses of the Act prohibiting blind booking. A batch of pictures would be offered and guaranteed. Present claims suggest that at least twelve films would be forthcoming between now and March next.

How far the scheme will develop depends on many factors, not least of all the extent of exhibitor support. The lesson of B. I. E. D. Ltd. is none too happy an augury.

Meanwhile the industry waits with some impatience indication of the lines upon which Mr. Stanley will, if he will at all, amend the Act. The extension of the two six month periods into one of twelve months is now assured. It is welcomed by both exhibitors and producers.

Reciprocity Change Sought

There are, however, other amendments which would be greatly welcomed, not only by independent British producers, but by American producer distributors, and which would have, it is felt, a stimulating effect all round. They apply particularly to the reciprocity clauses. American interests have, it is believed, told Mr. Stanley so. It is suggested in this regard that the reciprocity clauses under which foreign distributors can acquire multiple cost British films for distribution abroad, and count them in their Quota, be extended beyond the present limits of fifty per cent of total footage. It is suggested, too, that the cost stipulations be removed to permit the acquisition of lesser cost pictures, some of which would be quite saleable to American audiences.

The removal, too, of the labor cost clauses strictly limiting the number of foreign artistes, technicians and workers employed on a British film would, it is felt, enable British product to be instilled with an international appeal and commercial value which would assist its future.

None of these amendments would require much machinery. All would probably be blessed with general trade backing.

IN COURTS

Supreme Court Review of Zasu Pitts Case Sought

A review by the United States supreme court of a lower court decision in affirming income tax deficiencies of $15,395 against Zasu Pitts was sought in a petition for certiorari this week. The income tax was assessed for 1932-33 by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue and affirmed by the Board of Tax Appeals.

The petition explained that the actress and her former husband, Thomas S. Gallery, entered into a written agreement that the income of each should belong to the individual and there should be no community of property. Later, they entered into an oral agreement providing for community of property, and the question presented for the court's consideration was whether the latter superseded the former. The Board of Tax Appeals and the lower court held that the written agreement prevailed and, since she had reported her income as community property, she was liable for additional tax. Miss Pitts showed in the petition that her earnings over the period involved were $74,267 for 1932 and $20,600 to May 1, 1933, when her divorce from Mr. Gallery became final.

Stockholders Sue Reade

Walter Reade, his company, Reade Hudson Amusements, Inc., the Birch Holding Corporation of Hudson and the R. J. Service Corporation were named defendants this week in a stockholders' suit filed in the New York supreme court by Henry and William Grossman and Henry H. Frieder. Mr. Reade is charged with mismanaging the Reade Hudson company, operator of five Hudson, N. Y., theatres and with depriving the plaintiffs of a share in the management of the theatres. Appointment of a receiver, an accounting and removal of Mr. Reade from control of the company are asked.

Nasoff Petition Denied

William Collins, New York supreme court justice, this week denied an application of Rae Nasoff, Paramount stockholder, for an order directing executives of the company, including Barney Balaban and Adolph Zukor, to testify before trial. An attempt to examine books and records of the company was also forestalled. The plaintiff has brought suit for $20,000,000, contending that the company had lost that sum through mismanagement by officials.

Krimsky Sues Pascal

A suit brought by Joseph Krimsky against Gabriel Pascal for $100,000 damages charging breach of contract was revealed in New York supreme court this week. Mr. Pascal according to the complaint, in 1933 promised to turn over to the plaintiff half of the proceeds of all films which he would produce or distribute. In addition Mr. Krimsky claims, exclusive U. S. distribution rights were promised.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor
GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

An Assistant Manager Petitions

The assistant manager is the most important source of able manager manpower. As such, his welfare and morale rate due consideration. Thus, alleviation of unsatisfactory working conditions affecting the assistant would come under the heading of "good business". It is with this in mind that the following letter is published.

The writer is known to this department. The situation he represents may not be general. However, it is far from an isolated one.

Dear Mr. Vogel:

This letter is in the nature of an appeal to your sense of values and fair play. It deals with the hours and pay of assistant managers throughout the various circuits.

First of all, this is not propaganda for a union—the selected work of an assistant has no place for organization in the present setup of exhibition.

However, most assistants in small theatres receive hardly adequate pay for the responsible position they hold. Some of them have wives and families to support—and live in the hope of a raise and promotion that all are invariably promised for some time in the future.

Every day in various sections of the country and in various organizations assistants are caught stealing, pilfering and conniving in order to make a few extra dollars. They become involved with doormen, cashiers and ushers in plots to defraud their employers.

Of course, they are doing the illegal thing—and certainly they are wrong. But isn't there some logical justification for their wanting to get more money for what they are doing?

The average wage is around $20 a week. In a continuous house they put in about 60 hours. If they are fortunate, they get a complete day off. All other days they open and close the house. If they are lucky again, they can get an hour or two for dinner at an odd time.

Can you blame most assistants for being dissatisfied with the present conditions? Their hope of a raise is very slim in these troubled times of war when the revenue of the producers has been cut so drastically. Their hope of promotion is also slim. It takes years to cross the line and become a full-fledged manager.

Mr. Vogel, do you not think that if assistants received better pay and better hours they would have a more healthy attitude toward their present jobs? They would not be anxious to quit work and get out of the seeming sweatshop.

Wouldn't they improve business by being more alert, advancing more ideas (assistants often provide the germs of ideas for which the managers get bonuses, raises and credits), keeping the house cleaner and the service staffs on their toes?

Is it too much to ask for an appeal to be made which would reach those in power to determine the destinies of the assistants—an appeal that would improve conditions and business as a whole?

Theatres are doing good now. Business is on the upswing. Advertising budgets are being increased. Wouldn't that $5.00 increase in pay, deducted from the advance in the advertising budget, do more good going to an assistant?

IT'S THAT KIND OF A BUSINESS

A very pleasant exercise, and one to be happily engaged upon, is the changing of file records of members promoted to better situations. Thus today's exercises—and congratulations—are in order for:

Famous Players Canadian-men Dan Krendel, Len Bishop, Connie Spencer, Ernie Lackey, Eddie Zetterman, Phil Tucker—all to fatter jobs, Krendel to city manager in Hamilton. The Indiana-Illinois circuit selects Rex Williams and Don Johnson for current honors, the former to district manager, headquartering in Elkhart. In Washington, Ind., Kal Kalberer gets a third Switow unit to supervise.

Theatre promotions do not come automatically. One man may advance quicker than another. Sometimes the wrong man gets the nod. In the end, it all evens out. The lad who belongs up ahead ultimately gets there.

PORTER: Would I be working as hard as this, if he wasn't?

Hensler Ties Merchants To "Four Feathers" Gag

Worked out on "Four Feathers" with reported excellent success by Lew Hensler, district manager for Schine's in Lexington, Ky. was tieup effected with four leading merchants who were dubbed "four feather merchants." Each of them was supplied with a quantity of small envelopes containing one of the four different colored feathers. These were distributed by the merchants with every purchase made. Those persons accumulating the four different colored feathers were given guest tickets. One color in this case, red, was used as a control to prevent too many tickets from being issued, and tickets were also limited to the first 200 persons presenting the feathers at the boxoffice.

Distributed as well, were several thousand heralds, advertising the cooperating merchants and plugging the picture and playdates. Stunt was put into effect four days ahead and each of the stores displayed window cards plugging the stunt. Hensler credits his assistant, Arthur Stadler, with aiding in putting the slant over.

Music Tieups Highlight Grundy's "Co-Ed" Date

Two weeks ahead of opening of "Dancing Co-Ed" at the Strand, in Muncie, Ind., Mel Grundy made a special panel board for advance lobby use with handdrawn cutout of Artie Shaw and his clarinet, surrounded by pictures of his band and stills from the picture. Similar boards were also planted in two music stores with sheets of music and Shaw records featured. Tieups were also made with dance halls, in return for distributing favors with appropriate copy on them, plugs were made for the picture over p.a. system at both dances at various times during the evening. In connection with this, a month's pass was awarded for best costumes.

For the Marx Brothers in "At the Circus," Mel arranged a street parade and ballyhoo with local magazine distributor. Boys paraded properly bannered, several dressed as the Brothers. Prizes were given for the best costumes, band was promoted for the affair and Marx Brothers face masks were distributed to kids along route of the march. Through arrangements with studio telegram received from the brothers was blown up and used out front.

Bowles Hosts Players Of "Old Maid" Cast

Much was made locally over the Warner players' arrival in San Francisco for personal appearances in connection with opening of "The Old Maid" at the Fox Theatre with Arch Bowles securing cooperation of Mayor Rossi, who presented the aggregation with a key to the city, newspapers covering the stunt with photos and stories. Players were driven from station to hotel in appropriately bannered cars via a circuitous route with motorcycle escort. Further publicity was garnered through a luncheon which was tendered the stars and a broadcast which was made from the studio of KGO with Ronald Regan acting as master of ceremonies which he also did at the theatre.

Huge lobby display was planted well in advance, districts throughout the city were well covered with 200 six sheets, street car cards were used, man on street broadcast held and radio coverage included spot announcements over KSAN and KFRC over which title, playdates were mentioned.

Screwballery Tops Caldwell Welcome to Date On 'Circus'

Exploitation that went heavily for street stunts was featured in Wally Caldwell's campaign on the Marx Bros. in "At the Circus" at Loew's Valentine, in Toledo. Three service staff members costumed exactly like the brothers, with picture, theatre and playdate copy on their backs paraded through the downtown traffic, department stores and five and tens. Lads also distributed imprinted balloons, tied on sticks and pushed eight-foot peanut cart through streets distributing imprinted glassine bags containing nuts promoted from cooperating store.

Miniature big top tent manned by other members of the staff made up as the Marx Brothers with their heads protruding through holes in top, paraded downtown district two days ahead. In addition, life size gorilla in bannered cage mounted on wheels perambulated business area. Two-man canvas horse with movable ears, eyes and mouth cut capers on the streets.

Headless Man Gag Used

Above stunts were scheduled at regular intervals to appear at various times throughout entire afternoon starting at noon two days in advance. Starting opening day plus two following, headless man with copy "I laughed my head off at" etc. and stuffed image on stretcher was borne by two boys in white with appropriate back copy.

Sugar barrels painted in bright circus colors with chicken wire stretched over top had copy on each reading "Beware, bad men. Do not feed." Halfway inside barrels were disc lithos cut from 22 by 28 window cards containing heads of the brothers plus theatre and playdates. Climaxing all these activities the Marx Brothers, gorilla, horse and tent performed at night football game between halves to a capacity attendance of some 15,000.

Lobby Trapeze Erected

For his front, Caldwell used a 30 foot rope trapeze containing three bars spaced apart holding images of Groucho, Chico and Harpo sitting on bars with arms holding ropes hung parallel with upright sign extending four feet away. Trapeze created considerable attention as it swung with the breezes. Also planted was a 32-foot compo board, one half walnut shell, with 20 inch papier mache heads of the brothers, with "nuts" copy attached.

Special circus atmosphere compo display covered the entire theatre front, streamers of pennants were strung from atop upright sign to roof of attraction sign, gag teaser cards were placed in foyer, lobby and lounges three weeks ahead and star names with 30 inch lamped cutout letters announcing picture, title and playdates operated on flasher were used atop marquee week in advance.

Radio coverage included six day tieup with Station WTOL on "Name the Song" contest, a 15 minute broadcast at 11 a. m. daily. Two commercial 100 word announcements were also landed and 100 word commercial announcement one day ahead and daily throughout run over same station by "Man On the Street."

Magic and Comedy Prove Best Draw to Sell "Yours"

Since patronage at the Gibson, in Greenville, Mich. comes mainly from his rural trade, which leans more to action pictures than otherwise, Charles Henry Gibson determined upon a campaign entirely different from the usual one on "Eternally Yours," emphasizing the comedy and magic angles of the entertainment, rather than the drawing room slant. The former was stressed because of the familiar names in the supporting cast and who are popular with the locals.

These features were spotlighted in special program gotten out by Gibson. Theatreman went strong for the tag line "It's three p.m., darling, and time for breakfast" to arouse laughs, especially he reports from the ruralites whose usual rising time is before dawn.

In advance, showman contacted a retired magician, Truxton Holmes, who makes his home in Gibson. Mr. Holmes, formerly in bigtime vaudeville proved to be a personal friend of the men who developed the magic illusions in the picture. This was made much of in the local press in conjunction with his personal appearances at the theatre, lunch clubs, etc. Mr. Holmes, appearing regularly in a special prologue, stressed methods employed in movie magic and in the picture.

Kid Patronage Sought

Newspaper advertising was started four days ahead of opening with teaser liners, followed by opening ad two days prior. To attract his kid patronage, Gibson obtained live bunnies from local hatchery and kids were invited to stage, where the magician frisked all sorts of objects from the incredulous kids, including the rabbits.

These highlights helped the picture to an eminently satisfying gross and according to Gibson turned what he termed "a lemon into a glowing peach." Greenville has a population of approximately 5,000, the theatre a capacity of 300 seats.

What Is a Jitterbug? Asks Bell on "Babes"

Failing to plant a contest in which Mickey Rooney's definition of a jitterburg would serve as an inspiration for local definitions, Ray Bell, publicist at Loew's Capitol, Washington, for "Babes in Arms" got the Times to run a query in their inquiring photographer column asking pedestrians for their definitions. Picture title, playdates, etc., were prominently mentioned.

With the Military Order of the Caraboa, the Phi Beta Kappa of military life, embracing most distinguished officers of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps organized in the Philippines during the turbulent days depicted in "The Real Glory," Bell on opening night of that picture arranged for presentation of a special certificate of merit awarded by the Caraboa to Goldwyn for "his preservation of an important phase in the history of the liberation of the Philippines." Manager of house received the scroll from the society, which was later forwarded to Goldwyn in Hollywood.

Deering Seeks Identity Of Most Popular Co-ed

Seven lucky girls of Houston and their escorts were hosted by Francis Deering of Loew's in a two-way tieup between local daily and theatre in connection with his date on "Dancing Co-Ed." Paper ran voting coupons and stories to the effect that the city's most popular co-ed in each of the senior high schools was being sought. Ballots had to be mailed to the theatre and to the seven girls receiving most votes went the privilege of inviting a boy friend to a well-chaperoned dinner dance at leading hotel, picture at Loew's and then on to a night club. Paper carried stories and art daily in advance, in addition to snapping the party at the clubs.

RIBBON ON FINGER SELLS "REMEMBER"

The cashiers, doorman and ushers at the Avon in Utica, N. Y., wearing bows of white baby ribbon on their middle fingers aroused all the curiosity aimed for by Manager Arnold Stoltz. When asked by patrons the reason for it, the reply was: "Why, that's 'Remember' with Robert Taylor, starting Friday."

The Round Tabler reports that, while patrons sometimes passed by cashier and doorman without asking, by the time they reached the ushers curiosity usually got the best of them.

Unique "Drums" Lobby Featured by Holland

Through a special tieup arranged with local music store on "Drums Along the Mohawk", Sid Holland at Schine's Eckel, in Syracuse, N. Y. featured a lobby display of drums used by the early Mohawk Indian tribes plus drums as they improved in manufacture through the years and up to the present. Each drum carried a card explaining the period and usage. All instruments were appropriately draped with Indian headdress beadings and set of relics from the Mohawk tribe secured from nearby reservation.

An attractive lobby display was created, depicting scenes along the Mohawk trail. This carried an illuminated map of the trail with an electric bulb representing each town, silk ribbon from each bulb was drawn up to stills from the picture. Concealed flasher button provided animation and cutouts of the stars plus title completed the display.

Lynch's "Fighting Navy" Date

Held under the auspices of the Ladies Auxiliary of the Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserve was special program of "Our Fighting Navy" and "The Old Maid" arranged by James E. Lynch, manager of the Runnymede Theatre, Toronto, net proceeds went to purchase comforts for men on active service. Tickets were sold by the ladies and officers, for which they received the usual percentage. Canadian Naval Brigade paraded to theatre in dress uniform and front over marquee was hung with signal flags spelling out picture title.

"Difference of Opinion Makes Hoss Racing"

Forwarded by Bob Gillham, Paramount advertising director, are the two ads reproduced below. The layout on "Disputed Passage," 270 lines on 3columns, was an assist ad made available for the date at the Paramount, New Haven, but passed up by the theatremen for other copy, according to Gillham. Later, the same ad, as noted, was adapted by the Roger Sherman, in the same situation, for "We Are Not Alone." Mark Twain once said, "Difference of opinion makes hoss racing."

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1939-40 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

MICKEYS' YEAR

THIS year it's top honors for the two Mickeys, Rooney for long, Mouse for short. That is the result of the annual examination of the exhibitors' measure of the money makers of the year.

For the years that this poll of the showmen of the box office has been conducted by Motion Picture Herald, and Fame, it is to be observed that the results reflect from the American public a certain gemütlich genuineness of comfortable preference for sheer engaging personality, without concern for age, sex or art.

Conspicuously, no "glamour girl" has ever been found at the top. Successively the topmost have been Marie Dressler, Will Rogers, Shirley Temple and now little Mickey Rooney.

All of them are great in the tradition of the screen—none of them nearly so competent as actors as they have been triumphant as personalities.

We are to be mindful that they did not do it all on their own. They not only "got the breaks"—which mostly they won by work—but also by that election they got the productive pressures of support and exploitation of the great production machine which is Hollywood and the great presentation machine which is Exhibition.

THESE superlatively famous folk owe a considerable part of what they have attained and enjoyed to a great array of skills—writers, gaffers, carpenters, directors, cameramen, make-up experts, even such remote factors as the Chase bank betting on Joseph M. Schenck, or the demise of Irving Thalberg changing an accent in production.

Obviously the quality which the public seeks is one of humanity, not art, no matter how much art may have to do with the presentation and purveyance. Add up Will and Marie and Shirley and Mickey, as they are known on the screen, and what have you? It is a commonplace something which makes all of the intricacy of frothing ingenuity look futile. It is almost too simple.

A salty old trouper, a gum-chewing cowhand, a bright-eyed little girl full of little girl tricks, an artlessly artful youth, hand-hammered from vaudeville. The real answer is that in these people a sufficiently large proportion of the audience have been able to identify traits of themselves, to make these persons their vicarious agents for the big job of the bigger entertainment. This does not deny a place for the exotics. It does, however, question the merits of sundry costly importations of skill and Eve's flesh and assorted costly promotions of them. Possibly most of that has gone with the coming of the war.

One might guess for example that if, way back then, David Selznick had not had a certain awareness of the "world market" he would not have found it so necessary to find an English actress to play a major role in so utterly American a story as "Gone With the Wind." The fact that he did find one available, able, is no argument. He was obviously looking for one where they were scarce. He was in great luck, as of then. Just now, the way things are, maybe he'd have been even luckier to have found one in Dixie. But it so happens that the commercial story of his project is likely to be written mostly in returns from regions where they couldn't tell beaten biscuits from shortenin' bread, anyway.

FOR the first time in the eight years of the Money Makers poll, the questionaires have gone out to both the independent exhibitors, always covered, and to circuit theatres. While there is a decided unanimity of judgment, the selections are identical for the first three positions, divergences do occur. We find little Miss Temple—for so many years first—in fourth position with the independents, in sixth with the circuit showmen. We observe Errol Flynn and James Cagney rating better with the circuits than the independents, and Alice Faye more highly considered by the independents than the circuits.

Examination of the nature of the productions and vehicles concerned and their relative appeals to big town circuit houses as compared with their status in the farflung country will explain most of the differences. The differences, however, are minor and of much less significance than the big over all agreement of the picture public of America, unanimous about the topmost, from hamlet to Broadway.

BUT as to that English actress, mentioned above, Vivien Leigh, her performance in "Gone With the Wind" will be found vindication enough of the casting of Scarlett O'Hara. She is the big news in that remarkable production, and the important competition for the able performance of Clark Gable in the rich role of Rhett Butler. The work of the two of them will linger in the spectator's mind after the burning of Atlanta and the background theme of a civilization destroyed has indeed gone with the wind.

"The death of a nation" is but spectacular history with which mostly the customers are not primarily concerned, but that ordeal by fire and gunpowder illumines traits of humanity, sex and hunger with which the customers are intensely and always concerned.

COLOR TODAY

COLOR, so long an embattled issue of screen technology, has made emphatic its swiftly accelerated progress with "Gone With the Wind". Like music, color has not had much of intelligent, critical attention beyond the terms of laymen's reactions and appreciations. But as of today and now color has taken its place among the instruments of narration along with sound. This does not mean that pictures of topmost rank may not be made without color; it does mean that the use of color must always now be considered as available to the narrator.

It has been observed that the Whitney interests, so concerned with Technicolor, were investing in production of an order calculated to make color a production necessity. If so,

This Week in the News

"Sabotage!" Says U. S.

WASHINGTON reporters and correspondents making routine stops in the big white stone Department of Justice building on Pennsylvania Avenue, shortly after four o'clock Wednesday afternoon picked up in the small fifth floor pressroom opposite the private suite of Attorney General Frank Murphy, a mimeographed "hand-out" formally denying "repeated rumors" that the Government's key anti-trust case in New York against the eight large producer-distributor-circuits would be settled without trial, or at least without court decision.

Reporters assigned to cover the Department, accustomed to flat statements affecting or referring to the large industries, had elaboration from Department sub-attorneys, adding unofficially to the official statement, presumably written under direct orders of Thurman Arnold who is prosecuting films, labor unions, patents, the petroleum and fertilizer industries, and others, and prepared mechanically for distribution by "Mr. Mulcahey" of the department. The correspondents were told that the "tactics" of the organized film industry in raising one obstacle after another to a quick disposition of the suit constituted "attempted sabotage" of the Government's prosecution of the case.

With the New York case now set for trial on May 1, as further explained on page 29, the Department of Justice pointed out that more than 21 months will have elapsed between the filing of the suit on July 20, 1938 and its presentation in federal courts in May.

In its formal statement the Department said:

"Information has reached the Department that reports are being circulated in the motion picture industry that the equity action of United States vs. Paramount Pictures, Inc., et al, pending in the District Court for the Southern District of New York, will not go to trial.

"These reports are being circulated notwithstanding the fact that it was stipulated by counsel for the Government and the defendants that the case will proceed to trial on May 1, 1940.

"Any such reports as are being circulated to the above effect are utterly without foundation. The Department fully expects that the case will go to trial on that date. All necessary steps for preparation are being taken.

"Through pre-trial conferences to be held commencing March 1, 1940, it is hoped that the length of the trial may be materially shortened," concluded the statement issued to the press by Mr. Arnold's Department of Justice anti-trust division.

the campaign prospers by demonstration. The color treatments of "Gone With the Wind" vary in quality from mild competence to magnificence, and the magnificence is in the restraints where it is used in effective under-statement.

Examination of the progress of color as denoted in the current product demands also attention to an utterly different but also strikingly effective application in "Elizabeth and Essex". Persistently color in that spectacular drama was used in artful over-statement, in the development of skillful application of the impact of contrast—specifically the adroit use of ostensibly negligible areas of cold blue to make the warm colors positively glow with intensity.

Interested anticipation can be enjoyed for what may be the color treatments of "The Blue Bird", shortly to be presented. Again because of certain most imaginative and fantasy-laden elements of that story color may make yet another important contribution, a new demonstration of the emotional power of hue.

Reviving Fairbanks

REVIVALS of Douglas Fairbanks films have started. The Century on lower Second Avenue played last week "Reaching for the Moon" but reported that due to "the pre-Christmas slump" business was not particularly good and that more Fairbanks revivals were not planned. The Miami on Sixth Avenue, formerly specializing in sex and other "sensational" films, has changed to revivals. The Miami was playing this week "The Americano," a Fairbanks Triangle release.

"Reaching for the Moon," Fairbanks' last studio picture (United Artists 1930), is being distributed in the New York area by Treo Film Exchange. The exchange said they had had about 100 bookings recently with "more coming in every day."

The showing at the Miami theatre, which plans a policy of mid-way between side-show type of revivals and the showings at the Museum of Modern Art, is perhaps one of the very rare theatrical exhibitions in New York with 16mm film. The theatre reported that the audience expects an old film and the 16mm. causes no complaints. They will use all the Fairbanks films they can get. Business is "fair."

The professional motion picture department of the Eastman Kodak Company reported only two bookings on the picture "The Americano." The thought was expressed that more bookings might be had if they had some short Fairbanks pictures. People do not seem to be very interested in a long, silent 16mm picture.

Arrangements would have to be made with the Film Library of the Musuem of Modern Art before any large number of Fairbanks pictures could be revived for Mr. Fairbanks gave the Library all the film he had.

MGM Money

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER this week placed on the market $4,000,000 worth of "Gone With the Wind," for which it anticipates a gross up to $20,000,000, while Loew's, Inc., its corporate parent, released to stockholders its annual statement of earnings, showing that the lion for years in motion picture income did very nicely, again, in 1939, as witness the very black figures of $9,841,520 and sixty-one cents, net, only $83,404 and a few odd pennies less than the $9,924,934 net of 1938.

Cash on hand as of August 31st, 1939, was $13,781,161. There was another $3,380,651 in United States Government bonds tucked away in neat piles in the home office safe of Treasurer David Bernstein, all in all a much stronger cash situation than in August of 1938, when Loew's listed cash at $4,527,128 and a mere $317,696 in U. S. Government securities—Loew's buy of more than $3,000,000 of the U. S. bonds in a twelvemonth indicating that the management figures Uncle Sam a good investment.

Of much interest corporately, financially and productwise is the August 1939 item of $44,354,138 in film inventories, i.e., productions filming, productions completed and not released, productions released, plus books and rights. This total is well over three times the year's gross income of $12,860,741 from film rentals, and has been mounting steadily over recent years, the while income from film rentals has remained nearly the same, as witness:

	INVENTORIES	GROSS RENTALS
1937	$38,470,519	$13,508,352
1938	42,925,194	12,596,773
1939	44,354,138	12,860,741

Comparison of Loew's financial statement, profit and loss and surplus accounts for the past two years appears on page 46.

Labor, Bioff

WHILE William "Willie" Bioff, West Coast studio union leader this week enjoyed a freedom that might prove merely temporary, proceedings on his extradition to Chicago on a 17-year-old charge, continued in the Illinois State capital, Springfield, before Governor Henry Horner. Attorneys for Mr. Bioff and the state were directed to file briefs by January 10th.

Mr. Bioff won his freedom from arrest in Los Angeles two weeks ago, after local authorities had arrested him at the request of Chicago authorities, and after he had posted $1,000 bail. The arrest was discontinued because the Chicago authorities failed to follow up the arrest with an immediate request for extradition. It appears that this request may still come. The charge against Mr. Bioff is that he failed to serve a 1922 jail sentence in Chicago. He has since maintained the case was revived to embarrass him in recent labor negotiations.

Mr. Bioff and other American Federation of Labor studio union representatives are scheduled to confer with producers in Hollywood on February 15th, on retention of the 10 per cent general wage increase given to studio unions over the protest of the producers. Mr. Bioff's appearance in Illinois, or even in a Chicago jail, at that time, might impede his duties in Hollywood.

Meanwhile, in Los Angeles, police authorities shunted to one another, without result, a wired request by Illinois State's Attorney Thomas J. Courtney, that they re-arrest Mr. Bioff. The Los Angeles police last week said they needed a fugitive complaint from the local district attorney's office; the latter said no complaint would be issued until the police asked for it.

The Screen Actors' Guild this week resigned from the Los Angeles Central Labor Council, accusing it of conceiving "as its primary duty the protection of William Bioff, from enforcement of criminal justice".

The Guild apparently objected to the council's resolution calling upon Chicago labor to intervene before the Governor of Illinois, to oppose extradition of Mr. Bioff from California.

Westbrook Pegler, syndicated columnist, whose reporting had "dug up" the information that Mr. Bioff had not finished his jail term, last week renewed his attacks on the labor leader.

In St. Louis, a hearing on a permanent ousting of John P. "Big" Nick, deposed president, and Clyde Weston, business agent, of the local projectionists' union, was begun on Monday before Circuit Judge Ernest F. Oakley. The judge's order, temporarily banning the two from union activities, is still operative. Mr. Nick's third trial for extortion from St. Louis theatre owners, ended last Monday, again in mistrial. There will be a fourth effort.

Taxes Tell

INDICATIONS that the amusement business, of which the motion picture is the principal member, is operating at the best level touched in the past two years are seen in figures made public Wednesday by the U. S. Internal Revenue Bureau, at Washington, showing that admission tax collections in November amounted to $2,117,644.

The November total was not only nearly $390,000 above the $1,727,931 reported for October and $132,500 above the $1,985,128 of November, 1939, but was the largest figure reported since December, 1937.

The fourth consecutive month to show an increase, the November collections brought the total for the first 11 months of the year to $17,901,777, compared with $17,640,960 the total for the first 11 months of 1938.

Aylesworth Moves

SEEING SPECIAL opportunity in today's confusion of the industrial scene, Merlin H. Aylesworth this week resigned as publisher of the New York World-Telegram, of the Scripps-Howard newspaper chain, effective January 1, and announced entry into the field of service to industry-in-general. He was admitted to the bar of the State of New York with due formality by Francis Martin, presiding justice of the Appellate Division.

There was an editorial for the World-Telegram from the hand of Roy Howard, whose piece remarked: "Faced with the towering bulk of law involving corporate action, new types of taxation, wages and hours and labor conditions, industry has more and more found itself in need of men of wide experience with legal training."

Mr. Aylesworth, after garnering sundry university degrees, practised law and so early as 1914 became chairman of the Colorado Public Utilities Commission. His subsequent experiences have included the National Electric Light Association, the National Broadcasting company where as president he became a national figure, RKO Pictures and assorted related affairs, prior to his newspaper connection.

To Broadway Mr. Aylesworth is known as "Deac," familiarly, but not too presumptively.

Probably Bigamy

A NUMBER of events in which the motion picture has figured with broadcasting have been hailed as a "wedding of the arts." On Tuesday night there was another "wedding of the arts": radio's first cousin, television, lent its first support to the motion picture in conjunction with the New York opening of "Gone with the Wind."

The occasion was a great night for television as well as for David O. Selznick, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, "Wind," et al.

To cover the premiere NBC set up a television camera in the lobby of the Capitol and one outside under the marquee. Ben-Grauer was the official announcer for NBC in the lobby and and Howard Dietz, director of advertising and publicity for MGM, himself starred as he ushered many of the distinguished guests to the televisor. Among those who appeared for the television audience were David O. Selznick, Olivia de Havilland, Ona Munson, Ann Rutherford, Constance Bennett, James Stewart and Louella Parsons.

The television program of the premiere of "Gone with the Wind" was for the amusement world the most notable of the "outside" special events presented up to this time. Special events and motion pictures each have occupied 30% of the NBC television time since its regular telecasting began on April 30th. "Live" talent studio shows supplied the other 40% of the television programs.

In the eight months period there have been 600 hours of television from the NBC station in New York. Films that have supplied about 180 hours have been independent, foreign or commercial pictures.

Television is still traveling a rocky road. The latest difficulty is that television stations in various cities are interfering with each other. The first case of the kind involved the new CBS transmitter in New York and the Philco television station in Philadelphia. CBS and Philco have had to split up the week. The CBS station has every afternoon and four evenings a week and the Philadelphia station has the rest of the week. The NBC and CBS television do not appear to interfere with each other in the New York area.

THIS WEEK IN PICTURES

THIS was a week for openings. With a plethora of top product available distributors went on a world premiere spree for which the high spots were Atlanta, with "Gone with the Wind;" Miami with "Gulliver's Travels," and Hollywood with "The Hunchback of Notre Dame." Celebrities at these and other openings are pictured on this and the opposite page; eye witness reports are on pages 26, 27 and 28.

OPENING under less favorable auspices at the Belmont in New York was "Last Desire," new French film sponsored by Transatlantic Films, from which the scene above of Jacqueline Delubac, fourth wife of Sascha Guitry and star of the picture, was taken. The New York censors objected to certain sequences, but Transatlantic planned to show the film to the press at a champagne party this week.

THE hottest news story of the Hollywood year is this one out of New York, Podunk and the in-between places where plain people write with hard cash the blunt truth about who's who in motion pictures. Each year it breaks some hearts, gladdens some others, and each year some contracts are revised upward and down, release schedules changed, budgets adjusted, by way of supplying New York and Podunk with more of what it wants, less of what it doesn't, in exchange for more of that blunt truth next year and more of that hard cash right now.

Just how far down to the dollars-and-cents root of the matter the Fame-Motion Picture Herald poll of Money Making Stars really goes Hollywood does not precisely know, has not been told until now. Neither does that other branch of the industry, Distribution. Exhibition knows well and has been reminded each year since the poll started in 1932. So that Production and Distribution may be caught up with Exhibition in this important background detail, the exact phraseology of the question put to exhibitor subscribers this year, and to an approximately identical number every previous year, is now made public.

Independent Votes in Majority

Exhibitors are asked to "Please list in the order of their box office strength the 10 players whose pictures drew the greatest number of patrons to your theatre from September 1, 1938, to September 1, 1939, without regard to age of picture, net profit, length of run, nature of competition or other conditions (weather, etc.) during exhibition."

Clear and true are the responses to this questionnaire, mailed this year to 12,273 exhibitors, 8,069 independents and 4,204 operators of circuit theatres. Thus the preponderance of independent exhibitors was almost two to one in the questionnaires sent out, and in the replies the majority of independents' participation was even greater. Strictly observed are the conditions imposed, and immensely interesting as private reading, though irrelevant, the marginal remarks anent personal likings. A Kansas admirer of Hedy LaMarr can't understand why his town didn't turn out in a body for her last picture, half a dozen grass roots showmen want to know why Bob Burns doesn't draw the way they think he should and half a hundred would have Bing Crosby topping their lists if they could find their personal enthusiasm echoed in the cash receipts, but these are wishes—these men reported facts.

This year Hollywood has been guessing correctly on one position, missing widely and variously on nine. It's been a practically unanimous guess that Mickey Rooney would move up into the Number One spot. It wasn't a very difficult guess. The young man has been box office dynamite in every picture he's appeared in, and he's been in more pictures, year in and year out, than just about anybody else.

Appearance of Tyrone Power in second place, across the list and by a wide margin, will surprise the experts. This son and grandson of distinguished actors has been victim of one of those friendly rumors that generally put a star out of business. Starting as far back as "Alexander's Ragtime Band," people hereabouts, led by the newspaper critics, have been feeling "sorry for poor, miscast Tyrone—such a nice boy, too." Quite evidently the people who buy the tickets didn't detect any miscasting.

Tracy Is Model

Hollywood will be happy about Spencer Tracy' rise from fifth position last year to third place in the current listing. This experienced trouper is perhaps the town's most unanimously admired actor, model of all the young players not self-pledged to emulation of Clark Gable or Paul Muni, as likeable off the screen as on and sincere as any hero he ever played.

Clark Gable's continuing command of public favor will be something of a surprise to the professional predictors but they'll be glad to have guessed wrong. They've been expecting him to drop practically into the subcellar this year, through no fault of his own but because "Idiot's Delight," which didn't seem to delight anybody, and the as yet unseen performance in "Gone With the Wind" have engaged all of his time. Unaware are most predictors that Mr. Gable in a sorrier picture than "Idiot's Delight" is a more potent box office attraction than almost any other ranking star in a hit, a fact somewhat emphatically attested by his unmatched record in the Fame-MOTION PICTURE HERALD poll. This consists of 4 seconds, 1 third, 1 fourth, 1 seventh and 1 eighth. He has never finished out of the money since the poll started. This can be said of no other player.

Circuit Vote Varies

Mr. Gable's standing this year is the first in the total listing to call for cross-list scrutiny. It will be noted that he finished fourth in the circuit theatre poll, fifth in the independent exhibitor voting.

Independent and circuit findings varied even more widely in the case of Shirley Temple, Number One star of the four years preceding 1939, an all-time record quite likely to stand as perpetual tribute to this wonder child's personality. This year the circuit poll dropped her to sixth position, while the independents reported her in fourth, the composite results establishing her in fifth.

The Brothers Warner will be feeling pretty good about Bette Davis' climb from approximately nowhere to sixth position. So will Hollywood find it reassuring. This indisputably talented lady has been something of a problem star, commercially speaking, as well as a star problem in the contract and payroll sense. Winning an Academy Award is no novelty for Miss Davis. Turning in a sterling performance in almost any kind of role or picture is as easy for her as breathing is for most people. Hers have not been, however, the kind of roles that the millions love, the kind of characters which beget a

THE devotees of the western are as constant in their loyalties as any of their heroes. Having selected three years ago the straight shooting Gene Autry, as dexterous with a cowboy ballad as he is sure fire in the saddle, as the Money Making Western Star, exhibitors recording their audiences' preference in this year's poll named him again, the third successive season, for first position.

The singing Texan's popularity is further enhanced in the voting by his standing in the analysis of the vote from independent exhibitors who rated him approximately a two hundred per cent better draw than his nearest rival. It is in the independent houses that the true followers of the quick death to the villain reels worship. In the circuit vote Autry trailed both William Boyd, whose Hopalong Cassidy characterizations achieve greater circulation in that field, and George O'Brien.

Boyd, in the combined vote this year, gallops closely on the heels of the winner, gaining slightly in the race continued from last year.

First of three new members in the honored ten is Roy Rogers, vaulting into third place from a standing start two years ago when he made his first singing western. Last year he was third among the Honorable Mentions. George O'Brien last year eased his mustang into fourth place and there he remains. Charles Starrett and the Three Mesquiteers are fifth and sixth, the reverse of their last year's relationship, and in seventh place is Tex Ritter, two lengths ahead of his 1938 standing. Buck Jones, a little late on the draw, dropped from third to eighth.

John Wayne and Bob Baker complete the honor roll, both moving in from the Honorable Mention list of last year. Baker needed only one stride to make it to tenth from his 1938 rating, but Wayne, with several outstanding parts to his credit, jumped from half way down the list.

Exhibitors were asked the same question as in the general poll of Money Making Stars. The questionnaire read: "Name, in order, the ten players in Westerns whose pictures drew the greatest attendance."

Form Shown By Newcomers

star who portrays them a purely emotional adulation.

The rise of Alice Faye to seventh position from last year's ninth makes Hollywood dopesters look pretty ridiculous. They found it no trick at all to explain last year's rise from nowhere to ninth, simply mentioning "Alexander's Ragtime Band" and "In Old Chicago" as amply explanatory. Miss Faye has had no such hits as these since. Yet she is eighth in the circuit poll and sixth in the independent. About the only plausible explanation of that gain in both divisions would seem to be that the people who buy the tickets like her better than anybody has had reason to believe they do.

Flynn in Broad Jump

There's more good news for the Warners in the enthronement of Errol Flynn in eighth place. They've never doubted that the man had it in him, have never hesitated to spend money with both hands for the purpose of bringing it out. "Robin Hood" and "Dodge City," to name but two of his pictures, cost more to make than most presidencies. Now snug in place among the leaders, and a peg higher than that in the circuit poll, it is to be noted that he passed 13 contenders since last year to get there. A gentleman of known momentum, he'd be a good bet to go higher.

Cagney's Comeback

James Cagney's return to distinguished company, following a disastrous sag last year due to conditions beyond everybody's control but his, is one for the books. The doughty redhead ran 10th in 1935, 12th in 1936, dropped back with the tail-enders in 1937 and 1938, whilst preoccupied with lawing and so forth, and here he is again, doughtier than ever on the highest rung he's ever trod. True, he's had the kind and number of pictures he needed to prove it, but prove his point he manifestly has.

Nordic Sonja Henie's continuing presence in the top flight of box office personalities is the sort of thing that makes picture players happy, reaffirms their essential faith in themselves. For actors do not consider Miss Henie an actress. They do consider her the world's best skater. And they do consider her personality distinctive, a sort of "grown up Shirley Temple" personality which actors are somehow happy to know can exist and function in their world of shadowy values. Miss Henie was in 8th position in 1937, her first year in pictures; rose to 3d last year, and is 10th this year.

AMPA JOINS NEELY BILL ATTACK AS INDUSTRY OPENS NEW CAMPAIGN

Pettijohn and Palfreyman Begin Drive at New York Luncheon; Danger to Small Independents Seen in Legislation

The organized motion picture industry last Thursday fired the opening gun in its attack on the anti-block selling and blind buying bill of Senator Matthew Mansfield, when Charles C. Pettijohn, general counsel of the Hays organization, and David Palfreyman, MPPDA exhibitor organization contact, appeared before the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers in New York, and got that organization's agreement to use its motion picture publicity and press agent talents to familiarize film men, exhibitors and the public with the potential "evil" effects of the bill.

Soundings Seen

It is presumed, in view of expressed feelings of pessimism in certain film quarters over the industry's chances with Congress on block booking legislation in the approaching Congressional session, that the organized industry already is taking under-surface soundings for the Neely bill attack.

Appearance of Mr. Pettijohn and Mr. Palfreyman last week in behalf of the campaign was the first public denouncement by spokesmen for the organized industry in the present campaign, and follows a series of meetings held the week before on the subject by top executives of the large companies.

Motion Picture Herald last week, page 17, reported Washington opinion as holding that the bill this time has a 50-50 chance of Congressional enactment.

How passage of the Neely bill would affect the motion picture industry was described by Mr. Pettijohn and by Mr. Palfreyman, for the MPPDA, and by Leo Brecher, a New York independent exhibitor, at the regular luncheon meeting of the AMPA at Stouffer's restaurant in New York.

To Form Committee

The AMPA voted unanimously to form a committee to cooperate with Mr. Pettijohn and his associates on a campaign to defeat the Bill, which has already passed the Senate and will be introduced in the House sometime after the next session of Congress opens on January 3rd. The campaign, it is planned, will familiarize men in the industry with the bill and will be extended to exhibitors and to the general public in order to build articulate opposition. Unless the Representatives are informed by their constituents that they should vote against the bill, the opinion was expressed that the Neely bill would pass. Paul Lazarus, Jr., president of AMPA, presided.

Sees "Compounded Confusion"

Mr. Pettijohn said that the title of the bill was "to prohibit and to prevent" the trade practices known as "compulsory block-booking" and "blind selling" but the act really provides for a law that would "compound confusion, multiply difficulties, literally raise costs and hike admission prices." The duty of each member of the industry to acquaint himself with the full significance of the bill was stressed.

The value of motion pictures as public entertainment was reiterated by Mr. Pettijohn. The motion pictures are "more satisfactory today than in any other period in the history of the screen. There are 85,000,000 votes a week to express satisfaction." The admission prices here in America are not, Mr. Pettijohn said, "too high," as the bill might indicate. "It is the achievement of the selling system attacked by this bill which has made it possible for pictures to be so distributed that even under the most depressed economic conditions the poorest in the land are able to see, in time, the best that the art produces."

GRAF SPEE NEWSREELS DELAYED IN SHIPMENT

At midweek, in New York, newsreel editors were uncertain when they'd receive footage taken in Montevideo harbor of the German warship Graf Spee. Films had been shipped by air express to Paramount News and Movietonews; but it appeared doubtful that they would arrive in time for Wednesday night releases.

The films were believed to cover the ship's maneuverings prior to its settling.

Pictures of the scuttling and subsequent explosions and fire will arrive later.

Self-Regulation Lauded

If the bill passed it would be "too bad for the little fellow," Mr. Pettijohn continued. The industry has met the challenge of the depression and made more and better pictures, through self-regulation; more theatres are operating than a few years ago, according to the speaker. Mr. Pettijohn said, "no industry deserves less government regulation, and no industry has had less."

The Neely Bill, Mr. Pettijohn said would not increase, but decrease production and admission prices would be raised. The wording of the title of the bill had deceived people in the industry who should know better, according to the MPPDA attorney.

Mr. Pettijohn said "the little fellow will be literally thrown to the dogs under the Neely Bill. The weakest not the strongest would fall first." The bill sets up a "new and more costly system of distribution." The difficulties are so many that "the little fellow would be behind the 8 ball." The speaker also noted that "40% of the exhibitors in the United States pay less rental than the cost of travel to the centers where trade showings are held."

Penalties Cited

The $5,000 fine and the year's imprisonment provided under Section 5 of the bill for every person who violates any provision of the act, including the furnishing of an "accurate" synopsis, was cited as a factor that would wreck the present distribution and production system.

The idea of local censorship, Mr. Pettijohn said, is introduced in the bill.

"The Neely bill offers public interest as a motive for its attack on the industry. In this case the alleged public interest masquerades under the fancy name of 'community selection.' It might better be called 'local censorship.'" Mr. Pettijohn appealed to the "voice of the box office" as proof of the public approval of the present system, so the bill could not be "in the best interests of the public" as it states.

The speaker urged the members to recognize that the fight is for the public, too, but that the burden must fall on the representatives of the industry. In conclusion Mr. Pettijohn said that the present system of selling, production and distribution had brought the business from the peep shows days to "the great thing it is today, the beautiful industry of which we all are a part."

Palfreyman Traces History

David Palfreyman was the second speaker and his part in the program was to explain in detail the provisions of the Neely bill. He traced the origin of the movement against "block-booking" and "blind selling" to a "cease and desist" order of the Federal Trade Commission, in 1927. The rule was thrown out by the Federal Court of Appeals in 1932. This order has been incorporated "almost word for word" in the Neely Bill according to Mr. Palfreyman. The Motion Picture Research Council, friend of the bill, was formed about the same time as the Federal Trade Commission ruling.

The anti block-booking blind-selling proposal has been made a political football and has a strong appeal to exhibitors, Mr. Palfreyman added. He enumerated a unmber of arguments off the point that proponents of the Neely bill have advanced a large number of arguments have been advanced but few are relevent. Mr. Palfreyman further pointed out that the Neely bill is different from any other type of legislation that aims at price control in that the price is not controlled among different customers but for the very same customer. He also said that any person, the opposition theatre man for instance, could file a complaint.

Mr. Palfreyman also attacked the "accurate" synopsis which is required in the act and must be made a part of the contract. The word "accurate" had been substituted in an amendment for "complete and true" synopsis. He pointed out that it would be difficult to determine just what was or was not an accurate contract.

Leo Brecher, speaking as a representative exhibitor, said that an exhibitor must keep open 365 days a year and there "aren't enough good pictures to keep anyone's theatre running all year." He said some patrons come to see program pictures because they have nothing else to do or like the shorts or newsreel or for some other reason. He questioned Mr. Pettijohn's use of the expression "voice of the box office" and suggested as a substitute, "voice of the community" because he said the box office of the theatre reflects the views of the community. He also said "no one goes out to make a bad picture and no law can require the making of a good one." Mr. Brecher did say that blind buying was not very satisfactory from the exhibitors' viewpoint. The exhibitors want more knowledge and specific information when buying but, he declared, the Neely bill will not even supply that.

In the open forum that followed the speaking, members wanted definite action started in the campaign. It was pointed out that the bill can not be beaten from New York and Hollywood but pressure must be put on all the congressmen.

The following were appointed to the special committee by Mr. Lazarus, president of the AMPA:

Leon T. Bamberger, RKO; Herbert Berg Paramount; Louis Pollock, Universal; Martin Starr, station WMCA and Eli Sugarman, Billboard. Ex-officio members are Arthur James and Mr. Lazarus. The duties of the members, according to the resolution, are to assist Mr. Pettijohn and his cohorts in their campaign against the Neely bill.

NEELY BILL UNREAD BY 90%: BRANDT; COHEN CODE PARLEY IN JANUARY

New York Independent Returns from Campaign Tour of Country; Claims Assurances of Radio Appearance Curtailment

Harry Brandt, president of the local New York Independent Theatre Owners Association, returned to his Hotel Astor hearthstone, last Friday, after touring the country as an apparently self-appointed self-paying trade practice ambassador to exhibitors, during which, he said, he spoke to 1,300 of them in 21 cities. He said, too, that 90 per cent of exhibitors do not know whether the Neely anti-block selling bill in Congress would aid or harm them, because they hadn't read the bill—but they will read it now, his office added, after having heard from him. Of the remaining 10 per cent, half are for the bill, half against it, said Mr. Brandt.

Seeks 1,000,000 Letters

Last week, in Hollywood, ending the first half of his journey, Mr. Brandt told all and sundry that he is out to get 1,000,000 letters addressed to Congressmen in protest against the Neely bill, but even then, he said, he still sees passage of the measure.

Also on his return, Mr. Brandt elaborated on his attacks against film stars' radio appearances, this week claiming that he had "assurances" from "all the producing heads" in Hollywood that the studios would severely curtail, if not entirely bar the practice. Last week, while in Hollywood, he told exhibitors that he had, tucked away in his pockets, plans for boycotts by 10,000 owners, of films of stars who continue on the air.

New York executives of the majors this week were completely uninformed of any "assurances" or agreements by their studios in Hollywood with Mr. Brandt on the matter of film player air show prohibitions, nor was there any indication from Mr. Brandt's office in Times Square when he would disclose identities of these threatening boycott, or the who and when and where any such action would take place.

Working "Night and Day"

In a statement issued Monday from the local exhibitor leader's office, Lionel Toll, his press agent, declared: "Mr. Brandt told them (exhibitors) that the Neely bill would surely put all independent subsequent run theatre owners out of business, and he is working night and day to arouse enough public opinion to make legislators in Washington aware of the harm it will do the motion picture industry."

"Brandt reiterated the point that the Neely bill is so worded as to practically cut production to the bone, raise film rental to the skies and prevent any further progress being made in the industry," the statement said.

"Mr. Brandt, president of the ITOA, continued the Toll statement, explaining that he spoke in Pittsburg, Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago, St. Louis, Salt Lake City, San Francisco, Denver, Los Angeles, Dallas, Kansas City, Philadelphia and other cities, said:

"In each spot, he addressed members of various organizations, many of whom had never before sat in the same room with each other. In Chicago, Brandt addressed a meeting of Allied which was attended by the Allied regional vice-presidents as well as Al Steffes (Allied of the Northwest) who asked Brandt to join the others and fight for the Neely Bill. Brandt replied that he would be willing to pay half the legal fee of the most outstanding lawyer in Chicago, if Steffes paid the other, and if that lawyer decided the Neely bill was good for the industry, Brandt would fight for its passage. If the lawyer declared it was no good, then Steffes would fight against its passage. Steffes gave the stock reply to that challenge—that Allied is for the Neely Bill."

"In Dallas, home territory of Colonel Cole, national president of Allied, his brother, who operates three theatres in which Colonel Cole is a partner in one, stood up on the floor of a meeting of Allied attended by 33 members and spoke lengthly against the Neely bill.

"In Hollywood, Brandt met with all the producing heads of the studios and was given assurances by each that no new players would be signed unless radio appearances were restricted; that contract players would be kept from broadcasting when possible. He said the greatest trouble was with free lance players and efforts to restrain them were being made. He said that the original committee of ten exhibitors from all over the country organized to combat screen stars on the air was being enlarged to 60 and the campaign was rapidly gaining momentum.

"In his last speech to exhibitors before returning home, Brandt spoke in Philadelphia to 100 theatre owners. Members of Allied, a great many of whom were present, were reported before the meeting ready to start a lot of fireworks from the floor as soon as Brandt finished speaking. Brandt spoke for a little over an hour, flaying Ed. Kuykendall, Abram Myers, Colonel Cole, the Neely bill, radio stars on the air, the arbitrary tactics of affiliated circuits and the necessity of an arbitration code in the industry, and when he finished there was not one question, thrown at him. The only remarks heard were those of praise. Sidney Samuelson, Moe Wax and Pete Harrison fired no questions although they were asked to.

"Brandt revealed that in his trip around the country, he found that the leaders of Allied differed greatly in their opinions on industry matters from those of their members. He is positive, he said, that many men are now campaigning against the Neely Bill who heretofore believed it was beneficial.

"In Hollywood, Brandt found a willingness to cooperate that he did not believe would exist. He found producers of the mind that stars, overusing their drawing powers in radio appearances, ruin themselves as surely as songs which are overplayed on the air.

"With regard to arbitration, exhibitors want it, Brandt said and if it is not secured it will not be the fault of theatre owners," concluded the Toll statement.

"CHIPS", "LOVE AFFAIR" HELD BUDAPEST TOPS

The most successful pictures of the fall season in Budapest were "Stolen Life", "Good-Bye, Mr. Chips" (a very big success), "Three Musketeers", "Union Pacific", "Love Affair" (very well received), "Les Miserables". In addition, a number of French pictures have had excellent runs in the deluxe theatres, while new Hungarian pictures are doing a steady business, especially in neighborhood houses.

The Hungarian Board of Censors banned "Jesse James", "The Frontier Marshal" and "Jamaica Inn".

Cohen Says Conciliation Set-up Discussions Will Start Soon; Distributors Reported to Favor Plan as Test for Code

Conferences of his organization with distributors in New York State, in order to set up state-wide conciliation, will begin after January 1st, Max Cohen, president of the New York Allied, said in New York this week. The plan for such boards was announced at a state-membership meeting in Buffalo last Wednesday.

Favored as Test

Distribution circles this week reported favoring a trial of the idea, if it could be used as a testing-board for a national plan of conciliation.

Understood to be willing to cooperate with Mr. Cohen's organization are all the majors, and Republic, and Monogram.

Mr. Cohen, on Monday, was optimistic about the conciliation boards' changes of alleviating many of the grievances independent exhibitors now hold.

At last Wednesday's meeting, the conciliation boards were described as part of a planned "New York State code" which would include sales policies and cancellation.

At the meeting, the vote was 14 to 4 against the Neely Bill. The vote came after an open forum. Mr. Cohen had opposed the bill, and asked the industry to unite against it.

Elections resulted in the naming of Mr. Cohen as president, once again; of Joseph Rosensweig, treasurer; Thomas Di Lorenzo, assistant treasurer; Abe Levy, secretary; and Ray Pasley, vice-president. Elected as regional vice-presidents were Irving Sherman, of Pearl River, for the New York City area; William Tishkoff, Rochester; Rapley P. Merriman, Syracuse; Herman Lorenz, Buffalo; Mitchell Conery, Albany.

New directors are Minna Rosen, Max Fogel, John Gardner, Sidney L. Grossman, Frank Allen, Abe Stone, B. M. Pearlman, Joseph G. Abramson, and Walter Neathold.

The unit's constitution was revised, for centralization and efficiency. The date of the fiscal year was made to coincide with that of the calendar year. The annual meetings are to be held on the first Wednesday in December, in the future. Prospective members are to file their applications with regional bodies, from now on. Members owning more than one theatre must join for all or none, in payment of dues. There are now provisions for suspension or expulsion of members. They have the rights, however, of hearings before a conciliation board, and an appeal to the main body.

The five regional units are, henceforth, New York, Albany, Buffalo, Syracuse, and Rochester, the regional vice-president presiding, aided by a working secretary and a grievance committee.

Representatives of distributors, based in Buffalo, attended the meeting. One of them, Charles Harris of Warners, was quoted, on the conciliation board and state trade practice code plan, as endorsing it.

Activities of Other Exhibitor Organizations

The Allied Theatre Owners of Western Pennsylvania has named a "board of strategy" in pursuance of its drive against 16mm exhibition in the territory. On the board are M. A. Rosenberg, the organization's president;

PRODUCT, POLICY AND PERSONNEL CHANGES ALTER HOLLYWOOD PICTURE

Elimination of "B" Films and Curtailment of Programs Lead Policy Innovations Announced by Studio Executives

An unusually large number of policy and personnel changes transpiring this week in Hollywood may be expected to have considerable effect in the moulding of new product, immediate and future.

Started last week with Paramount's elimination of "B" pictures, Sidney Kent's expression of the necessity of a 25 per cent cut in product budgets, and the decision of some producers to curtail programs, with others maintaining the status quo, the Hollywood picture this week underwent still further changes as a result of the following:

Warner Brothers joined the trend away from "B's", to "A's" exclusively, maintaining an annual program of 48.

Republic reduced the number in its three western series from eight each to six.

Universal's increasing acquisition of stars prompted the calling of a special district sales managers meeting.

Nearly every major studio's heavily stacked product shelves were being tapped for films "in the can" to peg release dates for the next three months.

Samuel Goldwyn withdrew from United Artists, James Roosevelt became a Goldwyn producer, David Selznick announced his continuance with U.A. and Edward Small, the complete performance of his current season's commitments—all of which are reported in relation to United Artists on page 35.

Universal gave A. H. McCausland a special production position; MGM signed Irving Asher as an executive producer, and will return Ben Goetz to production in England; Columbia signed Charles R. Rogers to produce for three years. Republic signed Rudy Vallee, crooner, to produce two musicals.

Dropping "B" Pictures

Complete elimination of "B" pictures in favor of an annual program of 48 "A" features was announced Tuesday by Jack L. Warner, vice-president in charge of production.

At the same time Mr. Warner announced the promotion of Bryan Foy to the post of assistant to Hal B. Wallis, executive producer. Mr. Foy has been producing "in-betweens."

"We shall make only pictures that rate preferred playing time," said Mr. Warner, who also disclosed that "five of the most important pictures on the Warner program will start shooting about January 15," according to a schedule of Mr. Wallis. The features: "The Sea Hawk," starring Errol Flynn, direction, Michael Curtiz; "The Prime Minister," co-starring Geraldine Fitzgerald and Laurence Olivier; "All This and Heaven, Too," starring Bette Davis, with Anatole Litvak directing; "City for Conquest," starring James Cagney; "The Patent Leather Kid" with George Raft.

Republic will reduce the number in three current series of western pictures from eight each to six each and introduce a new western group to be made with a new player yet to be selected. Interviews were being held at the studio this week with candidates. Roy Rogers, Gene Autry and "Three Mesquiteer" groups will be reduced to six apiece for the new season.

"Universal's increasing acquisition of stars and a completion of production plans for this year" induced Nate Blumberg, president, to call a special meeting in New York of district sales managers less than 24 hours after his return from Hollywood.

The meeting, presided over by W. A. Scully, general sales manager, took place over the week-end, with individual plan-making sessions

Arizona's Governor Jones Chides LaGuardia On Production Proposal

Reverberations to the proposal to return part of production to New York made by doughty Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia continued this week as expressions from the trade and other sources further criticized the idea.

Governor R. T. Jones of Arizona chided Mayor LaGuardia. He said the New York Mayor, "who spent his boyhood in Prescott (Arizona), apparently has forgotten what he should have remembered regarding the climatic and scenic characteristics of Phoenix (Arizona) because, if his memory hasn't failed him completely, he must have been kidding when he was recommending New York and its facilities for film production."

"We think," he said, "the Mayor has bitten off a chew that even he cannot digest. During the current year and in 1940, at least $10,000,000 will be expended by the motion picture industry in this state. Among those who have adopted Arizona as a second Hollywood are Samuel Goldwyn, who is spending over $1,000,000 in producing 'The Westerner'.

"Other major producing companies are following Mr. Goldwyn in his selection of this state, among them being Warner Brothers, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Twentieth Century-Fox and Paramount. I suspect Mayor LaGuardia is a bit jealous that the film industry has selected his native state over his adopted city."

From Newark comes word of an offer to the film companies to take over the $1,500,000 hangars vacated by the major airlines when they transferred their eastern base of operations from Newark to LaGuardia Field in Queens, N. Y., as sound studios and possible nucleus of an eastern film plant.

Mayor Meyer Ellenstein of Newark thinks it might be a good joke on the New York Mayor if Newark could lure the coast studios.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., also puts in a bid as a site for production if the coast producers take Mayor LaGuardia's suggestion to go east. The Wilkes-Barre Record, in an editorial last week, pointed out that the old Black Diamond studios were located at Forty-Fort, a suburb. The Record observes: "What Wilkes-Barre did before in the film industry she can do again."

In a repercussion in the east Motion Picture Daily reported that executives of two of the major companies agreed with the New York Mayor that it was not an ideal situation to have administrative offices located on one coast and production on the other and therefore they were giving serious thought to moving their executive offices to Hollywood.

Supporting this idea, one executive pointed out that, if any change was to be made, it would be completely illogical to abandon millions of dollars of west coast properties and invest new millions in eastern production facilities when executive offices could be moved merely by termination or settlement of leases, with an immediate saving of thousands of dollars to be realized from the consolidation of executive with production headquarters.

Nate Blumberg, president of Universal, returned to New York from Hollywood this week and said his company had no plans for producing in the east.

David Selznick, arriving in New York from Atlanta and the premiere of "Gone With the Wind", said he thinks some pictures should be made in the east; but that the industry, with its great investments in Hollywood, could not be taken from there. Moreover, he said, film persons love California. He added, however, that some certain types of production are suitable for New York, stage plays for instance.

Jesse L. Lasky said in Hollywood last week before leaving for New York that the eastern city will never take the place of the coast city, but that it had possibilities for picture making.

PRODUCT QUANTITY HOLDS UP

presided over by J. A. McCarthy and W. J. Heineman, eastern and western sales managers, respectively.

Also attending were foreign sales manager J. H. Seidelman; short subject sales manager, Leo Abrams; branch operations manager, F. T. Murray, and district managers A. J. O'Keefe, Los Angeles; E. T. Gomersall, Chicago; P. T. Dana, Kansas City; H. D. Graham, Atlanta; Dave Miller, Cleveland; A. J. Herman, New York; Dave Levy, of "Big U"; Paul Nathanson, Canada, and Tom Murray, Lou Pollock, Hank Linet and James Jordan, all of the home office.

Universal Plans Call for 58

It is expected that Universal will make the same number of films in 1940-41 as this year—58, including westerns.

Mr. Blumberg listed the following pictures as completed and awaiting release dates:

"Charlie McCarthy, Detective," starring Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy; "Green Hell," first of the Harry Edington productions for Universal, starring Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and Joan Bennett; "The Invisible Man Returns," the H. G. Wells sequel to "The Invisible Man," with Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Vincent Price; "Oh, Johnny, How You Can Love," based on the hit-tune, with Tom Brown, Alan Jenkins.

In the last stages of production is the Mae West-W. C. Fields "My Little Chickadee."

For the balance of the current season, Mr. Blumberg announced the following:

Deanna Durbin in two pictures, the first, "It Happened in Kaloa," already partially cast with Kay Francis, Cissie Loftus, Samuel S. Hinds; and the Straus operetta, "Spring Parade," to be directed by Henry Koster and produced by Joe Pasternak.

Bing Crosby and Gloria Jean in "If I Had My Way," to be directed by David Butler.

A hitherto unannounced production which will be ready for early summer release, is the Tay Garnett production, "World Cruise," starring Loretta Young.

Irene Dunne is set for one more. The story is now in preparation.

Another new acquisition is the stage show, "The Boys from Syracuse," to star the Ritz Brothers and Mischa Auer. Rogers and Hart will write the songs.

Bob Burns is to star in "Alias the Deacon."

"House of Seven Gables" will also be made.

"Sandy Is a Lady" was announced as the next picture starring Baby Sandy.

Production activity at Universal will increase to "record proportions" immediately after the holidays when Mr. Blumberg returns to the Coast to complete plans for future output, said the company. Mr. Blumberg then will continue discussions with studio executives and producers on the balance of product to be delivered on the 1939-40 program, and also initiate a series of conferences pertaining to next year's schedule.

Boyer Picture Due Early

Charles Boyer has been signed to a four-year contract by Universal, and will report for his first picture under the agreement in August. The Boyer picture, which will be produced and directed by Joe Pasternak and Henry Koster, respectively, will be made for early release on the 1940-41 schedule.

With better than half of the Universal product for the current season already delivered, plans are being rushed for the release of four additional productions during the next 30 days.

Plans for a William A. Scully anniversary sales campaign and the results of the recent exhibitor-sponsored drive were revealed to the Universal district sales managers. The Scully drive will extend from January 1 through April for record billings and sales.

FILM MEASURE VETO UPHELD

The Illinois supreme court this week upheld the veto by Governor Henry Horner of the measure which would limit the time of film shows to 2 hours and 15 minutes.

The court held that the governor has 10 days to act upon legislation approved by the General Assembly regardless of whether he received it after adjournment of the legislature. The ruling involved writs of mandamus concerning two bills which, with 39 others, were vetoed by the governor after expiration of 10 days from the sine die adjournment of the Assembly.

William Heineman's western division was the winner of the exhibitor-sponsored drive and the winning district was Al O'Keefe's Los Angeles office. Al Herman's New York district came in second while third place went to Pete Dana's Kansas City district. L. J. McGinley, captain of the western division, came in for a share of the award.

Winning offices in the East were Washington, New Orleans, Memphis, New Haven and Pittsburgh. Western branch winners were Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland, St. Louis and Denver.

A. H. McCausland, a vice-president and director of the Harry Edington production organization, will join Universal in a special capacity at the studio.

Mr. McCausland, formerly the Irving Trust Company's representative in RKO, will handle labor relations besides special assignments.

Mr. Edington plans to put his second release for Universal into production about February 1. Although not definitely decided yet, the production may be "Le Chien," with Cary Grant. Distribution arrangements beyond that have not been set.

RKO Schedules 26 by May

RKO Radio Pictures New Year's schedule points to a total of 26 films to be released by May 10th, including "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," "Pinocchio," and "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," according to an announcement by vice-president Ned E. Depinet, who added that many units of the program are now completed and that eight are shooting and eight are in the cutting rooms.

By a special process, one sequence in Herbert Wilcox's production of "Irene" for RKO release will show the star, Anna Neagle, in color, while all other objects and persons will be seen in black and white. There will be several color scenes in the musical, although it is not an all-color picture.

Orson Welles, now in Hollywood to make his film debut as film producer, director, writer and actor for RKO in "Heart of Darkness," will make two feature pictures this winter instead of one for the company.

While awaiting the completion of preparations on the Joseph Conrad story, Mr. Welles will start on the immediate production of "The Smiler with the Knife," new English "thriller" by Nicholas Blake.

RKOs annual billing drive this year will be known as the Ned Depinet Drive and will run from January 27 to May 10.

Herb MacIntyre, northeastern district manager, has been named drive captain, succeeding Walter Branson. Mr. MacIntyre and Harry Gittleson, editor of Flash, company house organ, will tour the exchanges after January 1 in behalf of the drive.

No Reduction at Twentieth Century-Fox

"Twentieth Century-Fox will not cut the number of pictures it will make next season, nor will any economies be effected that will in any way impair the quality of the company's product lineup," Sidney R. Kent, president, said Monday, when he returned to New York after a five-day conference at the studio with Darryl F. Zanuck, Herman Wobber and Joseph M. Schenck.

Charles McCarthy, Twentieth Century-Fox publicity and advertising director, also returned from the Coast.

Nine pictures, two starting in December, four in January and three in February, will complete the 1939-40 production program for Sol M. Wurtzel's unit at Twentieth Century-Fox, it was announced this week. Mr. Wurtzel will divide supervision duties with John Stone, associate producer. The production schedule follows:

December 13th—Second "Hotel for Women," untitled as yet; December 18th—second "Cisco Kid," untitled, starring Cesar Romero with Jean Rogers and Chris-Pin Martin; January 3d—"Marriage in Transit," featuring Jean Rogers and Joan Davis; "Charlie Chan's Oriental Cruise," starring Sidney Toler; January 15th—"Earthbound"; "Sweetheart of Turret One," feauring Jon Hall and Nancy Kelly; February 4th—"Jones Family" picture, untitled; third "Cisco Kid," untitled, starring Cesar Romero with Chris-Pin Martin, and third "Hotel for Women," untitled.

Rogers Signs With Columbia

Columbia Pictures announced Monday that it had concluded a three-year contract with Charles R. Rogers for the production and distribution of three pictures annually. Production will start after the first of the year at Columbia Studios, with "Jane Addams and Hull House" and "Senate Page Boys" as the first.

Jack Cohn, Columbia vice-president, returned to New York Monday from Hollywood, where he had been in conference with studio officials since November 17th.

Two new Columbia productions, "His Girl Friday" and "Music in My Heart," also arrived.

Mr. Cohn said that work at the studio is "booming," with three other major films in work and a number of other productions ready for early shooting.

Irving Asher, until recently head of his own independent British production company, for Columbia, and with Alexander Korda, in London, has been signed as a producer for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and will join the executive staff at Culver City immediately. His most recent pictures were "Clouds Over Europe" and "U-Boat 29."

Ben Goetz will return to London as head of Metro's production in Great Britain.

EAST "WIND" BRINGS GOLDEN SHOWER OF SPACE ESTIMATED AT 20 MILLION

Three Wire Services Send Actual Reviews to Clients; Newspapers' Featured Writers at Openings; What Critics Say

"Gone with the Wind" this week rode eastward from Hollywood to Atlanta's Peachtree Street and Loew's Grand, then on north to Broadway's Astor and Capitol theatres, to the biggest press attention ever given a motion picture, voluminously as great as the publicity in print received for the three solid years of the film's preparation and production preceding this week's first public exhibitions—Damon Runyon, in rough estimation, placed at $20,000,0000 the price of advertising rates for the space that had been given in news pages.

Reviews on Wire Services

Associated Press, United Press, International News Service, for the first time, put actual reviews of a picture on their wires to their hundreds of newspaper clients; they, along with individual metropolitan papers, wire-photoed scores of pictures of the Atlanta scene, taking hundreds of pictures at both Atlanta, Friday night, and Broadway's dual Astor, Capitol openings on Tuesday night.

Leading newspapers sent feature writers hundreds of miles to the scene at Atlanta, and at their own expense, the New York Times' assignment of Meyer Berger being typical.

Page one attention was virtually the makeup editor's order of the day. Most papers gave both reportorial attention and reviews, some of them even running two reviews in adjoining columns, the New York Daily News being one of those which thought that one review was not enough for this biggest and longest motion picture ever produced.

300 Invited Guests

Howard Dietz, director of advertising and publicity for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, distributor of "Wind," sent out the longest list ever recorded for the press, of the "Who's Who" of guests invited to the New York opening. It contained a round 300 names, running all the way from John Jacob Astor, of the old Jacob Astors, to Fred Allen, the radio prankster, Bugs Baer, Billy Brandt and Nate Blumberg, the Averell Clarks and the Parnell Crosleys, Jesse Woolworth Donahue and Mrs. Jack Dempsey, the Countess de Mum, James Farley, the Averell Harrimans, Mrs. William Randolph Hearst, Will Hays and Herbert Hoover, Sidney Kent and Elsa Maxwell, John Pierpont Morgan, Thomas Mann and John Otterson, Fred Potts, Nelson Rockefeller, S. Rosenberg and Billy Rose and the Rhinelander Stewarts, Max Steuer and George Schaefer, the Vanderbilts, the Whitneys and Warburgs, Gene Tunney, Sir William Wiseman and Miss Joan Wetmore—to mention but a scattering.

Many of the guests appeared before the televisor in the Capitol's lobby, in the first telecast of a motion picture premiere. (Details of the telecast are on page 9.)

The story of "Wind" at Atlanta was told last week; the story of new details on "Wind" prices and policies, by Mr. Selznick, is told this week, on the opposite page.

The opinions of the film critics of the press on this spectacular second invasion and burning of Atlanta follow, with no mention made of the New York Telegram's report of the remark of the Hollywood "Wind" player, who, alighting from the train at Atlanta, heard the welcoming band playing "Dixie," and chirped, excitedly: "Oh, they're playing the song from the picture!"

U. S. NAVY BIG FILM CUSTOMER

The United States Navy is probably as big a customer of the motion picture business as any exhibitor, it was disclosed this week in the annual report of Rear Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, Chief of the Navy's Bureau of Navigation.

The Navy's bill for motion picture programs during the fiscal year ended June 30th last, Admiral Nimitz reported, was $343,000, of which $85,000 was appropriated by Congress and the remainder contributed from ships' store profits, accruing from purchases made by sailors.

New York

TIMES, Frank S. Nugent: "Is it the greatest motion picture ever made? Probably not, although it is the greatest motion picture mural we have seen and the most ambitious film-making venture in Hollywood's spectacular history. . . . By any and all standards, Mr. Selznick's film is a handsome, scrupulous and unstinting version of the 1,037 page-novel, matching it almost scene for scene with a literalness that not even Shakespeare or Dickens were accorded in Hollywood."

HERALD TRIBUNE, Howard Barnes: "Without question it is destined to rank among the major history-making events of the cinema, for it is certain to smash all sorts of box-office records. At the same time, it strikes me that its chief distinction is its sheer size and that its principal appeal resides in the fact that it is a remarkably faithful transcription of an enormously popular book.

DAILY NEWS, Kate Cameron: "There has never been a picture like David O. Selznick's production of 'Gone With the Wind.' . . . The film is of the same epic quality as the book. . . . Vivien Leigh gives a magnificent performance. One must be feeling hale and hearty to stand the strain of the long sitting . . . but for those who can bear it, "Gone With the Wind" is worth every minute of the time."

POST, Archer Winsten: "In the future, one suspects, all monster movie productions will be judged against the bulk and opulence of 'Gone With the Wind.' . . . Just as the 'Birth of a Nation' was a milestone of movie history, 'Gone With the Wind' represents a supreme effort of 1939. . . . 'Gone With the Wind' could not have been made more faithfully into a film . . . it would not be fair to the picture to guarantee that everyone is going to think it is the greatest as well as the biggest picture ever shown."

SUN, Eileen Creelman: "It rushes, like the book, like life itself, from one moment of drama to another. . . . 'Gone With the Wind' is a magnificent production, in spite of its length . . . those four hours may leave an audience exhausted. It also leaves them satisfied."

WORLD-TELEGRAM, William Boehnel: . . . "I'd admit of some doubt about the greatness of the film as a whole, but not about Vivien Leigh's performance of Scarlett . . . for me at least, only the first half of the film matches the extraordinarily beautiful drama of the book. . . . The production itself is magnificent. Technicolor has never been so perfect."

Press Associations

INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE: "The finest motion picture ever made. . . . Miss Mitchell's famous book has been brought to the silver screen intact, with all its undying charm, romance, terror and courage of the South, just before, during and after the war between the States. Her vivid characters live, and with one fell swoop a new star is made—Vivien Leigh" . . .

ASSOCIATED PRESS: "The critical audience sat and laughed, wept and clenched its collective hands in anger while a cast of superb actors gave superb performances. Vivien Leigh carried one of the most difficult roles the screen has ever handed a performer with utmost credit. . . . Only drawback to the picture is its length."

UNITED PRESS: "The picture follows the plot of the novel faithfully. . . . Clark Gable, who was the unanimous choice among movie fans for the part of Rhett Butler did not let them down. The rest of the cast . . . also was excellent."

Atlanta

ATLANTA JOURNAL, Frank Daniel: "The movie is a worthy realization for those who have anticipated it most keenly during the four years since Margaret Mitchell's novel began its triumphant career. . . . As long as there are great novels like 'Gone With the Wind,' there will be men with the special audacity and ability to re-tell them."

CONSTITUTION, Lee Rogers: "It is wonderful. 'Gone With the Wind' opens a new film era. It has everything a great picture could have. It has everything that everybody wanted. Vivien Leigh is 'Scarlett.' And Clark Gable is now, more so than ever, the box office public's choice as 'Rhett Butler'."

Los Angeles

HERALD-EXPRESS, Jimmy Starr: "Greatest motion picture production of all time . . . (the audience) saw and felt more reality than has ever before been attained upon the screen. One is so full of pent-up emotion upon seeing it that one feels like going out and having a good cry."

TIMES, Edwin Schallert: "It will sweep in practically all the awards of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. The Selznick-International organization has scored a lasting triumph for the screen."

DAILY NEWS, Virginia Wright: "A masterpiece of screen craftsmanship . . . deserves to be extravagantly praised. . . . The last half is not quite up to the first, but that is because the sweep of action was in the war and its destructiveness."

Hollywood

CITIZEN NEWS, James Francis Crow: "'Gone With the Wind' is in every department a superior picture. By ordinary standards, there is hardly a foot of the film that is not superlative. The picture demands a critical standard of its own."

SELZNICK EXPECTS 75 PER CENT OF "WIND" GROSS IN FIVE MONTHS

Producer Sees Domestic Receipts at New High Before Summer; Will Continue to Release Product Through UA

"Gone With the Wind" will make up 75 per cent of its domestic gross within the first five months of its exhibition, which would end about mid-May, when the picture is expected to have played in about 6,000 houses in the U. S. This is the anticipation of David Oliver Selznick, producer, who arrived on the scene of the Broadway "Wind" premiere, Tuesday, after the Atlanta opening.

Mr. Selznick, in an interview, was flush with comment about his picture, about continuing his distribution relations with United Artists, about his future product and policy.

To Remain with UA

Mr. Selznick said he is satisfied with United Artists' handling of his "regular" product—MGM is distributing "Wind"—and that he will remain with UA as a producer indefinitely.

Fresh from the Atlanta premiere of his picture—a tumultuous premiere which was also a Confederate "celebration"—Mr. Selznick was in New York for the twin premieres, at the Capitol and Astor theatres, on Tuesday. He is next to attend a "Wind" premiere on the Coast, to do some retakes on his next picture, "Rebecca," and to "take a much needed vacation."

United Artists has done a "wonderful job of handling my pictures," Mr. Selznick reiterated, but added he had rejected an interest in the distributing company, because, "I'm a producer, and I want no part of a distributing company."

He added, though, in response to questioning, that he usually "had a finger in everything."

500 Prints Ordered

The grossing of 75 per cent of domestic revenue within five months is far removed from the goal pursued by the makers of "The Birth of a Nation," he pointed out. That picture took years to cover the whole country. "Gone With the Wind" will do this in phenomenally short time, he added. Five hundred prints are being made for domestic use alone, he said; a similar number will be made for foreign exhibition. Technicolor is producing five prints a day, he said, with about 40 ready now.

He said, "We count on thousands of persons coming to see it twice or oftener. We distributed a questionnaire to the first preview audienece in Santa Barbara and 76 per cent said they'd want to see it over again."

How much money will the picture make?

As much as Loew officials think it will make, Mr. Selznick parried.

(Loew officials, from Al Lichtman to William Rodgers to Nicholas Schenck, have estimated a $10,000,000 to $20,000,000 gross—on a $4,000,000 cost.)

"Nobody really knows," Mr. Selznick said. "However, we know now it'll make money.

"A week ago I was worried. Today I feel better. At that, it'll be a month before we really know." He told reporters he had seen every scene at least 200 times, and viewed the finished product 30 times.

Will he cut the picture, later, from its present running time of three hours, 40 minutes?

"Not if I can help it. I wouldn't know where to start. And I think it would ruin the picture" the producer declared.

67 EDUCATIONAL FILMS SHOWING IN CANADA

There are 67 educational films in circulation in Canada in four traveling film libraries, it was reported at a meeting of the board of directors of the National Film Society of Canada, at Montreal. They have been purchased by the society for educational purposes, with funds provided by the Imperial Relations Trust, and are available for schools and other institutions.

And the admission price will not be cut below the announced 75 cents, either, he asserted.

Mr. Selznick was asked whether, as a producer, he favored the "milking" of a picture to the limit of its run by the exhibitor. He remarked that he did not think the average exhibitor playing "Gone With the Wind" would have to be reminded of such a policy, and that, "anyway, as long as an exhibitor makes money with it, so long will he play a picture, I think."

MGM Paid Part of Cost

How about the 70 per cent terms—did he think them steep?

"That's Mr. Rodgers' problem; the distribution is up to him; he'll answer those questions for you," Mr. Selznick replied.

MGM put up 25 per cent of the production costs, Mr. Selznick said, estimating the amount at "over $1,000,000."

He is still affiliated with John Hay Whitney, in Selznick International, he emphasized.

Reverting again to the film's length, Mr. Selznick said a vote on the coast, among the few who saw the picture prior to its Atlanta premier, was for an intermission; and he thought that the correct thing. He added that the premiere in Atlanta convinced him, also, that people would rather sit through a long "good" picture, rather than through one good one and one bad. The production of such lengthy pictures might be the answer to the double feature problem, he said.

Mr. Selznick did not think he'd produce another picture like "Gone With the Wind," for a while, however.

"It would be a miracle if another book came along to warrant such expense," he said.

The negative cost of the picture, he set at about $3,970,000. Prints cost about $1,100 each.

He believed that the country's first run theatres would get the picture by late January or February, in line with the policy of quickest possible distribution.

He praised MGM's handling of distribution.

His production should do as well in the North as in the South, Mr. Selznick believed. The book has sold all over the country, in equal distribution, he pointed out.

Yearly Revival Proposed

There may even be those people who will see the picture two or three times, he said. His attention was called to a proposal in Atlanta for a yearly revival of the picture—a proposal he doesn't disapprove.

Production in the East?

"I think some pictures could be made in the East. But the industry, the great motion picture industry, could not be taken from Hollywood. For one thing, there's too much investment there.

"And another thing, the motion picture people love California. I love California. And you cannot duplicate the facilities they have there," he continued, and added:

"Still, as I said, pictures can be made in New York; they have been made in New York before. Certain types of pictures are suitable for New York production. A picture like "Dead End," for instance, "and most stage plays where you need only interiors."

Mr. Selznick will not maintain a studio in Hollywood. "I have let the option on the studio lapse," he remarked, "and I hope never to pick it up."

He wants only to rent space, he said: thus, he will not be forced to make pictures to carry a perpetual overhead; he will make pictures when he wants to.

"I will never again line up a big organization," he explained; "even though I am keeping my key people, and my personal staff."

To Deliver Two More

Mr. Selznick is to deliver two more pictures to United Artists, after "Rebecca." The latter is in completion on the coast; he is to do some retakes on it, shortly.

The two new pictures will be delivered by the fall of next year; they will star Vivien Leigh and Ingrid Bergman; but he doesn't know what the stories and titles will be, he said. Both stars are under exclusive contract to him.

Russell Birdwell, publicity representative for Mr. Selznick, said at the interview that $5,500,000 would have to be garnered by the producer before a profit could be realized.

"Gone With the Wind" will not play in any other New York houses than the Astor and Capitol, for at least six weeks, it was indicated in New York this week, after the premiere on Tuesday. The other Loew houses are booked for that period, and it was not regarded likely that it would be necessary to push product aside for the Selznick picture.

Heavy Advance Sale

Advance sale of tickets for the picture, at the Astor (reserved seats), in New York, flowed over the $100,000 figure on Monday. Largest previous advance sale, up to the night before a premiere, had been $14,000.

Advance sale at the RKO Capitol, in Cincinnati, was reported heavy, on Wednesday. The picture opened there on Thursday.

The Selznick film was expected to open in Chicago shortly, as soon as a deal is concluded for the United Artists and Apollo theatres, both operated by Balaban & Katz.

Brandt's 25 Years in Industry Observed

Harry Brandt, New York circuit operator and local exhibitor leader, was given a testimonial dinner Thursday night in New York's Hotel Astor, on the occasion of his 25th year in exhibition, to which came some 800 persons.

Speakers announced in advance included Lieutenant Governor Charles Poletti; Mitchell May, insurance broker; Gil Josephson, theatre operator; William F. Rodgers, MGM sales manager; Louis Nizer, motion picture industry lawyer; Milton C. Weisman, attorney for the Independent Theatre Owners Association, of New York, of which Mr. Brandt is president.

HOLIDAY FILM OPENINGS IN ATLANTA, NEW YORK, MIAMI AND HOLLYWOOD

Distributors Vie with Top Films in "World Premieres" During Christmas Season; Parade to Extend Into New Year

This week before Christmas, and the few days following shortly thereafter, bring another half dozen strong potentialities, with "world premieres", "local premieres" and just plain "premieres" strung over the land for some of the best of Hollywood's latest crop to come from studio to the exhibitor and his customers.

"Gone With the Wind" led the week's parade, of course, in its first presentation to the public, in Atlanta and on Broadway, as described on pages 26 and 27.

Next came Paramount's "Gulliver's Travels," in Miami, to be followed by RKO's "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," transformed from the silent to sound on Thursday; Twentieth Century-Fox's "The Blue Bird" and "Grapes of Wrath" and Walt Disney's-RKO "Pinocchio," shortly after New Year's, among others.

"Gulliver" at Miami

The second feature length cartoon to reach the screen, Max Fleischer's "Gulliver's Travels" opened Monday night, December 18, at Miami's Sheridan and Colony theatres. After the opening of the Paramount release a "Gulliver's Travels Ball" was held at the Roney Plaza Hotel for the benefit of the Parent-teachers Association milk fund. Ben Bernie flew to Miami from New York to conduct the orchestra. Jessica Dragonette, Lanny Ross and Ted Husing, master of ceremonies at the premiere attended the ball.

A luncheon was held the day of the opening for Paramount executives and Max Fleischer. Mayor E. G. Sewell and John C. Hall, head of the Miami Chamber of Commerce pushed the claims of that city for production in opposition to the campaign of Mayor LaGuardia of New York. Full cooperation to Mr. Fleischer and to any other producer that would make pictures in Florida was pledged by the civic group.

The Paramount officials attending the luncheon included Stanton Griffis, chairman of the executive committee; Neil Anew, vice-president in charge of distribution; Oscar Morgan, southern division manager; Lou Diamond, manager of the short subjects department and Paramount music publication interests; Robert M. Gillham, director of publicity, advertising and exploitation and S. A. Lynch, president of Paramount Enterprises, Miami theatre chain.

About 35,000 persons, it is said, jammed the business district last Saturday to witness the arrival of the eight-foot giant, playing "Gulliver." The "Gulliver" appeared in several Miami stores and then with Ted Husing and Miami Chamber of Commerce officials judged the first beauty contest of the year—to pick girls between five and eight years of age for Princess of Lilliput and her six ladies in waiting.

Governor Fred P. Cone of Florida, Senators Claude Pepper and Charles O. Andrews and representative Charles O. Cannon were among the special guests expected for the "Gulliver" opening.

"Gulliver's Travels" opened at the New York Paramount theatre on Wednesday. The stage part of the holiday show is composed of Glen Gray and his Casa Loma orchestra, the Merry Macs and Jimmy Savo. Paramount sponsored three 50-word announcements a day over station WOR in connection with the opening in New York.

Paramount announces a new dance "the Gulliver Travel" will be introduced by the Dance Educators of America next week. The dance is said to be inspired by the picture and was designed to promote ease and grace on the dance floor for couples unmatched in height."

Dave Fleischer, associate producer and director of "Gulliver's Travels" made a personal appearance on the WNEW "Soundtrack" on Tuesday.

N. Y. TRUST CASE TO TRIAL MAY 1; GOVERNMENT GETS NEW QUESTIONS

Setting of Date Late in Spring After Long Skirmishing Seen as Minor Victory for Distributor; Cross-fire Continues

Months of legal skirmishes and court maneuvers by both sides over a trial date for the N. Y. trust suit of the United States of America v. the eight large producer-distributors, ended last Thursday with the setting of May 1st, after Federal Judge John C. Knox, from his bench in the Federal Court House, at Foley Square, New York, had previously ordered both plaintiff and defense to agree on a starting date or else he would fix one.

The Government, of course, had been fighting for an early trial, even aiming at this mid-winter, while the defendants quite naturally had been holding out for longer postponement of the opening of trial in this "key" case of the Government's many-sided prosecution of the organized industry.

Department of Justice officials in Washington Wednesday charged that attempts were being made from within the film industry to sabotage the case. (See page eight.)

Columbia Attacks Interrogated

Meanwhile, on the same issue, Columbia Pictures attacked some of the interrogatories propounded some time ago by the Government, and additional majors filed sweeping interrogatories to be answered by the Department of Justice and Thurman Arnold, prosecutors for the U. S.

The setting of May 1st, or after, as a trial date was hedged by provisions for a pre-trial no later than March 1st. The pre-trial will take care of preliminary questions.

Special Attorney General Paul Williams said Judge John C. Knox would name a Federal District judge for the trial, possibly this week.

He added that the stipulations, to which both sides will agree, and which this week were being prepared, will provide that neither side can ask for examination before trial, of witnesses, after March 1st.

By mid-February, he said, all issues on both sides, interrogatories will be decided.

The Government will oppose any majors' question which seeks to find out what witnesses will say on trial, he stated.

He said the Government had no objection to naming witnesses, in answer to interrogatories, but that it would go no further; and that it would file objections to interrogatories which sought to find out what witnesses would testify.

"Pre-trials" are allowed under Rule 16 of the new rules of Federal procedure. They consist of a conference before a district judge; issues are threshed out. There is no testimony, and the proceedings are private, usually.

Time Extended

The Federal Court in New York last Friday received a stipulation extending the Government's time to answer the lately filed interrogatory by Columbia Pictures, to January 10th.

Paramount, Warners, Loew's, Twentieth Century-Fox, and National Theatres served interrogatories on the Government. They were similar to those filed previously by United Artists, RKO, and Columbia.

The defendants last week were said to be planning to file their answers to the Government's interrogatories by February 1st.

The Government has already stated it can file an answer to the United Artists' interrogatories by that date; but, inasmuch as the interrogatories of other companies have since been filed, it seemed to observers this week that the Government would go much beyond February 1st, in answering all questions by all the majors.

The agreement on an "after May 1st" trial date is seen as a victory for the defendants. They had sought to extend trial starting date till Spring, or later. The Government had tried to have a February trial date set.

Object to Nine Questions

Meanwhile, Columbia Pictures this week took exception to nine of the Government's interrogatories as immaterial, improper, and furnishing information to the company's competitors, and said it would apply on December 29th to Federal Judge Vincent T. Leibell for an order striking the questions out, in whole or in part.

In two of the interrogatories, the Government sought a list of features released in 1936-37 in the country, and in four large cities, together with a statement on rentals received, names of theatres in which the features were released, terms of rental, clearance and play date.

The company attacked another interrogatory, because this required similar information on shorts released in 1936-37; and one more interrogatory, because that asked for a complete list of exchanges in operation since 1930, and a statement of the managers and their duties.

Also opposed were interrogatories which sought details on current loans, a list of creditors, dates, and terms, of loans. This particularly, if answered, would be an aid to Columbia's competitors, the company said.

Baltimore Trust Trial Ends; Boston Case Continues; Momand Trial Soon

While the large distributors, as defendants, and the U. S. Government, plaintiff, were this week continuing with legal maneuvers in the "key" anti-trust case in New York, action on additional cases was proceeding in the field, against the majors, as taken by the Government or independent exhibitors.

Judge Reserves Decision In Baltimore Trust Suit

In Baltimore, the anti-trust suit by the Westway Theatre, Inc., against the majors and the Durkee circuit ended this week, counsel for both sides being directed to file briefs, and Federal Judge W. Calvin Chestnut reserving decision, with the comment that "intricate" legal questions were involved, and much study was needed, before decision.

The defense, in summing up their case, said that if the judge found illegal the majors' agreements with the Durkee circuit the motion picture industry's entire distribution machinery would be upset.

Testimony had brought out that one Durkee theatre had 14 days' clearance over an independent house in the same area. This theatre being the Westway, attorneys for that theatre's operators argued that such clearance was restraint of trade.

Operators of the Westway are Leo Homand and J. Marsh Matthews.

Sales Executives Testify In Boston Trust Action

Prominent sales executives testified on Monday, in Boston, in the Morse and Rothenberg anti-trust suit against the majors. They were William F. Rodgers, general sales manager of MGM; George Schaefer, president of RKO; Ned Depinet, its vice-president; and others.

It was the 153rd day of the case.

Momand Expects Early Trial

A. B. Momand's attorneys expect an early trial, in his case against the majors and the Griffith circuit, in the Oklahoma City Federal Court. The anti-trust action seeks $4,500,000, alleging that Momand, operator of one theatre now, was forced from larger holdings by conspiratorial action between majors and the circuit.

Fox West Coast - Majors' Court Motion Is Removed

In Los Angeles, the motion of the majors and the Fox West Coast circuit for a bill of particulars in the Government's criminal contempt action, was removed from the United States District Court calendar last week. Congestion of the calendar was given as the reason.

Nashville Case Has Hearing on January 4th

In Nashville, motions by the film company defendants in the Government's anti-trust suit against Tony Sudekum's Crescent Amusement Company are to be heard in United States District Court on January 4th.

The defense motions include requests for bills of particulars.

Defense Attorneys Ask "Not Guilty" in Chicago

Over the weekend, defense attorneys in the Government's contempt case against Balaban and Katz and the majors for violation of a 1932 consent decree filed conclusion of law briefs denying that the Sherman anti-rust law was violated by the defendants and asking for not-guilty findings.

WAGE INCREASES FOR MORE CRAFTS; NEWSREEL MEN GET NEW CONTRACT

Studio Painters and Exchange Employees Granted Extra Pay; Newsreel Contract Grants Raise Agreed Upon Recently

Industry unions continue to enlarge producer-distributor payrolls, despite the latter's reiterated claims of inability to pay due to diminution in gross income, a result of the European War. Latest in the procession of victorious unions have been the Hollywood Studio Moving Picture Painters' Local 644 which won a 15 per cent wage increase, retroactive to August 25th; and the Film Exchange Employees' Union, which won a new two year contract and pay raises for 600 of its 3,500 members.

The Newsreel Cameramen's Local 644 this week won a new two year contract incorporating a 10 per cent wage raise, agreed to in October and retroactive to October 2nd.

Exchange Workers Get Increase

The exchange employees won their new two year wage agreement over the weekend, in New York, after two weeks of desultory negotiations. Representatives of 31 exchange centers in seven exchange regional districts, representing 3,500 exchange workers, met with representatives of the major distributors at the Warner home offices. The union had asked for a 25 per cent wage increase and better working conditions. The concession to the 600 employees give some wage increases and some improved working conditions, but did not represent a blanket increase or adjustment.

The company spokesmen were understood to have presented figures proving that large scale wage increases were unwise in a time of decreased grosses.

The new contract is effective this week, is retroactive to December 1st, and is to run until December 1st, 1941.

The Moving Picture Painters' Local 644 won its 15 per cent wage boost from the producers last week, after protracted negotiations which included an implied threat, at one time, of a strike. The boost is retroactive to August 25th.

The producers had offered to make a five per cent increase retroactive to August 14th, and a 10 per cent increase retroactive to October 20th. This offer the painters rejected.

Involved in the negotiations were Herbert Sorrell, business agent of the painters, and Y. Frank Freeman, E. J. Mannix and Fred Pelton, for the producers.

Mr. Sorrell this week indicated that, if the painters were given a guarantee of 250 days' work per year, they might be willing to work at 10 per cent below the wage scale.

Raise New Demands

The Newsreel Cameramen's Local 644, last Friday, negotiating details of the new agreement, raised new demands.

The new demands included accident and life insurance policies of $10,000 each for cameramen, two Sundays "off" per month, and a four year term for apprentice cameramen, instead of the present five. These are still to be discussed.

In the new contract a provision stipulates that at least one representative from each newsreel be present at a public event covered by a "pooling" understanding.

In Hollywood, last month, the cameramen were given a ten per cent raise, retroactive to October 2nd, which became effective this week following the signing of the new contract.

ONLY 10 LEGISLATURES TO MEET NEXT YEAR

Only ten state law-making bodies will convene in regular session in the early part of next year; and one other, that of California, will convene specially, on January 15th. The states are Massachusetts, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, New Jersey, New York, Rhode Island, South Carolina and Virginia. Taxation will probably be the major form of industry irritant introduced in these legislatures.

At last Friday's meeting, Richard Walsh, vice-president of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, and Charles Downs, business agent of the Cameramen's Local, represented the union. Five editors of the newsreels represented their companies.

In Hollywood, on Monday, producers and the Screen Actors' Guild postponed, for a week, negotiation on the guild's demand that a 15 per cent wage rise for extras be re-classified.

Musicians Threaten Strike

Hints of a nation-wide strike against Warners' theatres, by musicians, were contained in statements by Philadelphia musicians' local leaders, in their fight against the abandonment of vaudeville by the Warner Earle, and other of its houses, and by the independent Carman, in that city. Rex Riccardi, secretary of the local American Federation of Musicians branch, said on Monday that the local might ask aid from Joseph Weber, national president of the Federation; and he indicated Mr. Weber and the federation executive board might be asked to consider striking against all Warner houses.

The musicians this week were picketing the Fox, Alhambra, Kent, Carman, Oxford and the Stanley, in Camden.

The difficulties began last month, prior to the expiration, December 1st, of the Warner-union contract. Warners asked that it be allowed to hire only as many men as needed, at the Earle; it also asked that the orchestra at the Fox, and in neighborhood houses, be dropped, inasmuch as vaudeville had already been discontinued.

The union refused, and started picketing.

David "Skip" Weshner, central zone manager of Warners, claimed his firm agreed to the same wage and hour terms as the expiring agreement had maintained, but balked only at spending more for music than needed.

The Carman, operated by George T. Graves, balked at signing a contract which would have forced use of vaudeville every week in the year.

Mr. Riccardi this week revealed that Philadelphia exhibitors have been warned that suits in the Federal Court would begin, unless theatre operators agreed to stop using recordings for accompaniment to trailers, in overtures, and as closing music.

In New York, counsel for Local 306, projectionists' union, and for the major circuits were reported in disagreement over topics to be discussed at negotiations for a pay rise and a new contract.

In New York also, Kenneth Thomson, executive secretary of the Screen Actors' Guild, and Ralph Morgan, its president, were conferring this week with other officials of other Associated Actors and Artistes of America unions, over reorganization into "one big union," plans for which are being drawn. The pair arrived in the city from the coast, over the weekend.

Leo Fischer resigned as executive secretary of the American Guild of Musical Artists over the weekend, without giving reasons. Ernest Charles has temporarily succeeded him.

In New York, the American Federation of Actors, expelled last summer from the Four A's, and now without a charter from any national body, voted to continue operation at a meeting last week, attended by 200. Ralph Whitehead, executive secretary, was named as a committee to formulate a national program, to be presented to the membership in a referendum.

In the same city, the Laboratory Technicians' Union, Local 702, held its second organizational meeting last week. Film cutters, assistant cutters, and librarians employed in Eastern laboratories, were represented.

A circuit judge, at Clayton, Missouri, on Monday denied pleas for an injunction against picketing, made by the Fanchon and Marco Service Company. The Eden Theatre Corporation, and the St. Louis Amusement Company. The Fox theatre and six neighborhood and suburban houses in St. Louis are being picketed by Local 143, projectionists.

Felix Snow, IATSE representative in Kansas City, has been elected business agent of the Local 31, stagehands' union, for the 15th consecutive year. Cyril Donovan was elected president; Walter Brown, vice-president.

In Toronto, Charles A. Dentelbeck, director of projection for Famous Players Lasky Canadian Corporation, was reelected president of the Toronto Operators' Local 173.

Ruth Martin has been elected president of the Theatre Employees' Local B-96, of the IATSE, in Wilkes-Barre, Pa. John Lambert was named vice-president; William Tosline, business agent.

John Hicks, Paramount vice-president in charge of foreign distribution, will leave the New York home offices on January 12th, for a survey of South American distribution centers. GOLDWYN SAYS HE'S OUT OF UA, BUT SILVERSTONE SAYS HE ISN'T

Roosevelt Becomes a Producer; Selznick, Small Continue with UA; Silverstone on Product; Status of Fairbanks Partnership

Climaxing his long and lately open fight with United Artists over corporate and financial factors in the distribution of his pictures—the salient point being Maurice Silverstone's "profit-sharing" plan—Samuel Goldwyn, on Monday, through his attorney, Max Steuer, in New York, served notice of the withdrawal of his pictures from the company's release.

UA To "Protect Contract"

While the announcement was made on Monday, and UA executives were supposed to have received Mr. Steuer's letter, they professed ignorance of the move, until Tuesday afternoon, after a meeting of the board of directors. Mr. Silverstone then said that United Artists regarded its distribution agreement with Mr. Goldwyn as still in effect, and that it would take all legal steps necessary to protect the contract, in the meanwhile living up to its part of the agreement.

The company's executives warned that if Mr. Goldwyn attempted to have another company than United Artists distribute his new picture, "The Westerner," the producer would face a court battle. They pointed out, also, that Mr. Goldwyn's oft-repeated charge that United Artists, by profit sharing arrangements, and by certain company formations of its component producers, had already breached its contract with him, had yet to be ruled upon by the courts.

As it still stands, the Goldwyn contract with the distributing firm runs until September 2, 1945. United Artists holds that it calls for exclusive distribution by them, of all Mr. Goldwyn's pictures.

Effective Immediately

The Steuer letter on Monday, apprising the press and United Artists of Mr. Goldwyn's latest decision, read as follows:

"Samuel Goldwyn, Inc., has today notified the United Artists Corporation of the termination of its contract of distribution.. The termination is effective tomorrow, and applies to all future pictures that may be produced by Mr. Goldwyn or the company. However, pictures previously produced by Mr. Goldwyn or Samuel Goldwyn, Inc., and delivered to the United Artists Corporation, will continue to be distributed by them."

Mr. Steuer's office said Mr. Goldwyn's "Raffles," recently completed, will be distributed by United Artists.

Bracketed with the severance step on Monday was a supplementary statement from the Goldwyn office, which noted that the new move did not affect the producers' one-fifth ownership of United Artists.

Offer to Exchange Stock Reported

In the Goldwyn-United Artists feud, it has been reported that the other partners in the distributing venture have offered, repeatedly, to allow Mr. Goldwyn to step out, if he gives up his stock in the company, for which he reputedly paid nothing.

Use by James Roosevelt's producing company, lately formed, of Mr. Goldwyn's studio is regarded as perhaps a means of escaping the obligation to release through United Artists.

Meanwhile, as the present action added to the Goldwyn-United Artists history, it was disclosed by Charles Schwartz, attorney for United Artists, this week, that Mr. Goldwyn had filed suit in New York Supreme Court, against UA, for the six per cent interest on Mr. Goldwyn's $54,000 producers' bonus from the company for the time from August 25th, when the dividend was declared, until November 15th, when the check was sent out.

LOEW EMPLOYEES GET YULE BONUS

Employees of Loew's, Inc., earning less than $40 a week will receive a Christmas bonus. The bonus will be two weeks' salary, but in no case will it exceed $50. Last year the company distributed bonuses up to $100. The bonuses will be given out at a luncheon for employees of all home office departments and the New York exchange at the Hotel Astor Friday.

New Roosevelt Company

James Roosevelt, eldest son of the President, and former vice-president of Samuel Goldwyn Productions, today heads his own independent producing company. Mr. Roosevelt resigned last Thursday from the Goldwyn production unit, as vice-president; however, he retains the post of president of the Goldwyn Studios, to which he was elevated two weeks ago. His production company will have access to stars, directors, and others under contract to Mr. Goldwyn's companies.

Beyond saying that his new company would make a complete product schedule by January, Mr. Roosevelt, in New York early last week, declined to discuss distribution plans.

Silverstone on Product

Murray Silverstone, chief of worldwide operations for United Artists, returned to his New York headquarters Tuesday from a four-weeks' production conference in Hollywood, bringing back many details on future product.

He disclosed that Ernst Lubitsch had completed work for MGM and would start with United Artists "immediately." Mr. Lubitsch is now endeavoring to select his first story for production, it was said.

Mr. Silverstone added that "at least two other important producers" had been lined up for the United Artists' roster during his recent visit to the coast. He declined to identify them at this time and likewise refused to comment on current reports that negotiations had been held with Frank Capra and James Roosevelt, the new Goldwyn producer.

The executive said the company would have 15 pictures ready between the end of January and the first of June.

He reported that the new Charles Chaplin picture was "three-quarters completed," and that two new pictures would be delivered by Mr. Selznick on his current contract with the company. Decisions on the two productions will be made before Mr. Selznick completes an extended vacation which he plans to start soon.

The United Artists chief executive said that the company would have five or six more pictures this year than last and would have more next season than it did this. He said that the company's domestic gross with its additional number of releases this year was "more than $8,000,000 over a year ago."

Small's Schedule

Seven pictures will be ready for release by United Artists, before the end of the season, Edward Small Productions announced this week. The announcement called it "The most ambitious schedule in Mr. Small's long and highly successful career."

The producer is understood to have obtained a $7,500,000 bank loan from the Guaranty Trust Company, of New York, and will apply this additionally, to about 10 pictures to be made for United Artists release in the next year and a half.

Selznick Satisfied with UA

David O. Selznick, producer of "Gone With the Wind," in New York on Monday and Tuesday for the premieres at the Capitol and Astor theatres of his picture, remarked that he was satisfied with United Artists' handling of his pictures and that he would continue with the company, as a producer, indefinitely.

An interview with Mr. Selznick appears on page 27.

Korda Announcement Delay

Alexander Korda's future production plans will probably be made known on his return to the United States in February, he said, on leaving New York for London last week. He will supervise the completion of "The Thief of Bagdad" in England, and start another picture, "Hunting of the U-Boat."

Fairbanks Stock Problem

The death of the Senior Douglas Fairbanks, has faced the United Artists five-(now four) partner company with the problem of letting in other producers, possibly; and of buying up the stock of Mr. Fairbanks, from the estate.

The Frank Capra-Robert Riskin production unit, anxious, it is reported, to release through UA, is also reportedly anxious for stock in the distribution end. Other UA producers are reported desirous of buying stock in the company.

Hollywood belief this week was that the bulk of Mr. Fairbanks' assets would be left to his widow, the former Lady Sylvia Ashley. Mr. Fairbanks' will was to be probated in New York, by the Guaranty Trust Company, next Tuesday, it was said.

It was considered likely that his son, Douglas Jr., and his former wife, Mary Pickford, would be mentioned.

Executives and picture stars, and other industry luminaries attended the funeral in Forest Lawn Memorial Park, Glendale, California, last Friday. Among them were Nicholas M. Schenck, president of Loew's; Mr. Silverstone, chief executive of United Artists; Harry Buckley, vice-president; Dennis F. O'Brien, Mr. Fairbanks' attorney; Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board of Twentieth Century-Fox; Charles Chaplin, Sid Grauman, Tom Geraghty, and Clarence Ericksen.

Referring to Mr. Fairbanks' stock in United Artists, Mr. Silverstone said this week that it was owned by the Elton Corporation, Mr. Fairbanks' personal holding corporation, and that it must be offered to the company first. It may then be sold by the company, if the company acquires it, to other interests, with the approval of the stockholders.

The United Artists' New York home offices and world branches closed at noon last Friday, to observe Mr. Fairbanks' memory.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Dynasties

The recent demise of the colorful Douglas Fairbanks has sadly reduced the ranks of Hollywood's "Royal Families," a-building in the 50 years which constitute screen history.

Carrying on the Fairbanks tradition are Douglas, Jr., and Lucille, cousin of the former, and a featured player at Warner Brothers. Both stage and screen can claim the Barrymores, Lionel, John and Ethel. The DeMilles of Paramount are represented by Cecil and William, his brother, director and author of the recent "Hollywood Saga," while Wesley, director, and Charlie, actor, have kept the Ruggles name before the screen public this many a year.

Ida and Rita Lupino are continuing in the entertainment field with a name known in the theatrical world for some 300 years, and Lois Moran's younger sister, Betty, and James Cagney's sister Betty, are creating family tradition by virtue of screen appearance.

Hollywood Holiday

Casual pedestrian and harried, hurried shopper alike stopped short on the streets of Hollywood one night this week, as great arc lights painted the sky in a profusion far surpassing that of the ordinary Hollywood event, always at least colossal. Knowing there was no preview at the Pantages, some of the more curiou even wandered in the general direction of the lights, a news item of itself, in a town where the unusual is so often the usual that the genus rubber neck is practically unknown.

What they saw, aided and abetted by the glaring lights of Otto K. Oelsen, chief purveyor to the community of glamor in terms of wattage, was the opening of the latest link in the chain of "Thrifty" drug stores, an occasion, in the minds of its sponsors, to call forth efforts reminiscent of a white-tie movie premiere. No cocktails were served.

Candlepower was Hollywood's most outstanding contribution to the Christmas season, an ammeter apparently remaining the chief test of cheer. Lights in all ranges of the spectrum enhanced the Christmas trees placed in the middle of Wilshire Boulevard, a few dropping from time to time with a gay tinkle on passing fenders. Red lights glistened from the eyes of the huge fabricated snow man at the corner of Beverly and Rossmore, the figure's current function being to attract shoppers to displays of Christmas trees sprayed silver, blue or red, few being left in their crude natural state.

Hollywood Boulevard retained its yearly change in nomenclature to Santa Claus Lane, its nightly parades, culminating on Christmas Eve, having included virtually every major studio's stars in the honor position of having ridden with Santa Claus himself.

An illuminated sign at the entrance to Westwood, home of the Village Theatre of preview fame, flaunted its message of "Peace on Earth, Good Will to Men," while stars and executives dug deep in giving to Finland. Such representatives of Scandinavia in Hollywood as Sonja Henie and Greta Garbo led the way in answering ex-President Herbert Hoover's appeal for funds, Miss Garbo's contribution, according to reports, amounting to $5,000.

The war came even closer. Climaxing the efforts of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's W. S. Van Dyke, II, to recruit his quota of 11 men, one of his duties as a Reserve Major in the U. S. Marine Corps, came the announcement that Major Cecil B. DeMille of the U. S. Signal Corps., would, in the event of war, be one of the key men controlling pictures and radio, both of which come under the control of the Signal Corps as of the declaration of war, it is said.

Major Van Dyke, outside the office which houses him when his duties to "Andy Hardy," "The Thin Man," "Marie Antionette" and many another have not called, has hung a blue banner of imposing proportions asking gently but firmly for recruits.

Major DeMille, deep in his "North West Mounted Police," was recently summoned by Army Headquarters in the Federal Building in Los Angeles, and requested to consider himself on the active list of reserve officers, as well as to name technicians for the Reserves, who would be immediately active as of "M. Day."

The Light that Failed

(Paramount)

Colman and Kipling in Good Company

The practically infallible Ronald Colman and the infallibly entertaining Rudyard Kipling are jointly accountable with producer-director William A. Wellman and distinguished associates for a fine, strong motion picture equal to any exhibition need. Filmed on a lavish but always appropriate scale and performed by an excellently balanced cast, it is solid entertainment every inch of the way.

Colman's best—but of this picture it may be said in addition that it is his most difficult—it gives him only one heroic moment, calls for straight, hard acting steadily. Atop of that, it matches him against that stalwart performer, Walter Huston, sterner competition than most leading men survive, and adds such seasoned talents as Dudley Digges and Ernest Cossart for good measure. There is acting aplenty had from these.

Honors on the distaff side are divided between Muriel Angelus, a personable British import making her film debut in this picture, and Ida Lupino, whose performance as the street girl model is already being talked about in the chat columns. Both are excellent, but the picture is primarily a man's picture.

Colman and Huston play war correspondents back in London for want of wars to cover. Colman has become a popular artist and is for taking up a childhood romance where he left it off, but the girl is intent upon making her own career. Told he is doomed to blindness because of a war injury, he rushes completion of a masterpiece and is not told, when blindness comes, that his model has destroyed it. When he learns the truth he makes his way to the front and dies in a cavalry charge.

A strong story, it has been made into a splendid picture.

The Hunchback of Notre Dame

(RKO Radio)

Bigger and Better Victor Hugo

Yes, Ladies and Gentlemen of the same show business, this is the same "Hunchback of Notre Dame," the Victor Hugo horror story, in which Lon Chaney displayed his horrendous art and in which so many exhibitors found fat profits. And yes again, Ladies and Gentlemen, it is bigger and better than that one was, as much bigger and better as the screen art is, which may or may not mean that the profits to be found in it are likewise bigger and better, that being a matter for time and test to tell. Naturally, and for the same reasons, this picture is as much more laden with horror as the camera of today is more eloquent than the camera of yesterday, plus the further values which derive from the use of dialogue in addition to image for the purpose of imparting shock.

Produced by Pandro S. Berman on a scale undreamed of in the period when the earlier "Hunchback" was made, this version exceeds in sheer magnitude any similar film in history. Sets are vast and rich in detail, crowds are immense, and camera uses of these are versatile, varied and veracious. The trick of transporting the audience to medieval Paris is tremendously contrived and successful from the first moment on.

Direction of these vast crowds and the excellent actors playing the many principal roles is as fine as anything the gifted William Dieterle has given the screen, which is about the same as saying perfect. He undertook a colossal job and achieved it magnificently.

Charles Laughton's portrayal of the hunchback is among the half dozen best acting achievements on record. It was up to him, and quite utterly so in the nature of things, to outdo the late and great Lon Chaney. It is in the nature of public loyalty to dead heroes to deny out of hand that any living man can do what they did. Laughton is a man who would know that. He is also an actor confident enough of his art to feel that bucking this known tide of prejudice was a thing to bend his talent to at whatever cost. He is also a performer intelligent and resourceful enough to know a different way of doing the same job and his different way of doing it may no more properly be compared with Chaney's than a modern motor car may be likened to an ox cart.

Laughton's widely publicized and carefully guarded makeup is staggeringly repulsive. It is the sort of face people who don't live right see in their bad dreams. But the business of delivering the fierce shock of its ugliness upon the eye of the observer is not achieved by simple exposure of the thing. Early in the picture two characters discuss the psychology of the fascination the horrible holds for human beings. Meanwhile a spirited competition of ugliness goes on in the public square, half a dozen hideous faces being thrust through an elevated portal for the gaping crowd to behold. Then Laughton's face is thrust into view for a fleeting flash and the crowd shrieks, as does the audience likewise and simultaneously. (Better post the ushers midway down the house for this, just in case.) Then the camera returns to the Laughton face and gives the beholder his first long look at the most ingeniously hideous makeup ever exhibited in public.

Extreme as is this repulsive display of human deformity, however, it is secondary in emotional effect to a subsequent episode. This long and artistically consummate indulgence in horror shows the inarticulate and helpless hunchback chained to a revolving pillory in the public square to receive fifty lashes with a cat o' nine tails. A strapping whipper selects his tool while onlookers in the mob argue as to whether he is the stoutest whipper in France. The whipper's assistants pull Laughton's rags from his back to expose the naked hump on which the lashes are to fall. The camera slides down to Laughton's face as the blows begin, each blow producing its pitiable reaction on the imbecillic countenance of the cripple.

This sequence establishes a new and probably all time high for the employment of torture in motion pictures. The blows continue to fall. The camera strays off to a pair who are trying to devise a means of stopping the whipping, then strays back again. The whipper discards his whips as they are worn out and begins with new ones. Finally the whipping is over and the populace is invited to bombard the cripple with refuse from the courtyard street. They revel in this, tire finally, then enjoy the hunchback's cries for water, barely coherent cries uttered with tongue protruding and eyes glazed, doglike cries ending finally when the girl the hunchback has been pilloried for molesting pours water from her flask into his hideously distorted mouth as he rears back torturously in his chains.

There are other horrors in the picture. The girl is tortured to make her confess a murder committed by the judge who orders the torture. The Laughton suffering is, however, the too suffering in a picture loaded with it from start to finish.

There are other fine performances in the picture, also. Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Thomas Mitchell, Walter Hampden and Harry Davenport give extensively of their extremely useful talents. The cast in whole and individually admits of no fault finding. Neither does the screen play, an extraordinarily expert piece of

Swanee River

(20th-Fox)

Life of Stephen Foster

From the studio which first boldly tested out the theory that a film conveying a folio of songs the ticket shoppers were brought up on would spin the turnstyles comes now a second venture in the same direction. The box office story of what the ultimate consumers thought of "Alexander's Ragtime Band" is written in dollar signs. The story of "Swanee River" is written in the melodies of Stephen C. Foster. Thus far, and it is for showman and customer to say whether such numbers as "Old Black Joe," "My Old Kentucky Home" and the other Foster familiars shall do for this film what "Everybody's Doin' it" and the others did for the Berlin cycle. Assuredly the studio has gone to the utter extremity of its considerable resources to make "Swanee River" a hit picture.

Produced by reliable Kenneth MacGowan for far seeing Darryl Zanuck, the film tells the Foster story free-handedly and in brilliantly modulated technicolor. If timing or incidents in the life of the composer does not jibe with the accepted accounts of when and how they happened, let it not be said they do not square with the dramatic necessities of entertainment. If the film shows him risen at zenith to greater opulence than tradition has indicated, it is but to make the depth of his descent the more graphic by contrast. In these and other respects the studio aim has been to produce an entertaining document, an objective successfully achieved.

Don Ameche's portrayal of the improvident composer is wholly appropriate. When he must make him seem inspired he goes the whole distance and he is no less thorough when called upon to show him drunk. He is at pains to leave the rough edges of the Foster personality unglossed. It is a nice job.

Al Jolson plays and sings the minstrel man who introduced the Foster songs, an assignment that gives him access to blackface makeup and such bespangled costuming as neither he nor any other mammy singer ever wore before a lens. In these minstrel show sequences the picture goes spectacular in the grand manner, and if the Jolson rendition of "Oh Susanna" and some other Foster numbers is more Jolson than Foster as to manner and circumstance it is on the side of screen benefit. Andrea Leeds' performance of the Yankee composer's southern wife is probably the best in the picture, a straight characterization sympathetically executed.

Twice the picture reaches out and takes gentle hold of audience emotion. The first time is when the composer produces "Old Black Joe" spontaneously to ease the death pangs of a faithful servant. The last time is when Jolson tells a hooting Yankee audience that the composer who was to witness the premiere of a new song is dead, and then sings "Swanee River" to them. Either of these episodes is powerful enough to carry a better than average picture alone.

Raffles

(UA-Goldwyn)

Full Dress Melodrama

Samuel Goldwyn's presentation of the "Amateur Cracksman" adventures written by E. W. Hornung is as up-to-date as 1940, as well groomed as the models in "Esquire's" ad pages, and as stimulating as the "Raffles" stories always were. Dapper David Niven makes the gentlemanly thief a wholly credible and handsomely fascinating fellow, mannerly, adroit without overdoing it.

The production is in the best Goldwyn tradition, finely acted in every department, smoothly put together and wearing the high gloss of expert workmanship. Olivia De Havilland, overnight a stronger box office name for her performance in "Gone with the Wind," is an eminently satisfactory heart interest. Dudley Digges plays the Scotland Yard operative as to the profession born, and all members of the large cast fit their characters utterly.

Director Sam Wood and the late Sidney Howard, who collaborated with John Van Druten on the screen play, are others whose names, already distinguished, take on added marquee merit from their connection with the now thriving "Wind." The work of all three of these is highly satisfactory and vitally important.

The handling of the moral equation is nicely managed. The thief is successful in all his stealings but returns the stolen property in each case. He escapes from the detectives at the end of the picture but makes an appointment to return and surrender shortly thereafter, the inspector taking his word for it and thus reassuring the audience that the proper price will be paid for his crimes.

Balalaika

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

Russia, the Musical

Against backgrounds of Russia before the World War, when the seeds of revolution were germinating; the World War of the Russian-Austrian front and Paris after the War, "Balalaika" unfolds a tale of love between a Prince and the daughter of a revolutionary.

The screen play by Leon Gordon, Charles Bennett and Jacques Deval, based on Eric Maschwitz' stage operetta, depicits these varied and scenic bases of story operation in terms of music, as rendered by Nelson Eddy, Ilona Massey and Walter Woolf King. Ranging from original music by George Potsford and Bernard Gruen to Escamillo's love song from "Carmen," Herbert Stothart's musical adaption and score embraces songs in four languages: English, Russian, French and German.

Equally varied are the plot connotations. As a Prince of the Czarist regime, Mr. Eddy is also an officer in the Cossacks, and as such masquerades as a student in order to woo Miss Massey, the daughter and sister of revolutionaries and herself imbued with kindred ideas. After a series of melodic as well as melodramatic episodes, the scene shifts to the War. Here a high point is reached with the rendition of "Silent Night" by the entrenched Austrian troops on Christmas Eve, answered by Mr. Eddy just before a surprise attack by the Russians.

Shifting to the emigre Russian nobility of post-war Paris, the film closes with the former aristocracy, gay despite their roles as taxi-drivers, doormen and the like, welcoming the reunited lovers in the Parisian version of the Cafe Balalaika, from which the film derives its title.

Able support by Charlie Ruggles, Frank Morgan, Lionel Atwill and C. Aubrey Smith keeps the Lawrence Weingarten production moving despite its length. The preview audience found many individual items of Reinhold Schunzel's direction and the principals' singing worthy of applause.

Everything Happens at Night

(20th Century-Fox)

Melodrama

Sonja Henie turns dramatic actress in 20th Century-Fox' "Everything Happens at Night," a melodrama based on the effort of a Nobel peace prize winner to hide his identity and escape assassination at the hands of agents of a Central European country who are identified merely as "the Gestapo."

Supporting Miss Henie, who also does one skating number without the embellishments given her previous ice ventures, are Ray Milland, Robert Cummings, Maurice Moscovich, Leonid Kinskey, Alan Dinehart, Fritz Feld and others.

Irving Cummings directed the gripping screenplay of Art Arthur and Robert Harari with an eye for action and comedy, each balancing the other. The Harry Joe Brown production has Milland and Cummings portraying the roles of English and American newspapermen, respectively, on the trial of an international peace worker who is reported to be alive, although reported killed in Warsaw.

"Thompson" and "Morgan" vie in attempting to reach the notable, who from his Swiss chalet continues his writings to prevent a Europeon war. They are kept away from him by his daughter, "Louise," of whom the youths become enamoured. Through "Thompson's" publishing a story of the discovery of the writer alive, the "Gestapo" agents arrive to murder "Dr. Norden," but are foiled by the newspapermen.

The subject contains topical exploitation values, due to European conditions.

Days of Jesse James

(Republic)

Musical Western

Less than a year ago Twentieth Century-Fox released "Jesse James" with Tyrone Power in the title role. Republic has also built a story around this train robber but emphasizes more the adventures of the bank detective, Roy Rogers, trying to regain the bank's stolen money. Donald Barry portrays the notorious "Jesse" with Michael Worth as the second James brother, "Frank."

Directed by Joseph Kane, who is also associate-producer and director of all Roy Rogers pictures, the film is swift paced and has more than enough action to hold audience attention for the full 63 minutes running time.

An unscrupulous banker, taking advantage of the "James" brothers reputation, robs his own bank. Roy Rogers, as the bank detective and aided by "Gabby," joins up with the outlaws to uncover the stolen money but finds that the "James" gang did not rob the bank. The picture is climaxed by the uncovering of the bank president as the real thief while "Jesse" and his outlaws remain free to roam the countryside.

Based on an original story by Jack Natteford and adapted for the screen by Earle Snell the story is one that is generally known by most audiences but will be enjoyed by all who like action and Roy's singing.

Hoots, Mon!

(Warner Brothers)

Caledonian Stage Farce

Max Miller, whom Warners have tried courageously to build into a British star, is a favorite of music hall audiences with whom his quickfire brand of Bren gun, patter, a devastating onslaught of audacious wisecrackery, goes down greatly. Whether screen audiences take to his screen appearance is probably a question of whether they already react to his stage technique. This latest vehicle is Max Miller from start to finish, with the exception of some mimicry from vaudeville and radio star Florence Desmond. Sophisticated or knowledge metropolitan audiences, to whom the Cockney dialect is quick in the understanding, will probably be satiated by the over-generous meed of Miller. Less adult patrons, in the rustic and remoter areas, will more likely collapse under the gunfire. For other than the recorded territories Mr. Miller is likely to appear a mystery.

Sheer boisterous nonsense, peppered with the Miller machine gun bullets, is the order of the day, in a broad story of a Cockney comedian who declares war on a Scots lassie, star of vaudeville, who works a rather tepid imitation of him. When he goes to Scotland to make good on her ground, the fun becomes even more juvenile, with him and his Man Friday thrown out of a 100 per cent Scots club, and chased around a hospital in their nightshirts, the whole problem being solved by Max and Flo teaming as a double act.

Stage settings play no small part with Miller putting over his own brand of saucy comedy and Miss Desmond doing some imitations, one of Elizabeth Bergner being especially brilliant. Much of the "comedy" is of the "run around and chase me" variety and shows more zeal than wit.

Hal Walters is a hardworking stooge to Miller and the cast includes troupers known locally, for example, Garry Marsh, Davina Craig and Mark Daly.

Shown in London to an early morning trade audience, the hour may have accounted for a certain disinterest in the audience. There were laughs, however, mainly from the indulgent.—AUBREY FLANAGAN.

Produced and distributed by Warner Bros. Pictures. Directed by Roy William Neill. Screen play and dialogue by Roy William Neill, Jack Henley and William Dighton. Cameraman, Basil Emmett. Running time, 77 minutes. Adult audience classification.

Sons of the Sea

(Grand National - British)

Service Drama

The most significant factor of those claimed by this English variation on a well tried American theme, the service training college, is certainly not its story, but the fact that much of the film was shot, in the Dufaycolor system, against the actual background of the Royal Naval College at Dartmouth. A certain authenticity of setting and spectacle is topped off with some charming English landscapes.

It is a spy yarn of electrically controlled mines in the Fleet anchorage, and the manipulations of a plausible German officer hoodwinking the youth of the College into playing his game. Leslie Banks has the role of a Naval captain called in to the command of the College. His son is mistakingly suspect of playing the enemy game, and he himself is bombed by a German plane. Captain "Newton Hulls" is unmasked as the spy.

Banks is the only draw name which graces the cast and seems ill at ease.

Shown to a trade audience in London the film was accepted with no signs of discomfort. The colour was agreed as a saleable factor, though the stereotyped melodrama was criticized.—AUBREY FLANAGAN.

Roll Wagons Roll

(Monogram)

Tex Ritter Western

This adventure of big, breezy Tex Ritter has to do with the opposition of the early Oregon fur traders to the influx of settlers who might compete for the profits in pelts. It has more and swifter action than most westerns in kind, a better story and a clearer point. It may or may not be Tex Ritter's best to date but it's up there among them.

The action in this starts rolling when the wagons do and the wagons start right off at the start of the picture and keep on going. There's a lot of fightin' put by, fistic and gun, and the star gets in some of his characteristic singing at times and places where it does the most good for him and the film. Ed Finney's production and Al Herman's direction are snug as a saddle.

March of Time, No. 5

(RKO Radio)

Crisis in the Pacific

Another chapter in the sorry story of international chiselry and material particularly out of tune with the holiday season of "peace on earth to men of good will" is the sober stuff that occupies the screen editorial pages of this latest issue of the March of Time. Particularly concerned with the Pacific scene, the initial sequences sound the motif for the unsettled times of today by a brief treatment of the European battlefronts of the Second World War. From the war on the Western fronts, the camera shifts to the imperialistic imbroglios of Japan and her avowed campaign to claim the Orient for the yellow race. There are some scenes depicting British preparation to meet this threat to its colonial interests by the fortification of Hong Kong. However, the greater portion of the subject is concerned by a consideration of the meaning of the bellicose situation to American holdings, particularly the Philippine Islands, to be given their independence in 1946, and the important insular possession of Guam.

Forgotten Victory

Passing Parade Number

Rural districts, especially the wheat centers of the country, should be particularly interested in the important story told in this dramatic and educational message from the Passing Parade pulpit. For in retelling the story of Mark Carleton, grain expert of the U. S. government around the turn of the present century, there is much material close to the interest of the farmer and his flock and, in fact, to all who depend upon the husbandry of the soil for their food sustenance. Carleton, in an effort to find a hardy substitute for the American product of wheat, strong enough to stand up under adverse weather conditions, imported the Russian brand of Kubanka. But, the wheat grinders at first refused to replace their machinery with new apparatus for handling the imported grain. However, subsequent events proved the worth of the foreign wheat and the millers were forced to install the special machines for pulverizing Kubanka wheat into flour. As for the visionary exploiter, Carleton, a foreign grave marked his unheralded end.—Running time, nine minutes.

Father Hubbard Alaskan Adventure

A further chapter in the Alaskan explorations of the Jesuit adventurer and geologist, Father Bernard Hubbard, finds the "Glacier Priest" going to work on the natural mystery of the Valley of 10,000 Smokes, which, according to his explanation, is but a terrain of steaming landscape through which the gaseous exhaust of the Mt. Katmai volcano is expelled. All the findings are offered in a manner that even the less adventuresome and scientifically instructed may enjoy. There are quicksand stretches, a mummified forest, and the struggle of the gas-masked party through the smoking beds and up the volcanic mountainside, with twin commentation by Father Hubbard and Lowell Thomas. The material is stuff that is different.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Lantz Colored Cartune

Not a Prudence Penny cooking short by any means, it is rather an impish pigmentation on a pixish sort of a Peter Pan, called Peterkin, whose puckish proclivities for practical pranks cause all sorts of havoc and suspicion along the maternity row of birdville. The tiny sprite switches eggs and, for instance, mama canary, not to mention daddy chirper, is very much surprised when up pops a parrot blessed event instead of the to be expected singing offspring. The puzzled parents go their separate ways, the poppas to their clubs and the ladies back to their mothers. Peterkin is left holding the "bag" or the babies in this case and, after a hectec session of playing nurse maid to the collective brood, he breaks under the nursery strain and confesses his mischief. The irate feathery couples unite to teach the gagster a piece of his own ill-founded humor and sentence him to the washboard for a term of washing out the infant unmentionables. The whole mixup is gayly concocted and in general the coloring and animation should sweeten any program with its light, amusing inclusion.—Running time, eight minutes.

Going Places, No. 69

(Universal)

Playground of the Antilles

The destination of this present excursion of the Going Places jumps around the world is the island of St. Thomas, one of the insular prizes of the Virgin Islands which Uncle Sam bought for the thrifty sum of $25,000,000 or the quotation price of a battleship at the time of sale, 1917. The itinerary includes a visit to the capital of St. Thomas, the quaintly called city of Charlotte Amalie. The influence of a former owner, Denmark, is noticeable in some of the locality's architecture and the nordic fairness of some of its residents. Further exotic indications of the population are the glimpses of the French settlement, known oddly as "Cha Cha Town". It is in this spot that much of the very strange but beautiful headwear, a trademark product of the district, is manufactured by the nimble-fingered ladies. A lighter side of the territory is shown in scenes of broad, sandy beaches and the facilities for an air clipper terminal. American civilization is demonstrated by sequences devoted to the infantile inhabitants being subjected to U. S. educational tutelage.—Eight minutes.

The Blue Danube

(MGM)

Colored Cartoon

Color fanciers and music lovers should relish this cartoon delight of how the famed blue Danube river obtains its lovely tint. To the strains of the incomparable waltz melodies by Johann Strauss, to which he gave the name of "The Blue Danube," some cleverly devised drawing has been sketched to depict various wooded personnel at work gathering shades of blue from tree and flower for the blueing of the stream. Several individual sequences, particularly the early morning river scenes with the mist rising up over the water, are pictorially superlative. Any audience with an ounce of color sense or with an ear for good music should enjoy vastly this beautiful cartoon contribution.—Running time, nine months.

Stranger Than Fiction, No. 70

Oddities

In the lineup of interesting bits of out of the ordinary persons, places and things from the latest gallery exhibition of the Stranger Than Fiction group there are a Philadelphia pants presser who has modeled a miniature of the Delaware River Bridge, which cost $1,000 to fashion; a visit to two different animal farms, one a horse ranch in Nevada and the other an alligator kindergarten in New Orleans. An inspection is made of the world's largest oak tree, located at Hahnville, La. A demonstration is given of an invention to make tomato picking easier by having the pickers stretched out in hammock formation and carried along by way of a truck over the vegetable beds. The concluding sequence is devoted to the art of the world's champion bubble blower, an art which should be of some interest to children and the exotic fanciers of balloon dancing.—Running time, nine minutes.

Winter Playground

(RKO Pathe)

Sportscope

Presented in documentary fashion this Pathe Sportscope is localed in the Province of Quebec and as the title indicates has to do with ice skating, bob-sledding and skiing, particularly the latter. The subject opens with scenes of a Quebec winter before the advent of the winter sports when the principal occupation of the native was ice-cutting and storing it for use in the Summer. Then several years ago the Olympic winter games, held in the Province, turned Quebec into a mecca for tourists interested in winter sports. The natives adopted the games with enthusiasm. Shown here are some usual glimpses of skating and some unusual skiing scenes such as speeding while holding a rope attached to a low flying airplane. Running time, 9 minutes.

See Your Doctor

(MGM)

Benchley Comedy

This time Mr. Robert Benchley turns his talents to demonstrating his hypochondriacal tendencies. Mr. B. is stung by what he claims to be a humble garden bee but, due to the gruesome elaborations of a cheerful male relative, who remembered a similar case of a "black widow" spider that proved fatal, poor Robert begins to fear for the worst. Rushed to the holding onto a rope attached to a low flying air- his family case history is taken, as his imagination and temperature rise, the sufferer is dismissed by a haughty doctor with the diagnosis that the bite was a harmless bee sting. The brand of humor is in the well known Benchley style and should be appreciated in those quarters where sly humor rather than slapstick is preferred.—Running time, eight minutes.

Louisville Group Approves Tax Cut

Proposals to modify the tax on amusements have been approved in Louisville, Ky., by a committee appointed by the mayor to report on the state amusement tax and its probable effect upon the business, with especial attention being directed to the city-owned Municipal Auditorium. The committee reported the Kentucky tax to be the highest in the United States and being influential in preventing cultured shows from coming to the city.

The state tax ranges from one cent on admissions on 11 to 18 cents, to 43 cents on admissions totaling $3. On a $3 admission, $2.33¼ is established price, 24 cents being federal tax, and 43 cents state tax. The report suggested a tax of one cent for each 25 cents of the basic price of the ticket, beginning at 39 cents.

Nineteen shows playing in nearby cities cancelled their contracts for Louisville last year, it was reported, although it was not certain that the cancellations were due to the tax alone.

Ohio Session Possible

The possibility of a special session of the Ohio legislature in January loomed on the horizon this week as the relief situation in Cleveland, Toledo and other cities became menacing. In addition to considering unemployment relief appropriations, it is likely a special session, if called, would give attention to a proposal that the old-age pension be increased to the $40 per month maximum permitted by the federal government.

Defense attorneys have filed an answer in Franklin County court in Columbus, Ohio, denying the contentions of John V. Bostwick, plaintiff and a taxpayer, in his action to compel the state to collect the state sales tax on film rentals in Ohio. The accumulated sales tax amounts to more than $2,000,000, plus penalties and interest. The case is expected to be heard in January. Exhibitors and distributors are defending the action jointly with the state. The State Tax Commission had exempted film rentals from the three per cent sales tax.

Sales tax collections in Ohio were $35,964,457.25 for the year ending October 31st, compared with $30,683,661.19 for the same period of 1938, according to figures released by Don A. Ebright, state treasurer. This includes the three per cent paid by exhibitors on gross receipts.

Amusement tax collections for the fiscal year ended June 30th amounted to $473,000 in the State of Virginia, according to figures released by the state tax department.

Shirley Temple To Sing

In addition to presenting scenes from "The Blue Bird," her latest picture, Shirley Temple will sing two solos and a duet with Nelson Eddy on the Christmas Eve broadcast of the "Gulf Screen Guild Theatre" over the Columbia Broadcasting Company network. Darryl F. Zanuck, Twentieth Cenutry-Fox production chief, will introduce Shirley to listeners in America, Europe and South America. CBS short wave will carry the program abroad.

ADVOCATES THREE STAGE DIVISIONS

The organizing of the American Stage into "three theatres": one devoted solely to entertainment, another to the presentation of standard worthwhile dramas and revivals, and the third to be frankly experimental, was urged by Elissa Landi, stage and screen actress, in an address to members of the Wilmington Teachers' Association in Wilmington, Del.

Hanson Company Holds Second Annual Meeting

Hanson Theatres Corporation, Ltd., Toronto, held its second annual convention in Toronto last week. Speakers included Oscar Hanson, Paul Nathanson, Miss Ray Lewis and Pete Barnes, representing the Foto-Nite Corporation; Tom McKnight, who spoke for the managers, and Dick Main, who acted as chairman.

Mr. Hanson's address keynoted the convention. He reminded the managers that they were still in the theatre business, not just in the motion picture business. He said the duty of the manager was not just to open a can of film and give it to the operator. Mr. Hanson said there was nothing wrong with the industry that showmanship management could not cure. He expressed his confidence in the management personnel of the circuit and congratulated them on a fine year's work.

Ohio ITO Plans War Over "Pot o' Gold"

The Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio plans to put into effect shortly a cooperative plan to combat the competition to theatre attendance caused by the Tums "Pot o' Gold," the National Broadcasting Company program on Tuesday nights, which offers money to winning listeners.

Under the ITO plan each participating theatre will deposit with the organization an amount equal to three cents per seat. The fund will be used only for the purpose of paying to any radio winner who is in a participating theatre during the program double the amount of the air award.

Three meetings have been called for this week by P. J. Wood, secretary of the organization, at which final details will be worked out.

Two-Man Rule Up in Canada

by E. S. ROBERTS,
in Vancouver, B. C.

Projectionists and theatre owners of British Columbia are still fighting for the advantage on the two-operator rule or amendment thereto.

Amendments Won

Round one was taken by the projectionists' union more than a year ago when they won the two-operator rule for all motion picture houses. Round two in October of this year was taken by the owners when they gained an order-in-council allowing all houses operating only 40 hours or less per week to use but one projectionist.

The union gained points in round three. While the provincial legislature was in session last month they won an amendment to the Fire Marshal's Act, making it necessary for all houses with 450 seats or more to employ one projectionist per machine.

That means that most suburban and small town theatres in the province will still have to hire two projectionists; the average house has 750 seats. So round four is in progress.

Miss A. D. Scriben, secretary of the Independent Theatres Association undertook some energetic lobbying during the final days of the legislature's session. She claimed the new rule would force a large number of theatres in Vancouver, Victoria, and perhaps other cities, to close down. They are slowly but surely being forced out of business because of high overhead, she claimed. Average wages paid projectionists are from $75 to $100 per week—this is more, in some cases, than the whole downstairs staff get out of it, according to Miss Scriven.

She followed with another claim that seating capacity has nothing to do with fire hazard. If two men are necessary in the projection booth of a 475-seat theatre because of the fire hazard, as the union claims, is not the hazard just as great in a 450-seat house?

Owners tried a feint when they asked for an amendment allowing smaller theatres to put in removable partitions to drop the seating capacity to one-operator requirements during off days, to use the full seating capacity—and two operators—on Fridays and Saturdays, the heavier days. No points gained.

Round four is still unfinished; all theatres over 450 seats must employ two projectionists at all times.

Virginia Passes "Goose Step"

"Goose Step," the Producers Pictures film, which was formerly titled "Hitler, Beast of Berlin" and which was banned by the Virginia censors under that title, has been passed in Virginia under its new title. The picture as licensed omits the foreword and other parts which had been held objectionable. Peter Saunders, chairman of the board, said he could see no real harm in the picture as it now stands. One of the stipulations set down by the board was that no advertising should call attention to its former name.

Bare Opening New House

Richard L. Bare, who has operated the Filmarte theatre, Carmel, Cal., for the last four years, will open a new 500-seat theatre in Claremont, Cal. The theatre, to be known as the Village, will feature a single bill policy. Mr. Bare plans to circulate the entire population of the town to determine what pictures will be played at the Village.

GB Director Sees Quota Continuing

The British quota will probably continue until November, 1940, concurrently with the recently promulgated restrictions on the export of film currency, which are in force for one year, according to Dixon Boardman, a director of Gaumont British Picture Corporation, Ltd.

To Study Television

Mr. Boardman, who arrived in New York last week from London, is in this country to explore the possibilities of television development for Baird Television Corporation, a subsidiary of Gaumont British. The company has ceased its television activities in England except on a small experimental basis and plans to remove its major operations to the United States. Baird has been placed in receivership as a means of conserving assets and scaling down debts.

Mr. Boardman said that Great Britain has definitely determined to retain the film quota so as not to lose out on production after the war, but that the quota would probably be modified when it comes up in Parliament next year.

He said that he believed that American wartime film remittances based on the last three years' earnings, as specified by the British Government, probably would be equivalent to 62½ per cent.

Mr. Boardman said that theatre business in England, as gauged by the experience of the Gaumont British circuit of about 330 houses, is better than 90 per cent of last year's gross at this period. There is a 50 per cent loss in the London area, which accounts for 25 per cent of the British gross, but, on the other hand, there has been a gain in the rest of England. Theatres other than the large circuits may not have experienced this gain, he added.

The shortage of players and the uncertainty of the course of the war has barred the resumption of large-scale production in England, but otherwise there are sufficient facilities and technical staffs, Mr. Boardman. He pointed out that Hollywood actors could not be expected to go to England during the war and that this is the chief problem.

The Allied Theatre Owners of Connecticut continues its membership drive. All Hartford independent theatre owners are reported as members, and the drive last week shifted to New Haven. Bridgeport independents are said to have signed up, in toto, three weeks ago. E. Thornton Kelly, formerly executive secretory of the New York State Allied and now the Connecticut unit's field representative, is directing the drive.

NAZIS FIND A WAY TO MAKE FILMS SMELL

Motion picture audiences in the future will be able to smell as well as see and hear their favorite motion picture, according to a news broadcast from Germany heard by the New York Herald Tribune.

At a recent demonstration for newspapermen in Berne, Switzerland, a fragrant film capable of producing more than 4,000 different aromas was exhibited. For example, if a bouquet of roses were shown on the screen the perfume of fresh roses would float over the audience via a medium called "smell aerials."

The device is an invention of two Swiss engineers.

Earned surplus at the same date, including the net operating profit item, amounted to $4,946,790.93. Profits in 1938 were $2,063,703.

Total assets were put at $72,988,411.01, which comprised current assets of $675,170.91, of which $508,743.87 was cash.

Louis Frappier Dies

Louis Frappier, 58, vice-president in charge of manufacturing, International Projector Corp., died unexpectedly on December 19th. When the International Projector Corporation was formed several years ago through the merger of the Nicholas Power Company and the Precision Machine Company, Mr. Frappier was superintendent of the Simplex factory and since has occupied a similar position. Although connected with the motion picture industry for over 30 years he was almost unknown. The International Projector Corporation said: "He has contributed much to the technical advancement of the motion picture industry."

Dismiss Charge in Lottery Test Case

A New York lottery charge, considered in the nature of a test case, against Morris Traub, manager of the Tivoli theatre, a Randforce unit, Brooklyn, was dismissed Monday by a three-judge special sessions court on the ground that it was not necessary to purchase an admission to participate in Screeno.

The court decided the case on the same grounds as the prosecutions of several similar cases which are pending. In view of the decision attorneys believe the pending cases will be thrown out of court.

Bingo Called Harmless

Recently the Queens County grand jury in a presentment recommended that "the game popularly known as "bingo" be legalized.

In Albany, the state capital, it was pointed out that there wasn't much likelihood that Bingo would be legalized.

In Buffalo, not guilty pleas to indictments charging them with violation of anti-lottery laws, returned in connection with the operation of games, have been entered before County Judge Frank B. Thorn. Defendants are William Richter, Thomas C. Smith, Henry Smith and Old Vienna, Inc., operators of the Gayety there.

Harry Sheets, police chief of Portsmouth, Ohio, who has been waging an intensive campaign against gambling, announces that he will clamp down tight on all forms of chance games, except theatre Bank Nights and Bingo.

Other Developments

Fearing an influx of professional Bingo game operators following the ban on all games in neighboring Essex County, the Union Township, N. J., governing body is having its counsel prepare an ordinance that will guard against an influx of promoters. The measure would restrict licenses to local organizations in existence at least three years and having a membership of at least 20.

It is reliably reported in Pennsylvania that Bingo games are the next on the list of Governor Arthur H. James' clean-up program. It is further reported that the move may start after the first of the year.

One of the rumors circulating there is that the clean-ups ordered by Governor James since he took office are either initiated by church groups which seem to have grown stronger in what seems to be an attempt to put Pennsylvania right back into the blue law era again or part of a well-planned campaign which may lead to the presidential nomination in 1940.

A Bank Night guarantee plan that has been operated in Des Moines by the Capital City Guarantors, managed by Leslie Cooper of Rock Island, Ill., has been discontinued.

At the request of a Kansas City exhibitor who wanted to use it, Ten-O-Win has been termed in violation of the Missouri law on gambling by Sam Blair, city counselor. The opinion was passed on to L. B. Reed, police chief, with the recommendation that police arrest operators for future violations.

The Canadian Government cannot do anything in the way of permitting wide-open chance game competitions because the amendments to the Criminal Code adopted by Parliament in 1938 have placed chance games in the category of gambling, according to word from Ottawa. A conviction lists the premises where such games are played as common betting houses with resultant restrictions.

Mayor W. G. Jackson of New Toronto, Canada, in seeking reelection for 1940, announces that he will remove the ban on chance games if he is returned to office.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Signs of Multi-millionaire Howard Hughes going back into motion picture production reminds us of Young Mr. Hughes' early "Hell's Angels," three years in the making (and re-making), cost $4,000,000, which he introduced to the New York news and Broadway theatrical press, ten years ago come this April. The bowing-in consisted principally of a cocktail party with more trimmings than we have ever seen, running 24 hours a day for three days prior to the hour of the big ballyhoo Broadway premiere.

Mr. Hughes, whose many millions came for the most part from Hughes Tools, Texas, beat Selznick-Metro by ten years to a double big-time Broadway opening, "Hell's Angels" opening simultaneously at the Criterion and Central, across the street. Metro's "Gone With the Wind" now received the same treatment, at Broadway's Astor and Capitol, last Tuesday night, the only other picture to have a big dual opening on Broadway.

A man stopped Barney Joffee as he walked out of the Kansas City Tower theatre the other night and asked him whether the show inside was any good. Mr. Joffee, who is manager of the theatre, was nonplussed for a moment, but finally said he thought the show was very good—"Why?" The man explained that it was a custom of his never to buy a ticket to a show without asking a patron who was leaving what he thought of the program.

"If he says it isn't any good, I don't buy—I go somewhere else."

Joffee mopped his brow as he watched the fellow buy a ticket.

In all of the 50 years of the motion picture, no one has been the bane of an exhibitor's existence any more than the public gum chewer, the gummer who has gummed up theatre sidewalks, theatre carpets, theatre seats.

New York's Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia, who now turns for a moment to ridding the city of gum chewers, might easily win support for his eastern motion picture production idea if he but could and would solve this problem of gum-parking pestiferousness for the industry's theatre owners.

F. Q. Stinson, who operates the Dixie theatre for Negroes at Greenwood, Miss., gives a midnight show each Saturday. The other Saturday night, he had an idea and getting up before the screen asked if there was a deacon in the house to lead the audience in prayer. There was. After the prayer, the Negroes struck up a hymn. Now the prayer and spiritual prolog gets under way every Saturday, followed by a blood and thunder western.

SPECIAL WAR-IN-THE-AIR DISPATCHES:

Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Bennett, of Toronto, discovered their 20-year-old son, Charles V. Bennett, in the Royal Air Force when they attended a performance of "The Lion Has Wings" at the Uptown, Toronto. Unable to get a job in Toronto, the lad ran away, taking a cattleboat to England. Friends of the family had told the parents they had seen their boy in the British film. The son is a flight mechanic.

Two of the British airmen shot down during the raid on the Kiel Canal were recognized in a newsreel in London showing part of a German internment camp. The two men, Squadron Leader S. S. Murray and Pilot Officer A. B. Thompson, were earlier officially reported to be "Missing, believed prisoners of war."

In Edinburgh, Scotland, Scottish students playing the parts of German airmen during the production of a movie were arrested by military authorities.

The Postoffice Department had decided to make a documentary film based on the German raid on the Firth of Forth. Students dressed as Nazi pilots shot down were rowing to shore in a boat when the coastal authorities picked them up and marched them to headquarters. They were detained five hours before they were identified.

Joubert kept buying basins as those used by the artist vanished.

Lionel Comport, who rents birds and animals of all kinds for moving picture purposes, isn't sure who owes who on his job of supplying 35 pigeons to RKO Radio in Hollywood for scenes in "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," at one dollar per pigeon per day.

Mr. Comport reported with 35 pigeons, turned them loose for a day's work on the huge 15th century Paris sets at Radio.

After work he collected his pigeons, found upon counting beaks that instead of 35 birds he had 53. Apparently 18 movie-struck pigeons out of work had volunteered and joined Comport's professionals for the day.

During the last year the formation of guilds and societies, clubs and unions in Hollywood has been unprecedented. Last week, however, a new kind appeared on the scene.

The storekeepers of Hollywood Boulevard formed "The Hollywood Merchants Guild," an organization "primarily concerned with promoting the interests of the ultimate consumer of Hollywood Boulevard merchandise by setting up and maintaining a code of uniform business practices that will win the further confidence and good will of the customer." There'll be no more cut rates on herrings, for one.

With all of its big "billion dollar" business, the motion picture industry of Hollywood Boulevard, Main Street, Broadway and Wall Street, can't seem to get a code, though.

OBITUARIES

William Sirovich, Congressman, Dies

With the death of Representative William I. Sirovich, 57, of New York, December 17th in New York City, the House Patents Committee experienced the loss of its second leading figure to go within the year.

Both Representative Sirovich, chairman of the committee, and Congressman J. Burrwood Daly of Pennsylvania, who died March 12th, last, had played leading roles in the consideration by the committee of legislation affecting the film industry. Both had sponsored a number of bills and both had worked hard at the many hearings and meetings called during their service on measures in which the film and radio industries had an interest.

The kindly, courteous chairman, who once or twice a year made erudite speeches on the floor of the House which never failed to attract a full and interested membership, did not always secure the support of his committee for the things he proposed, notably on the question of copyright, but had the complete respect and confidence of even those who most strenuously opposed him on the floor of the House.

Physician by vocation, playwright by avocation, his interest in less fortunate fellowmen and his earnest and sincere desire to further the cause of art in whatever form presented were well recognized and accepted principles among his colleagues.

Although he was interested in many fields of legislation, probably no project was nearer his heart than the establishment of a Fine Arts Bureau in an appropriate branch of the Government, for which he introduced bills at a number of sessions and at one time held lengthy hearings. He also sponsored his own version of copyright-reform legislation and had sought, unsuccessfully, to have the admission tax repealed.

In line for the chairmanship is Representative Fritz G. Lanham of Texas, for a number of years ranking majority member on the committee. Like his chief, Mr. Lanham has taken a great interest in copyright legislation, patent legislation and other matters affecting the amusement industries.

The death of Congressman Sirovich leaves three vacancies in the Democratic membership of the committee which, in fact, has not been full since early in 1938.

Funeral services for Congressman Sirovich were held Tuesday in Gramercy Park Memorial Chapel, New York City.

Daniel Robertson Dies; Showman for 60 Years

Daniel W. Robertson, 81, a showman for more than 60 years, died at his home in Brooklyn, N. Y., December 14th after a month's illness. Mr. Robertson was born in Brooklyn, and achieved some local renown as a ballplayer in his youth. He went on the stage in vaudeville when 17 years old.

For a time he managed vaudeville houses, and is said to have hired Weber and Fields in their early career for $7 for a single night's engagement. Later he operated motion picture theatres, among the first in Brooklyn. For the last 40 years he had operated an entertainment agency.

Heywood Broun

Heywood Broun, newspaper columnist and president of the American Newspaper Guild and frequent commentator on the motion picture, died Monday at the age of 51. Funeral services were held in St. Patrick's Cathedral Wednesday. Mr. Broun was among the first of the "literati" to give special heed to the motion picture. As early as 1916 he wrote in appreciation of the then newly discovered art of Charles Chaplin.

The funeral was attended by notables from the worlds of the theatre, journalism, literature, sports, politics and labor. Monsignor Fulton J. Sheen of the Catholic University celebrated the requiem mass. The burial was in the Gate of Heaven Cemtery, Pleasantville, N. Y.

George H. Wilkinson, 81, of the Wilkinson theatre, Wallingford, Conn., died there December 15th of a heart attack. In commemoration of his long and friendly association with the entire New Haven film territory, some 200 friends gathered for a special testimonial dinner to Mr. Wilkinson last July. He was born in Birmingham, England. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Margaret C. Wilkinson, who has been his business partner in the theatre, and one son, George H. Wilkinson, Jr., secretary-treasurer of the Wallingford Bank & Trust Company.

Henry Yusen, 52, brother-in-law and associate of William Brandt, died in New York December 14th. He was manager of the Bayside theatre, Bayside, L. I.

Horace Twyman

Horace W. Twyman, 57, formerly general manager of the Jefferson-Lafayette Theatres, Inc., Charlottesville, Va., died in that city on December 15th. He became associated with the circuit as general manager in 1921 and retired in 1934 because of ill health.

Fox Creditors Awarded $450,000 and Stock

Federal Judge John Boyd Avis in Camden, N. J., this week approved the report of the referee in bankruptcy for William Fox. Under its terms creditors of the All-Continental Corporation, the Fox family's holding company, will receive $450,000 in cash and stock valued at $150,000. The stock is to be sold by the trustees for the benefit of the creditors, whose total claims were $1,500,000.

Judge Avis told the Capitol Company and the Chicago Title and Trust Company that the outcome of further litigation was in doubt, inasmuch, as the All-Continental Corporation had no assets to meet legal costs. The two companies have been fighting the terms of settlement.

DuPont Answers Pathe Charges

DuPont Film Manufacturing Company this week filed its answer to the $210,000 breach of contract suit brought by Pathe Laboratories, Inc., in U. S. district court in New York. DuPont in its answer attacks the contract which gave Pathe the right to purchase its raw stock film requirements at 30 per cent over cost as illegal and in violation of the anti-trust laws.

The contract was part of a deal under which the defendant was incorporated by Pathe and DuPont interests with a division of stock. The answer claimed that federal price discrimination legislation outlawed the contract. A raise in the price of film for Pathe preceded the suit.

SEC Intervenes

The Securities and Exchange Commission has become a party to the reorganization of a number of corporations, including the Toledo Theatres and Realty Company. The Commission explained that it filed a notice of its appearance in the proceedings for the reorganization September 15th last at the request of Judge Kloeb of the U. S. district court of Ohio. The company, incorporated under Ohio law, is engaged in the business of leasing and operating a number of buildings, including theatres, in Toledo. Its indebtedness is listed at approximately $1,156,000 and proceedings for reorganization under the bankruptcy act were instituted by the filing of a creditors' petition in June.

Referee Gets Award

Referee John E. Joyce was awarded $5,000 this week in U. S. district court in New York as final compensation for services rendered in reviewing claims filed against Paramount Publix during reorganization proceedings.

Reade Suit Upheld

An application to dismiss the suit of Walter Reade for an accounting against Joseph T. P. Sullivan for failure to state a cause of action was denied this week in New York supreme court. The suit charges the defendant with breach of a contract to split profits of the City Theatres, Inc.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

BLONDIE BRINGS UP BABY: Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake, Larry Simms—Must be pretty good. Did fair business and no kicks, even from the operator who is quite a critic.—Harry Hobolth, Capac Theatre, Capac, Mich. General patronage.

GOLDEN BOY: Barbara Stanwyck, Adolphe Menjou, Joseph Calleia—One of the year's best but for some reason or other has no box office draw, prabably due to weak cast names. Performances excellent throughout and will really please the few who do buy tickets. Running time, 98 minutes.—Don Bloxham, Palace Theatre, Exira, Iowa. General and rural patronage.

KONGA, THE WILD STALLION: Fred Stone, Rochelle Hudson—This is an excellent title for a small town on a Friday-Saturday change. Business was very good on this and the picture was satisfactory, although the production was a little faulty in that the story jumped from one thing to another a little too fast.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

LAW COMES FROM TEXAS, THE: Bill Elliott, Veda Ann Borg, Dorothy Faye—As good as the usual run of westerns, which we played on a double bill with "Orphans of the Street", making the box office a real Santa Claus.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MR. SMITH GOES TO WASHINGTON: Jean Arthur, James Stewart, Claude Rains, Edward Arnold, Guy Kibbee, Thomas Mitchell, Eugene Pallette—Here is proven that the director is the picture. Perfection if there ever is perfection. We urge every exhibitor to play this outstanding picture if possible as it should be the Academy winner for this year. A natural if there ever was one and we feel that we have had an honor in playing it. Best of the current season. Running time, 125 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

STRANGER FROM TEXAS, THE: Charles Starrett, Lorna Gray, Sons of the Pioneers—Do not be afraid of this western as it is as good as any that this company has made. Photography, music, plot are all good. Running time, 60 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

THOSE HIGH GREY WALLS: Walter Connolly, Iris Meredith—An O. K. program picture. Will please 95 per cent.—Harry Hobolth, De Luxe Theatre, Imlay City, Mich. General patronage.

THOSE HIGH GREY WALLS: Walter Connolly, Iris Meredith—Different type prison story which gave good satisfaction but means nothing at the box office and that is what counts. Good show for gift or bargain nights. Running time, 79 minutes.—Don Bloxham, Palace Theatre, Exira, Iowa. General and rural patronage.

First National

ANGELS WASH THEIR FACES, THE: Ronald Reagan, Ann Sheridan, "Dead End Kids", Bonita Granville, Frankie Thomas—An excellent production that pleased the cash customers 100 per cent. Did considerable extra business, too. Played December 5.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

DAUGHTERS COURAGEOUS: Lane Sisters, Gale Page, John Garfield, Fay Bainter, Jeffrey Lynn, Claude Rains, May Robson, Dick Foran, Frank McHugh, Donald Crisp—Every bit as good as "Four Daughters" but not nearly the draw. The title is probably responsible for the poor attendance.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

DUST BY MY DESTINY: John Garfield, Priscilla Lane—Tops! It absolutely defies criticism. The only picture I ever showed that I was unable to find a single person who couldn't think of some reason for being dissatisfied. Holds your attention from the first frame to the last. I'll vote it the most entertaining picture of the year. Garfield and P. Lane are really outstanding. Good business. Running time, 88 minutes. Played November 22-23.—Everett Clapp, American Theatre, Sidell, Ill. Rural and small town patronage.

DUST BE MY DESTINY: John Garfield, Priscilla Lane—Swell picture. Pleased everyone.—Harry Hobolth, Capac Theatre, Capac, Mich. General patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box-office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

What the Picture Did for Me

MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

ESPIONAGE AGENT: Joel McCrea, Brenda Marshall, Jeffrey Lynn, Frank McHugh—O. K. Pleased.—arry Hobolth, Capac Theatre, Capac, Mich. General patronage.

OLD MAID, THE: Bette Davis, Miriam Hopkins, George Brent, Jane Bryan—Not nearly the show that "Dark Victory" is. However, it went over well. I should say about 95 per cent of the ladies had a good cry. The show will not click with more than 50 per cent of the male audience. Business not up to "Dark Victory", although I played this right under the gun and "Victory" after it was more than six months old.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

OLD MAID, THE: Bette Davis, Miriam Hopkins, George Brent, Jane Bryan—After checking the box office, I wouldn't have liked this picture regardless of how good it was. Please, Warners, after "Dark Victory" and "The Old Maid", let's have one with a little action, a little enjoyable entertainment that rural and small town patrons will come to see. We both lost money on this one and I didn't like it any better than you. Perhaps, this is a great picture for class audiences but not here. Running time, 95 minutes. Played November 26-27.—Everett Clapp, American Theatre, Sidell, Ill. Rural and small town patronage.

ON YOUR TOES: Zorina, Eddie Albert, Alan Hale, James Gleason, Gloria Dickson—Does your audience like an endless string of Russian raving and ballet rehearsals? Mine didn't and were not backward in telling me about it. Running time, 94 minutes. Played November 29-December 1.—E. A. Reynolds, Strand Theatre, Princeton, Minn. Small town and country patronage.

WE ARE NOT ALONE: Paul Muni, Jane Bryan, Flora Robson, Una O'Connor—Good picture; poor business. This picture has a tragic ending and did not please for that reason. Running time, 112 minutes. Played December 6-7.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BABES IN ARMS: Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland, Charles Winninger, Guy Kibbee—An O. K. picture from this pair. Personally didn't see so awfully much in it. However, the paying patrons like it and that's that. Rooney's impersonation very clever and Garland's voice again scores. Running time, 97 minutes. Played December 3-5.—E. A. Reynolds, Strand Theatre, Princeton, Minn. Small town and country patronage.

BAD LITTLE ANGEL: Virginia Weidler, Gene Reynolds—Played on a Saturday and believe it is the spot. Has its moments and for a weekend (close Saturday) it is O. K. No skimping on this one and pleased. Running time, 72 minutes. Played November 25.—E. A. Reynolds, Strand Theatre, Princeton, Minn. Small town and country patronage.

LADY OF THE TROPICS: Hedy Lamarr, Robert Taylor—Well, you'll have to admit she's beautiful! And, if given the proper kind of role, she'll make good, we believe. Not much of a draw in our town, however, and not worth the price yet we had to pay to get her. Running time, 91 minutes. Played November 26-27.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

MAISIE: Ann Sothern, Robert Young—Enjoyed outstanding business with this picture.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MARX BROTHERS "AT THE CIRCUS": Marx Brothers, Kenny Baker, Florence Rice—If you can stand Grouch, you can get by with. Harpo and Chico are quite funny but Groucho? ? ?—Harry Hobolth, De Luxe Theatre, Imlay City, Mich. General patronage.

MARX BROTHERS "AT THE CIRCUS": Marx Brothers, Kenny Baker, Florence Rice—Harpo harps and Chico "rolls out the barrel" on the piano and do they like it. Groucho adds his usual insanity and the voice of Kenny Baker helps. It is what the Marxs' picture should be and one or two of these a year will always be welcome in my theatre. Running time, 87 minutes. Played November 15-17.—E. A. Reynolds, Strand Theatre, Princeton, Minn. Small town and country patronage.

NINOTCHKA: Greta Garbo, Melvyn Douglas, Ina Claire—Well, here is a surprise. After the type Garbo has made for so long, you have a problem in selling this one. However, those that see it will certainly like it and give Garbo another start. Direction is superb and Douglas brilliant. I know of people that had given up Garbo, who sat through it twice. It's work but will please and how. Running time, 110 minutes. Played November 26-28.—E. A. Reynolds, Strand Theatre, Princeton, Minn. Small town and country patronage.

ON BORROWED TIME: Lionel Barrymore, Bobs Watson, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Beulah Bondi, Una Merkel—One of the most unusual shows ever to come out of Hollywood and certainly all in all a most excellent attraction. Played midweek against nearby free show competition so business was off. Should have a Sunday opening. Several remarked it was the best picture they had ever seen.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

REMEMBER?: Robert Taylor, Greer Garson, Lew Ayres—Not big. But how many are? However, it kept the house in a steady uproar and they ate it up. A pleasing picture, well made and also well directed, as MGM seems to have the secret technique. Worth a spot on any bill anywhere. Running time, 83 minutes. Played November 22-24.—E. A. Reynolds, Strand Theatre, Princeton, Minn. Small town and country patronage.

THUNDER AFLOAT: Wallace Beery, Chester Morris, Virginia Grey—Very fine and timely subject on submarine warfare. Of course, everyone likes Beery and his supporting cast was excellent. Running time, 91 minutes. Played November 29-30.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

WIZARD OF OZ, THE: Judy Garland, Frank Morgan, Ray Bolger, Bert Lahr, Jack Haley, Billie Burke, Margaret Hamilton—Here's a picture which really surprised us. We expected it to do some extra business but not as much as it really did. And it fully satisfied grownups as well as the children. Coloring was beautiful, occasioning many enthusiastic remarks from our patrons. And the story was not too much for the kids. Running time, 101 minutes. Played December 3-5.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

Paramount

HONEYMOON IN BALI: Fred MacMurray, Madeleine Carroll, Allan Jones, Helen Broderick—A fast moving picture. First they do and then they don't. Direction a shining example of what a director can do to aid a picture. I have seen two swell pictures from a director's angle in less than two weeks. This one and Lubitsch's "Ninotchka". What a different MacMurray in this than "Men with Wings". They liked it. Running time, 96 minutes. Played November 19-21.—E. A. Reynolds, Strand Theatre, Princeton, Minn. Small town and country patronage.

LLANO KID: Tito Guizar, Gale Sondergaard—Better than average western. In fact, much better.—Harry Hobolth, De Luxe Theatre, Imlay City, Mich. General patronage.

MAN ABOUT TOWN: Jack Benny, Dorothy Lamour, Eddie "Rochester" Anderson, Edward Arnold, Binnie Barnes—Played this pretty late but are glad we did because it definitely set up "Rochester" as a box office attraction, if and when we play the next Benny picture. The picture was real entertainment, being outstanding in everything including comedy, music and dancing girls than whom we have seen no better in many days. Running time, 85 minutes. Played December 1-2.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

Hartley, Donald O'Connor, Jackie Coogan—Can't rate this even an average programmer. Supposed to be a rip snorting comedy but it misses by a large margin. Used it on a double bill and played to very good business, as the other picture brought them in. When the laughs from a good house are hardly noticeable, the comedy isn't clicking.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

$1,000 A TOUCHDOWN: Joe E. Brown, Martha Raye—Not so bad, not so good. Drew about average but wasn't quite up to the standard I or my customers was expecting. If I were Joe or Martha, I'd say: "Paramount, I want something better to work with next time." Running time, 72 minutes. Played November 19-20.—Everett Clapp, American Theatre, Sidell, Ill. Rural and small town patronage.

OUR LEADING CITIZEN: Bob Burns, Susan Hayward—Played to small crowds on this one but I want to go on record as saying this is one of the finest pictures I have ever seen on the screen. There is more good American common sense and judgment brought out in this picture than fifty "Confessions of a Nazi Spy" and pictures of this type. This show really preaches Americanism and entertains at the same time. Give it a boost and personal endorsement and your patrons will not be disappointed. Running time, 89 minutes.—Don Bloxham, Palace Theatre, Exira, Iowa. General and rural patronage.

OUR NEIGHBORS—THE CARTERS: Fay Bainter, Frank Craven—As pleasing a picture as you'll run. You can boost it and be there to say "good night."—Harry Hobolth, De Luxe Theatre, Imlay City, Mich. General patronage.

WHAT A LIFE: Jackie Cooper, Betty Field—Paramount evidently is trying to cash in on the family pictures. This is the supposed Aldrich Family off the radio. I wouldn't know. Turkey hash would be better.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

Republic

ARIZONA KID, THE: Roy Rogers, George Hayes—Average western with Civil War background. Have seen better but pleased the few who did venture out. Feel the feature I played with this, Fox's "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes", is what kept the crowd away. Running time, 59 minutes. Played December 7-9.—Don Bloxham, Palace Theatre, Exira, Iowa. General and rural patronage.

DOWN IN ARKANSAW: Ralph Byrd, Weaver Brothers and Elviry, June Storey, Pinky Tomlin—Nothing much to this one. However, it did a little extra business. Played December 3.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

JEEPERS CREEPERS: Weaver Brothers and Elviry, Roy Rogers—Makes good on double bill. Did not hold up at box office but pleased.—Harry Hobolth, De Luxe Theatre, Imlay City, Mich. General patronage.

ORPHANS OF THE STREET: Robert Livingston, June Storey, Tommy Ryan, Ralph Morgan—We found this picture to be of outstanding merit and was a real tonic for box office.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SAGA OF DEATH VALLEY: Roy Rogers, George Hayes—Good picture; good business. Running time, 60 minutes. Played December 8-9.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

THREE TEXAS STEERS: Three Mesquiteers (John Wayne, Ray Corrigan, Max Terhune), Carole Landis—Very good western with a different story twist. Gave good satisfaction. Lots of comedy, action and thrills. Play it. Running time, 55 minutes.—Don Bloxham, Palace Theatre, Exira, Iowa. General and rural patronage.

RKO Radio

EVERYTHING'S ON ICE: Irene Dare, Edgar Kennedy—A pleasant little picture with a child skating star who is good. Well produced and some nice skating revues built around the eight year old. Played on a Saturday. Running time, 67 minutes. Played December 2.—E. A. Reynolds, Strand Theatre, Princeton, Minn. Small town and country patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, THE: Basil Rathbone, Ida Lupino, Nigel Bruce—How Fox can allocate this dud where they did and then continue doing business with an exhibitor is more than I can understand. Should have been in the bottom instead of next to top as allocated. This kind of stuff may go over in England or the city but certainly means nothing in Exira where I have to earn my living. Just another point in favor of 25 per cent elimination privileges. Hope this is the end of this series. Running time, 80 minutes. Played December 7-9.—Don Bloxham, Palace Theatre, Exira, Iowa. General and rural patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN AT TREASURE ISLAND: Sidney Toler, Cesar Romero, Pauline Moore—About on par with the usual Charlie Chan story. O. K. on a double bill. Played December 2.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

CHICKEN WAGON FAMILY: Jane Withers, Leo Carrillo, Marjorie Weaver—Fair business due to the popularity of Jane Withers but in my opinion a very weak picture. Let Fox star her in some good pictures, some they spend a little money to make and we'll all profit by it. This is the kind of picture where a weak story and ragged edges keep it from clicking. Running time, 64 minutes. Played November 17-18.—Everett Clapp, American Theatre, Sidell, Ill. Rural and small town patronage.

HEAVEN WITH A BARBED WIRE FENCE: Glen Ford, Jean Rogers—Good picture which failed to draw business, because it lacked star power. Running time, 62 minutes. Played December 5.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

PACK UP YOUR TROUBLES: Jane Withers, Ritz Brothers, Lynn Bari—Only fair. Business not quite up to her former pictures. Jane still has quite a following and she still is one of the cleverer of the kid stars and a better role than this one is due her.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

SECOND FIDDLE: Sonja Henie, Tyrone Power, Rudy Vallee, Edna May Oliver—This opus was distinctly second fiddle alright from a box office standpoint. We grossed about $2.00 less than the guarantee on this. The producer evidently knew just how good this masterpiece would be, as they didn't bother to send a checker. Guess Sonja Henie will have to start doing something besides skating if she wants to stay in pictures. Played December 1.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

STOP, LOOK AND LOVE: William Frawley, Jean Rogers, Robert Kellard—Pretty good family programmer but allocated way too high for what drawing power it has, which is nil. Running time, 57 minutes. Played December 5-6.—Don Bloxham, Palace Theatre, Exira, Iowa. General and rural patronage.

RAINS CAME, THE: Myrna Loy, Tyrone Power, George Brent, Brenda Joyce—This picture seemed to go over okay with our patrons. While there were no positive raves, there were no kicks and here is to George Brent who did a swell job of his role and I will not neglect Brenda Joyce who in her small role, as on the make for Brent, put a lot into the part. In fact, I think she shaded Miss Loy to some extent and, when you can set that lady back, that is something. Anyone that can beat the gun on Myrna is good.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General Patronage.

THANKS FOR EVERYTHING: Adolphe Menjou, Jack Haley, Jack Oakie, Arleen Whelan, Tony Martin, Binnie Barnes—This picture failed to make film rental. Instead of "Thanks for Everything", it was "Thanks for Nothing" with us.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

United Artists

CAPTAIN FURY: Brian Aherne, Victor McLaglen, Paul Lukas, June Lang—Excellent adventure story that will please almost every one. Considerable comedy is introduced at the right intervals. We can stand a lot of shows similar to this.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

FOUR FEATHERS: John Clements, June Duprez, Ralph Richardson, C. Aubrey Smith—Here is a picture that is a picture. Play it for all it is worth and it will bring in the bacon. Outstanding. A good show. Running time, 115 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

MAN IN THE IRON MASK, THE: Louis Hayward, Joan Bennett, Warren William, Joseph Schildkraut, Alan Hale—One of the best shows to come out of Hollywood this year. Being a costume picture, it did not draw average business. Comments were quite numerous and from those that are hard to please. These praised the picture highly.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

STAGECOACH: Claire Trevor, John Wayne, Andy Devine, John Carradine, Thomas Mitchell, George Bancroft, Louise Platt, Donald Meek, Berton Churchill—An interesting production involving the thrilling ride in a stagecoach, of course, of a variety of personalities who are wending their way across the wide open spaces of the good old U. S. A., ever fearful that they will be attacked (and they are) by the wild Apache Indians before they reach their destination. Every member of the lengthy cast performed his or her part to perfection but the performances of Thomas Mitchell (Doc Boone) and Claire Trevor (Dallas) were gems. In addition to Mitchell and Miss Trevor, others who were considered eligible for special mention by our audience are Andy Devine, John Wayne, Donald Meek and Berton Churchill. If your audience is interested in the trials and tribulations of our forefathers and if they like western settings, they will certainly like this one. Running time, 97 minutes. Played December 9.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

STAR IS BORN, A (reissue): Janet Gaynor, Fredric Marsh—Broke all records for low gross. Too old.—Harry Hobolth, Capac Theatre, Capac, Mich. General patronage.

WINTER CARNIVAL: Ann Sheridan, Richard Carlson, Helen Parrish, Robert Armstrong—Better than I expected after some of the comments that appeared in these columns. I would say it should rate as a good average program picture. Comments were quite numerous and favorable. Business about the usual midweek run.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General Patronage.

Universal

LITTLE ACCIDENT: Baby Sandy, Hugh Herbert, Florence Rice, Richard Carlson, Joy Hodges—A very good comedy that will stand alone.—Harry Hobolth, De Luxe Theatre, Imlay City, Mich. General Patronage.

MUTINY ON THE BLACKHAWK: Richard Arlen, Andy Devine, Constance Moore—Plenty of action. Good comments. Did not see it myself.—Harry Hobolth, Capac Theatre, Capac, Mich. General patronage.

Warner Brothers

PRIVATE LIVES OF ELIZABETH AND ESSEX: Bette Davis, Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Vincent Price—Good picture; poor business. Being a costume picture, it failed to draw in this small town. Running time, 100 minutes. Played December 3-4.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

LITTLE MATCH GIRL (reissue): Color Rhapsodies—A most timely colored cartoon for the Holiday season.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

PARK YOUR BABY: Fable Cartoons—Just another cartoon. Producers should give more time to shorts as they are part of the program. Running time, four minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

PEST FROM THE WEST, THE: Buster Keaton—I only report on a short about once in five years but this one really took my fancy and was so unusually good that it deserves mention. When the patrons comment on shorts, as they did this one, they must be good.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS: No. 12—Very good number in this fine series. Only complaint was Noah Berry was hard to understand, as his voice did not seem to record properly. Play it; it will bring back memories to both you and your audience. Running time, 10 minutes.—Don Bloxham, Palace Theatre, Exira, Iowa. General and rural patronage.

SWING, YOU, SWINGERS: Andy Clyde—A combination comedy with Andy Clyde going jitterbug. Should please both young and old.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ASH CAN FLEET: MGM Miniatures—Here is a company with finished product. This short should be run ahead of "Thunder Afloat" but it is still an excellent short wherever it is run. Very good. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

HEROES AT LEISURE: Pete Smith Specialties—Here is one of the finest marine short subjects we have ever played. It brought much favorable comment. Would recommend that you should play it by all means. Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

ONE AGAINST THE WORLD: Passing Parade, No. 9—Another outstanding historical short by this outstanding company. Excellent. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

WHILE AMERICA SLEEPS: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—A fine short dealing with sabotage and espionage.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Paramount

WOTTA NITEMARE: Popeye the Sailor—Above average Popeye cartoon. Lots of laughs and pleased all. Running time, seven minutes.—Don Bloxham, Palace Theatre, Exira, Iowa. General and rural patronage.

RKO Radio

BATTLE FLEETS OF ENGLAND: March of Time, No. 2—Very interesting subject which seemed to please. Running time, 18 minutes.—Don Bloxham, Palace Theatre, Exira, Iowa. General and rural patronage.

COAT TAILS: Jed Prouty—Good two reeler, which has quite a few laughs in it. Seemed to please those who like Jed. Running time, 17 minutes.—Don Bloxham, Palace Theatre, Exira, Iowa. General and rural patronage.

DONALD'S COUSIN GUS: Walt Disney Cartoons—Average Disney Cartoon. Not good, not bad. Running time, seven minutes.—Don Bloxham, Palace Theatre, Exira, Iowa. General and rural patronage.

GOOFY AND WILBUR: Walt Disney Cartoons—Very good Disney cartoon in color. Will please all. Running time, seven minutes.—Don Bloxham, Palace Theatre, Exira, Iowa. General and rural patronage.

JITTERS, THE: Leon Errol Comedies—One of the best audience pictures we have run. "Rubber Legs" had them rolling in the aisles. Tops. Running time, 19 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SOLDIERS WITH WINGS: March of Time, No. 1—A most timely instructive piece of propaganda, which was well received.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

STAGE FRIGHT: Leon Errol Comedies—Funny Errol comedy which seemed to please the small crowd who saw it. Running time, 18 minutes.—Don Bloxham, Palace Theatre, Exira, Iowa. General and rural patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

FILMING THE FLEET: Adventures of the Newsreel Cameraman—Interesting.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

FILMING THE FLEET: Adventures of the Newsreel Cameraman—At last a good short from Fox. This one is tops and you can really step on it. Some of the best photography and sound effects we've seen and heard in many a day. Thanks, Fox, for this wonderful reel. Running time, 10 minutes.—Don Bloxham, Palace Theatre, Exira, Iowa. General and rural patronage.

HITCH-HIKER, THE: Terry-Toons—Good black and white cartoon. Running time, seven minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

HOOK, LINE AND SINKER: Terry-Toons—Good black and white cartoon.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MYSTIC SIAM: Magic Carpet Series—This short subject is very mediocre.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SHEEP IN THE MEADOW: Terry-Toons—Fair Terry-Toon, not good, not bad. This theme has been done too many times before. Why don't they get some good cartoon material? Running time, seven minutes.—Don Bloxham, Palace Theatre, Exira, Iowa. General and rural patronage.

VILLAGE BLACKSMITH, THE: Terry-Toons—Nothing to talk about here. Running time, seven minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

Vitaphone

CLYDE LUCAS AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—A band short that has variety. We have seen better and seen a lot worse. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

LAND OF THE MIDNIGHT FUN: Merrie Melodies—No producer ever made a better cartoon than this one. In fact, the entire new series has been excellent. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

MONROE DOCTRINE: Grant Mitchell—Wonderful patriotic subject but seemed to be above the heads of my crowd, as they walked out on it and came back when it was over. Lay off of it in the small towns. Running time, 17 minutes.—Don Bloxham, Palace Theatre, Exira, Iowa. General and rural patronage.

NAUGHTY NEIGHBORS: Looney Tunes—Good black and white cartoon.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RFC Considers GN Financing

Grand National creditors unanimously agreed last Friday to permit the company to continue operating until January 5th by which time the Reconstruction Finance Corporation is expected to act on the refinancing proposal. E. J. Ahearn, Jr., manager in New York for the RFC, has forwarded a letter to the Washington office approving of a loan of $450,000. T. Kennedy Stevenson, head of Erpi, is understood to have approved a loan of $100,000 to Grand National. The action was taken by the RFC after receiving Erpi's written commitment to participate in the refinancing, according to Saul E. Rogers, company attorney. The RFC has also been asked to give Grand National four instead of two years to repay the loan.

Hearings Adjourned to January

Peter B. Olney, referee, adjourned further hearings until 3:30 P.M. on January 5th. He indicated, however, that if the RFC reached its decision before that date, hearings would be resumed immediately. If the RFC does not approve the loan Referee Olney will probably order liquidation of the company. Last week Referee Olney expressed concern that continued operation of Grand National Pictures might prevent payment of even wage claimants in event of liquidation, if the necessary loans are not secured.

Leo Berger, former MGM representative in Eastern Europe, who offered last week to buy up major creditors' claims, indicated that he would consider a stock investment in the company to provide part of the $1,000,000 production fund. Mr. Berger, it was said, might make a loan for working capital, even if the RFC refuses to make a loan. Grand National could overcome its weekly $4,000 loss by increasing its weekly gross from $8,000 to $13,000 through obtaining additional product and conducting an immediate sales drive, according to a study made by Mr. Berger. He is working on plans to import foreign pictures for Grand National distribution. Referee Olney was also told that three feature films and eight westerns had been offered for distribution through GN by Producers Laboratory.

Sol Edwards, sales manager of Grand National, has left New York on a tour of five exchanges. This is in line with the prospects of renewed activity by the company and a sales drive for the new product which the company plans to obtain. Mr. Edwards is scheduled to visit Buffalo, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Indianapolis and Chicago.

RKO-Atlas Plan Approved by Court

No serious objection was raised by either the creditors or by the Securities and Exchange Commission to the Atlas Corporation agreement to underwrite 500,000 shares of RKO common stock at the price of $3 per share. At the hearing before Judge William Bondy last Friday the creditors, stockholders and the SEC agreed that the price of $3 was fair as compared with market quotations on RKO and other motion picture stocks.

Judge Bondy on Wednesday approved the agreement with one modification. At the same time he authorized RKO and the Irving Trust Company to proceed with final consummation of the plan.

Underwriting Charges Questioned

The only objection to the financing agreement was over the question of compensation asked by the Atlas group for underwriting the stock. Carlos Israels, attorney for the Unsecured Creditors' Committee, and Marland Gale, attorney for the SEC, pointed out that the Atlas Corporation had obtained $1,879,626 in unsecured claims on which it would ordinarily be entitled to exercise an option to purchase a pro-rate share of the new stock at $3 but under the agreement Atlas would acquire that stock at $2.75. Under the agreement, Mr. Israels said, Atlas, by declining to pick up the stock, would secure it for $2.75 as underwriter. Mr. Gale held that this gave Atlas an opportunity to get more compensation in the form of a reduced price for the stock.

The modification in Judge Bondy's approval provides that Atlas pay $1 per share for the new stock.

Hamilton C. Rickaby, attorney for Atlas, said that the financing company intended to acquire stock at the lower rate and had taken this into consideration when fixing compensation. However both Judge Bondy and Mr. Israels held this position to be inconsistent. Mr. Rickaby volunteered to bind Atlas not to obtain any further claims until all options had expired. He said that Atlas had become a creditor long before confirmation of the plan. However he stated that he was not authorized to limit the company's compensation to $125,000. According to Mr. Rickaby's statement last week, the maximum compensation to Atlas Corporation could be $175,000.

Wilford J. Merrill, assistant to the president of RKO, and Robert B. Horton, co-manager of the underwriting syndicate of Goldman, Sacks & Co., testified in support of the plan, holding that the new fund was necessary and just.

Judge Bondy directed Mr. Rickaby to notify him as to any decision made by the United States Supreme Court which affects the RKO reorganization plan. Two petitions are now pending before the Supreme Court asking review of the reorganization set-up. According to one clause in the agreement, Atlas has the right to withdraw its underwriting proposal if the Supreme Court grants a review to any petition attacking confirmation of the reorganization. Several time clauses in the Atlas agreement must be modified because Judge Bondy adjourned the hearing to December 29th. The agreement had set December 23rd as the last date on which the proposal must be approved or Atlas could withdraw from the underwriting.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor

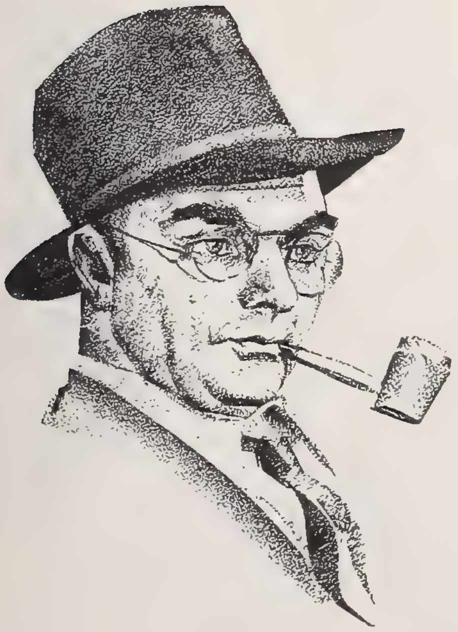
GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

Dear Round Tabler:

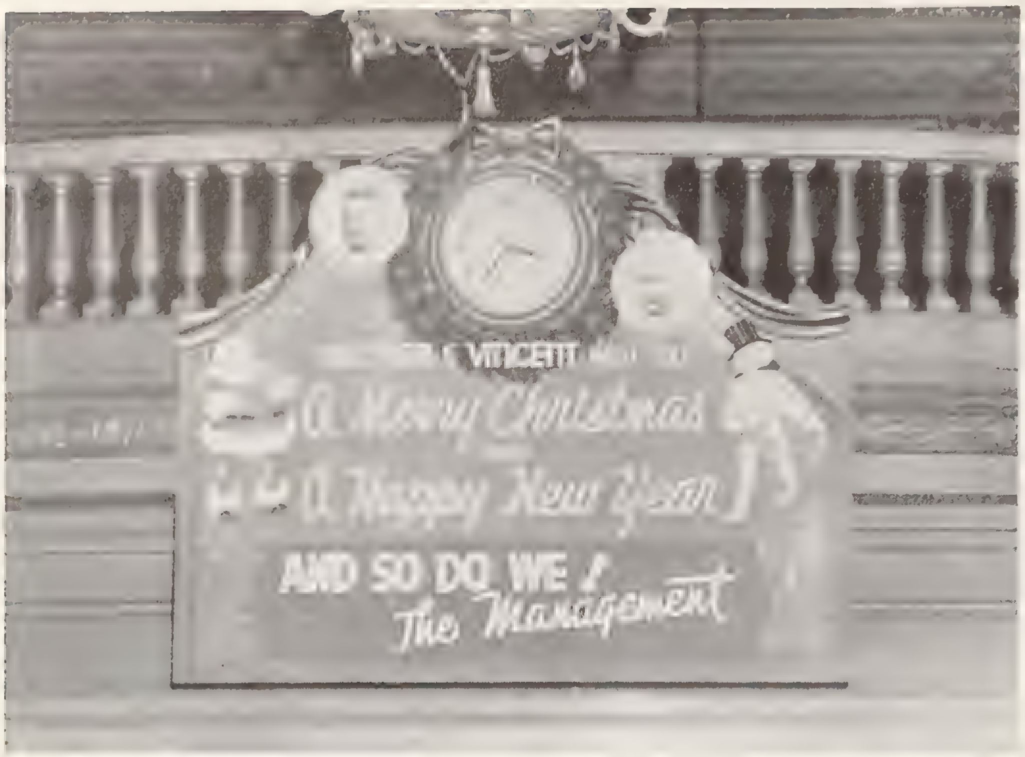
They say that seven is a lucky number. This is the seventh Christmas I've been pleasured to extend seasonal greetings to you and yours. It's good to know that both of us are still around and if Lady Luck does no more for us in 1940, let's hope the old girl won't do any less.

Well, here's how!

A-Mike Vogel



Round Table In Pictures



Conceived by Manager Charles Bierbauer and assistant, Nick Todorov, at the W. & V. Colonial, Allentown, Pa., was a special clock display extending seasonal greetings. Hung in the inner foyer, the display was featured by photos of Messrs. Wilmer and Vincent, circuit heads. Holiday theme was carried out with figures of Santa, Master 1940, and holly decorations.

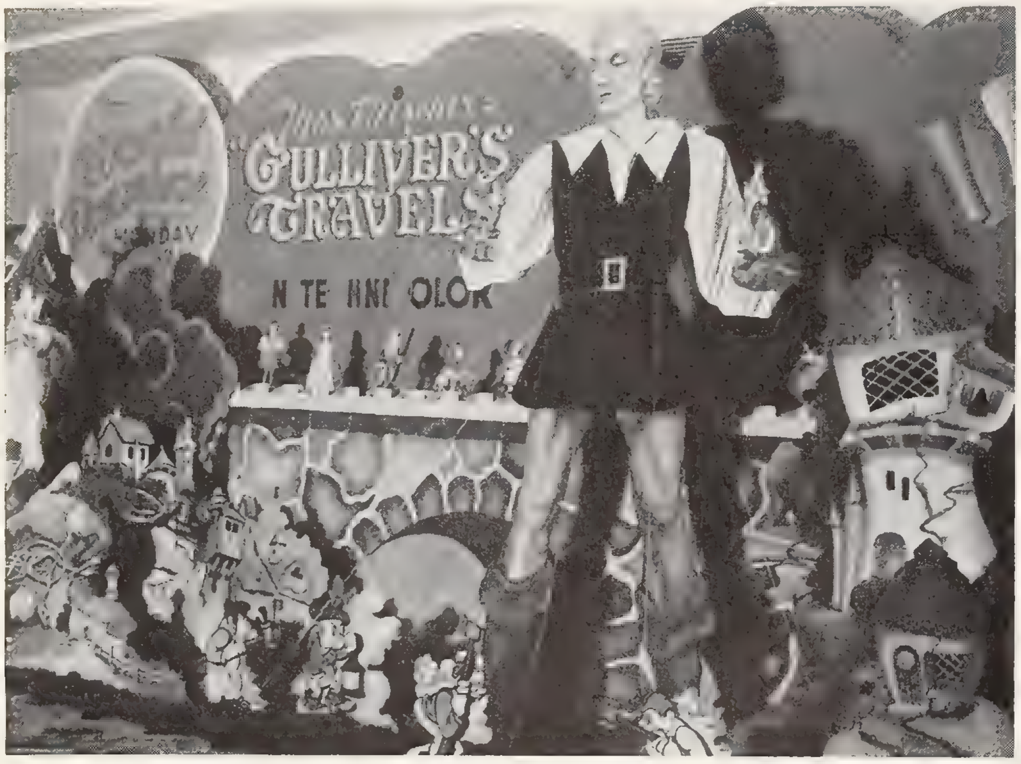
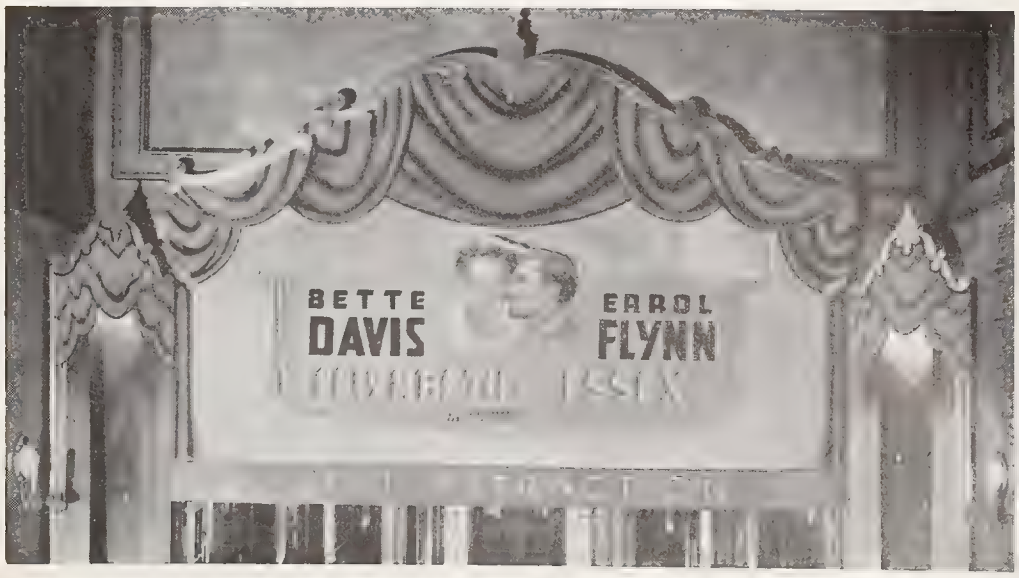
Pete Smith's
LET'S TALK
TURKEY

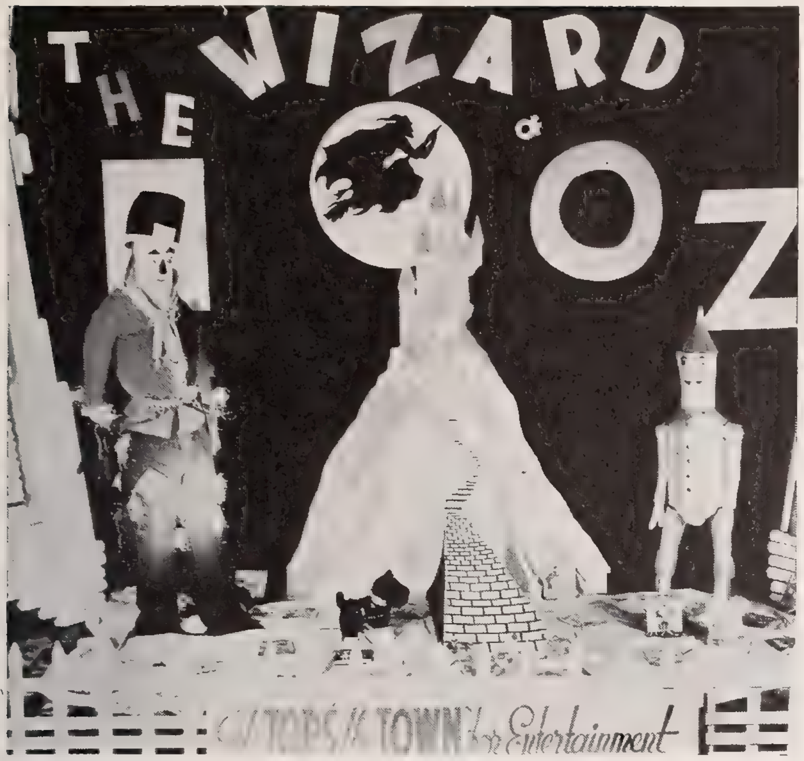
Anything can happen in Los Angeles, and Tom Soriero takes a bow for introducing the first trained tom turkey as ballyhoo for Pete Smith's "Let's Talk Turkey" at the United Artists. The gobbler was rehearsed to parade in front of the house and, via radio, Soriero invited candid camera fans to "shoot" the bird. Turk was given daily beauty treatments.



For the world premiere of "Gulliver's Travels" at the Sheridan, Miami Beach, Manager George C. Hoover used an elaborate animated setpiece for lobby decoration. Tiny characters at the base, duplicating those in the picture, were shown driving stakes to tie-ropes attached to Gulliver. Display was designed and created by art head, Jack Murray.



Massive frame atop foyer doors at the Uptown, Toronto, recently installed by Manager Fred Trebilcock, has a color scheme of rose and gold and rises 25 feet above floor level. All the lighting is concealed, and the center panel, a combination of poster and art work, is suspended on yellow silk. Art work on each change of program is in keeping.



THE WIZARD of OZ
TOPS IN TOWN for Entertainment

One of the last displays used by Dave Martin at the Paramount, Hollywood, before moving over to the United Artists, Inglewood, Cal., was on "Wizard of Oz", entire cost being 75 cents for old clothes for scarecrow. Display was devised by James Garrity, assistant, and executed by Carl Rotman and Merle Vernon, ushers.

Aimed purely to extend holiday greetings to patrons as a goodwill expression is Dave Dallas' attractive setpiece installed in the lobby of the Kansan Theatre in Parsons, Kansas. Above the three panels carrying the artistic "hand-shake" is the banner salutation, topped with a small evergreen, suitably decorated, in a base of simulated snow. Holly wreaths on either side were added.

For the date on "Hollywood Cavalcade" at the Colonial, Lancaster, Pa., a cameraman street stunt was arranged by Manager Fred Forry, right, and assistant, Jim Himelsbach, left. Equipment was planted on bannered trailer and driven about as camera turned.

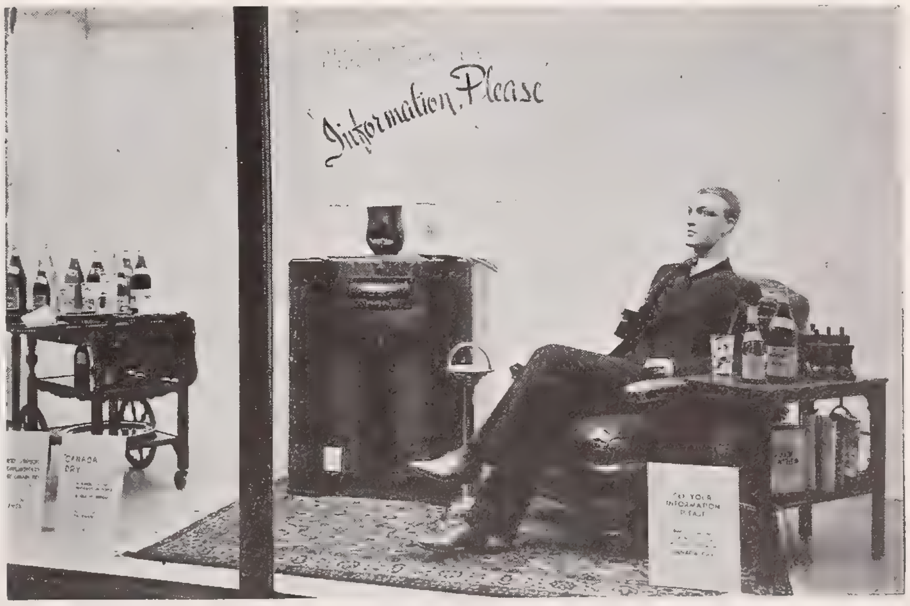
"Air-raid shelter" was the term used by Sid Scott to describe his sandbag front on "Lion Has Wings" at the Capitol, Sudbury, Canada, campaign detailed on another page. Tiein copy on ticket window read: "No, folks, we're not expecting an air-raid. We're just getting ready to accommodate the thousands of Sudbury theatregoers," etc., etc.



Information, Please

The reported popularity in Canada of RKO's "Information, Please" shorts has encouraged elaborate tieins on local dates, as here illustrated, in leading department store window for date at the Imperial, Toronto.

Special "Elizabeth" Benefit Does the Trick for Nelson

At the time of his booking for "Elizabeth and Essex", Glenn Nelson, Harris, Findlay, Ohio, ascertained there were two community fund-raising drives in session. Fearing that unless he acted immediately to insure good grosses for the date, the picture might suffer, Nelson looked about for a tiein in keeping with the character of the attraction and found it in a woman's club, seeking funds for their college scholarship fund.

A fitting premiere was arranged with reserved seating, and the club women took over the selling job, contacting friends by phone, from door to door, at desks in banks and over the counter at stores. Through these activities, the newspaper publicity was more than the usual and this helped to build up the date for the general public.

Glenn reports almost 1000 tickets sold by the women for the premiere which further aided the rest of the showing in topping previous grosses on Bette Davis pictures.

SEASON'S GREETINGS

Turner Ties "Set 'Em Up" To Bowling Alley Tourney

Contacting his local bowling alley, Tom Turner at the Grand Theatre, in Grand Haven, Mich., for Pete Smith's "Set 'Em Up" staged a tournament with guest tickets going to the 10 highest single scores totaled for 10 days ahead of opening. Alley furnished pins and balls for display in their window and theatre lobby, Turner supplying the one-sheets and window cards.

Alley paid for cost of ad in paper which was used in exchange for the guest tickets and Tom reports that entire cost of the stunt was for three one-sheets.

Russ McKibbon Reports December Activities

With a number of profitable tieins already executed during the first weeks of the month, Russ McKibbon, at the F P C Royal, in Guelph, Ontario, has completed arrangements to take care of the rest of the pre-Christmas period. Early in the month, Russ sold the theatre for one day to the Rotary for their crippled children's fund; followed that with a Boy Scout free toy matinee.

To raise money for holiday street lighting and to supply presents to local children, the Board of Trade rented the house for a special midnight show. A two-day showing of the royal tour pictures, the British King and Queen in Canada, was put on as a benefit for the Red Cross. In addition, McKibbon is vigorously pressing the sale of the circuit's gift book tickets and expects to top his last year's totals.

SEASON'S GREETINGS

Kraska Stresses School Tieins For "Mill on the Floss" Date

Comprehensive in every way was the campaign executed by George Kraska for the art-theatre showing of "Mill On the Floss" at the Fine Arts, Boston, special attention being given to prominent educators and schools. For this purpose, Kraska held a special invitation showing in advance and followed through by advising all schools and colleges of a special afternoon rate for groups of 25 or more. Book marks were distributed at the main library and branches.

The publicity covered all dailies with much made of Geraldine Fitzgerald. Production settings and scene photos were also featured. Newspaper advertising and lobby hand-drawn posters were in keeping with the picture's background.

No Local Station, So Cox Uses Sound Truck for Program

Although Dexter, Maine, does not boast of a local station, Bob Cox has devised a sidewalk interview idea broadcast via his sound truck to bring direct attention in the trade area to programs at the Park Theatre and to the leading merchants in his community.

Starting in July and used on Saturdays, when the various towns are crowded with shoppers, Cox made a circuit of three or four spots within a 25 mile area putting on the program in each town and returning to Dexter to repeat locally before the last show began at his house.

Arriving in the first situation about six o'clock, the truck would be driven around town as the program was announced to start in front of some central store where Cox had made advance arrangements. After the ballyhoo, the mike was set on the sidewalk and program put on as is usual in radio sidewalk broadcasts.

Bob used cards containing questions on coming or past shows, stars, pertinent questions of the day, etc. Each card had a numerical value and person in the crowd picking the card and answering question correctly was entitled to that amount in trade from a Dexter merchant. Those answering wrong received theatre passes. To square the merchant whose store was used, plugs for his merchandise were inserted.

Crowds Build Rapidly

Programs in each town ran about 20 minutes, which allowed coverage in all spots selected. For the first few weeks, the stunt pulled average crowds but from then on Cox reports waiting audiences as large as 2500, built up on the plugging given the program the week before.

Two Dexter merchants were tied in each week, each contributing five dollars in trade to be split up in the towns covered. There was no extra cost to the theatre outside of the Round Tabler's hard work and a bit of strain on the vocal chords, since he conducted the program. Positive returns were noted as most of the trade cards were redeemed and the passes used. Cox reports many new faces at the theatre. No newspaper or outside advertising was used, the crowd being drawn entirely by word-of-mouth.

SEASON'S GREETINGS

Novak Aids Government In Emergency Problem

With a national emergency problem in the Province of B. C. due to the fruit growers being unable to sell their apple crop to Europe this fall, Bill Novak at the Capitol in Regina, Saskatchewan joined in the campaign to dispose of the fruit by proposing an apple packing demonstration on his stage. Cabinet ministers introduced the drive and enlisted the public's support to help the farmers, etc.

In addition to gaining much good will from the both the apple distributors and government officials, Novak had donated about 5000 apples for distribution to patrons during the two day drive as a courtesy of the theatre and apple growers.

Canadians Obtain Wide Coverage On "Lion Has Wings"

The fancy job being done by Canadian members on Alex Korda's "Lion Has Wings" is indicated by the comprehensive promotions recently reported by Sid Scott, at the Capitol, Sudbury, Ontario, and A. Kent Craig, at the Capitol, St. Catherines, Ontario.

Scott startled the locals with an "air-raid shelter" front, piling up 125 sandbags around the lobby. The illusion was furthered with taping of windows against "bomb concussion" with tiein copy, as illustrated in photo section. National programs carried by CBS were emphasized on local station CKSO, after each broadcast local announcer breaking in with spot plugs for Sid's date, which was also tied in with syndicate stories on the picture run in the Sudbury papers. Ascertaining the issues in which the wire stories would appear, the Round Tabler planted theatre ads below each reader.

Heads of patriotic organizations and service clubs were interviewed by Scott and his assistant, Louis Gauthier, and requested to make announcements at meetings and word-of-mouth. Principals in all schools in the drawing area were solicited for cooperation on students' matinees run at four each day. Special picture post cards showing the theatre decorations were forwarded to the mailing list and on opening night, Sid promoted a cadet corps, in uniform, to parade to the theatre headed by the cadet band.

Radio Tops Craig Promotion

Previous to his booking of "Lion Has Wings," Kent Craig had difficulty in arranging any comprehensive tieins with his local station. However, the cooperation given in conjunction with the national broadcasts and special program transmitted from the lobby on opening night has paved the way for future activity, Craig reports. The initial theatre broadcast was followed by another the next day when a book of the theatre's "thriftickets" was offered for the best letter on the program.

High point of the newspaper campaign was a "first-time" motion picture editorial in the local daily, written by the editor after seeing the picture. Parade tieins were made with a Canadian artillery battery stationed in town, and Canadian Legion, these outfits marching to the theatre with bugle and drum corps and kiltie pipe band. At the theatre was displayed an airplane motor borrowed from local flying club and the front decorated with special 30 by 40's and flags.

SEASON'S GREETINGS

Ties 'Life' to "Drums"

When he discovered that a recent issue of Life magazine carried a cover shot of Claudette Colbert and a layout of scene stills from "Drums Along the Mohawk", Manager J. K. O'Donnell went into action to tie the publicity to his date. Program covers and playdates were affixed to copies of the issue and placed in all beauty and barber shops.

Circuit New Year's Eve Shows to Follow Regular Programs

Gala celebrations for the last night of the year will not be stressed among circuits in the metropolitan area, inquiry reveals. In most instances, the regular program will be given with extra midnight showings. The strongest attractions available are being booked to open on the 29th or 30th, and depended upon to bring in additional holiday trade.

At some 20 of the Warner New Jersey zone houses, for the midnight show, there will be an added attraction of old-time movies entitled "Nickelodeon Days", music to be supplied by piano players in character, etc. Where increased prices are in effect, the change will be made at 6:00 o'clock.

With the exception of two reserved performances in houses with stage show policies, RKO will feature regular programs at midnight shows as well. In spots there will be slight increases in prices. Loew's will go along as usual, some houses remaining open later than others, depending upon local situations. Holiday prices will prevail. Various Skouras houses have booked stage bands and similar added features at advanced prices.

Scrambled Title Contest Used by Shannon on "Oz"

Before leaving Warner's Belmont, Pittsburgh, for the Boulevard, Manager Chuck Shannon in advance of "Wizard of Oz" planted a special one sheet board in the lobby headed "Can you solve this word scramble?" Title letters were mixed and only clue was that the picture would appear there soon, no tickets were offered, stunt just used as a teaser.

At the time the World Series was being played, Chuck made up a giant oblong board on which was outlined a score board which was marked inning by inning. Suspended directly above the boxoffice, catch wording was used and the theatreman booked "Inside Baseball" as a tieup with the series. Theatreman reports the display as attracting considerable attention.

SEASON'S GREETINGS

Rankin's "Maisie" Campaign

As his advance teaser on "Maisie" at the Plaza in Tilbury, Ontario, Canada, Harland Rankin had an attractive girl in lobby of the theatre distributing candy kisses. Letters signed by "Maisie" were mailed to local businessmen, cashier called telephone subscribers making a date to see the picture, and for a gag, police warnings were distributed to the women advising them to lock their husbands up since "Maisie" was coming to town.

COIN NOVELTY PLUGS "ALLEGHENY UPRISING"

Coin cards with slots containing two nickels and a penny were distributed by Jack Granara for "Allegheny Uprising" at the RKO Keith Memorial, Boston, tiein copy reading: "10 to 1 you will acclaim," etc., etc. "It's the kind of a picture that inspired new coinage." Card was used for display in hotels, restaurants, stores.

(NOTE: Card received at Round Table was missing a nickel.)

Local Newspaper Kid Club Tied to "Time" by Brien

In a second-run situation, showing after the picture had been played in the neighborhood, Lige Brien for "On Borrowed Time" at the Prince, in Ambridge, Penna., contacted the Seck Hawkins Clubs, sponsored by the Pittsburgh Press, and arranged for the members to put on a stage show for his kiddie club. Hundreds of Hawkins club members paraded through the city's main streets carrying signs heralding the picture's opening. In addition, cooperating paper devoted much space to the special show, in all of which the picture was prominently mentioned. Photos taken of the parade were also run.

Week ahead, Brien held a "Blue ribbon week," tying the feature in to merchandise articles on display in his lobby. For this stunt, Lige sold space to the stores for the newspaper in exchange for which the theatre received 30 per cent of the space gratis, landing two full pages on two different days.

SEASON'S GREETINGS

Empire Night Held on "Essex"

On the third night of the showing of "The Private Lives of Elizabeth and Essex" at the Fox Theatre in San Francisco, a British Empire Night was staged, house being filled with American and foreign born residents of British descent. Many British and Scotch organizations participated in the program which featured P. D. Butler, British consul-general, and his staff as honored guests. Newspapers aided generally with liberal newspaper stories.

SEASON'S GREETINGS

Develop New Screen Game

Based on mental skill and agility, according to Rudy Kuehn, district manager, who reports it, is the "Keen-O-Kwizz" game developed by some of the Hudson County New Jersey Warner managers and now being sold nationally. Action takes place on the screen, ten questions asked with patrons provided with special cards for answers, cash prizes to those answering all correctly. Used in various of the division's theatres, Kuehn finds it offers many possibilities for extra business.

Exploitation Briefs Here & There

To build the school angle on "Underpup" at the Rialto, in Baltimore, Round Tabler W. Brizindine concentrated on the fact that Kenneth Brown, lad appearing in the picture was a localite and urged all children to see him in the picture. Contacting lending libraries, imprinted bookmarks were made available, special matinee show was held and lobby set piece constructed, consisting of blowups of Gloria Jean and Kenneth Brown.

Giant postcard addressed to Richard Greene at the Studios congratulating him on his performance in "Here I am a Stranger" was planted in the lobby of Schine's Kent Theatre, by Ed Kidwell. Patrons were invited to sign their names to the card, newspapers cooperating by taking photos of local celebrities affixing their signatures.

Calling attention to the press of the local angle on his date for "Passing Parade," Frank Shaffer at the Dixie, in Staunton, Va., received front-page breaks calling attention of readers to the fact that Dr. Ephriam McDowell, who is credited with performing the first major operation in Danville, Ky., in 1809, was a native of Virginia and had practiced medicine in Staunton.

Borrowed from the county sheriff was a 60-gallon whiskey still which was planted in front of the Ritz Theatre, in Brantley, Ala., as part of Ben Tisdale's campaign on "The Roaring Twenties." Surrounded by keys, guns, axes, bottles, jugs, etc., sign hanging overall carried title, cast and playdates. Interior of lobby was dressed as a speakeasy with pictures of the Tunney-Dempsey fight, Spirit of St. Louis, etc.

With a doorman who is artistically inclined, Ken Veach at the State Theatre in Uhrichsville, Ohio, had the lad work in a downtown window drawing posters six days in advance of "Union Pacific." Working about five hours a day, the artist attracted considerable attention, background of window featuring stock stills and one sheets.

Measuring six by eighteen inches were the snipes placed on risers of curbs, stairs in public libraries, etc., as part of Pat McGee's date on "Cat and the Canary" at the Schine Paramount, in Syracuse. Copy read "Watch your step! You may be frightened by 'The Cat and the Canary.'" Cards in store windows in advance carried still of cat in makeup, with copy awarding passes to those who guessed identity of the feline. Copy listed names of six male actors from whom to chose.

Entire front of the Cover Theatre, Fort Morgan, Colorado, was covered by J. H. Roberts for his "Oz" date with beaverboard coated in with watercolors. Lettering was made up of stills cut out to form the title and drawings on each side were blowups from press book depicting different characters in the picture.

Model Railroad Attracts 150,000 on "Union Pacific"

Displayed for three weeks ahead in the lobby of the Capitol, Cardiff, England, for "Union Pacific", a model railroad created under the supervision of Manager J. Fairbairn was reported to have attracted 150,000 visitors. The exhibit was opened by the Lord Mayor with the Lady Mayoress, who pressed the master-switch to start the operation, the event noted prominently in the local press.

Built specially for the purpose, and taking four months to complete, the model measured 15 feet by seven feet, everything being built on the premises. Two hundred fifty feet of track were used and the control panel was fitted with 150 switches and push-buttons. All signals were automatically controlled. Half-hour demonstrations were given hourly. Included were terminals, bus stations, and countryside.

Outside tieins were made with tea manufacturers for one-sheets carrying photos and tiein copy, these planted with all local grocers. Western Union offices displayed the giant cablegram, copy addressed by C. B. DeMille to the president of the Union Pacific. Railroad offices and travel agencies also featured artistic displays, with some five railroads cooperating in the creation of the model railroad.

SEASON'S GREETINGS

Jitterbug Definitions Bring Cash Awards

With jitterbugs in jazz parlance being dubbed "hep cats," "rug cutters," etc., in advance of "Babes in Arms" at Loew's State, in Syracuse, Round Tabler Frank Murphy ran a contest where cash and guest tickets went to those submitting the funniest definitions for the term jitterbug. Paper ran stories in advance and followed through with some of the gag definitions at end of contest.

For "The Real Glory," cooperating paper ran a half-page three column classified ad contest, with tickets to those correctly answering list of questions pertaining to various ads. Spanish-American war veterans were invited as guests of Murphy, photos and story in cooperating paper.

SEASON'S GREETINGS

Turner's Toy Matinee

Every child under 14 who brought a toy to the Grand Theatre, Grand Haven, Mich. was admitted free by Manager Tom Turner. Toys were turned over to the American Legion for distribution at Christmas. Turner reports that since most of the 500 kids attending brought two or more toys, it required a couple of truck loads to remove them. Stunt was good for stories in local paper.

SEASON'S GREETINGS

Lamm's Special Show

Colored heralds calling attention to his special evening show put on in conjunction with the local merchants were distributed, acts including orchestra, master of ceremonies, etc., promoted for the occasion from leading night clubs.

THE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1939-40 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

Keeping the Faith

If through all his days a man in business tells the truth as he sees it, keeps his word as he gives it, works for his industry, for its own sake along with his, he gets what is known as a good reputation.

It is like that, too, with journals of business. Publications that matter have many of the attributes of personality.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD is happy in the consciousness of, and responsibility to, a good name.

1940
AN M-G-M YEAR

"Oh boy, M-G-M gets 1st place in Box-office Stars — and leads with 3 out of the first 4 in Quigley Publications' Annual Theatre Vote!"

DEAR MISTER EXHIBITOR:

This is 1940 writing to you. I've just arrived and while I find this world a bit screwy I was delighted to discover one outfit with chin up, full of smiling optimism and courage that's admirable. I refer, of course, to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. I have looked over the M-G-M pictures that the Big Year of 1939 gave you, such as "The Women", "Thunder Afloat", "Babes in Arms", "Ninotchka", "Judge Hardy and Son", "Balalaika" and others. They're great, but I assure you 1940 will do even better! This M-G-M outfit is your best bet. To start my new year, two pictures just previewed, are sensational: "THE SHOP AROUND THE CORNER", (another Lubitsch hit starring Margaret Sullavan, James Stewart); "EARL OF CHICAGO" (starring Robert Montgomery). Then there's "BROADWAY MELODY OF 1940" (starring Fred Astaire, Eleanor Powell); "STRANGE CARGO" (starring Clark Gable, Joan Crawford); "NORTHWEST PASSAGE" (in Technicolor, starring Spencer Tracy). That's just the start. I'll be seeing you.

"SWANEE RIVER comes close upon the heels of 'Gone With the Wind.' They're both in same cycle so to speak. And 'Swanee' is certainly jam-packed with the same beautiful sentiment and charm. Don Ameche's portrayal of Stephen Foster is as good as Paul Muni's Pasteur and Robert Donat's Mr. Chips."
—Jimmy Starr, L. A. Herald

"SWANEE RIVER another great Technicolor film from 20th Century-Fox. Tensely dramatic story that has captured the true American spirit and brought to the screen a vivid nostalgic piece of celluloid entertainment and beauty. 'Swanee River' like 'Alexander's Ragtime Band' will have entire nation singing old songs."

"SWANEE RIVER the best blending of story and song the sound screen has ever had, with the combination of story and song magnificently acted, produced and directed. Should ring the box office bell everywhere as swell entertainment."

CONFERENCE on "CLASSIC"

Reporting a conversation on some aspects of "Gone with the Wind"

YOUR publisher was standing at an arched window of his office-all-done-in-green admiringly watching a crew of painters laying a new coat of green on the roof of the Associated Press down and across the Radio City canyon. Your editor was attentively helping him look.

And speaking of color, inevitably there was argument about green, then the O'Hara's and the red earth of Tara.

In no time at all it was a dialogue, a debate, and a conference about today's "Topic A" in movieland, which is to say "Gone with the Wind"—costs, percentages, dramatic structure, audience endurances, our Mr. William R. Weaver's so very ecstatic review from Hollywood, what he said and did not say. It was a session that ran the full length of a slow-burning panetela, and used up half a syphon. Out of it came some observations, thus:

"David Selznick seems to have pushed out around the limits of the Production Code quite a distance—probably will be taken up as a precedent by some of the lads in Hollywood who will be wanting to go considerably farther—damage will be done and ground lost after all the tedious and costly efforts of the industry to keep itself in line with American mores. . . . "

"Yes, take the subject of harlots for example—there's nothing in the Production Code or its intent or interpretations which says you can't have harlotry on the screen, but it is emphatic that it is not to be made invasive of morals or that harlots are to be made admirable—this red-headed Belle Watling person, for instance, she's on the screen as a sweet lady bountiful, 'heart-of-gold' stuff, kind to her friends and not an enemy on earth, save for the scorn of respectable women who are put into a position of cruel snobbery by contrast with Melanie's too-good-to-be-true charity. We see Belle giving to the hospital, conspiring to save Rhett's more decent friends, always giving, even giving mellow words of womanly advice in the orange plush and crystal lamped boudoir of her bordello. Miles of film tell the hates and horrors of war, the villainies of the carpet baggers, but there's nothing even hinting that the Bountiful Belle takes the money she so sweetly gives out of the debasement of women for sale. Probably there was not time in the three hours and forty minutes for a 'Damaged Goods' chapter, but it was not necessary to do Belle entirely in gold leaf. . . . "

"Oh, the answer to that will be that they had to 'follow the book'. That's bologny, of course, because Hollywood never before found a book it couldn't change for either whim or purpose. There's the story, you'll remember, about Dave Selznick flying in from Hollywood to win an argument on appeal to the New York Hays office to let Rhett Butler say 'damn', on the ground that he couldn't be 'asked to rewrite a classic'."

"Since when has 'Gone with the Wind' been a 'classic'—if that had anything to do with the issue anyway? It's about as classic as 'The Duchess' or 'Bertha the Sewing Machine Girl'. They were great merchandise in their day, too. . . . "

"But about Rhett Butler's 'damn', I don't see that it amounts to even a damn anyway. The fact is, obviously enough, that interpretation of the code shouldn't have ever included such prohibitions as 'hell' and 'damn' anyway. They are not necessarily elegant, but also they are neither blasphemous, obscene nor profane in the meaning of the word profane. . . . "

"Well, anyway, Hollywood owes the timidity about 'damn' to itself in the person of the late Irving Thalberg. Only the other day it was recalled in a code confab that when the suggestion was made—it probably was by Will Hays, too—that there could well be reasonable exceptions, it was Thalberg who rose up to insist: 'No, if we take an inch we'll soon be taking a mile—and if cussing is out, it's got to be all out'."

"Maybe—the way things are heading—Thalberg may be proved all too right on that inch-and-a-mile warning—that's something that Production will have to be watching itself about, again—or wish it had."

"OK, but Belle and 'damn' are not so important in this phase of the matter as some of the high diving sex demonstrations. Take for example that sterling sequence where Butler, tight on brandy, leaps up the grand stairs like a mad corsair with Scarlett in his arms, and we cut to 'the next morning' with the luscious lady in bed now alone and chortling, simpering and gurgling her testimonial. . . . "

"Speaking of 'touches'—remember that one where it was found just classically necessary to show Melanie, the sainted Melanie, taking off her nightdress to mop up the blood in Scarlett's first shooting party. Melanie took it off in the book, too, but only she and Scarlett and the dead man were there, and Melanie didn't have to hide her mid-region around the corner—if we are to adhere to the classic facts, as set down by the classic pen of Miss Mitchell. In addition, no one gave a damn about Melanie's legs anyway."

"Doubtless there we have the birth of a new 'touch', reminiscent maybe of the Lubitsch touch, but being framed in the blood of manslaughter it has some von Stroheimish quality—probably we'd better file that one under Selznick, or maybe Fleming."

"You have a choice item there, but there's something to be

Back at Arnold

"FAR FROM IT; the shoe fits the other foot"—this, in effect, was the answer this week of counsel for the major company defendants in the Government's New York anti-trust action, to the assertion by Thurman Wesley Arnold, in charge of the Department of Justice anti-trust division, on December 20th, that the majors were attempting to "sabotage" the U. S. suit by delaying trial until a possible change of administration in 1940. The majors' attorneys say that it is the Government's lengthy interrogatories that are delaying the case.

They also countered Mr. Arnold's assertion that the Government was "bravely proceeding" with the case, despite reputed purposely spread rumors of settlement, by charging that various Governmental representatives, from time to time, had actually tried to interest the defendants in a settlement.

The assertions by the film attorneys, who were unnamed, were published Wednesday in MOTION PICTURE DAILY. All film attorneys were said to have scoffed at Mr. Arnold's statement that the defendants desired a delay, and a settlement. They pointed out that no defendant would consider a settlement, which would involve a consent decree, meaning an admission of wrong practices.

said, too, under the heading of 'accidental abortion' or the unwillingly pregnant wife who no sooner heard of the hint of an accident than she fell down stairs, with excellent results—a thing like that is liable to create a rush demand for duplex apartments. I don't know yet for a classic fact whether she fell or was pushed. In any event it would seem that the Code provisions, which include objection to demonstrations of the modus operandi in sundry affairs like burglary, would be dead against gynecological demonstrations, even on a plush staircase. Do I hear a whisper somewhere that 'it's all right because they're married'."

"It won't be long now before somebody will be asking how come under the Code all this, anyway, and the explanations and alibis will fly like duck feathers out of a broken pillow. It looks as though there's been about three years of wheedling, wriggling, whangling, the tossing about of weighty names, millions at stake, and a general overall plea for the sanctity of great classic art—and so what?"

"What, indeed! Just another episode of progress. It took the motion picture industry a good many years to arrive at the point where it accepted self-regulation, to meet problems it had made for itself. It's not to be supposed that beginning on that day and date there were to be no more problems, no more issues, no more experiments. The Code is an instrument, not a miracle. In the ultimate audit it possibly will be found that it has not been so much invaded by this picture as illuminated by it. In point of fact through the several years past there have been not a few pictures that have pushed against the walls of discreet self-regulation quite as sharply as this one does and the total service of the Code has not been impaired, by exceptions and even admitted failure of application."

"So far the critics seem to be having a hell of a time between their paeans and perplexities. They can't see the forest for the trees. The fans will be well served when they get around to the fact that this is no classic, but again, again I say, that grand old 'escapist' theme of boy meets girl—and how—and that it's a Clark Gable picture with a new leading lady, in which, incidentally, Mr. Selznick burns down Atlanta for a lighting effect."

"In spite of everything that could be done in four years with four million dollars in three colors and 220 minutes, boy still meets girl. The millions of the 'simple in heart' and dumb in the head are so much instinctively smarter than the critics and the cognoscenti that they will go into this tangled essay at the stupendous and come out with what they want like a cormorant diving for a sardine. That maybe will justify, or at least excuse, as narrative technique, a treatment that declares Belle a harlot and shows an angel, says that Butler is a cad and shows him a gallant cavalier, rates Ashley Wilkes a flower of Southern gentility and pictures a prime sap, and does its only real job of character development with Scarlett—that's far, far from art, but it's a brave stab at merchandise—like the book, of which only the gross is 'classic'. At the next meeting, I'd like to take up also certain questions of typography in picture titles, montage technique, optical impact, and incidentally gamma."

"Meanwhile it appears that Dave Selznick got a lot of what he was looking for."

"Yes, and so did Scarlett O'Hara."

"Wind" and Dollars

" 'GONE WITH THE WIND' has already broken all box office records in the history of the motion picture business," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's publicity department announced to the press Wednesday afternoon, citing grosses in the eight theatres in six cities in which the picture is having engagements to date, and in some of which the David Selznick picture has not rounded out its first full week.

Metro anticipates a gross of $2,500,000 from the first 8 first-runs in the six cities based on expected long-runs.

Says Metro:

In Atlanta, the Grand has been doing $24,000 a week, compared to the highest previous week's $14,000.

In Reading, Pa., at the Capitol, the first week, not yet completed, will be well over $18,000 or $5,000 more than any other seven-day gross.

In Harrisburg, Pa., Loew's theatre will approximate $15,500. The house record is $9,000.

In Cincinnati, the Capitol will do $25,000 on the week, against a previous house record of $9,000.

In New York, at the Astor, week's business is $20,000, advance sales totaling $80,000.

In New York, at the Capitol, the picture has played to over $77,000 on the first week, averaging more than 11,000 admissions a day.

In Boston, the week's gross will approximate $72,000 at the State and the Orpheum combined.

Two or three shows a day prevail.

"Gone with the Wind" will next open in Los Angeles, at the Carthay Circle, December 28th, and the United Artists, the next day, followed by some 40 openings in key cities only on January 25th, and in 40 to 50 additional places on February 2nd.—in each instance the 70 per cent rental prevailing, on an indefinite run to be not longer than a week, with exhibitors agreeing to start advertising ten days before their opening.

Goldwyn Suit Out

SAMUEL GOLDWYN'S suit against United Artists to void his distribution contract was dismissed Wednesday by Judge Francis P. Nields in federal court in Wilmington, Del.

The action had been argued last June 14th and was dismissed because of a defect in the naming of defendants, one of the grounds on which UA had asked for dismissal.

"Plaintiffs," said the court, "are seeking a declaration that the defendant has so conducted itself with respect to Alexander Korda and that Korda has so conducted itself with respect to defendant that plaintiffs are entitled to the relief sought in the suit."

"The declaration, if made," the court held, "would put Korda in the position of being called a contract breaker without his day in court. The declaratory judgment statute should not be stretched to cover this case, where it will precipitate further controversy, instead of making an end to the controversy."

Max Steuer, attorney for Mr. Goldwyn, was reported Wednesday by his office in New York to be ill at his home, 730 Park Ave., and was unavailable for comment on the dismissal.

His associates, however, intimated that either an appeal might be taken or a new complaint might be filed joining proper parties to the action.

Only last week Mr. Steuer issued to the press an announcement of notification to United Artists that his client Goldwyn considered his distribution contract with UA terminated.

In the opinion granting the motion Judge Nields declared, "This is a declaratory judgment suit under a relatively new act of Congress. The courts have held that exerciser of jurisdiction under this statute is discretionary and that the exercise of discretion is to be determined by the facts of the case. If, to afford the release prayed in a declaratory judgment suit, the court must go beyond the contracts which are the subject of the suit, and declares breaches of contracts where the parties to such contracts are not before the court, clearly the court should not assume jurisdiction."

Comes Steinbeck

REVIEWING "MICE and Men" in this issue of MOTION PICTURE HERALD, William R. Weaver records the coming to the screen of the first floration of that violent school of literature so conspicuously represented by John Steinbeck. (See page 48.)

Mr. Weaver indicates that it is all there in all its drab bitterness, all except the four letter words.

In another communication the same Mr. Weaver, ever regarding the Hollywood production scene with evaluating eyes, observes also: "If Hollywood can make Steinbeck features on what we could call a 'Woolworth budget' several influences and effects might be forecast, including some averaging-out."

Meanwhile Steinbeck drama for the entertainment screen is an experiment.

Broadcast

IN A NATIONWIDE hookup of Columbia Broadcasting System, Will H. Hays and Martin Quigley were scheduled to appear in a program entitled "1939 in Motion Pictures," Thursday, December 28th, at 7:15 P. M. Mr. Hays, as the industry's spokesman, was to comment on developments of the year which are of especial interest to the general public. Mr. Quigley was to open the program with a discussion of MOTION PICTURE HERALD'S survey which has named the screen personalities who are included in the list of the ten biggest money-making stars of 1939.

Dies to Go On?

CHARGING that Communists have penetrated Hollywood, Representative Martin Dies (Dem., Texas) will submit a resolution to Congress, when it convenes next week, asking for Congressional authority and finances to continue his investigation into un-American and subversive activities in the United States. The Dies investigation expires January 3rd, at the end of its second year.

Chairman Dies' resolution in support of his contention that the investigation should continue will appear in the form of a 20-page report charging that some 20 Hollywood actors and writers are Communists.

Details of reputed Red activities in the Hollywood film colony, said to have been uncovered during an eight-months' Dies investigation of un-American activities on the Pacific Coast, will be laid before the Dies committee in Washington next week, with possibilities that they may be made public in the report now being prepared.

Details of the report are being more or less guarded, but it has been indicated that it will show that at least a score of prominent Hollywood personalities have been Communists and that double that number have made contributions either directly to the Communist Party or to its various subsidiary organizations of "fellow travelers."

The report further is expected to show that the Reds devoted considerable time and effort to interest members of the film colony in the "cause" and to obtain funds there for propaganda, and used Hollywood interest as a selling point in other areas.

From Horner's Corner

CHARGING he had been libeled by the Chicago Daily News and Frank Knox, its publisher (in an editorial December 21st, by that paper, inquiring why he had not acted in the proceedings to extradite William Bioff, West Coast studio union leader, from California), Governor Henry Horner of Illinois on Wednesday sued for $250,000 damages, in Cook County circuit court.

Democratic Governor Horner's petition says Republican publisher Frank Knox and his newspaper "deliberately" misrepresented facts about the hearing on December 19th in the state capitol, Springfield, to "injure and destroy" the Governor and the Democratic party.

Westbrook Pegler, syndicated columnist, whose writings appear in the the Chicago Daily News, as in other papers, several weeks ago uncovered court and police records which showed that Bioff had not completed a jail sentence imposed upon him 17 years ago in Chicago.

HOWARD RUSHMORE, motion picture reviewer for "The Daily Worker," organ of the Communists and extreme left in New York, was fired this week, from a job on which he drew no pay, because he would not fit his piece on "Gone with the Wind" to "the party line" and it seems more especially to the notion of one Ben Davis, negro member of the editorial board.

A review by "Ben Davis, Jr." headed "An insidious Glorification of the Slave" ultimately appeared. He seemed to think the picture was "one of the most vicious assaults upon those treasured liberties and democratic rights which the American people won —etc., etc."

"The Daily Worker" began its denunciation of the picture several days before it could have been aware of its content and treatment.

Advance copies of the "New Masses" issue of January 2 sent to the newspapers Wednesday denounce "Gone with the Wind" as the "successor in reactionary art to 'The Birth of a Nation.'" The "New Masses" does not like it—if you care.

ADOLPH ZUKOR is traveling again. The Paramount chairman of the board is in Cuba in the picture above, on the first leg of a tour of the South American market, complementing the study he made in Europe some months ago. With him are Jack Rapaport, president of Paramount Pictures in Cuba, and Senorita Milagros Quiepo.

NATE BLUMBERG and William A. Scully, president and general sales manager of Universal discuss, below, the program for the special sales meeting attended by all the company's sales managers called to hear Mr. Blumber's report on the product coming up.

TESTIMONIAL TO AN INDEPENDENT

LEADERS in motion picture, civic, political and business circles in New York gathered last week to honor Harry Brandt, New York independent exhibitor on the occasion of his 25th anniversary as a theatre operator. More than 600 persons attended the dinner at the Hotel Astor. David Weinstock was general chairman; M. C. Weisman, treasurer; William Brandt in charge of the entertainment, and Howard Dietz was chairman of the publicity committee.

LABOR BOARD RULES CIRCUIT IS ONLY SINGLE BARGAINING AGENCY

Agents, Managers Union Given Mandate for Elections in Brooklyn Theatres; Decision Seen as Important Precedent

In directly affecting, possibly, many similar situations throughout the country, the New York State Labor Relations Board ruled this week that a theatre circuit, in a labor dispute, may be classified as a single bargaining agency, even if its theatres are owned by different corporations; and, hence, different stockholders. The decision, a precedent, affecting immediately the Endicott circuit, with 11 houses in Brooklyn, was expected to affect, shortly, about 50 cases involving independent houses in the New York area.

Elections Ordered

The Theatrical Agents, Managers and Treasurers Union had called a strike at the Endicott houses on August 18th, and picketing last week was still occurring. The union wanted the circuit to agree to a bargaining agency election. The board last week ruled that elections should be held "within 20 days."

The board also ruled that the managers and assistants and the ushers, doormen, cashiers, and matrons be classified as two groups, and vote separately.

Irving Renner and Louis Nelson control four corporations which own four of the houses; the other seven are owned in conjunction with the Interboro circuit.

The board pointed out that the circuit was operated as a unit, and should be considered a unit for bargaining purposes.

Federal Aid for Stage Sought

Meantime, in New York also, the Actors' Equity this week revealed it is seeking Federal support for the theatre, and for unemployment alleviation. Members, at the quarterly meeting, last Friday, urged that the organization consult with other units of the Associated Actors and Artistes of America (which includes the Screen Actors' Guild), on a campaign.

At the same meeting, no minimum wage scales were set; however, members went on record favoring a $50 weekly minimum for actors, instead of the present $40.

Kenneth Thomson, executive secretary of the Screen Actors' Guild, said his organization had voted to approve the "one big union" plan when and if formulated, and if it benefits "all actors."

The plan is under consideration now. An accountant has been surveying various branches of the Four A's, and is expected to make recommendations for a plan, in about two months.

Anent the question of television wage scales, a subject of debate among the Equity, the American Federation of Radio Artists, and the SAG, for some time, Paul Dullzell, Equity executive secretary, said organization of and consequent setting up of wage scales for, television, would have to await reorganization of the Four A's.

He said Equity still claimed jurisdiction over the new field; but also said it welcomed the cooperation of other Four A's units.

More information about the recently concluded two year pact between the major distributors and the Film Exchange Employees' Union was revealed this week. Film inspectresses are to receive a minimum of $18.50 weekly. Where three or more are working, a head inspectress will be named. When two or more shippers are working, a head shipper must be named. Assistant shippers are to receive a minimum of $21 per week. Night workers receive wage increases, it was reported.

PETRILLO ASSAILS "CIO PROPAGANDA"

Objecting to what he termed "propaganda" for the C.I.O., James C. Petrillo, head of the Chicago Federation of Musicians, forced managers of the Erlanger Theatre and Shubert's Grand Opera House, in that city, to eliminate scenes of two shows which mention John L. Lewis' organization. The shows were "George White's Scandals," which opened at the Erlanger on Christmas Day and "Hellzapoppin," which will open at the latter house, shortly. Objections to mention of the C.I.O. in the latter were based on the New York show, and management of the Shubert house agreed that when the show opens in Chicago, it will not offend Mr. Petrillo, who says he does not like Mr. Lewis' outfit.

The contract can be reviewed by either side, it was said, after one year of operation, on November 30th, 1940.

Guild To Negotiate

On the coast, the producers and the Screen Actors' Guild this week were expected to reopen negotiations for reclassification of extras, and a 15 per cent wage increase.

In St. Louis last week, the Fanchon and Marco Service Corporation filed a libel suit for $200,000 against eight officers and 44 members of the projectionists' Local 143, charging they had damaged the company's business by false statements in distributed handbills. The union has been striking against the company's nine neighborhood houses since September 30th.

In New York, the Laboratory Technicians' Union, Local 702, is expected to start negotiation for film cutters and librarians in the New York area, within a month. Union spokesmen claim 60 cutters have joined, and that these are a majority.

In Oshkosh, the city's Common Council has amended the ordinance licensing electricians, to exempt film projectionists.

American Federation of Musicians' Local 70, in Omaha, has reelected Peter Christman as president, and elected Ernest Nordin as vice-president; Harold Pace, secretary, and Mike Chaluopka, treasurer.

In Philadelphia, the Warner Earle Theatre, closed as a vaudeville house, will be kept as a first run film house, David Weshner, Warner central zone manager, said last week.

In Richmond, Virginia, Frank P. Cowardin was reelected president of the city's Musicians' Association, Local 123, at the annual business meeting last week. Other officers elected were Marshall Rotella, vice-president; Carl N. Wallnau, secretary, and Burt Asburg, treasurer.

In the same city, the projectionists' local, 370, reelected all its officers. These are Harry Jarvis, president; John Doherty, vice-president; A. P. Stewart, recording secretary; George Crozier, treasurer; John P. Leary, business agent.

In Wilkes-Barre, the projectionists' local, 325, elected Raymond Conrad president; Leonard Gabel, vice-president; John Kenworthy, business agent; Joseph D. Malloy, treasurer.

The International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees having objected to Michigan theatre employees carrying film, the local IATSE ruling that they be barred from doing so goes into effect on January 15th, according to IA vice-president Roger Kennedy.

In Albany, the Alliance's favored measure, calling for two men in a projection booth, is expected to be pushed when the legislature convenes on January 3rd.

James Roosevelt Forms a 'Million Dollar' Company

James Roosevelt, son of the President and former vice-president of Samuel Goldwyn, Inc., J. F. T. O'Connor, former Federal Comptroller of the Currency, and F. M. Hole have filed articles of incorporation in California for Globe Productions, Inc.

Capitalization $1,000,000

The corporation was organized, according to the application, to "own, lease or otherwise acquire theatres and broadcasting stations" and to "manufacture, buy and hire all kinds of still and motion pictures." The papers of incorporation stated that the company was authorized to issue two classes of stock with an aggregate par value of $1,000,000.

Rumors that Mr. Roosevelt planned an independent producing company met with denials or no comment for several weeks. Mr. Roosevelt will keep his position as president of the Samuel Goldwyn Studio Corporation, to which post he was elected recently, but he has resigned as vice-president of the production company.

Samuel Goldwyn announced that he had agreed to the production of a number of pictures at his studio by the new independent.

Mr. Roosevelt, in Hollywood, Tuesday, said he would disclose definite plans for Globe Productions next week. He denied reports linking his productions with distributing organizations, UA, RKO and others. He declared that he is being financed by Chicago and New York money, although he refused to reveal identities. He is negotiating for "The Bat" and may make two features annually.

Wording in the papers of incorporation authorizing Globe Productions to "own, lease or otherwise acquire" broadcasting stations as well as theatres, caused speculation that perhaps James Roosevelt might go into radio where his brother Elliott has been engaged for some years and has organized Transcontinental Broadcasting System. The new network goes on the air at 10 A. M. on January 1st.

"Virginia City" Petition

A ten-page telegram requesting that "Virginia City" have its premiere in Virginia City, Nevada, has been received by Warner Brothers. Nineteen hundred residents in the territory signed the petition. "Virginia City," starring Errol Flynn and Miriam Hopkins, is now in production.

175 MORE CIRCUIT CONTRACTS ARE CLOSED FOR 1939-1940 PRODUCT

Volume of New Season Sales Moves Ahead After Abnormal Start as Independent Circuit Operators Join Buyers

Circuit buying of 1939-40 product of the ten large distributors is proceeding to normal conclusion, notwithstanding earlier threats of unfavorable influences growing out of trade practice disputes, unsuccessful code draftings, trust suit attacks, labor troubles, the war and whatnot, also exhibitor complaints against some product policies and prices, some real, some imaginary.

Marked by one of the slowest starts for new season's selling in many a year, attributable to one or another of the aforementioned factors, circuit buyers in recent weeks have negotiated enough contracts, for both independent and affiliated properties, to send the distributors' circuit volume sales well ahead on many fronts for this period.

Particularly noticeable is the rapid manner in which independent circuits have been cleaning up their product buying, more of these circuits having closed for 1940 in the past few weeks than during the all of the preceding several months of pre-seasonal selling.

Some 175 individual circuit sales have been consummated in recent weeks by the ten distributors, to supply product for another year to thousands of theatres from coast to coast, from Canada to the border. Several distributors have completed 1939-40 circuit selling.

The new progress in circuit buying can best be realized by comparing the total of 175 comparatively recent circuit block purchases, as reported herein, with the 57 individual circuit buys reported up to mid-October, and listed in MOTION PICTURE HERALD on October 14th, page 14.

Warner, RKO, Monogram Active

Warner Brothers, RKO Radio and Monogram Pictures were the most active circuit sellers in recent weeks, adding considerably, as did most all of the other companies, to product deals previously reported in MOTION PICTURE HERALD, on July 29, at the first flush of exhibitor buying, and, again on October 14th, when selling was well under way.

Counted among recent RKO Radio circuit buyers, is the Publix-Nace Circuit of 26 in Arizona; Anderson Theatres, 10 in Illinois; Demordaunt and Drenner, six in Idaho, and Netco Theatres, 14 in Upstate New York.

Saxe Amusement Company, with 16 houses in Wisconsin, was another recent buyer of RKO product, likewise Northio Theatres, having 16 in Ohio, Kentucky, West Virginia; Cooperative Theatres, 80 in Michigan, principally around Detroit; Skouras Metropolitan Theatres, 45 in and around Metropolitan New York; Comerford Theatres, with 105 in Pennsylvania and New York, and the 27 Upstate New York houses of Si Fabian.

United Detroit Theatres, 17 in Michigan, also bought RKO in recent weeks. So did M. A. Shea Theatres, 42 in Massachusetts, Ohio, New York, Pennsylvania and elsewhere; Durkee Circuit, 17 in Baltimore and Annapolis; Wometco Theatres, 19 around Miami and West Palm Beach; Haynes Circuit of Mississippi, Arkansas, Tennessee, Kentucky; and, Great States Theatres, of Illinois.

BROADCASTERS CALL WAR TOP NEWS STORY

Annual reviews of news events of the year, featured this week by the National Broadcasting System, Columbia and Mutual, all listed the war and its incidents as far and away the most dramatic material used on regular news or feature programs during 1939. Other highlights mentioned by all three networks included the death of Pope Pius XI and the election of the present Pope; the visit of King George and Queen Elizabeth to America, and the sinking of the Squalus and the two pre-war British and French submarine disasters. Various aspects of the war coverage made up the balance of the lists.

One of the biggest buys was made by Balaban and Katz for its scores of houses in Illinois and thereabouts, another by the 83 Wilby-Kincey Theatres of Virginia, Alabama, the Carolinas and Tennessee, both buying features and shorts. Thirty-two towns are involved in the latter deal.

RKO Deals Listed

Newbold Theatres of Kentucky also bought RKO Radio's 1939-40 product, and the Welworth Circuit, with 13 in Minnesota, Wisconsin and the Dakotas; R. E. Griffith, for his Griffith Amusement group of 204 in Oklahoma, Kansas, Arizona, Nebraska, Arkansas; Charles Morse Circuit, 17 in New England; Manos Theatres, six in Ohio; 26 in Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin; Texas Consolidated Theatres, and the related Interstate Circuit of the Karl Hoblitzelle-Robert O'Donnell interests in Texas and New Mexico.

RKO buys continued with the Theatrical Managers' Circuit of 20 in Indiana; Maller's Circuit, 12 in Indiana and Ohio; Strand Amusement Company, six in Connecticut; Paramount Enterprises, of Miami; McCarthy Circuit, 23 in Minnesota and North Dakota; Gregory Circuit, 26 in Indiana, Illinois and Wisconsin; Western Massachusetts Theatres, 17 in Massachusetts and Vermont; Dominion Theatres, 13 in Virginia.

Walter Reade bought RKO Radio for his 40 houses in New Jersey and New York, and the Cocalis Circuit bought for its 32 in New York. Loew's Metropolitan Theatres bought for 42 in the Greater New York area, Cabart and Southside Theatres, for 15 in California; Confederation Amusements, Ltd., seven in Montreal; United Amusements, 26 in Quebec.

Butterfield Circuit, 105 in Michigan; Lucas and Jenkins, 44 in Georgia; Loew's 16 in Connecticut; Notopoulos Circuit, five in Pennsylvania; Dolle Theatres, Louisville, and the Real-Neth group, of six, in Columbus, Ohio.

Additional RKO buys were reported for Century Circuit, 32 houses in Greater New York; Randforce Theatres, 43 in the same section; Jones, Linick and Schaefer, five in Chicago; Alliance Theatres, Chicago; Van Nomikos, Chicago; Lasker Theatres, six in Chicago; J. G. Long Theatres, 27 in Texas.

Columbia Three-Year Deal

Heading up recent circuit purchases of Columbia Product was the renewal, for three years, of the product franchise held by Skouras-National Theatres, for some 300 houses throughout the western and midwestern sections of the circuit.

Mutual Theatres, operating 18 in Detroit, acting as a booking unit for independent owners, was another recent buyer of Columbia for 1939-40 since practically all Columbia circuit deals have been closed.

More Monogram Deals

Standing well out front in selling activity, Monogram's more recent sales included deals with J. Mathiew, Boston; Comerford-Publix, Pennsylvania; Warner Brothers' four houses at Albany, N. Y.; R. E. Griffith Theatres, for Texas; Affiliated Theatres, Indianapolis; Willis Houck, New Orleans; Skouras Metropolitan Theatres, 67 in Greater New York; Golden State-Turner and Dahnken Circuit, 37 in California and Nevada; Rosenblatt and Welt, nine in New York and New Jersey; Vinnicoff Theatres, Los Angeles; Warner Brothers' 14 theatres in Pittsburgh; Schoenstadt Circuit, 16 in Chicago; M. A. Lightman, of Malco, Tennessee; Warner Brothers' 17 theatres in the District of Columbia; Fox West Coast, 204 theatres in California, and Blatt Brothers, 17 in Pennsylvania.

Monogram also sold to Fox Intermountain, for 89 houses in Colorado, Idaho, Montana, Nebraska, New Mexico, Utah and Wyoming; to J. D. Peck's Community Theatres, Des Moines; Danville Enterprises, District of Columbia; C. H. Davison, Salt Lake City; William Benton, eight in Upstate New York; Bijou Amusement Company, 31 in Arkansas, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Tennessee, Texas and both Carolinas; Jefferson Amusement Company, 64 houses in Texas, and Burgin Theatres, Charlotte, N. C.

Monogram product buyers of recent date included also C. G. Diller, six in Colorado; Feiber and Shea, Boston; Van Nomikos, Chicago; Butterfield, 105 in Michigan; Lyle M. Wilson, nine theatres in the Carolinas; D. Bernstein, Detroit; Carl Wesse, Indianapolis; Mutual Theatres, for 18 in Detroit; Anderson, 10, Illinois; Essaness, 27, Chicago; Martin and Thompson, 57, Georgia; Martin Theatres, Louisiana; Netco, 14, New York; Great States, 30, Illinois; Saenger, 62 in Southwest; Theatres Service Corp., Vinnicoff.

Warners Clean Up Deals

Purchase by Turner and Dahnken, operating 34 houses in California and Nevada, and by Crescent Amusement Company, with 64 in Georgia, Tennessee and North Carolina, two weeks ago, completed the circuit selling by Warners for 1939-40.

Taking an early lead, last summer, over many of its competitors in selling, Warners followed quickly with scores of deals through the fall, and in recent weeks closed numerous additional contracts. Kaybern Theatres, an independent with eight houses in New York City, Poughkeepsie and Mount Vernon, New York, is one of the latest, this group buying Warner product despite its booking affiliation with the Harry

SELLING SPEEDED UP

Brandt interests which have been attacking Warners of late on policy matters.

Other comparatively new Warner 1939-40 product customers include Martin Circuit, 39 theatres in Georgia, Alabama, Florida, out of that circuit's 57; Century Circuit, 45 in Greater New York; Publix-Richards and Nace Circuit, 26 in Phoenix, Tucson and northern Arizona.

Since the last report of 1939-40 circuit deals was published, in October, Warners have straightened price and policy differences on product with National Theatres, again selling its product to the group of some 580 houses throughout the west and midwest.

Smalley Circuit, with 16 in Upstate New York, also bought Warners, likewise the Cabart and Southside Theatres, 15 theatres in California; Essaness, with 27, Schoenstadt, with 16, and Simansky and Miller, five, all three in Chicago; Netco Theatres 14 in Upstate New York; Minnesota Amusement Company, 93 in Minnesota and the Dakotas.

Universal, Republic Deals

Notable incident in recent Universal selling was last week's disclosure that as a result of selling away from its old Saenger Circuit customer in the southeast, a group whose 62 houses frequently played Universal pictures in the past, "U" has closed some 40 deals in opposition to the dominant Gulf State Saenger circuit. Universal is even selling five-year product franchises to independents in opposition to the Saenger group, in Louisiana, Alabama and Mississippi.

Mutual Theatres, with 18 in Detroit, is another to buy Universal for 1939-40, also Cooperative Theatres-Milton Mooney, 73 houses in and around Cleveland; Minnesota Amusement Company, 93 in Minnesota, Wisconsin and the Dakotas; Cooperative Theatres in Michigan, with 94 in that state.

Additional Republic Pictures circuit deals to be reported since the last publication of circuit buying, have been closed by the Basil Circuit of 18 in Upstate New York; Lucas and Jenkins, 44 in Georgia; E. J. Sparks, 74 in Florida; Lichtman Theatres, 20 in Washington, D. C., Virginia and North Carolina; Harris Theatre Circuit, 19 in Michigan, Ohio, Pennsylvania and the Pittsburgh division of Warner Brothers, involving 14 houses. Also, 18 Mutual Theatres, in Detroit.

Fox, Paramount Add Groups

Twentieth Century-Fox Films is another of the large distributors to be well on the way to the closing of all circuit deals. Most recent sales were made to the Brandt Circuit, including those booked for, totaling 83 houses in New York, New Jersey and Connecticut; Essaness Theatres, for 27 in Chicago; Great States Circuit, Illinois; Seider Circuit, New York; Cocalis Theatres, 32 in New York City and the Bronx; Century Circuit, 45 in Greater New York; Walter Reade, 40 in New Jersey and New York; Consolidated Theatres, 21 in New York; Charles Steiner, 10 in New York; David Snaper, seven in New York; and several RKO outlying New York City houses.

Balaban and Katz was a large buyer of Twentieth Century-Fox product for 1939-40. Others included Lasker Circuit, six in Chicago; Lynch Theatres, Chicago; Schoenstadt, 16 in Chicago; Rheinheimer Circuit, Chicago; Alger Theatres, 13 in Illinois, and Anderson Theatres, 10 in the same state.

Jones, Linick and Schaefer, with five in Chicago, also bought Twentieth Century-Fox's new product, likewise Sam Myers, Chicago; Simansky and Miller, five in Chicago; Goodman and Harrison, four in Chicago; Joe Stern, eight in Chicago; Warners Chicago theatres, numbering 17. Another buyer was the Interboro Circuit of 41 in New York and New Jersey.

Associated Theatres, operating 13 as a cooperative in New Jersey, was another Fox product buyer, likewise the Mutual cooperative of 18 in Detroit, the Cooperative of 80 in Michigan and the Mooney Cooperative of 73 in Ohio. Netco Theatres, Paramount affiliate with 14 in Upstate New York also bought the product.

In virtually all situations Paramount circuit deals are proceeding rapidly to conclusion. Most recent deals include Associated Theatres, 13 in New Jersey; Mutual Theatres, 18 in Detroit, besides others.

United Artists Finishes

Louis J. Schlaifer, general sales manager for United Artists in the west, reported three weeks ago that his company had concluded selling in the west for 1939-40, with the buying of product by five circuits; Balaban and Katz, for 70 houses in Chicago; Great States Theatres, 30 in Illinois; Publix Intermountain Theatres, Salt Lake City; McNeil-Naify Theatres, 70 in California; Blumenfeld Theatres, 15 around San Francisco.

The U. A. 1940 product also was purchased by Minnesota Amusements, for 93 theatres in Minnesota, Wisconsin and the Dakotas; Associated Theatres, 13 in New Jersey; Mutual Theatres, 18 in Detroit; Cooperative Circuit, 80 in Michigan, among others.

MGM About Set

As far back as four weeks ago, William F. Rodgers, general sales manager of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, told field and home office distribution workers at a meeting in Chicago that about 85 per cent of last year's total sales had already been closed, and that the remaining 15 per cent represented in revenue no more than four per cent of gross income.

In recent deals, MGM sold 1939-40 product to the Lasker Circuit, with six houses in Chicago; Bland Brothers, eight in Chicago; Mutual of Michigan, 18 Detroit theatres; Cooperative Theatres of Ohio, 73; Minnesota Amusement, 93 in Minnesota and the Dakotas; and Netco Theatres, 14 in Upstate New York.

MPPDA Board Directors Discuss Foreign Market

Foreign managers of major companies were called in to the quarterly meeting of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America board of directors this week for a discussion of the new monetary regulations and import restrictions in international markets since the outbreak of the war. The situation was discussed at length by the board following reports by the foreign department heads. The meeting was adjourned thereafter to next Wednesday.

Attending the meeting were Will H. Hays, Frederick L. Herron, Maurice Silverstone, W. C. Michel, Nicholas M. Schenck, George J. Schaefer, Nate J. Blumberg, Jack Cohn, Joseph Hazen and Barney Balaban.

Those called in on the foreign market discussion were Arthur Loew, David Bernstein, Phil Reisman, J. A. McConville, Walter J. Hutchinson, Arthur Kelly, Karl McDonald, John W. Hicks and Joseph H. Seidelman.

Evanston Trust Action Settled Out of Court

One of the almost myriad anti-trust suits by independents against the majors and the large circuits—for "collusion," "conspiracy," violation of the Sherman and Clayton Federal laws, et al., was dropped this week. It is the suit by Frank Ford, Evanston, Illinois, exhibitor, against the Balaban and Katz Chicago circuit, Nicholas M. Schenck, Sam Katz and Joseph M. Schenck. The status of other defendants in the suit remains the same. Following the settlement MGM and 20th Century-Fox signed new product deals for the Stadium theatre in Evanston.

Gary Action Up in January

Meanwhile, the Gary Theatre Company's anti-trust suit against the same circuit, Warner Brothers Theatres, and the majors in the same area, is expected to come up for a hearing on January 10th. The action seeks an injunction against alleged monopoly.

In Boston, the first anniversary of the Aetna Amusement Enterprises and six other companies against the majors occurred last Thursday. The sales managers of the various majors have been testifying, this week, and for the past two.

In another suit of long standing, in the same city, that of Morse and Rothenberg, against the majors, master of the hearing Philip Hendrick last Friday wished counsel for both sides a Merry Christmas, remarking that it was unusual for a master in such hearings to be able to wish the same counsel, in the same case, a Merry Christmas for two successive years.

Peskay-Loew Deal Off

Edward Peskay, formerly of Warner Brothers, Selznick, Skouras and First National, and a former vice-president of Grand National, and now the operator of the Pickwick Theatre, Greeenwich, Connecticut, over the weekend denied that he would sell his house to Loew's, Inc., as previously rumored. The Department of Justice, acting under an agreement reached with the majors in the New York anti-trust action (maintaining the status quo in producer owned theatre properties) frowned on the deal, he indicated. It was also reported this week that the collapse of the Loew deal might be followed by an anti-trust suit by Mr. Peskay, inasmuch as the theatre is said to be handicapped by lengthy clearance.

New York Premiere Of "Bluebird" Advanced

The premiere of "The Blue Bird," starring Shirley Temple, has been advanced to January 19th from January 17th to permit a Friday night opening. "Swanee River" opens December 29th at the Roxy theatre. Darryl F. Zanuck, vice-president in charge of production, will attend the premiere of "The Blue Bird" at the Hollywood theatre and remain in New York for the opening of "The Grapes of Wrath" at the Rivoli January 24th. Al Jolson and Don Ameche will appear in a broadcast of "Swanee River" on December 29th.

Charles E. McCarthy, director of advertising and publicity for Twentieth Century-Fox, has put John Goring in charge of the roadshow of "The Blue Bird." Mr. Goring managed the old Criterion on Broadway and more recently worked in Pittsburgh and on the West Coast.

1939 MONEY STARS IN ALL BRITISH FILMS

AN ALL-BRITISH POLL

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

LAST year in these pages, analyzing the results of an all British Box Office Poll, which sent Lancashire comedian George Formby to the top, we commented on the loyalties of the British public, suggested that the picture patron was loyal to those stars who remained loyal to him—or her. This year's voting, impressively close to last year's, consolidates that view. Once again the picture house patron has remained loyal to his established loves. For Formby—and indeed Gracie Fields, if to a lesser degree—have remained loyal to their millions. However others may change, the stars of British comedy do not.

Formby Retains Hold

So it is that the wide mouthed Lancashire Loon, wearing the same sheepish grin, twanging the same ukelele and cracking the same old family gags, remains Britian's Film Favorite No. One, proves for another year that of all the constellation in the British screen firmament, he brings more sixpences and shillings to the box office than anyone else. To students, whether academic or purely commercial, of the film trade scene this second year victory will come as no surprise. Formby's appeal is colossal. He deserves the rating.

Gracie Fields, who until last year headed the Poll, stays again in second place. With her, too, the voting is almost precisely what it was last year. Her public also has remained loyal. If she is second she is still a mighty favourite with British entertainment audiences, a draw on radio, stage and screen, in sum total of appeal probably greater than Formby, whose public is strictly a filmgoing public. It is no criticism of Formby's sustained victory to say that Gracie remains Britain's Sweetheart Number One. A fatal attempt, as witnessed in certain recent films, to glamourise a personality who is, despite certain flashes of romantic vocalism, essentially a figure of family fun, the warm hearted party girl of North Country "Do's", ill assisted her.

Donat a Newcomer

Third place goes to a newcomer to the vanguard of Fame, Robert Donat. It is a well deserved homage. Donat's superb work in the Metro-British films "The Citadel" and "Goodbye, Mr. Chips" has won for him in twelve months a public which heretofore had looked on him with a kindly but unemotional eye. It is, of course, a tribute to Donat. But it is no less a tribute to the American corporation which set so high a standard for British filmmaking which, so to speak, gave an English actor the opportunity of a speedy metamorphosis into a front line star. Fame may be born in the box office. It is conceived in the studio executive's office. British fame in this regard was conceived in Culver City.

Loyal to his public, Will Hay, though he steps back a pace to let youngster Donat into third position, finds his public loyal to him. He is not so far behind his immediate predecessor in the voting. Though he may forsake the cap and gown for the peaked cap of the skipper of an African scow, or the helmet of the English rural policeman, Hay is still the schoolmaster comedian, the muddled irascible old Englishman behind whose tumbling spectacles he introduced himself to the British public. No detached critic would readily suggest that the films of Will Hay were cinematic masterpieces, neither literary gems nor technical triumphs.

The promotion of Anna Neagle from eight to fifth place is not surprising. Her dignity and queenly presence, her sympathetic personality and innate modesty have won her a public who will probably never abandon her. She too has remained loyal to her trust of regal biography. "Sixty Glorious Years" was just what the picturehouse patron expected of the star of "Queen Victoria." She earns her reward, a loyalty which has been translated into something more tangible—pounds, shillings and pence.

The Winners

George Formby	First
Gracie Fields	Second
Robert Donat	Third
Will Hay	Fourth
Anna Neagle	Fifth
Leslie Howard	Sixth
Charles Laughton	Seventh
Gordon Harker	Eighth
Ralph Richardson	Ninth
Will Fyffe	Tenth

"Pygmalion" Popularity Reflected

To the chosen few comes, too, Leslie Howard, star, with Wendy Hiller, of "Pygmalion", the record breaking creation of the Hungarian genius Gabriel Pascal, with, of course, the willing collaboration of one George Bernard Shaw. The Pascal film was a national success shattering attendance records at all points of the box office compass, being incidentally given the unique distinction of a second release on the Odeon chain. The women mainly have done this for Howard. He is fortunate in having a previously good record. If Wendy Hiller, whose first film this was, and who is unluckily only thirteenth, had been known to screen audiences, she might have occupied Howard's place. Her reflection is there with him, even if the voting actually puts her lower. For it is surely a register of the widescale approval of "Pygmalion".

Laughton Holds Place

Laughton seventh last year is seventh this year. Can the Jekyll and Hyde of British screen characterization command greater loyalty than this? The great success at the box office of "Jamaica Inn" was of course essentially a personal success. The star remains obviously a star, commanding a following both consistent and enlightened. It must surely be a public different entirely from the chasers of glamour girls and golden haired boys, a public which recognizes quality in characterization and treatment, but a public which is consistently ready to express that appreciation in material terms.

Gordon Harker, the Cockney with the rhyming slang and the repartee, last year twelfth this year is ninth. For a public which appreciates the North Country comedy of Formby and Fields, the metropolitan wit of Harker, as different from the other as is Delancey Street from Little Rock, Arkansas, must be a little odd. But Harker has done good work in crook yarns of purely popular appeal, in "Inspector Hornleigh", in the "Return of the Frog", and similar dramatic films, and deserves this tribute.

Richardson's Star Rises

A newcomer to the first ten, and a significant newcomer at that is Ralph Richardson, one of the most accomplished and agreeable actors on the British screen. Richardson's magnificiently whimsical Secret Service man in Irving Asher's highly successful "Q Planes", his so different but so moving portrayal of the blinded officer in "Four Feathers", have belatedly focussed the spotlight of popular favor on a new and rising star. If the War does not interrupt the process Richardson is inevitably due for immortalization even higher on the scrolls of motion picture Fame.

Tenth on the list and one place behind last year is character actor Will Fyffe, "Mr. Reeder" of the detective series, quiet Scots' shepherd of "Owd Bob". He, too, is loyal to his trust and his public remains loyal to him.

When it comes to entertainment the British filmgoer makes no national demands. But when a film professes to be British it must be British and not naturalized British. It is one of the loyalties essential to box office success. That at least four of the first ten should have gained this year's Fame in films sponsored by American firms shows that the U. S. is not least ready to learn the lesson of loyalty.

Distribution of the votes showed the British theatre operators to be in substantial agreement on the ten winners and the honor stars who followed them closely in the balloting but beyond that there were nearly one hundred other stars mentioned with a frequency which makes them worthy of listing. Sectional, personal and local preferences of course are reflected in these selections by the exhibitors. Classified according to the ratio of votes received these stars fall into three groups listed alphabetically herewith, in the adjoining columns of this page.

WESTERN MONEY MAKERS IN BRITAIN

ACTION is action and according to a truly conservative school of cinematic thought it is also the only prime and constantly dependable material for screen storytelling.

Though removed by several thousand miles of ocean, the British exhibitors vote vociferously for almost the same small coterie of ridin', shootin' stars the Americans favor.

The ballots this year show only one newcomer to last year's list, Bob Baker, who climbed to ninth from an Honorable Mention position, and only one significant change in position, the transposition of Bill Boyd and of Gene Autry in first and second position. George O'Brien jumped from ninth to fourth position.

Charles Starrett, first on this year's Honorable Mention list, moved there from a midlist position last year.

That the British exhibitor's valuation of western stars substantially coincides with the American viewpoint is shown in the fact that seven of the first ten winners appear also in the American voters' first ten. Beverly Roberts, incidentally, received a number of votes.

The British poll was tabulated in the same fashion as the American, 10 points for each mention for first place, and so on, with one point for tenth.

BRITISH SELECTIONS IN ALL STAR POLL

THE INTERNATIONAL MONEY-MAKERS

THE All Films Poll undertaken by MOTION PICTURE HERALD in Britain this year, and covering the whole box office territory of Great Britain and Ireland, crowns a new Queen of the silver screen—Deanna Durbin. Running in the voting has been close, but the golden voiced "Smart Girl," having grown up with a vengeance, beats all her competitors by a definite margin.

The result is at one and the same time a surprise—and no surprise. Though it supplants the three year winner Shirley Temple, it retains youth at the helm, makes abundantly clear that though the objective of the British filmgoer's homage may be a new one, the qualities and virtues which compel the fealty are virtually the same.

Noteworthy is it, that the first three in the British poll are all youngsters. Miss Durbin comes out on top, jumping five places in the list. She is followed very closely by the Brooklyn Leprecaun Mickey Rooney, impulsive, pugnacious embodiment of the eternal Boy. Miss Temple, suffering maybe less from any personal defects than from the films in which she has recently been presented, loses ground, but stays among the first three. Youth in its three major stages wins the day. The growing girl, blossoming into womanhood. The growing boy exercising his wind and muscles in the first flights of approaching manhood. The winsome, irresistible child. Herein surely is a lesson for the makers of films, for those who sell and those who show them, a reaction maybe against the crass stupidities and futilities of an adult world.

Domestic Tastes Reflected

English audiences,—and the fact has already been recorded in FAME,—whilst devoid of either the puritanical or the prurient, have long had a penchant for the wholesome and the unpretentious in screen entertainment, preferred the clear cut unsophistication of youth to the grimy gropings of ageing gangsters, taken a screen family to their bosom, they are a domestic race,—revelled in a gentle soaking in music of what might be termed the better class, taken the precocious—if unobjectionable—child to their bosom with that parental instinct which is in every British, bachelor or otherwise. Crime and racketeering can be made to pay—in terms of the British box office—but when the analysis gets down to cases, more fundamental and eternal qualities endure.

These considerations greatly explain the shuffling of place and position among the others of the first ten. Following the first three comes youthful Robert Taylor, whose "Yank at Oxford", a phenomenally successful picture here,—and an incidental test of the powers of the foreign producer on British soil—has surely been the instrument to promote him from his seventh place last year to fourth this year. "The Crowd Roars" which followed the former film did nothing like the business of its immediate predecessor. Next comes Jeannette Macdonald, going back from fourth to fifth place this year, but symbolising that regard for music and romance which has so long marked the English audience. Spencer Tracy, the forthright, finely sculptured personality, embodiment of what so many English women look for in a man, reflection, too, of what so many Englishmen would like themselves to be, loses ground. Last year he was third. He probably loses little loyalty, for Mickey Rooney, his copartner in "Boys Town", has already registered the success of the M. G. M. film. Rooney of course, had the immense advantage of the Hardy Family series which are a tremendous draw in Britain.

The Ten Best

Deanna Durbin	First
Mickey Rooney	Second
Shirley Temple	Third
Robert Taylor	Fourth
Jeanette MacDonald	Fifth
Spencer Tracy	Sixth
Errol Flynn	Seventh
George Formby	Eighth
Nelson Eddy	Ninth
Gary Cooper	Tenth

The success of Errol Flynn, who has lifted himself for the first time into the select sanctuary of the first ten, is the success once again of the cleaner and more healthy type of motion picture and characterization, the success of the swashbuckling candour of "Robin Hood" and of the honest heroics and essentially native fraternality of "Dawn Patrol".

Formby Holds Own

George Formby, the winner of the purely British Poll, finds it hard to hold territory against the more glamorous and highly publicised Hollywood band. He takes eighth position but proves that even against the might of the international screen a homely Lancashire comedian can occupy, unchallenged, a front rank position.

Nelson Eddy—lesser half of the Jeannette MacDonald musicals, but obviously worthy of some of the credit,—comes from the second string into position nine. Gary Cooper, still loved for his "Mr. Deeds", still able to attract a monumental public by such an opus as "The Cowboy and the Lady" loses a place, goes from ninth to tenth, but with three newcomers to the front row still occupies a worthy position.

Missing from the van are three stars whose performances of yesteryear assured them a place on the scroll of fame. Their disappearance this year is significant. Clark Gable, Ronald Colman and William Powell, no longer members of the brigade of flaming youth, are left behind in positions twelve, twenty and forty-two respectively. This, as we have already recorded, is the day of Youth. The romantic appeal of this triumvirate is surely still a matter of established fact. But all have passed the border of the early thirties, and Youth, as we have seen, will have its fling. There will be showmen to suggest that better starring vehicles, more worthy frames than "Idiots Delight", which box office records have shown is not so much in tune with the modern trend towards escapism than "If I Were King", an echo from yesterday rather than a reflection of today, for instance, might have saved this trio from falling so far behind the younger brigade. The fact is that back they have gone, and a new advance is unlikely.

Balloting Close

Statistical analysis has been avoided in this brief survey of motion picture tastes and trends as reflected in this annual box office barometer. Voting was far too keen and close to permit emphases. That the voting has been a vigorous and unequivocal tribute to clean entertainment, to the brand of story and the species of star closest to the paying audience is surely patent. That the star system still prevails, that it is the personality who shines through the silver screen, whose glamour is not merely a matter of publicity, who draws the British audience, is the immediate and ultimate lesson of this year's poll. Stars may come and stars will go. It is the star who has something the publicity department cannot define who gets to the top and stays there.

Votes Follow American Winners

Comparison of the poll with the selections of American exhibitors, voting exclusively on the Hollywood stars shows remarkable unanimity of choice. Of the American stars named in the international poll, Mickey Rooney, Shirley Temple, Spencer Tracy and Errol Flynn are among the choices in America for the Ten Best. Of the others, Deanna Durbin, first in this poll, just missed inclusion in the first ten; Robert Taylor is among the honor stars; Jeanette MacDonald received frequent mention, as did Nelson Eddy, and Gary Cooper was honorably mentioned. The differences can be accounted for by consideration of particular preferences of English audiences and in the appreciable time lag caused by the later release dates for films in England.

"BICYCLING" LEADS FILM COPYRIGHT VIOLATIONS; NEW LAW IS DRAFTED

Succeeds "Holdovers" as Most Current Subject of Bureau Investigations; Annual Report Shows Many Complaints

Continuing the last two years' reversal of the trend from a previous predominance of the "hold-over" type of violation, the "bicycling" type of the violations of the motion picture copyright laws by exhibitors outnumbered the "hold-over" type almost two to one, according to the annual report of the Copyright Protection Bureau for 1939, as submitted to the industry Tuesday by Jack Levin, who, as director, operates the Bureau with Gabriel Hess, counsel of the Hays organization.

The predominance of "bicycling" was a condition which existed prior to 1930. Thereafter from 1930 to 1936-37 the "hold-over" type of violation predominated, and now again it is found that the occurrence of "bicycling" comes to the fore.

Up 12 Per Cent

According to Mr. Levin, director of the Bureau, violations were found in 28.08 per cent of the places investigated during the current year, as compared with 16.75 per cent of the theatres investigated during the previous year. The activities of the Bureau centered in 35 states during this current period.

The report said: "This increase in the percentage of theatres investigated in which violations were found is probably attributable to the fact that investigations have been instituted as the result of more credible complaints based upon a closer surveillance of theatre operations and bookings by the distributors' branch representatives, a tightening of the license limitations in the forms of exhibition license contracts used, as well as the very considerable number of new and inexperienced exhibitors who have entered the business during recent years."

The report also discusses, in addition to the report of the unauthorized exhibitions, the results of a survey of the 1,505 CCC Camps in the United States, made in 1939. That survey revealed that of the 1,327 CCC Camps on which information was secured, only 171 camps (about 13 per cent) exhibited 35 mm. pictures; 799 (about 60 per cent) exhibited 16 mm. pictures; 357 (about 27 per cent) exhibited no pictures at all.

The annual report of the Bureau said that during the current year the Bureau experimentally established and put into operation a new department to handle investigations of duped, bootlegged, lost and stolen prints. This type of activity on the part of the Bureau is described as a departure from its former work which had been primarily confined to problems arising from the unauthorized exhibition of motion pictures lawfully made by and belonging to the distributors, and circulating in the regular channels of distribution pursuant to the customary exhibition contracts.

Duped Prints Investigated

In connection with this new activity, an investigation of the alleged illicit distribution of prints by individuals or independent companies in various parts of the United States was instituted. This investigation brought some "startling" conditions to light, "startling" in that the extent of this illicit distribution had never before been appreciated, Mr. Levin said. Various phases of this illegal activity were investigated, such as laboratories where the duping was done, independent distributors who handle both 16 mm. and 35 mm. prints, leaks in legitimate film laboratories where employees had been able to smuggle out regular prints, as well as many other reputedly peculiar aspects into which the investigation ran.

CANADIAN COPYRIGHT FEE RISE DEBATED

The plea for increased rates, by the Canadian Performing Rights Society, Ltd., of Toronto, before the Copyright Appeal Board of the Canadian Government, recently, has met opposition.

Objections to a rise in annual license fees from eight to 14 cents, for each radio receiving set owner, in 1940, were voiced by speakers for the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation and the smaller broadcasting stations.

Although these activities of the Bureau were primarily in the nature of an exploration to ascertain the means and methods of handling this new type of investigation, "concrete results of a very considerable nature have already been achieved." Not only was the operator of a motion picture laboratory convicted in the Federal Court under the criminal provisions of the U. S. Copyright Law, for illegal duping of prints, upon evidence turned over by the Bureau to the Federal Bureau of Investigation of the United States Department of Justice, but the Federal Bureau was made thoroughly familiar with the nature and effect of these activities and its full cooperation was secured. In addition, certain independent dealers, trafficking for many years in illicit prints, are now out of business, and the Bureau has recovered for the major distributors a considerable number of prints of their pictures illegally in circulation.

The Bureau's report cites many instances of illicit trafficking in the pictures belonging to the various distributors. There were instances discovered of duped portions of motion pictures belonging to major distributors being incorporated into independently produced subjects without the knowledge of the distributors.

Court Rulings Cited

The report of Gabriel Hess, counsel for the distributors in these matters, discusses a number of important decisions handed down by the Federal Courts during the past year. One of these decisions (Vitaphone Corporation v. Hutchinson Amusement Co., 28 F. Supp. 526, 42 U.S.P.Q. 431, by Federal Judge Ford, sitting in the District of Massachusetts dealt with and upheld the legality of the operations of the distributors through the Copyright Protection Bureau).

In the course of his opinion concerning the Bureau, District Judge Ford said:

"It is perfectly apparent that the Bureau described above was formulated for the purpose of protecting large business enterprises from illegal trespasses which involve the loss of substantial revenue. Certainly, the producers and distributors have a right to protect their property. The evidence plainly shows that the Bureau is supported by the producers for the protection of their own business interests and all its expenses paid by them. The producers have a right to maintain their investigating agencies in their own manner and to employ legal help to enforce the legal rights which are theirs. . . ."

Changes in Present Copyright Rules Proposed in Draft Prepared by Shotwell Committee After Long Debate

New copyright legislation, drafted by the so-called Shotwell Committee, will be submitted to Congress at the next session which opens January 3rd. The proposed bill has been drawn up at the request of Senator Homer Truett Bone, chairman of the Senate Patents committee which will be asked to settle disputed points. The Shotwell committee has been holding meetings for nearly a year.

Majority Favor Changes

Representatives of the various groups on the Shotwell Committee have agreed on most of the major questions involved. The varied interests of those on the committee made complete agreement on all points impossible. The Shotwell committee (the committee for study of copyright of the national committee of the United States of America on International Intellectual Co-operation) is comprised of representatives of all the groups interested in copyright matters.

The committee includes representatives of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Independent Exhibitors League, National Association of Broadcasters, Authors League of America, American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, Song Writers Protective Association, Music Publishers Protective Association, International Allied Printing Trades Association, Book Publishers Bureau, National Publishers Association, American Library Association, Joint Committee on Materials for Research of the American Council of Learned Societies and the Social Service Research Council.

Separate Sales Allowed

Provisions in the new copyright legislation include the agreement that separate sales may be made for each of the various commercial uses to which an author's work may be put. In the case of a story, the magazine, book, screen, television and dramatic rights may all be sold separately and actions brought on behalf of any one of the rights without joining possessors of any of the other rights.

The provision in the proposed legislation covering copyright on creation recognizes an author's or composer's work as personal property for which copyright protection is automatic. No registration or filing of two copies would be required as is now the case. The new agreement would also extend the life of the copyright from the present 28 year period to a period ending 50 years after the author's death.

The Shotwell committee, directed by Dr. Edith Ware, was not able to agree on the proposed revision to the Copyright Act of 1909 in time for action by Congress last Spring. Meetings were held last Spring and were resumed this Fall.

Motion picture interests are not entirely satisfied with the proposed changes and feel that they may have to oppose the Shotwell committee's bill. One motion picture representative stated that he felt that the committee had gone "haywire" on some points and that all changes were in favor of the author. The period of the copyright's life is also considered unsatisfactory. It was pointed out that it would be by mere chance if all the groups with divergent interest on the committee could agree 100% on any copyright bill.

STOCK VALUES DOWN 156 MILLIONS, AND VOLUME OF TRADING DECREASES

Started Slipping Early in 1939 Due to War Scares; Dropped to Year's Lowest Levels as the Hostilities Commenced

by THE ANALYST

The outbreak of war in Europe caused a drop of $156,053,500 in the market value of motion picture shares during 1939. Reversing the trend of the preceding year, the total market valuation of the 20 film issues listed on the New York Stock Exchange fell to $628,356,625, compared with $784,410,125 at the end of 1938.

War Scares Have Effect

Film stock values started slipping in the first half of the year as the result of a series of war scares that threatened serious consequences to export trade and increasing uncertainties in domestic business, but it was not until after hostilities actually broke out that the majority of them touched their lowest prices of the year.

The end of the year found most of the motion picture shares slightly above the extreme lows, but with a conflicting outlook. On the one hand, domestic business conditions made an excellent year-end showing. On the other was the prospect of a long-drawn-out conflict abroad.

In their market action during the year the film stocks followed much the same pattern as the general list, with the exception of the so-called "war babies". These stocks, represented mostly in the aircraft, copper, armament and shipbuilding groups, were given speculative whirls after the war's outbreak and generally showed higher price levels as compared with the preceding year.

Occasional Flurries

Activity in the stock market continued at a low ebb during 1939 with the exception of occasional flurries in individual issues. Motion picture issues shared in the dullness and the turnover of every prominent stock in the group was lower than in 1938.

As in the early stages of the World War, traders in stocks were wary of the ultimate benefits of war profits and the market's dull and irregularly lower price movements were a logical consequence. Demand for stocks turned more and more from a speculative to an investment character.

Meanwhile, general business conditions improved in most lines and the outlook as the year ends is, at least for the near-term future, optimistic. The strange character of the current war did much to alleviate what would ordinarily have been a depressant on some lines and enabled most business to shake off the influence of the possibility that the conflict might turn from the present state of stalemate and uncertainty into a long and costly conflict.

As an indication of the upswing in trade and industry during 1939, the New York Times index of steel ingot production, a pertinent general business barometer, on Dec. 16, 1939, stood at 137.4 (estimated normal—100), compared with 98.6 on Dec. 17, 1938. Automobile production was 110.6, compared with 96.1; miscellaneous carloadings at 92.8, against 77.2; cotton-mill activity at 145.1, against 126.6; lumber production at 92.5, against 75.9, and electric power production 104.4, against 97.9.

Manufacturing employment in November, according to a report by the Department of Labor, was the highest since October, 1937, and the Department's employment index for the month was the highest November average since 1929.

PLANNING BOARD ISSUES REPORT

The National Resources Planning Board has issued a report entitled "Consumer Expenditures". The report studies the average consumer disbursements in the relatively prosperous years of 1935-36, using three numerically equal income groups: lower third, with $780 a year or less; middle third with $780 to $1,450; upper third, $1,450 or over.

The report discloses that the lower "third of the nation" spends more than half of its income for food alone and goes into debt, with an average deficit of $92 a year as compared with a 19 per cent average of savings in the upper third after all outlays including gifts and taxes. Even the middle class loses money, with an average individual or family deficit of $19 a year.

Exclusive of food, clothing and shelter expenditures, Americans in the lower third had an average of $31 per person per year—about 60 cents a week—for all other expenses of living, including medical care, dentistry, amusement, art, motion pictures, education, sport, literature, religion, etc.

Merchants throughout the country predicted sales gains ranging to 10 per cent for the first half of 1940. Sales of heavy electrical equipment and materials for 1939 were reported to be sharply higher than last year and it was estimated the total would come within 10 or 15 per cent of the 1937 sales, which exceeded all previous records. Electricity production for 1939, according to figures available so far, will break all records in the history of the power output industry.

Extra dividends and increased salaries brought about a brisk improvement in 1939 Christmas sales, according to a United Press survey, which showed that from five to 15 per cent more was spent by Christmas shoppers in 1939 than in 1938 and that in some sections of the country the gain was as high as 20 per cent.

While all these developments portended well for the film industry and general business in 1940, predictions for any reasonably long term were tempered by the uncertainties over the war. Consequently, film and other security prices were not in a position to reflect substantially the excellent current business indices.

The motion picture industry contributed to bright spots in business, prominent among which was the report of the Internal Revenue Bureau showing admission taxes during November exceeded $2,000,000 to reach the highest total since December, 1937.

Some Exceptions

Some of the motion picture preferred stocks were noteworthy exceptions to the general trend, an indication of underlying confidence. Eastman Kodak preferred rallied substantially after touching a low of 155½ for the year on Sept. 25 and as the year ended was selling around 175, a gain of 2 points over the 1938 close. Warner Brothers preferred, around 48, showed a gain of 8 points, while Keith-Albee-Orpheum preferred, in a light turnover, was up about 11 points for the year to around 96.

Although it closed with a loss of $46,593,750 in market value, Eastman Kodak common, selling near the end of the year at 166, was up sharply from the low of 138⅛, reached on April 26.

Loew's depreciated $28,598,750 in market value during 1939, representing a loss of 17⅛ points. Twentieth-Century-Fox's total market value as of the end of 1939 at $21,315,000 compared with $45,675,000 at the end of 1938. Warner Brothers was down $9,500,000 in market value.

Paramount, the only film stock whose total sales for the year crossed the million-share mark, ranged in price from a high of 14⅛ to a low of 6⅛ and finished at around 7⅝ for a loss of 6 points, or $14,820,000 in market value.

A five-year comparison of motion picture stock prices, and valuations, appears on the page opposite.

Gains Reported

U. S. Secretary of Commerce Harry L. Hopkins, in a year-end business statement, Tuesday, reported substantial gains in all areas of the national economy during 1939. He said:

"During the year 1939, the trend of business was toward higher levels. In all sectors of the economy—industry, trade, and agriculture—1939 was a better year than 1938. This improvement has produced a more favorable background in which to consider and to appraise common problems of government and business—and a calm appraisal is a necessary prerequisite to intelligently guided action. The outbreak of war in Europe has not been without repercussions in this country, but this unfortunate event must not blind us to the fact that the solution of our problems lies with us. We can not rely upon destruction abroad to create a demand for goods which, in the proper sense, can be fostered here with advantage to all.

"In looking back at the year, it is possible to record a very substantial gain in all areas of the economy when measured against the relatively restricted volume of 1938. The year divides into two rather well-defined periods delimited by the date of the war outbreak in Europe. Prior to September, the recovery in business which featured the latter half of 1938 proceeded at a slow pace, but upon a gradually broadened base, with prospects that this movement would be extended through the final months of the year."

Warners' Sears Drive Underway

The fourth annual Sears drive began this week under Gradwell L. Sears, Warner rothers general sales manager. The drive will run through April 13th.

Initial release during the sales drive is "Four Wives." Other pictures to be released in the period include: "A Child Is Born," "Brother Rat and a Baby," "The Fighting 69th," "Invisible Stripes," "Years without Days," "Magic Bullets," "We Shall Meet Again" and "Virginia City." Awards totaling $25,000 will be distributed to the three districts and branches having the best showing during the period.

Don Lee Network Report to FCC Shows Medium Out of Swaddling Clothes; Short Subjects, Features Telecast

Hollywood, this week taking stock of its television developments to date, took credit for as much progress, proportionately, as that claimed in the east of late by the "big guns" in the new art, National Broadcasting, Columbia Broadcasting, General Electric and others in New York.

Hollywood's telecasters and related broadcasters, led by the Don Lee networks, now claim that television in their hands is out of its so-called swaddling clothes for the Pacific frontier.

FCC Gets Summary

In a 117-page summary of the activities of its W6XAO, Hollywood television transmitter, the Don Lee radio network reports that the station had completed its 2,400th television broadcast, during which time more than 5,000 hours of telecasting had been presented. The summary was made expressly for the Federal Communications Commission, by Harry R. Lubcke, director of television for Lee, on FCC instructions.

Of the 5,000 hours telecast, two-thirds have been films, more than 11,000,000 feet of film having been used since the transmitter began operations eight years ago, in December, 1931. Eastern telecasters use much fewer films.

The report observes that "it is ultimately expected that sponsorship will pay for television programs in much the same way that it pays for radio programs today. Low quality sponsorship (lengthy commercial announcements between phonograph records) will probably not enter television because of the increased cost of the programs and the broadcasting equipment," it was said.

The only telecasting station in the 11 states west of Kansas City, W6XAO recently purchased land on top of Mount Lee, some 1,700 feet high, one of the tallest peaks in the Hollywood range, to increase reception range of its programs from 30 to 60 miles. The city of Los Angeles has passed an ordinance permitting erection of the station, which will use the new portable television equipment developed by Radio Corporation.

The station's operators, Thomas S. Lee, Lewis Allen Weiss and Willet H. Brown, have received an assignment of a low frequency band range of 44 to 50 megacycles for the transmitter.

Neither of the other two large national radio networks—NBC and CBS—operate television transmitters at their Hollywood studios.

64 Features Used

In the W6XAO report to the FCC, it was pointed out that 448 newsreels, 64 features and 69 short subjects had been televised since the beginning of operations eight years ago.

The year by year description of the transmitter's activities reports that: "On April 4th, 1933, daily broadcasts of current Pathe newsreels, changed twice weekly, were inaugurated," while "In 1938, 97 current newsreels of major producers were televised. Except for certain periods, newsreel broadcasts have been continued to date.

"Starting August 24th, 1933, the first of a regular schedule of Paramount features was transmitted with 'The Texan' and excerpts from 'This Dark Age.'"

The trend, however, is away from the transmission of feature length films, as indicated by the fact that during the period from the start of operations to the end of 1935, 52 current features were telecast, while since 1935 only 12 have been transmitted. Mr. Lubcke pointed out in his report that "Because television requires the whole attention of the "lookers," it is to be expected that the interval for any one program will be 15 minutes, certainly not more than 30 minutes.

"In the 15 minute interval, comedy, vaudeville, newsreels or serials can be presented. The broadcasting of a nightly newsreel when all the members of a family can be at home is an instance where the use of film is essential."

Short Subject Use Increased

The added emphasis being placed on the transmission of short subjects is indicated by the fact that of the 69 shorts televised since the start of operations, 48, or 70 per cent, have been shown in the period subsequent to 1935, the trend running counter to that noted for feature transmission. Short subjects used have consisted of 16mm. films supplied by Bell and Howell, Electrical Research Products, film libraries and other non theatricals.

Motion pictures are relied upon, according to Mr. Lubcke, for educational purposes, he having recently defined one function of television as that of being able to provide "living room education."

Whenever aural or visual announcement has been made involving the names of producers of films, the phrase "These visual broadcast transmissions are experimental" has been included, the report states.

"Compared to present motion picture budgets," Mr. Lubcke has said, in "looking ahead" to films made especially for television purposes, "the majority of television productions will be low budget pictures. Consequently, large expenditures for stars' salaries, lavish sets and production will not be made. Rather, what will become 'specially trained stars,' content with

UNION TELEVISION COMMITTEE MEETS

The joint television standards committee of the Associated Actors and Artistes of America met last week to discuss the question of television jurisdiction disputed by the Screen Actors Guild, American Federation of Radio Artists and the Actors' Equity. The latter claims complete jurisdiction and is determined to maintain that point. It is probable however that as the television field grows a separate body will be formed to cover that industry, Equity may be nominally the controlling factor in television, even if a television body is established. Meanwhile the joint committee is trying to work out a basis for beginning negotiations with NBC and CBS over television wage standards and other regulations.

Performers Asked to Withhold Demands for Closed Shop and Fixed Salary Scales Until Commercial Basis Is Set

"Leave us alone now, while we grow. Help television get on its feet, and you'll be helping yourselves"—this, in effect, was the message of the National Broadcasting Company to the actors' groups of the Associated Actors and Artists of America, delivered to a "Four A's" special actors' television committee in New York, this week, by Mark Woods, NBC vice-president and treasurer, in charge of labor negotiations.

Actors Want Wage Scales

The actor groups of the Four A's, especially the Screen Actors' Guild, the American Federation of Radio Artists, and the Actors' Equity, have been quarreling among themselves over television jurisdiction, and have been hinting that television wage scales should be set up, and adhered to, as in other entertainment industries which have union contracts. The special television committee met last week with Mr. Wood to hear the NBC viewpoint.

"I told them that our licenses were experimental," Mr. Woods declared; "and that we were not allowed, under the licenses, to set a rate to our advertisers. And I noted, therefore, that there was no justification for them to set rates for us. I also noted that there were very few television receivers in the New York area.

"We feel that, until television is on a commercial basis, they shouldn't establish union scales. They should go along with us. They should take what we can pay them."

Actors in NBC's present television programs are paid according to the importance of the role, show, and length of service, he said.

As to their affiliation, the NBC doesn't ask its actors whether they're union members, according to Mr. Woods.

"We have no union contract; so there's no reason to inquire," he remarked.

However, he thinks the majority are affiliated with one of the Four A's units. Many of them are radio artists, he pointed out; and the American Federation of Radio Artists dominates standard broadcasting.

100 Actors in Group

Altogether, about 100 television actors would be affected by a union contract between the NBC and the Four A's unions, Mr. Woods estimates.

Rehearsal pay may be an arguing point, he thinks—if the Four A's television scale is submitted. Radio actors are paid for rehearsal. Television actors are not. Television rehearsals are longer than radio's. Television broadcasts have to be "perfect."

Despite absence of a union agreement in television, well known actors and actresses are employed, Mr. Woods stated, citing Ethel Waters, Ray Heatherton, Dorothy Gish, Helen Claire, Helen Twelvetrees, Dean Jagger, Denis Hoey and others.

Regardless of NBC's pleadings, a minimum of $100 per week for performers in the television field is expected to be set within the next month by the joint television committee of Actors Equity, Screen Actors Guild and American Federation of Radio Artists.

Present scales range between $25 and $50 weekly, although the maximum is occasionally raised to $75.

CHAMPIONS OF RADIO CHOSEN BY EDITORS

Charlie McCarthy Retains Top Position in Fourth Annual Popularity Poll

That insouciant blockhead, Charlie McCarthy, is still mowing them down.

Once more the "Champion of Champions" in the fourth annual poll of radio editors and columnists conducted by Motion Picture Daily on behalf of Fame, Edgar Bergen's saucy creation received 700 votes, far outdistancing the rest of the field for the third consecutive year. There were occasional special mentions, too, of Bergen's second most popular dummy, the rustic Mortimer Snerd who made his bow first on the motion picture screen.

Jack Benny and Bing Crosby, perennial favorites, were second and third in the voting.

Old Favorites Winners

In a year not marked by the advent of any big new attractions, the results, for the most part, showed the old favorites still holding their former popularity. Almost all the champions of yesteryear were returned as winners in their classifications again, although there were shifts among the runners-up.

By far the most impressive contribution of radio this year was the wholesale cancellation or abbreviation of paid commercial programs, evening after evening, to make way for announcements of important news developments during a crucial period. On the fateful Sunday in September when war was declared, all existing records for special events coverage were shattered.

Following Bergen, Benny and Crosby in the "Champion of Champions" rating, in a triple tie for fourth place were Orson Welles, Alec Templeton and Kay Kyser. The latter two are newcomers to the top flight, as is Bob Hope, who ranked fifth.

Only First Five Listed

In accordance with the precedent set last year, only the first five are listed. Worthy of note, however, is a scattering of votes for three members of "Information Please," John Kieran, Clifton Fadiman and Oscar Levant. President Franklin D. Roosevelt also drew some votes, with one editor remarking that the President had "the largest consistent audience, national and international."

In the highly competitive area of Hollywood radio entertainment, the Lux Radio Theatre again took top place as the Best Film Program of the year. In its sixth year of presentation, the Lux Radio Theatre strengthened its outstanding position by a better than three-to-one lead over its nearest competitor. Not only that, but it ran a close second in the classification of Best Dramatic Series.

Dance Bands Shift Spots

Greatest variation in standings over previous years came in the balloting for dance bands. Although Benny Goodman continued to lead the swing maestros, and Guy Lombardo's band repeated as the selection for the best popular radio orchestra, subsequent rankings showed marked changes. Glenn Miller's rapidly rising orchestra placed second among the swingsters and in a tie for third among popular bands. The recently retired Artie Shaw drew the third berth among the swing bands. In fourth place was Tommy Dorsey, while Bob Crosby, Larry Clinton and Kyser tied for fifth.

ARMSTRONG RADIO SEEN FREEDOM AID

An editorial last week in the New York Herald Tribune discussed the new situation facing radio with the new Armstrong frequency modulation system now being considered by the Federal Communications Commission. The editorial stated in part: "If this area (part of the wave band in which the Armstrong FM system operates) is assigned to commercial broadcasting it will open the air to many radio projects for which there is now no space on the air. Radio must ever be watchful to preserve its component of the freedom of the press.

"While Dr. Armstrong's system eliminates static from radio reception, it seems to have encountered a static reception in Washington, where all radio progress must be achieved with the consent of the Federal Communications Commission. . . ."

It was pointed out that with only three national chains at present there is a danger that through technical control by the government or by "monopolistic tendency," the true freedom of the air might be lost.

Kyser moved up to second place among the popular orchestras, with Wayne King, an addition to the list of champions, tied with Miller for third place. Andre Kostelanetz placed fourth and Horace Heidt, fifth.

Kyser's "College of Musical Knowledge" quiz, together with the popularity of his band, earned him top rating for the Best Musical Program (Popular). "Your Hit Parade," with Mark Warnow's orchestra and Barry Wood, followed closely. Paul Whiteman was third, "Tune Up Time," with Kostalanetz, fourth and Fred Waring's show, fifth.

Lux Program Leads

In the film programs and dramatic series, Lux led as the Best Film Program, Screen Guild was second, "Good News of 1940," third, Jesse Lasky's "Gateway to Hollywood," fourth, and the Silver Theatre, fifth.

In the Best Dramatic Series classification, "One Man's Family," was first, the Lux Show second and the Campbell Playhouse was third. "Big Town" placed fourth and "First Nighter" and Arch Oboler's Plays were tied for fifth.

Upsets occurred in the comedy classifications. Fibber McGee & Molly took first position among the comedy teams, sending Burns & Allen, the perennial winners, into second place. In third place were Benny & Livingstone, one notch ahead of Bergen & McCarthy, while the team of Howard & Shelton achieved their first niche among the top five by drawing the last available berth.

Jack Benny, the old reliable, still rules the roost as Best Comedian, as he has done in all preceding years. Bob Hope's sudden rise to radio stardom brought him second place. In third position was Fred Allen who was nosed out of his place among the "Champion of Champions" for the first time. Bergen was fourth and Robert Benchley fifth.

Fanny Brice Wins Again

Fannie Brice won for the second time as Best Comedienne. Gracie Allen was second, Mary Livingstone, third, Vera Vague (Barbara Jo Allen) fourth, and Molly McGee (Marian Jordan), fifth.

The Jack Benny show for Jello, which has always taken first place for the Best Comedy Series, walked off with that prize once more. The Aldrich Family, and Bob Hope's variety show, sitting in the seat of the mighty for the first time, took second and third places, respectively. In fourth place were Fibber McGee & Molly, with Amos 'n' Andy and the Easy Aces tied for fifth.

In the realm of classical music, the NBC Symphony Orchestra is still ranked as the Best Radio Orchestra (Classical). The New York Philharmonic was second, the Ford Symphony and Kostalanetz's orchestras were tied for third, the Philadelphia Symphony was fourth and Frank Black's NBC string orchestra, fifth.

For all--around balance, however, the Ford Sunday Evening Hour drew the votes of the experts as the Best Musical Program (Classical) for the second year. NBC Symphony was in second position, the New York Philharmonic, in third, the Firestone Hour, fourth, and the Cities Service program, fifth.

Bing Crosby Vocal Tops

Don Ameche, Edward G. Robinson and Bing Crosby again finished in one-two-three order as Most Effective Film Player on the Air. Walter Huston was fourth and Bob Hope, fifth.

Bing Crosby is still the Best Male Vocalist in the Popular classification and Kenny Baker retained his position as runner-up. Lanny Ross moved up to third position, Buddy Clark was fourth and Frank Parker, fifth.

Retaining the crown she won last year, Kate Smith rang up another victory as Best Female Vocalist (Popular). Connie Boswell, who did not rate until last year, showed further growth in popularity, by moving up to second place, with a serious bid for the top spot. Frances Langford was third, Virginia Sims, fourth, and Bea Wain, fifth.

Nelson Eddy topped the poll for the fourth consecutive year as Best Male Vocalist in the classical division. Lawrence Tibbett moved up to second, Richard Crooks was third, John Charles Thomas, fourth and Donald Dickson, fifth.

Among the feminine classical singers, four of the top five positions remained exactly as they were last year. Margaret Speaks was first, Lucille Manners, second, Lily Pons, third, and Gladys Swarthout, fifth. In fourth position was Jessica Dragonette, who returned to top-ranking.

The Best Commentator is H. V. Kaltenborn. Lowell Thomas was second. Two new faces, Elmer Davis and Raymond Gram Swing, were third and fourth, and Paul Sullivan, fifth.

War news coverage of CBS was the overwhelming favorite for the Best Special Events or News Job Performed by Radio. Similar coverage by NBC ranked second and that of Mutual, third. The Canadian Broadcasting Corp. drew fourth place for coverage of the visit of Britain's King and Queen, while the CBS nightly "News Roundup" was fifth.

"Let's Pretend," with Nila Mack, was again rated the Best Children's Program. "The Lone Ranger" was second, "Coast to Coast on a Bus," with Milton Cross, third, Irene Wicker, fourth, and Malcolm Claire and Jack Armstrong tied for the fifth rung.

A never-failing winner, Don Wilson, was ranked as Best Announcer. Milton Cross moved up to second place, Ken Carpenter was third, Harry Von Zell, fourth, and Bob Trout, Ben Grauer and Andre Baruch were in a triple tie for fifth.

After rating the popularity of the programs' talent, the poll ends with an examination of commercial announcements. Jack Benny's Jello program was found most acceptable, the Ford Sunday Evening Hour was second, Johnson's Wax with Fibber McGee & Molly, was third, and the Kraft Music Hall was fourth. This is the same order in which the programs finished last year. Canada Dry's Information, Please took the fifth spot.

moderate salaries, will perform before simple sets and background projection equipment."

In further discussing films and their relation to television, the report states that "the suitability for television of available film has been ascertained by daily test for years."

In addition to films, W6XAO has used as program material such sports events as local football games, and plans to telecast the Rose Bowl game on New Year's; vaudeville acts, fashion shows, plays and home demonstrations —the station's weekly schedule now consisting of four hours of films and three hours of "live" shows.

Screen Stars Appear

Among the screen personalities appearing recently on the latter type of program, for the benefit of the area's 200 receivers, have been Edith Fellows, Bobby Breen, Tay Garnett, and Max Reinhardt and members of his dramatic school. Serial programs are reported to be popular: a twice weekly 15-minute series called "Vine Street" now being past its 50th episode.

The station's plans for the coming year, according to the report, besides construction of the building and the installation of new equipment at the Mount Lee location, include the resumption of daily telecasts, extending the present Monday, Wednesday and Saturday evening transmissions to include every evening except Sunday, with all broadcasts to be of more than one hour duration; experimental and program work with the new RCA portable three-camera pickup equipment, and research on new television methods and equipment.

San Francisco Telecaster

San Francisco's Station KFRC has three possible sites for its television transmitter and studio under consideration following the FCC examiner's approval of the station's application. Probable choice is the rooftop of the KFRC-Don Lee Building a mile from the city's center. Station will be ready to televise "within six weeks" from the time the FCC gives the "go" signal, it was said.

New York Associates Make Nominations

Jack Ellis, president, and Moe Sanders, vice-president, have been nominated for president of the Motion Picture Associates, New York. Mr. Ellis has held the position two years, and under his incumbency 67 new members were added. The membership now totals 230. Elections will be held in January.

Other nominations are: Vice-president, Jerry Wilson, Moe Streimer; second vice-president, Matty Cahn, Jack Rosenfield, Moe Kurtz; treasurer, Saul Trauner, Nat Beier; financial secretary, Charles Penser; recording secretary, Moe Freim, A. Weinberger; sergeant-at-arms, Louis Kutinsky, Abe Blumstein, Max Fried; trustees, two to be elected, Seymour Schussel and Joe J. Lee, incumbents, and Myron Starr and Jack Hattem.

NEELY BILL, FIGHT FILMS, COPYRIGHT, MAIN FILM ITEMS BEFORE CONGRESS

Legislative Interest Centers on Pressure for Approval of Anti-Block Booking Measure in House of Representatives

by FRANCIS L. BURT
in Washington

A motion picture industry under a barrage of Federal Government anti-trust suits and the impact of wars which have drastically reduced foreign markets will be faced with new assaults in the session of Congress which convenes next Wednesday as proponents of unit film selling press for prompt House action on the Neely block booking bill as passed by the Senate last July.

Neely Bill Passage Predicted

Of all the many measures affecting the industry now awaiting action in Congress none, in the view of competent Washington observers. is as near final enactment as the block booking bill. Supporters of the legislation are confident that, given any sort of a break, they can pass it without difficulty, and important interests in those branches of the industry—major producers-distributors—which will be most adversely affected have conceded the probabilities of House action, which would eventually send the bill to the White House for President Roosevelt's signature, after a half dozen years of battling through Congress.

Government officials, members of Congress and interested observers are agreed that the threat of block booking legislation is the result of producer-distributor refusal over a period of years to consider changes in their selling and distribution policies which would satisfy the complaints of exhibitors.

The curious repeal of the North Dakota divorce law, the failure of code negotiations with independent exhibitors, the delay tactics adopted in the handling of the New York suit which have aroused the deep resentment of Department of Justice officials, and the evasion of the basic issues during the many lengthy trade practice hearings on the subject before Congressional committees where, instead, a great show was made of the industry's virtuousness, are cited, by its exponents, as examples, which have served only to strengthen the position of the Neely bill

The civic associations backing the bill and some independent exhibitors who are determined to have it passed, if possible, will ask for prompt consideration of the measure by the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee.

Hearings Expected

Chairman Clarence F. Lea of California, opposed to the bill, has announced repeatedly in the past that he will not ask his committee to pass on it without exhaustive hearings. Because of the pressure of other legislation last session, it was possible to avoid such hearings, but whether that can be done again this year, in the face of steadily growing demand, appears doubtful to Capitol observers.

Once hearings are called, proponents are confident of their ability to substantiate their charges and secure a favorable report from the committee and, once the bill reaches the floor of the House, appear to be even more confident of its passage, not unmindful that 1940 is an election year.

Aside from the block booking bill there is only one other pending measure which is given much chance of enactment, the Barbour bill to lift the ban on the interstate transportation of fight pictures, also passed by the Senate last session and now before the committee.

FCC Reorganization Up

In the field of radio the outstanding measures are those providing for the reorganization of the Federal Communication Commission and for investigation of the commission's activities. The former was asked last session by President Roosevelt, who recently has been represented as so satisfied with the improvement in conditions within the commission under the leadership of its new chairman that he is ready to drop the plan, which would be the subject of bitter opposition and probably precipitate the investigation of the commission which Senate and House members have been demanding unsuccessfully for years.

Other pending bills dealing with radio include proposals for establishment of a Government broadcasting station, further experimentation with superpower, and restrictions on radio advertising. With respect to the last, a Senate committee last session held hearings on the Johnson bill to prohibit the broadcasting of liquor advertising and, after a split, submitted both majority and minority reports.

Aside from such legislation as may be directly aimed at the motion picture and radio industries, they will also be affected, in common with others, by such general measures as may be enacted with respect to taxes (on the basis of the Government's need for defense funds); reciprocal trade agreement (the present law expires by limitation June 12, next, and must be extended if new agreements are to be negotiated after that date); labor (on the basis of the Smith Committee investigation of the National Labor Relations Board); monopoly (on the basis of an expected report from the Temporary National Economic Committee), and similar subjects.

Short Session Seen

The coming session will be the last one of the present Administration provided it does not become necessary to call a special meeting between its adjournment and the end of the year, and Administration officials are anxious that it be kept as short as possible because of the political situation and the approaching presidential campaign.

To that end, it is expected thay will make every effort to avoid the raising of controversial issues which might prolong the meeting, even though to do so it may be necessary to defer to the 1941 session legislation of other than major immediate importance.

In the desire to curtail the length of the session is seen a possible failure of the Neely bill. Unless hearings are called early in the session and the committee reports the measure within a reasonable length of time, it is quite possible that it may be shoved off the calendar in the final rush for adjournment, particularly as it is not an Administration "must" measure.

N. Y. Allied Assails "Bombasts"; Brandt Pushes for Neely Attack

In the comparative quiet of the holiday week, organized exhibitor expressions on trade practice matters—always the subject of much day to day discussion, were confined for the most part to an attack made by New York Allied on those who attack the industry and another blast from the ITOA's Harry Brandt against the Neely bill, urging the Hays organization to conduct a vigorous battle against it.

The Allied attack was in a formal statement to the trade press. In part, it said the organization was "opposed to the practice of some leaders and so-called leaders of this industry making extravagant and bombastic statements as to prospective gross receipts, sales policies, playdates, and playing time, and other matters, which statements come to the attention of the public press" and that "such statements tend to lead to legislation, organization, regulation, and agitation . . ."

Meanwhile, Mr. Brandt, president of the Independent Theatre Owners' Association, and head of the New York circuit bearing his name, last week urged the directors of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, to organize the motion picture industry in opposition to the Neely Bill. Mr. Brandt said that many in the industry opposed the bill, but did not have an effective means of expression. Others know nothing of the bill, and still others know of the bill, but not of its potential harm to them, he said.

Mr. Brandt was to talk some more on the Neely Bill, Thursday, before the Associated Picture Advertisers in New York.

A "mass meeting of the industry" was called this week by Mr. Brandt's ITOA for January 3rd at the Hotel Astor, New York, the program to be an attack on the Neely Bill and promising no solicitation of funds. Distributors, circuits and independent interests were invited to bring all of their executives and all supply salesmen with whom they do business.

The possible effects of the Neely Bill on the production branch of the industry were to be discussed this week in Hollywood at a conference of representatives of the Screen Actors, Writers and Directors Guilds at which the official policy of the Guilds regarding the measure was to be decided.

Year Marked by New High In Quality Production

BEATING off attacks rear and frontal, direct and harassing, at home and abroad, the industry in the closing months of 1939 swung into action with its heaviest defense materiel—top flight production. While the home offices studied and planned and worried through war and flood, labor demands and budget cuts, legislation and litigation, Hollywood primped and prettied, outdid herself in reaching for the customers. Thus, at year's end there was much cause for pointing-with-pride even though many of the problems engendered since January—and before—remained to be settled.

Rumors of war, the war itself and its repercussions had vital effect on the film industry in America. The slow decline in foreign market revenue, marked since Europe first began to run a fever, culminated in September with the outbreak of actual conflict and the subsequent complete shutdown of some markets and radical reductions in others. In England sharp restrictions on currency withdrawals went into effect, followed by promises of permissive changes in the present Quota provisions. Meanwhile, in central Europe most of the motion picture market was absorbed by either the Hitler or Stalin circuits.

At home the war, in addition to its immediate effect, precipitated a labor crisis in production. Led by William Bioff, returned to control after a brief retirement, studio locals of the International Alliance of Theatrical and Stage Employees demanded and got a ten per cent increase, the demand having been put forward when indications first were given that reductions all around might be necessitated by the drop in foreign revenue. Subsequently, other American Federation of Labor locals in Hollywood, as well as the members of the four international brotherhoods, signatories to the basic labor contract, demanded and got similar increases.

The sore spots lumped by the industry under the general heading of trade practices were aggravated in some places, broke out anew in others, and in general achieved little relief. The perennial Congressional threat of an anti-block booking law was renewed by Senator Matthew M. Neely in the Senate and approved there shortly before adjournment in midsummer. Indications were that the attempt would be made again at this session. Fulfilling their promise of late last year, distributors conferred with exhibitors and produced, after long discussion and repeated revisions, a code for the voluntary regulation of trade practices. Exhibitor acceptance was good, except for the Allied States Association's official attack on the completed draft, but at the last minute Thurman Arnold, conducting the Department of Justice's anti-trust activities against the industry, ruled that the code would be illegal if put into effect.

Mr. Arnold was often in the news during the year with reports of new litigation directed against alleged anti-trust and monopolistic activities on the part of the industry in distribution and exhibition. The suit in equity filed last year in New York achieved the distinction of becoming known as the Government's key action. Postponements and attorneys' preliminary exchanges delayed actual hearings, now set for May 1.

Double bills and chance games were attacked and defended but remained in about the same proportion; exhibitor practice in the matter of extended runs and admission prices came in for discussion and, later, direct criticism from producers; television, launched publicly at the New York World's Fair, came closer but missed the threatening proportions assigned it by the film industry pessimists.

Production reached a crescendo at year's end with the new, the different, and the colossal, and Mickey Rooney led all the rest in the Money Making Stars poll.

PARAMOUNT NEWS REVIEWS THE YEAR

"George Washington's vision of the economical and political problems which have produced chaotic conditions throughout the world today and his warning to the people of the United States to safeguard the freedom and liberties of their democratic government," is the text of the annual film review of the news of 1939 compiled by Paramount News, it was announced this week by A. J. Richard, editor. The Washington text was taken from his farewell address, delivered in 1796.

The review, described as an "editorial on film," and titled "Year of Dark Contrasts" will be released to theatres as a regular issue of Paramount News on Saturday, December 30th. The review is 1,350 feet long, some 475 feet longer than the average newsreel edition.

"Year of Dark Contrasts" is the second documentary review issued by Paramount News. The first review covered the news highlights of 1938.

December 23

Mickey Rooney projects his personality in annual Motion Picture Herald-Fame poll of Money Making Stars. Industry expects little from Santa Claus.

Universal Drive To Honor Scully

A Universal sales drive in honor of William A. Scully, general sales manager, will be held from December 31st to May 4th. Plans were formed by the district sales managers at a meeting at the home office following a report of Nate Blumberg, president, on the product for the balance of the current season.

The drive will set the east under F. J. A. McCarthy, eastern sales manager, against the west, headed by William J. Heineman, western sales manager.

William A. Scully begins his third year with Universal on January 1st. For 20 years he was in the MGM sales force, where he was eastern division manager from 1930 until he joined Universal as general sales manager in 1938.

Jeanette MacDonald To Tour

Jeanette MacDonald will begin a concert tour on February 12th, continuing until April 30th. She will open the tour in the southwest.

N. Y. Legislature To Get Measures Affecting Films

Convening of New York State's 1940 legislaure on next Wednesday will find marked interest in exhibitor circles in contrast to previous legislative indifference in view of the theatre giveaway, "Bingo" and pari-mutuel horse race betting situation. November's overwhelming majority for pari-mutuel betting, which carried by more than 600,000 votes and the subsequent plans all over the state for new racetracks with 40 cent tops and night racing, has caused the drastic change in interest since its immediate effects on film box offices start to show.

Adding to the exhibitor interest, too, is the scheduled fight to legalize Bingo on the one part, to ban theatre giveaways by another group and the perennial Harry Brandt-Civil Liberties move to repeal the state's motion picture censorship law. The latter's previous tempest-in-a-teapot ordinarily began with a flurry of publicity when the bill was introduced.

Pari-mutuel betting and the "Bingo" situation, however, are two red-hot irons to be straightened out by the 1940 legislature. The people's mandate in favor of "iron man control" of horse race betting will not be effectuated until the legislature sets up an enabling act. As to "bingo" and giveaways, the wedge driven by the constitutional liberalization of the anti-gambling statute is taken to signalize an immediate drive further ahead.

Comforting to exhibitors was the announcement that a dollar admission minimum "floor" will be written into the bill to be sponsored by Senator John J. Dunnigan of the Bronx, Democratic minority leader, who is the author of the pari-mutuel amendment. Senator Dunnigan's bill allegedly will provide a twelve and one-half per cent "take" of the pari-mutuel daily bets with track operators due to receive seven and one-half per cent and the state five per cent.

Pari-mutuel betting is expected to have its troubles in the Assembly, when only a terrific personal drive by Assemblyman Anthony J. Canney of Buffalo succeeded in pushing over enough votes to insure final passage last May. In the lower house there are represented districts which voted against pari-mutuels, notably Saratoga County, home of the Benton Circuit and Fulton and Gloversville, headquarters of the Schine Circuit. It is taken for granted that representatives of those rural districts will reflect the voting sentiment, as in the past both Saratoga and Fulton Assemblymen have vigorously fought pari-mutuels.

Assemblyman Max Turshen of Brooklyn has already stated that "Bingo" will be legalized in 1940, and that there will be a vigorous drive is not doubted in Albany.

IATSE's perennial fight for two-men-in-a-booth bill, backed by the executive council of the AFL, is scheduled to be reintroduced by Assemblyman Robert J. Crews of Brooklyn, who got a vote on the bill in the lower house in 1939 and expects to pass it in 1940, an election year.

The customary bills directed against chain stores and theatres, taxation entreaties, provisions for more matrons in theatres during children's hours and a score of miscellaneous measures affecting exhibitors interests will likely be proposed.

Chief legislative accomplishment of 1939 was the Owens bill, which has since allowed several small exhibitors to force Sunday movies through initiation of a petition for special elections on the subject.

"SHOW MUST GO ON" KEYNOTES WAR REGULATIONS FOR TRADE IN BRITAIN

Theatre Operations in London's West End Near Normal After Closing Hour Adjustment; New Exhibition Rules Issued

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Gradually but emphatically, and as foreshadowed in these columns, the British exhibitor, who fortunately never lost his head in the most trying and anxious days of the War, is adapting himself to the new conditions of trading and operation. Out of the crucible of conflict a very slightly altered shape is being moulded around him, so little altered in essentials, that his financial status is for the most part, and with but rare exceptions, no worse than it was ere the barrage balloons went up.

West End Reverts to Normal

The picture houses of Britain, thanks to a longview being taken by the police authorities, and thanks, no less, to a steadily sane and reasoned attitude on the part of Panton Street, and the headquarters staff of the CEA, are now open for precisely the same hours as in peace time. The last phalanx of Home Office doubt has been conquered, and the West End, traditional resort of the pleasure seeking townsman has reverted to normal hours.

New conditions of licensing applying to measures of safety have been imposed by Whitehall authority. They are arduous but not revolutionary, accepted too, as a low price to pay for the right to operate in a wartime body social. Specially cautious but by no means despicable relaxations of lighting rules are considered imminent. They will be trivial but they will be at least an assistance to further persuading the public that there is no reason why they should not still go to the pictures.

The gradual extension of opening hours to the prewar eleven p. m. and later has been watched and welcomed by exhibitors all over the country. They did not expect that it would make any considerable difference in returns though the difference was not to be disdained. Arguments, already outlined in MOTION PICTURE HERALD, were that the early closing meant the deprivation of an evening's entertainment. From many factory and shop workers who could not get to the picture house before seven thirty or eight,—just too late to see the whole show through.

Transport Remains Difficult

The continued restrictions on transport, also chronicled on this page, remain the most difficult snag. The absence of late trams and busses, services of which have been cut consistently and increasingly, still keeps patrons living beyond walking distance, from the picture houses. Petrol restrictions in wartime Britain are still severe, and with the need for strict economy transport authorities are loth to relax them. Few if any cases are on record of late bus and tram services being restored since the opening hours of cinemas were extended. Rural and country areas, and some central houses in industrial towns are the most affected.

Until transport services are improved and extended the full value of the new concessions are not likely to be felt. It is possible that in some areas an adjustment of schedules with cuts in midday services permitting later night buses will have an effect upon receipts. How much this will be appreciated can be gauged when it is noted that even under the present conditions trade is, in general, almost back at normal.

The same, however, cannot be said of the London West End which stands in a position peculiar to itself, no longer, because of the blackout, the thronged Mecca of merrymaking it was before they shut off the street lamps, never strong as a residential resort. Pending the restoration of normal conditions, a state of normal trading is not expected, nor is it likely to be restored.

FINNISH RELIEF AIDED BY UNIONS, DIPLOMATS

Screen, stage and radio unions are working in cooperation with Matthew Woll, vice-president of the American Federation of Labor, in arranging a benefit to aid the Finnish relief fund which is directed by former president Herbert Hoover.

Diplomats have arranged a concert presenting Kirsten Flagstad, Karin Branzell, Lauritz Melchior and Lawrence Tibbett and the National Broadcasting Company orchestras. Proceeds from the benefit are for Lotta Svaerd Finnish woman's organization.

Big Grosses Exceptional

Big pictures—witness the success of Warners' "Juarez" and of the Leicester Square run of "Lion Has Wings" have succeeded in restoring takings to pre-war average. The occasions are, however, near-phenomena, rather than normal manifestations. People still go to West End picture houses and still eat and dance in West End restaurants. They do so probably about fifty percent or less than in prewar days. Not only the blackout, but the decrease in foreign and provincial visitors to town is greatly responsible.

The concession of the extra hour, however, is welcomed by exhibitor interests. It will, it is calculated, mean in many cases the difference between operating at a loss and doing so at a profit—however meagre. Official concern remains intense at the problem of crowds in the West End in a time of potential air raiding. It is the wish of the Home Office and police that as few people as possible be in the heart of London during the hours of darkness. Congestion on railway and bus routes and the numerical differences between theatre and restaurant accommodation and accommodation in air raid shelters have prevented the decision being made until this late hour. As it is the concession was only arrived at after a bitter struggle. Cinemas now are allowed to close at eleven—or later, according to their license,—provided the houses operate in groups working on a staggering principle as regards the time of screening the last feature. In some cases this must be not later than 10:30, in others 10:40, in others 10:50 and in the last group 11:15.

Meanwhile West End houses are making a bid to get further concessions on exterior and vestibule lighting. No direct light is permitted on theatre or shop fronts though a certain minor concession has been allowed shops for the Christmas season. With this last as arguing point cinema interests have asked for permission to increase lighting on vestibules and for the use of fluorescent devices on facias and fronts. A liason committee is at present working with the police.

Fluorescent Posters Used

Lighting must be dimmed to a minimum in vestibules and no direct illumination may be visible from outside. Many cinemas use lighting devices whereby ultra violet lamps are directed on posters treated in fluorescent paint. These, invisible from 100 yards distance, give good results as displays. They are limited by police regulation to one for each entrance and must not be larger than 2 ft. by 3 ft. Even this makeshift device is frowned on by the authorities, though it is said to be invisible from the air.

The economic side of this is not without interest. The average cost of ultra violet lamp, paint, and poster is not more than £15, and running costs are only £1 weekly. This is a contrast to the pre-war lighting and display bill which more often than not totalled between £175 and £200. Picture house audiences in London's West End are known to go shopping for their pictures and a little extra lighting will assist competition. Any concession in the Central London area will, it is certain, be quoted as a precedent and in due course find itself duplicated in the wider country areas where cinemas operate in total exterior darkness and a vestibule dimness akin to that of a well tended morgue.

The new conditions which are being imposed on exhibitors for purposes of public safety are not, fortunately, likely to have any ill effect upon trade. They will mean the expenditure of a few pounds a week more in staff training and the treatment of premises, but so far exhibitors have not complained.

Show Must Go On

Keynote of the regulations is the suggestion that even during bombing raids, the show should go on. This climactic lead on policy, devised by the Home Office, is significant, and is so regarded by exhibitors, taken in fact as an official blessing on the business and a seal of Governmental approval on its operations.

The conditions are to be uniformly applied by licensing bodies all over the country. They demand that all glass roofs and sky lights be removed and replaced by non splinterable material, or alternatively be guarded on the underside by wire netting of close mesh. Windows and doors to the street must be protected and chandeliers and glass fittings removed or so protected that there be no danger if explosions or blasts occur.

Ventilation plants must be closed in gas raids and refrigeration plants using toxic or inflammable gases are prohibited. Shelter must be provided for staffs and performers, a man trained in fire protection and the staff fully instructed not only in the use of fire fighting but in first aid and anti-gas precautions.

Standing is discouraged and matinees for children in exacuated areas are forbidden. And when the raids do occur the audience must be warned from the stage and recommended to stay and see the show—though, of course, they may go elsewhere if they want to. The show in fact should go on. And so far as the film industry is concerned, in spite of blackouts and bombs, it is going on.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

You probably have no idea what they're doing in sound these days outside of the motion picture business. A man known to the New York Times' Meyer Berger who has a sound equipment shop in Forty-third Street, says that even undertakers' shops are using amplified recordings for funeral services.

"Suppose you were a lover of music," he told us, "and your family wanted to do the right thing by you. They could take you to the most humble chapel and there they could give you the swellest organ recorded concert and full choirs at minimum cost. If they wanted they could even take a full recording of the service and play it on the anniversary, if you know what I mean."

Meyer told him, unhappily, he knew exactly what he meant, hoping he'd drop the subject right there. The man didn't, though. He went on to explain a little amplifier that will bring your heartbeat up about 10,000 times louder than normal.

"My idea," he explained eagerly, "is that any one could hook this up—if he couldn't sleep, say—and listen to his own heart beat in the dead of night. The monotony of it would do the trick."

That night Berger didn't sleep at all. He tossed till daybreak through nightmares in which a ten-ton monster pounded at his head with a triphammer.

As the Sun would have it, the British and their Commander Burney had all to do with the sweeping the seas of German mines. But one Mr. Tom F. Barry, of Jackson Heights, Long Island, thinks differently, documentarily so, for he cites the movies' own Dudley Nichols, screen writer, for a gadget that swept 56,000 mines from the oceans

"International records will show," writes Mr. Barry to the Sun, "that the most valuable contribution to the ridding of the seas of mines was made by Lieutenant (J. G.) Dudley Nichols, ex-World reporter, and adapter of such screen hits as 'The Informer,' 'The Hurricane,' 'Steamboat 'Round the Bend,' 'Seas Beneath,' 'The Lost Patrol,' 'Plough and the Stars,' ad infinitum. It was the screwy invention of Nichols, an electrical engineer before he became a reporter and later a playwright, that won the plaudits of the navies of the world—and this before he won the Movie Academy's Oscar.

"It was with Nichols gadget that 56,000 mines were swept up in the North Sea by the Yankee Suicide Fleet without the loss of a man or ship. Before that the United States Suicide Squadron lost 18 trawlers—some of which the British generously rented us at slightly above the usual trawler rate."

This omission is due to the fact that Twentieth Century-Fox has an exclusive contract with the official guardians of the babies for the appearance of the quints in motion pictures. Not even historical pictures of scenes with England's King and Queen are exceptions.

Dummies are not so numerous in Hollywood—at least the stuffed dummy variety—as they were a few years ago, for the Screen Actors' Guild has fixed it so that "fake humans" appear in films only when the scene involves definite risk of death, as discussed in "The Real Glory," new Samuel Goldwyn film.

The little man with sucked-in cheeks who polishes boots under the Paramount Theatre marquee in New York's Times Square has just finished a survey on midtown pigeons. Conditions, he finds, are pretty bad.

Housewreckers have dispossessed somewhere between 2,500 and 3,000 birds within a block of the Square, the way he figures—about 1,000 from the building where Gray's Ticket Agency and the George M. Cohan Theatre were, between 1,200 and 1,500 from the demolished Hippodrome Theatre and another 600 or so from the little red church just west of the Times Annex, also razed.

A low-flying flock tore eastward from Eighth Avenue even as the little man spoke. The birds wheeled hysterically over the Times Square police information booth and tore west again.

"They do that all day," the little man bemoaned. "They've gone cuckoo."

MOTION PICTURE HERALD

Raffles

(UA-Goldwyn)

Full Dress Melodrama

Samuel Goldwyn's presentation of the "Amateur Cracksman" adventures written by E. W. Hornung is as up-to-date as 1940, as well groomed as the models in "Esquire's" ad pages, and as stimulating as the "Raffles" stories always were. Dapper David Niven makes the gentlemanly thief a wholly credible and handsomely fascinating fellow, mannerly, adroit without overdoing it.

The production is in the best Goldwyn tradition, finely acted in every department, smoothly put together and wearing the high gloss of expert workmanship. Olivia De Havilland, overnight a stronger box office name for her performance in "Gone with the Wind," is an eminently satisfactory heart interest. Dudley Digges plays the Scotland Yard operative as to the profession born, and all members of the large cast fit their characters utterly.

Director Sam Wood and the late Sidney Howard, who collaborated with John Van Druten on the screen play, are others whose names, already distinguished, take on added marquee merit from their connection with the now thriving "Wind." The work of all three of these is highly satisfactory and vitally important.

The handling of the moral equation is nicely managed. The thief is successful in all his stealings but returns the stolen property in each case. He escapes from the detectives at the end of the picture but makes an appointment to return and surrender shortly thereafter, the inspector taking his word for it and thus reassuring the audience that the proper price will be paid for his crimes.

Previewed at Warners' Hollywood Theatre in Hollywood to the manifest satisfaction of all present.—W. R. W.

"Best" Films, Books Picked For the Year

The customary year-end practice of voting outstanding productions and performances of the year was further extended this week by the selection of films and players by reviewers of the National Board of Review, selection of the best books, by the publishers of The Retail Bookseller, and various other selections.

Motion Picture Herald's annual poll on the "Biggest Money-Making Stars," only one of its kind, in which exhibitors, actual buyers of films, select stars based on actual box office experience, appeared in the last issue, starting on page 13; the Herald's annual poll of British exhibitors, likewise listing Money-Making Stars, appears in this issue, starting on page 15.

"Wuthering Heights," produced by Samuel Goldwyn and released by United Artists was chosen as the "best" picture of the year by the New York film critics.

Other selections include: Best actor, James Stewart, for "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington"; best actress, Vivien Leigh for her "Scarlett O'Hara" in "Gone with the Wind"; best direction, John Ford for "Stagecoach" and best foreign language picture, "Harvest," French Cinema Center release.

The awards will be presented at a reception in the Rainbow Room, Rockefeller Center, January 7th, which will be broadcast over a nationwide National Broadcasting Company network.

One third of the books listed as "The Year's Best Sellers" by the publishers of The Retail Bookseller, were purchased for films, including the first four: "Grapes of Wrath," "Rebecca," "All This and Heaven Too" and "Disputed Passage"; also, "The Tree of Liberty," which was listed seventh. Of the remaining 10 pieces of "best" fiction, several are not considered film material. The remaining 10 are: "Escape," "Kitty Foyle," "The Patriot," "Wickford Point," "Song of Years," Christmas Holiday," "Three Harbours," "Christ in Concrete," "Black Narcissus" and "The Nazarene."

"Drunk Driving," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer "Crime Does Not Pay" short subject, has received the endorsement of the Board of Officers of the International Association of Chiefs of Police, in a resolution adopted at their quarterly meeting held the other day in Chicago, as the motion picture "which dramatically sets forth the dangers of driving after drinking in a manner which will appeal to all persons."

The National Board of Review of Motion Pictures made announcement of the following choices of its Committee on Exceptional Photoplays, on the basis of "artistic merit and importance."

Best English-language film, "Confessions of a Nazi Spy"; best foreign-language film, "Port of Shadows"; best film of the year from any country, "Confessions of a Nazi Spy."

The ten best English-language films, in order of preference: "Confessions of a Nazi Spy," "Wuthering Heights," "Stage Coach," "Ninotchka," "Young Mr. Lincoln," "Crisis," "Goodbye Mr. Chips," "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," "The Roaring Twenties" and "U-Boat 29."

Five foreign-language films were selected, in order of preference: "Port of Shadows," "Harvest," "Alexander Nevsky," "The End of a Day" and "Robert Koch."

On the basis of "popular appeal," the review committees of the Board choose the following in order of preference: "Goodbye Mr. Chips," "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," "Ninotchka," "Pygmalion," "The Old Maid," "Wuthering Heights," "Dark Victory," "Juarez," "The Wizard of Oz" and "Love Affair."

FROM READERS

Editor, Motion Picture Herald:

Will you let an exhibitor who is interested in Metro's "Gone with the Wind" have his say?

The delaying of this picture for general release until 1941 to most of the exhibitors in this section, and I have seen a lot of them, is short-sighted on Metro's part.

I think that if that picture is roadshown for a full year Metro will find that the water has gone over the dam, when it comes time for the small town.

Any time it is played it will do business, but the public interest is now, and not in 1941.

I don't think that they are serving the best interests of their old accounts, who have been with them these many years, not to let them have a shot at this picture within the next six months.

The Committee on Exceptional Photoplays considers the following screen performances worthy of special praise; the preferences are listed alphabetically: James Cagney in "The Roaring Twenties," Bette Davis in "Dark Vicory," and "The Old Maid," Geraldine Fitzgerald in "Wuthering Heights" and "Dark Victory," Henry Fonda in "Young Mr. Lincoln," Jean Gabin in "Port of Shadows," Greta Garbo in "Ninotchka," Francis Lederer in "Confessions of a Nazi Spy," Paul Lukas in "Confessions of a Nazi Spy," Thomas Mitchell in "Stage Coach," Laurence Olivier in "Wuthering Heights," Flora Robson in "We Are Not Alone," Michel Simon in "Port of Shadows" and "The End of a Day."

The nation-wide 4-Star Clubs, which are the junior field groups of the National Board of Review, also made their annual selection of the ten best pictures of the year ending December 1st. The boys and girls, ranging in age from nine to 17, make their selections in advance of any published lists made by older groups or critics. The voting resulted in the following list of "Ten Best": "Goodbye Mr. Chips," "The Old Maid," "Wuthering Heights," "Stanley and Livingstone," "Pygmalion," "The Wizard of Oz," "Dark Victory," "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," "Drums Along the Mohawk," "Beau Geste."

Pledge to Combat Tuesday Draw of Radio Prize Show

Cincinnati exhibitors attending the first of three Ohio regional meetings at the Netherland Plaza in Cincinnati last week, pledged unanimous support to P. J. Wood, secretary of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, in his proposed program to combat the slump in Tuesday night theatre attendance by offering to double the amount of the "Pot o' Gold"—Tums radio program—to the winner who is in a member theatre when his telephone is rung.

Mr. Wood explained that each participating theatre would be assessed three cents per seat at the outset, and that a minimum of 200,000 seats would be required before the plan would be put into effect. Pro rata assessments would be made in the event of any sum being paid out of the $6,000 deposit, which would be kept in a designated Ohio depository. Pro rata refunds also would be made at the termination of the campaign. The plan would be for operation on a non-profit basis.

Other meetings were held in Cleveland and Columbus.

A formal complaint was filed this week with the Federal Communications Commission by the Co-Operative Theatres of Michigan through Thomas McGuire, public relations director, claiming that the "Pot o' Gold" radio program violates Section 316 of the Communications Act.

German Studios Claim Capacity Production

The German film studios are working at full capacity, in some cases accommodating night and day shifts working on different pictures, publicity announcements from the Tobis Cinema offices in Berlin claim. According to the Tobis release, 23 of 45 featured scheduled by the company for the 1939-40 season have been completed and five more are in production.

In the Deutschlandhalle studios Paul Heidemann is directing "Honeymoon" and Hans Deppe is producing "Beware the Legacy." "What a Man" is being directed in the Johannistal Studios by Fritz Peter Kuch and Victor de Kowa is shooting the final scenes for "Casanova Marries" on the same lot. Also in production there is "A Tip on Amalia."

Recent Tobis releases, according to the announcement, are: "Renate and the Quartet," "Wibbel the Tailor," "Always Nagging," "The Immortal Waltz," and "Robert Koch, Victor Over Death," with Emil Jannings both producing the picture and starring in it.

Sack and Alliance in Deal

Sack Amusement Enterprises has signed a franchise with Budd Rogers, vice-president and general manager of Alliance Films Corporation, to distribute the 12 Alliance feature pictures throughout the southern territory taking in Atlanta, Charlotte, New Orleans, Dallas, Little Rock and Oklahoma City.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

No Dice

A treasure-less Christmas was spent in Hollywood by Ray Johnson and Henry Jones this year. The venturesome pair, whose efforts in behalf of the treasure popularly supposed to have been buried by the Spaniards years ago included the digging of a pit some 42 feet deep, manfully admitted defeat this week and filled the hole again.

As described in Motion Picture Herald of December 9th, Mr. Johnson and Mr. Jones, after agreeing to split what they found on a 50-50 basis with Los Angeles County, went to work by digging furiously in the parking lot of the Hollywood Bowl, in a search for buried loot.

More insistent than the humans for whom it was working was the electric metrograph, popularly referred to as "the doodlebug," which had guided them in their search. To the bitter end, it "doodled," not at all deterred by the water and boulders which had been encountered about 40 feet down.

Mr. Johnson and Mr. Jones are still sure there is "gold down there." If so, it bids fair to remain a while.

Caveat Emptor

The self-styled "Ghost of Hollywood" gracefully put the old year, 1939, out of the way this week before an awe-struck congregation sitting in a stucco building abounding in Moorish minarets. The "Ghost," also known to the habitues of her temple as the Reverend Violet Greener, reminded the faithful sitting in her Agabeg Occult Church of her successful predictions last year, and promised a preview of what 1940 held in store at her next session, billed for January ninth.

The good people of Hollywood, for a modest admission fee of 50 cents, may enter the temple at 7:30 in the evening and there allow the soothing strains of organ music to relax the tired, relieve the strained. Promptly at 8:00, the "Ghost" walks on the stage, standing before a fountain playing amidst colored lights.

Harmony is made complete by colorful ensembles on the rostrum—against a light green wall stands the "Ghost," dressed in an apple green crepe gown with a red bodice and a gold sequin jacket, so your correspondent was assured by his companion. The Reverend Greener's contribution to local color is completed by silver slippers and a huge green handkerchief, while rhinestone clips were much in evidence, including a pair which adorned her strikingly white hair.

An imperious snap of the Ghost's fingers and the organ threnody quiets down to a mere whisper; another snap, and orange lights glow behind the etched glass partitions on the sides of the rostrum. Down the purple carpet covering the stage and aisles of the black and white patterned linoleum floor comes the "Ghost," after a suitable period of communication with the informational ether.

As she slowly approaches those seated in front of the house, the majestic figure is magnificently outlined against a mural back of the rostrum. This is the work of a Mr. Casey Roberts of the Hamilton Galleries and represents the "Tree of Life," according to program notes. On the branches are pictured such leaders and prophets as Lao Tsze, Zoroaster, Quan-Yin and Tonatiuh, the latter pair being respectively Chinese Goddess of Mercy and Sun God of the Aztecs.

Screen credits are also given on the program, lighting effects being handled by Mr. Dan B. Fisher, while the Ghost's gowns and coiffure are respectively the work of Raymon and of Don.

While the lights shine softly and the fountain tinkles, the vibrations of those in attendance are individually contacted and analyzed with suave rapidity by the softly stepping Ghost. The pattern for all is the same, as it is in many great enterprises. It was this same direction and simplicity which accounted for the success of the American automobile, with its continuous flow of manufacturing operation.

Amidst such personalized items as the naming of friends or associates, the classification of ills, the categorizing of types of work, one is always told that if the person named is not yet known, he will be, as the ill will be experienced, the work done. Your correspondent was at first a little jarred by the apparent clairvoyance which divined a recent trip from the East, only to be reassured on hearing it repeated later and with variations, native Californians being rare phenomena in the region of Hollywood.

By 9:15 all was still in the temple. The final blessing had sent the flock quietly home, still uplifted by the closing benediction: "May the peace of Allah be with you."

PRODUCTION IN HOLIDAY SLUMP

Hollywood, this week, in a holiday mood, started four pictures, five less than last week; finished six, compared to the nine of the week before; had 39 shooting, as against last week's 41; prepared 15, the same number as for the preceding period, and had 69 being edited, compared to 72 last week.

Twentieth Century-Fox started "I Was an Adventuress"; Warner Brothers began work on "Married, Pretty and Poor," and Producers Pictures put "Swift Justice" and "The Sagebrush Family Rides On" in work.

Paramount finished two: "Buck Benny Rides Again" and "The Way of All Flesh"; Producers Pictures, "The Sagebrush Family Trails West"; Republic, "The Wolf of New York"; Hal Roach, for United Artists release, "1,000,000 B. C." and Twentieth Century-Fox, "Shooting High."

Three short subjects were finished, two by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and one by Columbia, while none were started. MGM had one shooting; and four were being prepared, two at Warner Brothers and one apiece at Columbia and RKO Radio. Being edited were 12: six at Columbia, four at Warners and two at MGM.

Meet John Steinbeck

Veteran, venturesome Hal Roach, hero of more professional vicissitudes than most men of films encounter in a brace of lifetimes, here introduces grim, bitter John Steinbeck to motion picture audiences. Especially interested observer of the Roach risk must be young, likewise venturesome Darryl Zanuck, sitting tight just now on the lid of Steinbeck's more controversial "The Grapes of Wrath," kindred in setting, personnel and theme to the book, later stage play, with which Mr. Roach sets out to sample the cinema appetite.

Neither Mr. Roach nor Mr. Zanuck knows whether the stern, socially conscious Steinbeck is screen material. It has been made known to a large sector of the population, by the Steinbeck books and perhaps even more widely by the literary critics' extensive writings about them, that Mr. Steinbeck specializes in vivid representations of beaten personalities offered as typical of beaten classes. He has been hailed as an artist whose materials merely happen to be these and, again, as a crusader who happens to employ a singularly unlovely variety of artistic tools to accomplish his crusading. He is almost never accused of trying merely to make his works sell well by filling them with vile words, although they do sell and are crammed with them. It is this merely commercial aspect of the Steinbeck works, in all probability, that would move two such different men as Hal Roach and Darryl Zanuck to invest capital in the production of films based on these works and intended for commercial exhibition.

"Of Mice and Men" presents, as does "The Grapes of Wrath" somewhat more fully and with additional connotations, an impression of life as it is lived by the "bindle stiffs" of the California ranch country. "Bindle stiffs" are, in short, men who work hard for long hours at small pay in harvesting the various crops grown in California. Steinbeck depicts their lives as desperate, futureless, underprivileged, and the men as physically strong, mentally weak, innocently animal, victims of their estate and blunderingly aggravating it.

The Steinbeck books are vehemently unpretty, violently drab. The Steinbeck talent is for disclosing something ugly and exploring it thoroughly, persistently. Steinbeck books attract readers who like to sit with him while he pores morbidly over extreme examples of human degradation and discourses on the forces which degraded them. He paints shocking pictures shockingly well.

The Steinbeck story which Mr. Roach has placed upon the screen is as drab as the book and play it came from. It lacks only the four-letter Steinbeck words to give the whole Steinbeck effect. It makes a further slight concession to cinema necessities by giving a murderer into custody at the end of the story, whereas Steinbeck let him go free.

Producer-director Lewis Milestone, associate producer Frank Ross and screen playwright Eugene Solow transferred the story to screen with great skill. Their picture is highly articulate, gracefully assembled, technologically high grade. They deserve a special sort of credit for an innovation sure to be widely copied, the starting of the action of the picture without explanation of any kind a full minute before title and credits are displayed, an effective and altogether worthy device.

Similarly professional credit is due the several players for artful portrayal of the unanimously unattractive characterizations assigned them. It may or may not be an easier chore to depict an unpleasant person than a pleasant one, an even easier one to portray a character of a sort nobody has ever had to portray on the screen before, but this is beside the point. The players make all of the characters seem wholly real.

The story is about two laborers, one a moderately bright fellow, the other a half-wit who doesn't know his strength and frequently kills the object of his infantile affections by uncomprehending exercise of his gigantic gentleness. His companion is part friend, part guardian, but mostly companion, and when the hulking imbecile inadvertently kills a girl he shoots the imbecile so the authorities won't catch him and confine him in an asylum.

Just as neither Mr. Roach nor Mr. Zanuck can know, prior to test, whether cinema audiences are going to care for this kind of thing, neither does your reporter. That matter, it would appear, is one for the exhibitor to find out for himself—by experience.

The Earl of Chicago

(M-G-M)

Melodrama of Manners

Novel in many ways and expertly produced in every respect, this film made in Hollywood by Victor Saville displays the same high gloss as his "Goodbye Mr. Chips" and "The Citadel." It is shrewdly composed, superbly mounted and finely acted by a predominantly male cast headed by Robert Montgomery in his best performance to date. It is equally appropriate for exhibition in the Empire and in the States.

Charles de Grandcourt and Gene Fowler adapted the story from the Brock Williams novel of the same name and Lesser Samuels is credited with the screen play, a smooth running narrative told in well wrought dialogue and with ample incident. The story is of a Chicago gangster who turns out to be heir to an earldom and goes to England for the purpose of selling it, learns that he cannot and that his second in command has purposefully wrecked his Chicago liquor business in retaliation for an early double cross. He has learned enough about British tradition to have begun to like being an earl but his gangster training moves him to murder his associate, whereafter he goes to his death on the gallows with a dignity befitting his birth.

Richard Thorpe directed with rare discernment of values. The gangster's reactions to his London experiences are masterfully depicted, humour being always the servant of narrative and both of character development. Ceremonies attendant upon his admittance to the House of Lords and his subsequent trial for murder by that body are especially rich in entertainment content.

Over the Moon

(London - United Artists)

Romantic Comedy

The history of this Alexander Korda production—it was started a long while back, interrupted and re-started—would seem to be reflected to some extent in the finished product. It has all the signs of an early Korda creation, in both style and matter, and is not above the criticism of wandering. Its major selling angle is the starring role it affords the now established Merle Oberon.

Whether the color treatment is an asset, despite the lavish photography in Venice, St. Moritz and Monte Carlo, is for the exhibitor to decide.

For the English market the cast, apart from Miss Oberon, has one or two better known names such as Rex Harrison, Ursula Jeans, Zena Dare and Robert Douglas.

In a narrative sense, "Over the Moon" is a sophisticated trifle, with script by Anthony Pellissier and Alec Coppel from a story by Robert Sherwood and London Films' own Lajos Biro. Arthur Wimperis' dialogue, which peppers the picture, is recognisable.

Miss Oberon appears as a young woman who comes into $75,000,000, and, while gaining numerous social parasites, loses a young doctor

Into this slender structure are woven plenty of sophisticated situations of the bedroom and ballroom type, a great deal of burlesque on the English aristocracy and a lavish dressing of social badinage and backchat in the Wimperis manner.

The camerawork is very creditable, though the colour at times runs a little thin. The costuming is a definite asset.

Shown to an all trade London audience at the Cambridge theatre, the picture was accepted with good grace. Exhibitor opinion seemed to lie in the direction of woman appeal.—AUBREY FLANAGAN.

City of Chance

(Twentieth Century-Fox)

The Gambling Instinct

Confining its activities to the events of one night at an exclusive gambling resort, "City of Chance" is a "Grand Hotel" in miniature. Depicted are the currents and cross-currents in the lives of the owners, the patrons and a girl reporter in love with one of the partners operating the establishment.

Starting on a fresh note by using the newsreel technique of a rapid sequence of correlated shots to show the universality of gambling in one form or another in a large city, the picture develops along melodramatic lines. C. Aubrey Smith and Donald Woods are the partners, Lynn Bari the girl in the case, on a reportorial mission which misses fire because of her love for Woods; Amanda Duff the recently married society miss being blackmailed, Richard Lane the gangster who wants to get control of the house by any means at his command.

Sol. M. Wurtzel was executive producer, with Ricardo Cortez directing, from an original screen play by John Larkin and Barry Trivers.

The film is at its best in its moments of comedy; the element of suspense being strained.

Laugh It Off

(Universal)

Comedy-Romance

Johnny Downs and Constance Moore return again as a team in another Universal musical-comedy romance. Johnny continues as the orchestra leader and Miss Moore renders what little vocalization there is in the picture. Edgar Kennedy as the "slow-burning" court judge does more than his share to uphold the comedy angle of the film.

"Laugh It Off" was produced and directed by Albert S. Rogell, filmed from the screenplay by Harry Cloak with music written by Ben Oakland and Sam Lerner.

A group of old-time actresses, portrayed by Majorie Rambeau, Cecil Cunningham, Hedda Hopper and Janet Beecher, down on their luck, return to Broadway and score new fame effecting swing and jitterbug dancing. The ladies get mixed with a rival pair of gamblers with the result that the ancient chorines take over a bankrupt gambling club and organize a musical revue that becomes a sensation.

The remaining cast includes William Demarest and Horace MacMahone as the rival gangsters and Tom Dugan as the combination butler-bodyguard.

The Middle Watch

(Associated British)

Naval Comedy

The ancient legend that "a sailor has a girl in every port" plus the established tradition that "every nice girl loves a sailor" probably accounts for the perennial popularity of "The Middle Watch," and for Walter Mycroft's decision to remake it once again. With the Navy currently before the public eye and its sons deeply in the public heart, there is little doubt that a certain consumer public is already assured for its refined naughtinesses and elegant gaucheries. The new version has Jack Buchanan as its star handle, and though the musical comedian has been graced with more fruitful roles his name will probably help pull them in.

The comedy constituents of the farce are legendary, and are principally those of women aboard ship, cuties in the Admiral's cabin, low comedy from the lower deck, and a righteous aunt with a past involving ninety-five sailors. It all revolves around the presence of two girls on H.M.S. "Falcon" and the efforts of "Captain Maitland"—Jack Buchanan—and "Commander Baddeley"—David Hutcheson,—to hide them from the eagle eye and gingered tongue of the Admiral. There is much stagey running in and out of cabins, use of a communicating door, legs seen ascending a rope ladder, and the compass going berserk—thanks to "Aunt Charlotte" locked in the gyro room. There is a wide British audience for this traditional form of stage farce, and here the production is capable and the performances spirited enough to keep them gay.

A combined trade and press audience, found no difficulty in punctuating the screening with laughs, though the more sophisticated, quite justifiably, did not respond with the same cordiality.—AUBREY FLANAGAN

The Midas Touch

(Warner - First National)

Success and Heritage Drama

Adapted from a novel by Margaret ("Constant Nymph") Kennedy, with the only saleable name in its cast that of the English actor Barry K. Barnes, this Teddington, England, production, directed by David Macdonald, has no particular readymade sales factor. It is an economically made, talkative, novelettish effort.

David Macdonald, one of Britain's more conscientious and individual directors, has done as well as might be expected with a story which boasts but little action. The whole canvas is rather a personal study of individual ruthlessness, the central figure "Corris Morgan," (Frank Cellier), a hard fisted Welsh business magnate whose soul still has a vein of superstition. Barry K. Barnes, as a garrulous and cockahoop youngster, has "Morgan's" Midas touch of converting things to gold, courts "Morgan's" girl friend, and sees him materializing a clairvoyant's prophesy, being killed on a lonely road in his native Wales.

There is a not too successful bid for emotional melodrama.

Judy Kelly's languorous charms are not without zealous characterization.

The Citadel of Silence

(Film Alliance)

Polish-Russo Drama

"The Citadel of Silence" (La Citadel de Silence) is a French importation starring Annabella. It is set in the year 1913 and it concerns the plight of Polish patriots under the thumb of the Russian bear—The Citadel being the Russian military prison at Linsk. The film has been directed with a leisurely, albeit heavy, hand but there are two elements of the picture which stand out. The first is the acting of the two principals, Annabella and Pierre Renoir, the Commandant of the prison, and the second is its timeliness, for is it not true that a comparable situation in Poland obtains today.

In a sense the film is another prison melodrama for the latter half is all prison. The scenes in The Citadel are vividly described but ennui from the first half of the film leaves one unappreciative of the whole. The screenplay is by T. H. Herbert and is said to be taken from an actual event. There are English titles.

Annabella plays a Polish patriot, a member of a group who vow to kill the Russian Grand Duke while he drives through the city in a parade. It is Annabella who throws the bomb and it is Annabella, a nurse, who is assigned to the Russian officer injured while riding with the Grand Duke. The officer is the Commandant. Annabella marries the Commandant to be near the man she really loves. The Commandant, who married her even though suspecting her, finally kills her during a prison break. He also is slain during the uprising.

Traitor Spy

(Rialto-Pathe)

British Spy Melodrama

So far as wartime audiences in war stricken countries are concerned, a certain escapism marks their entertainment taste. Conceived and started before the War began, this spy melodrama will have to sell itself against that state of mind. Pure fiction, of the most wholehearted variety, it cannot be categorised in the same ranks as the realist or documentary productions of the day, which appeal on their photographic recreation of fact.

Bruce Cabot, brought from Hollywood to play the part of the traitor spy, has more nominal appeal than the rest of the cast, but probably is hardly strong enough to lift the film to the front ranks of international merchandise. He has in fact less opportunity for audience sympathy than the suavely spoken and politely cocksure Romilly Lunge as his opposite number. The rest of the cast are capable for the most part, but hardly powerful.

John Argyle's production of T. C. H. Jacobs' novel packs all the accredited ingredients of spy melodrama on the screen, a torso crime, knoutings, a murder or two as make-weight, colored cabaret, a fire, and just to edge off the pretty pattern, a double suicide. The yarn is a conventional piece about a traitor who makes a deal with enemy agents but puts his price up 300 percent, and holds out even under the whip and the pistol. Eventually he—and his foreign masters—are cornered, but he and his beauteous lady love prefer suicide to capture.

Shown to a trade audience at the New Gallery in London the film was received without obvious excitement.—Aubrey Flanagan.

Money to Burn

(Republic)

Family Comedy

Another in Republic's "Higgins Family" series, "Money to Burn" has a topical exploitation angle—that of contest crazes—which lends itself to campaigns directed at the same audience for which the picture was fashioned. The plot concerns "Ma Higgins" being involved in the neighborhood contest craze, the women vying to win $50,000 first prize in a dog food campaign. Sure of winning, she causes her husband to lose his job in the advertising agency handling the drive, and then finds out that a neighbor has won.

James, Lucile and Russell Gleason, Harry Davenport, Lois Ranson and Tommy Ryan again play the "Higgins" roles, and are assisted by Thurston Hall, Winifred Harris, Douglas Meins, Lucien Littlefield, Herbert Rawlinson, Jack Rice, Andrew Tombes, Gladys Blake, and Jean Fenwick.

The screenplay by Jack Townley, who adapted the original story by himself and Taylor Caven, extracts the most of the comedy situations, and was guided aptly by Gus Meins, who also acted as associate producer.

Previewed at the Forum Theatre, Los Angeles, where audience reaction placed the picture as the tops of the series. The patrons of this neighborhood house laughed loudly and long.—V. K.

Andy Clyde Gets Spring Chicken

(Columbia)

Comedy

Here is to be found some more of that particular comedy that is the specialty of Andy Clyde. Andy spies a half dozen or so girls lounging beside a swimming pool and in his usual unsubtle way makes an entrance, winding up in the pool. Andy proposes to all the girls and all refuse him until a rumor spreads that he is "one of the richest men in the country." The girls rush to accept his proposal of marriage and as they in a general melee fight for him Andy takes to flight with one of the girls, a six-footer with a husky voice, in swift pursuit. Produced and directed by Jules White. Running time, 18 minutes.

Sky Game

(RKO Pathe)

Sportscope

Duck hunting is both a simple and a highly specialized sport. You can grab a shotgun and go out to the marshes and wait for the ducks to come and when they do let them have it with both barrels or you can go to Avery Island in Louisiana, equip yourself with a couple of Labrador retrievers, a dog supervisor, if that is the word, decoys and the accepted hunting costume. The latter is what "Sky Game" has concerned itself with. To the hunters pictured here duck hunting is a highly specialized sport and they are highly specialized in it. When they pull their triggers the ducks come down. The subject is well presented and pictorially picturesque. Running time, 9 minutes.

A Boy, A Gun and Birds

(Columbia)

Cartoon

This is a Color Rhapsody cartoon with a humanitarian theme. A small boy with a gun goes hunting for birds. His dog discovers one precariously hanging onto a limb. The bird is a baby bird and the boy shoots at it, injuring a leg. The bird falls to the ground and the boy, repenting his action, pets it. Other birds swarm over the boy, but the injured bird won't have it that way and he and the boy become friends, the boy of course ridding himself—forever—of the gun. Running time, 8 minutes.

Frances Carroll and the Coquettes

(Vitaphone)

Melody Master Moment

Another concoction of modern musicalization is dished up in this current recording from the Melody Masters bandstands. This time the customary presentation of male music makers is replaced by a welcome change, a girl group of syncopaters. The tunes are snappily presented and the ladies of the ensemble are quite easy on the eyes as well as the eardrums. Directress Frances Carroll takes time off from her baton waving to introduce several vocals and there are a drum specialty by Viola Smith and a tap dancing routine by Eunice Healy.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Valiant Venezuela

(MGM)

FitzPatrick Travelogue

Mr. James FitzPatrick, whose colorful world wide expeditions have been noted favorably by all, reviewer, exhibitor and audience alike, rests in this present instance his globe seasoned camera amid the sights and sounds of the South American country of Venezuela. Architectural highlights, industrial matters and recreational facilities of the land are reviewed. But the greatest stress of the screen inspection is devoted to an historical resume of the country and, hence, the heroic sobriquet of the miniature. Tribute is paid to the memory of Simon Bolivar, the George Washington of the Latin Americas. International or inter-American relations should be considerably cemented by this latest FitzPatrick effusion.—Running time, nine minutes.

Going Places, No. 70

(Universal)

Turtles and Tourist Trade

From one extreme to the other seems to be the extent of the material treatment in this newest edition of the Going Places group. The initial sequence is given over to a visit to Beaufort, N. C., where the government is sponsoring a turtle nursery-hatchery to replenish the diminishing supply of diamond-back terrapin and thus insure a soup supply for the gourmets. So ravenous was the appetite for this delicacy that the demand exhausted the supply. But, a paternalistic government, ever on the watch for the welfare of its constituents, began to do something about such a table crisis and started to cultivate a turtle plant down Beaufort way for the restocking of the coastal waters of the southland. The second portion of the exploratory work is centered on one of the vacation spots of the Virgin Islands. From the enthusiastic praises sung by the commentator, the quizzical may harbor a doubt that there is an interested travel agency lurking between the lines of commendation. However, the landscapes are nice to watch vicariously and not so expensive as an actual visit.—Running time, nine minutes.

IN THE CUTTING ROOM

The Shop Around the Corner

(MGM)

Romance

The Ernst Lubitsch whose most recent creation was the "Ninotchka" of box office fame, has here, as producer-director, picturized the story of a Budapest shop owner and his employes. As the proprietor of a leather shop, Frank Morgan portrays a character reminiscent of his role in "Topaze."

As clerks in the shop, and as romantic leads, are Margaret Sullavan and James Stewart, together as in "Next Time We Love" and "Shopworn Angel." The scheming clerk is Joseph Schildkraut, Academy Award winner, while Felix Bressart, Sara Haden of the "Judge Hardy" series, William Tracy and Inez Courtney round out the cast.

Adapted to the screen from a play by Nickolaus Laszlo, the story reveals Miss Sullavan and Mr. Stewart as correspondents who, while never having met, have fallen in love with one another, without realizing this in their positions as clerks working together.

Additionally to the name value provided by Mr. Lubitsch is that of Miss Sullavan and Mr. Stewart, the latter fresh from his starring role in "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington."

Release date: January 19, 1940.

Congo Maisie

(MGM)

She's In Again

Ann Sothern's "Maisie"—showgirl of tinsel finery and heart of gold—here uses the wits sharpened by contact with the 42nd Street environment to win her man in the African jungle. Restoring the affections of a wife for her doctor husband and holding off a group of natives are only two of "Maisie's" additional assignments in this second of her roles as the hard boiled and wise-cracking showgirl.

H. C. Potter handled the directorial assignment here, as he did on "The Cowboy and the Lady," "The Story of Vernon and Irene Castle" and "Blackmail," with J. Walter Ruben producing as on the first of the series, and on "Sergeant Madden" and "Thunder Afloat."

Seen with Miss Sothern are John Carroll, in his first role under his new MGM contract; Shepperd Strudwick, recently of the New York stage as a member of the company of "Three Sisters"; Rita Johnson, most recently seen in the feminine lead of "Nick Carter"; E. E. Clive, J. M. Kerrigan, Tom Fadden, Lionel Pape and Nathan Curry.

Release date: January 12, 1940.

At Good Old Siwash

(Paramount)

Those College Days

William Holden, fresh from his role in and as "Golden Boy," portrays the "Petey Simmons" remembered by the many readers of the George Fitch stories of life at Siwash, epitome of the small town college at the turn of the century.

With Mr. Holden in the cast are Bonita Granville, Ezra Stone, the original "Henry Aldrich" of "What a Life"; Judith Barrett, Vaughan Glaser and John Arledge.

Ted Reed, also connected with "What a Life," as director, was both producer and director, the screen play having been written from the Fitch stories by Don Hartman, who wrote "Big Town Czar" and, in collaboration, "The Star Maker."

Using the flashback technique, "Petey" is shown as a college freshman going through humorous variations of hazing and succumbing to the college "vamp," as part of his education.

Release date: To be determined.

Oh, Johnnie, How You Can Love

(Universal)

Romantic Drama

"Oh, Johnnie, How You Can Love" takes its title from the song hit of many years ago, here revived by Betty Jane Rhodes, who has appeared in such films as "Stage Door," been featured in radio shows, including the Screen Actors' Guild broadcast, and is familiar to West Coast television audiences because of her featured roles in that medium.

Seen with Tom Brown, whose more recent roles have included appearances in "The Duke of West Point" and "Big Town Czar," is Peggy Moran, whose rapid screen rise has included leading feminine parts in "The Big Guy," "Little Accident" and "West of Carson City." Eight-year-old Juanita Quigley, Allen Jenkins, Donald Meek, Isabel Jewell and Horace McMahon round out the cast in a story of a run-away heiress and the travelling salesman nephew of a mail order magnate. Would be kidnappers are foiled, and the two realize they are in love.

Associate producer Ken Goldsmith, who served in the same capacity on "The Invisible Man Returns" and "Honeymoon Deferred," worked here with Charles Lamont as director, the latter's more recent pictures having included "Unexpected Father" and "Little Accident." The screenplay was written by Arthur Horman, who wrote "My Son Is a Criminal" and "They Asked for it."

Release date: To be determined.

The Marines Fly High

(RKO Radio)

Action Melodrama

Richard Dix, Chester Morris and Lucille Ball are here featured in a story of Marines and the capture of a Central American bandit. The latter is revealed as foreman of the ranch owned by the American girl portrayed by Miss Ball.

As Lieutenants of Marines, Messieurs Dix and Morris fight for the girl as well as for the preservation of law and order.

Produced by Robert Sisk, whose last film was "Reno," with Mr. Dix in the principal role, the picture was directed by Ben Stoloff, who did likewise on "The Lady and the Mob."

Jerry Cady, who wrote "Sued for Libel" and "Full Confession," wrote the screen play.

Release date: February 2, 1940.

Magic Bullets

(formerly "The Life of Dr. Ehrlich")

(Warner Brothers)

Biography

In the traditions of "The Life of Pasteur" and "The Life of Emile Zola," Warner Brothers here unfolds the life and times, with a concomitant analysis of what they consider the forces of progress versus those of reaction, of Paul Ehrlich, discoverer of "606," the cure for syphilis.

Edward G. Robinson depicts Ehrlich, as a doctor in the Berlin Kaiser Wilhelm Hospital some 50 years ago, as a pupil of the great bacteriologist Robert Koch, as the inventor of a cure for tuberculosis through a new theory of disease immunization, and as the discoverer of "606," at first presented and finally triumphant.

Ruth Gordon is seen as Mrs. Ehrlich, whose faith and judgment are in large measure responsible for her husband's success. In the cast, as well, are Otto Kruger, Donald Crisp, Montagu Love, Maria Ouspenskaya, Sig Rumann, Edward Norris, Henry O'Neill and Donald Meek.

Hal B. Wallis was executive producer, with Wolfgang Reinhardt as associate producer, while William Dieterle, whose most recent work was "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," directed. The screenplay was written by John Huston, Heinz Herald and Norman Burnstine.

Release date: To be determined.

Bullet Code

(RKO Radio)

Western

The 67th George O'Brien picture in his 16 years on the screen, "Bullet Code" is the first of the O'Brien films to reach exhibitors after their vote making him fourth among the top 10 in the 1939 HERALD-FAME poll of money making western stars.

Revolving around a cattleman's efforts to make amends for a crime he thinks he committed, but of which he is really innocent, the picture is based on an original story by Bennett Cohen, with the screenplay by Doris Schroeder. The former's last work was "Riders of Black River," while Miss Schroeder's most recent credit was on "Wall Street Cowboy."

David Howard, with 25 O'Brien pictures to his credit, directed, with Bert Gilroy producing, as he has done on the 16 previous O'Brien pictures released through RKO Radio.

Seen with Mr. O'Brien are Virginia Vale, here playing her third consecutive leading role in these films; Robert Stanton, Howard Hickman, Slim Whitaker, Harry Woods and William Haade.

Release date: April 5, 1940.

Mr. Wong at Headquarters

(Monogram)

Murder Mystery

First in the 1939-40 series of "James Lee Wong" pictures, dealing with the oriental sleuth, "Mr. Wong at Headquarters" keeps intact the leading triumvirate of the cast featured in previous films in the series. Boris Karloff is seen as "Wong," Grant Withers as the police captain, and Marjorie Reynolds as the reporter, while Charles Trowbridge, John Hamilton, Craig Reynolds and Jack Kennedy are also in the cast.

Based on the characters created by Hugh Wiley, the story was written by Joseph West, who, in collaboration, wrote "Stunt Pilot" and "Sky Patrol," and the screenplay was handled by Scott Darling, who has written such others in the series as "Mr. Wong in Chinatown" and "The Mystery of Mr. Wong."

The producer and director of prior features about the Wiley character have worked on this, as well. Director William Nigh's latest picture was "Mutiny in the Big House," and producer William Lackey has been in charge of "Gangster's Boy" in addition to the "Wong" pictures.

The murder of a detective leads to a smuggling gang, and a crooked lawyer who has committed three murders.

Release date: To be determined.

The Biscuit Eater

(Paramount)

Boys and a Dog

Based on the "Saturday Evening Post" story by James Street, "The Biscuit Eater" tells a story of two boys and a dog, the latter being the "Biscuit Eater" of the title. The term is one of opprobrium—meaning, in the hunting parlance of the South, a dog not worth his salt. But this Biscuit Eater is made a champion by two boys, one white, the other colored. The former part is played by seven year old Billy Lee, the latter by Cordell Hickman.

Produced by Jack Moss as his first feature, the picture was directed by Stuart Heisler, who was associate director on "The Hurricane." The screenplay was written by Stuare Anthony, who collaborated on "Saga of Death Valley," and Lillie Hayward, who collaborated on "Television Spy."

Rounding out the cast are Helene Millard, Richard Lane, Lester Matthews and "Snowflake."

Release date: To be determined.

Fourth Feature Cartoon Will Come from Lantz

Walter Lantz, animated cartoon producer for Universal, arrived in New York Tuesday from Hollywood for negotiations concerning a color cartoon feature which he is planning to produce independently for release still to be arranged. It will be the fourth feature color cartoon, following Disney's "Snow White," of two years ago; Fleischer's "Gulliver," current, and Disney's "Pinocchio," coming.

In the animated cartoon field since 1916, Mr. Lantz has created the "Oswald the Rabbit" series, and recently launched the "Andy Panda" group, the first of which was recently released under the title "Life Begins for Andy Panda."

While he believes that there is definitely a field for more animated features, no more than four or five could be released a year, because there wouldn't be enough artists to make more than that number.

For his first feature length cartoon, Mr. Lantz is considering "Jack, the Giant Killer," "Pandora's Box" and "The Old Woman Who Lived in a Shoe," the rights to all of which Mr. Lantz has secured, he says.

While in the East Mr. Lantz will confer with newspaper syndicates for the release of his "Andy Panda" character in comic strip form

RKO Offers New Stock To Creditors

RKO offered 500,000 shares of the new common stock to be underwritten by Atlas Corporation to unsecured creditors last Friday. This completes another requirement of the Atlas agreement to underwrite the $1,500,000 stock to provide working capital for the reorganized company. The proposal was approved by Judge William Bondy two weeks ago.

Reserves Right to Withdraw

Atlas Corporation reserved the right to withdraw the proposal if the Supreme Court granted any request to review the reorganization plan, if Judge Bondy did not approve the agreement by December 23rd or if RKO did not offer the new stock to creditors by December 31st. The last two conditions have been fulfilled. The Supreme Court has recessed for the holidays so the earliest decision on the requests for writs of certiorari by two creditor applicants can not be made before January 3rd when the Court resumes its sessions.

The subscription rights to the stock offered last Friday at $3 per share must be exercised by the creditors on or before January 8th. And within two days after that date RKO must notify Atlas of the amount of new stock which remains unsubscribed and the Odlum group then has six days in which to buy the remaining stock at $2.75 per share.

New Certificate Filed

RKO completed one more step in the process of ending the reorganization, begun nearly seven years ago, when a certificate of increase in corporation was filed with the State Corporation Department in Delaware raising the capitalization to $21,000,000. The articles of incorporation were filed on July 24, 1939 but then only a nominal figure was set for the capitalization because at that time it was not possible to know the number of shares that would be issued.

Claimants Allowed Stock

The Irving Trust Co., trustee of RKO, presented the final allowed claims of RKO creditors to Federal Judge Bondy on the same day that the new stock was offered so that those claimants might qualify for the stock. Subscription is at the rate of one share for each $24.44 of allowed claims. On this basis, Rockefeller Center has the right to subscribe to approximately 161,000 shares for its claim of $4,150,000.

According to the minutes of the RKO directors meetings filed in the U. S. District Court a tie four to four vote on the proposed Atlas underwriting agreement was settled when chairman Richard C. Patterson voted in favor of the plan. It was reported that N. Peter Rathvon, Raymond Bill, Thomas P. Durell, and Frederick L. Ehrman voted in favor of the proposal and James G. Harboard, John E. Parsons, W. G. Van Schmus and L. P. Yandell voted against it. George J. Schaefer, Ned E. Depinet and L. Lawrence Green took part in the discussion but did not vote.

Judge Bondy granted allowances of $50,000 to William L. Donovan, attorney for the trustee, the Irving Trust Co.; $32,500 to the Trust Co. and $4,800 to Price, Waterhouse & Co. for preparing the 1938 annual report. Mr. Donovan has already received $310,000 and the Irving Trust $192,500 for services from July 1, 1934.

Network Starting, New Unit Looms

The new radio network, Transcontinental Broadcasting System, will have its inaugural program at 10 A.M. (Eastern Standard Time) New Year's Day. Among those who will appear on the program, according to the company, are General Fulgencio Batista of Cuba, the Governor of the Bahama Islands, and the Governors of Florida, Texas and Illinois.

Representatives of 10 stations met in Portland, Ore., this week to discuss a proposed Pacific Coast network. The network would be a part of the Transcontinental system.

The appointment of James W. Baldwin, formerly managing director of the National Association of Broadcasters, and more recently associated with WGH, Newport News, as director of stations for Transcontinental was announced this week by Elliott Roosevelt, president, and John T. Adams, chairman of the board.

Other personnel additions include Robert C. Wilson, Jr., and Ralph Nordberg, time salesmen; Mary L. Lamme, secretary to Mr. Adams; Patricia Lonergan, secretary to George Podeyn, general manager; A. F. Adams, comptroller; Dorothea Henninger, purchasing agent; Charlotte Grasso, secretary to Roy H. Holmes, traffic manager, and Adele Purcell, publicity assistant.

Increase of Sponsors

The total number of sponsors using time on the Columbia Broadcasting System network has increased to 45 as compared with 33 for the same period last year. There are 33 sponsored programs in the evening and 21 during the day, as compared with 28 and 13, respectively, for last year.

The total number of sponsored hours is 27¼ for evening and 38¼ for day, compared with 23¼ and 23¾, respectively, for last year. A breakdown of present programs reveals that there are seven quarter-hour shows at night and 32 in the day, as compared with four night and 20 day last year.

NBC Short Wave

National Broadcasting Company officials said this week that the short wave international division will be on a self-sustaining basis within the next six months. Estimates of present cost vary, but they have generally been placed at $200,000 annually. At present, only one sponsor has been obtained, the United Fruit Company, which pays $25,000 annually for a five-times-a-week news summary to Latin America.

Under present operating costs, six to eight sponsors using the same amount of time would pay overhead, program and transmission costs. However, it is anticipated that additional union costs and other expenses will bring the number of needed sponsors up to eight or 10. At least half of the present 18 prospects can be counted on to sign up, NBC officials say.

Drama Leads Air Programs

Dramatic programs have risen to a new high, an NBC survey shows. Such programs now total 3,500 hours annually or 19 per cent of the time of the company's two networks. Of this total, 2,750 hours were on sponsored time and 750 are sustaining. Twenty stations have been added to the company's networks to bring the total to 181.

There were 160 of on-the-spot sports broadcasts in the current year and 90 hours of interpretative comment. Fifteen sustaining series for women were on the air, exclusive of daytime dramatic serials and three new program series will be added in January. Nearly 300 hours of religious programs were broadcast in 1939 with all faiths represented. There were 366 symphonic broadcasts in addition to weekly opera programs during the Metropolitan Opera season.

The Mutual Broadcasting System report listed their special features broadcasts in the following order: Spot news, 385 broadcasts; features, 330; World's Fair, 171; topical, 121; political, 80; charitable, 71; sports, 64, and educational, 18.

Endorse Children's Formula

An eight point formula was prescribed for children's radio programs this week at a luncheon meeting at the Town Hall Club, New York, of members of the Radio Council on Children's Programs and representatives of the National Association of Broadcasters and major networks, including the National, Columbia and Mutual systems.

The formula, which was approved by the broadcasting officials, provides that children's programs be entertaining, be dramatic with reasonable suspense, possess high artistic quality and integrity, express correct English and diction, appeal to the child's sense of humor, be within the scope of the child's imagination, stress human relations for cooperative living and intercultural understanding and appreciation.

Schulte Circuit Expanded

In the three months ending October 31st the William Schulte Circuit of Michigan has added three houses, according to the report of Allied Theatres of Michigan. The three theatres added were the Motor City in Center Line, the Strand at Tecumseh and the Bliss in Blissfield. The two last named were acquired from F. H. Guy. Other theatre changes include the reopening of two Detroit downtown theatres, four new theatres were added to Allied's list and one theatre closed.

RFC Loan Urged For N. Y. Films

Financial aid from the Federal Government has been suggested to Mayor LaGuardia, according to reports, as a method of aiding him in his campaign for Eastern production of motion pictures. The suggestion reputedly was made by unnamed trade leaders and certain New York banking interests to borrow from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to enable the city to utilize city-owned property for studios or take over Paramount's Astoria studios.

$1,500,000 Mortgage

Erpi now operates the Astoria studios with money borrowed from the RFC. The property has a $1,500,000 mortgage with interest of $30,000 annually. A million dollar loan, it was stated, would put the city in position to prepare the Astoria studios and offer facilities for the production of about eight films a year.

Eastern production was also favored by Ralph Morgan, president of the Screen Actors Guild. He said that he thought the plan had an excellent chance to succeed. The fact that plays could stay open when stars were needed for pictures was pointed out as a strong argument in favor of making pictures in New York. Mr. Morgan also said that director-producer units, such as Frank Lloyd or Frank Capra, would find Eastern production easier if the locale of the story was in or near New York.

Television Film Industries Formed

Television Film Industries, Inc. have filed a certificate of incorporation at Albany. The directors of the new company are Albert Buchter, Rose Schechter, attorney B. Robbins of 25 Warren Street, New York. The capital stock issue authorized is 20,000 shares.

The company is authorized to "make, buy, sell, lease and generally deal in motion picture films and negatives, projection machines and parts "and also" the projection by way of television of motion pictures and other objects and subjects to be used in connection with television" and to acquire and equip necessary studios to make motion pictures, sound tracks or television.

Temporary Officers Elected by Bookers

The Motion Picture Brokers Club of New York was organized this week at a meeting at the Hotel Lincoln, attended by 48 bookers. Temporary officers who will serve until the constitution and by-laws are adopted were elected as follows: Myron Sturr, chairman; Ed Susse, treasurer, and Jack Meltzer, secretary.

The next meeting is scheduled for December 28th at the Hotel Lincoln. A membership campaign is planned.

New England Assault Case Won by Circuit

Robert L. Munger, superior court judge, in New Haven this week decided in favor of Poli-New England Theatres, Inc., in the $50,000 indecent assault case brought against it. The memorandum of decision finds the plaintiff child's "shocking experience" has not been caused by either negligence on the part of the theatre involved, or violation of the statute 6282, which prohibits theatres from admitting or permitting to remain unattended children under 14.

The judge said: "I cannot see any act of negligence so far as lack of supervision is concerned. It is impossible to see how such supervision could avail. No method could be adopted that would be effective except one which would require a vast number of supervisors; neither can it be said that the lighting conditions were such as to show any act of negligence on the part of the defendant. For all that appears they were the same as those that prevail in any movie theatre."

Regarding the statute, he said: "The most that can be said is that the violation of the statute, leaving as it did a child in the theatre unattended, created a condition which afforded an opportunity for the commission of the injury, but this cannot be said to have been the cause of the injury."

Application Denied

Samuel H. Hofstadter, New York supreme court justice, this week denied an application of Rae Nasoff, Paramount stockholder, for an order to direct Joseph P. Kennedy, U. S. Ambassador to Great Britain, to testify before trial. The application had sought Mr. Kennedy's testimony on the preparation of his report to Paramount claiming that he was a witness to alleged acts of waste and mismanagement. The court held that Mr. Kennedy had no personal knowledge of any claimed wrongful acts and could only submit opinions on the subject.

Enjoin Sale of Film

Alfred C. Coxe, federal judge, in New York this week restrained Harry Jacobs, now doing business as the Garden Camera Exchange, from the manufacture or sale of prints of "Shoulder Arms," pending trial. Charles Chaplin had sought the injunction, charging unauthorized sale of his film.

Suit Over Name

A suit for an injunction, accounting and $250,000 damages, this week was filed in New York supreme court by Loew's, Inc., Select Operating Corporation and Billie Burke Ziegfeld against the Ziegfeld Midnite Frolic Corporation and Nicholas Blair. Loew's claim exclusive motion picture rights to the use of the name Florenz Ziegfeld, Jr., and Ziegfeld Follies. Select claims ownership to these names for musicals. Mr. Blair is charged with the use of the name Ziegfeld Midnite Frolic for a night club on Broadway.

Sherwood Trial Set

Trial of the suit of Robert E. Sherwood and the Playwrights Producing Company against Twentieth Century-Fox will start Tuesday in New York supreme court. The action seeks an injunction against the defendant claiming unfair competition to Mr. Sherwood's play, "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," by the film, "Young Mr. Lincoln."

Moon Suit Settled

Ray Moon, who sued Cooperative Theatres of Michigan for back salary and breach of contract, involving $11,000, this week said that the action had been settled satisfactorily out of court.

Writer Settles Suit

Samson Raphaelson, writer, has settled his $25,000 breach of contract suit against Robert T. Kane in New York supreme court.

Paramount and National in Deal

In what Paramount says may be the first step in a "revolutionary" industry move, Paramount Pictures and Advertising Accessories Inc., the latter a subsidiary of National Screen Service, last Friday, affixed their corporate signatures to a five-year contract under the terms of which Advertising Accessories will produce and distribute the majority of Paramount's advertising accessories. Neil Agnew, vice-president in charge of the film company's sales, announced the deal.

The contract also renews the distributing agreement for Paramount trailers by National. Paramount will produce its own trailers, utilizing the company's studio facilities under the supervision of the studio production staff. Two types of trailers will be produced—a "de luxe," for first run houses and a "regular" trailer, for subsequent runs.

Both deals become effective February 1, 1940. Advertising Accessories will extend its distributing service immediately to all exchange centers in order to service exhibitors handling Paramount product.

Advertising Accessories will absorb the majority of the personnel of Paramount's ad sales force, Mr. Agnew stated.

Both Mr. Agnew and Charles Casanave, vice-president and general manager of Advertising Accessories, stressed that under the new set-up exhibitors will have a wider selection of advertising accessories from which to choose. In addition to providing a centralized display ad service, Advertising Accessories plans to introduce a number of new ad sales items.

Paramount will continue to produce its own newspaper mats and press books.

New Cartoon Series

Leon Schlesinger has decided to make a series of "Canyon Kiddies" cartoons, for Warner Brothers release. The first will be "The Mighty Hunters," which goes under the cameras this week. James Swinnerton, artist and cartoonist, who originated the "Kiddies," created the screen characters, collaborated on the story and painted all the backgrounds, which have been done in oil for the first time in animated cartooning.

Open New Offices

The Griffith-Dickinson Theatres, Inc., of Kansas City, formally opened its new offices at 3525 Broadway on Saturday. Open house was held.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

BEWARE SPOOKS: Joe E. Brown, Mary Carlisle—Typical Joe E. Brown picture. Pleased the Saturday crowd and we made a profit. Joe doesn't draw like he did when he was with Warner-First National. Running time, 68 minutes. Played December 8-9.—H. Williams, Stockton Theatre, Stockton, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

CLOUDS OVER EUROPE: Ralph Richardson, Laurence Olivier, Valerie Hobson—We tied up with the local newspaper on this but failed to do business anticipated. Most timely and well received. Business only normal.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

GOLDEN BOY: William Holden, Barbara Stanwyck, Adolphe Menjou, Joseph Calleia—This is certainly first class fare but I had too much competition to do well. However, I held my own on it. The plot is original and everyone in the audience thought it was fine. Football games, basketball games, meetings and dances certainly can play havoc here! Running time, 100 minutes. Played December 8-9. W. V. Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

HIDDEN POWER: Jack Holt, Gertrude Michael—Satisfied the bargain night crowd but how can you make any money on a bargain night. Running time, 60 minutes. Played December 6-7.—H. Williams, Stockton Theatre, Stockton, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

MR. SMITH GOES TO WASHINGTON: James Stewart, Jean Arthur, Edward Arnold, Claude Rains, Guy Kibbee, Eugene Pallette—This picture drew above average and is the kind that builds good will amongst theatregoers. Played December 10-11.—C. V. Martina, Rialto Theatre, Albion, N. Y. General patronage.

SCANDAL SHEET: Otto Kruger, Ona Munson, Nedda Harrigan—Played bargain night. 6,000 feet of film. Running time, 67 minutes. Played December 13-14.—H. Williams, Stockton Theatre, Stockton, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

U-BOAT 29: Conrad Veidt, Valeria Hobson, Sebastian Shaw—This picture was played on Bingo night to above average Bingo night business. It draws account of its timeliness but does not please too well. Played December 12.—C. V. Martina, Rialto Theatre, Albion, N. Y. General patronage.

First National

DARK VICTORY: Bette Davis, George Brent, Humphrey Bogart, Geraldine Fitzgerald—Another hit from W. B. Bette Davis at her best. Did above average business. Running time, 106 minutes. Played October 13-14.—Robert Dittrich, Viking Theatre, Cranfils Gap, Texas. Small town patronage.

DAUGHTERS COURAGEOUS: Lane Sisters, Gale Page, John Garfield, Fay Bainter, Claude Rains, Jeffrey Lynn, Donald Crisp, Dick Foran, Frank McHugh, May Robson—Pretty bad. Too long and dragged out. The people cast couldn't do much with the battered story. Played December 6-7.—Alyce Cornell, Galewood Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

EACH DAWN I DIE: James Cagney, George Raft, Jane Bryan, George Bancroft—An excellent picture but this time the women stayed away. Very poor attendance. I need films that attract men, women, students, faculty, business folks and farmers all at the same time, as the town is small and the seating capacity is 750. Are there any? Running time, 92 minutes. Played December 1-2.—W. V. Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

OLD MAID, THE: Bette Davis, Miriam Hopkins, George Brent, Jane Bryan—An even greater triumph than "Dark Victory." Will do better in larger towns. Did a good business for me, however. Running time, 106 minutes. Played December 8-9.—Robert Dittrich, Viking Theatre, Cranfills Gap, Texas. Small town patronage.

WE ARE NOT ALONE: Paul Muni, Jane Bryan. Flora Robson, Una O'Connor—The hell we weren't! This designated special from Warners set up an all time low house gross for Sunday and Monday and that covers 15 years in the business. Played December 10-11.—Warren L. Weber, Ritz Theatre, Stafford, Kansas. General patronage.

SHOW GOES ON, THE: Anna Neagle, Tullio Carminati, Leslie Banks—I have been seriously thinking of getting out of the show game. I have a pretty good farm with a possibly good prospect for oil on it and that farm, with or without that prospect, really intrigues me. However, after 20 years in the business and reading some of Mr. C. T. Cooney, Jr.'s reviews in this department, I would like to present a few words to the brethren. I have been reading about the labor trouble on the Coast recently and I got to wondering, after running "The Show Goes On," what type of labor regulations are in effect in England. Although I am usually a mild tempered individual who believes in subduing the passions, and, while I am not conversant with organizing and personally do not approve of it, I would like to start a pot with a $5.00 donation to send John L. Lewis across the pond to facilitate engaging better help in the production of foreign made moving pictures. That is, if we have to run them. Played December 12.—Berman Shieldes, Texas Theatre, Troup, Texas. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BAD LITTLE ANGEL: Virginia Weidler, Gene Reynolds—Here is a sleeper if there ever was one. Just a swell little picture that had nothing but raves when the audience left. It is about tops for its kind. Do not be afraid of it for a short run. Running time, 72 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

FAST AND FURIOUS: Ann Sothern, Franchot Tone—A very clever little picture. Everyone seems to like "Maisie Sothern" and we believe, if she has the proper handling, she will become one of the biggest box office stars in the business. Running time, 73 minutes. Played December 6-7.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

JOE AND ETHEL TURP CALL ON THE PRESIDENT: Ann Sothern, Lewis Stone, William Gargan—This is a surprise picture. The audience just sat back and thoroughly enjoyed its chuckles and originality. It went over big so now I have booked it when I had planned to let it go by. It is a real look at democracy but not at all propagandish in theme. The whole idea of the film should be exploited to incite curiosity. Running time, 70 minutes. —W. V. Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

MAISIE: Ann Sothern, Robert Young—Grand little picture. Nothing big but has good story, well done. This series should be good box office. Played December 3-5.—Alyce Cornell, Galewood Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

MARX BROTHERS "AT THE CIRCUS": Marx Brothers, Kenny Baker, Florence Rice—Good picture; fair business. Running time, 85 minutes. Played December 13-14.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MIRACLES FOR SALE: Robert Young, Florence Rice—Metro's small pictures are better than their big ones. A good comedy that gives laughs, some good magic tricks and a few murders to solve. Running time, 71 minutes. Played December 1-2.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

SPRING MADNESS: Lew Ayres, Maureen O'Sullivan—A college picture. If your town is college minded, this should be perfect but our farm lads save their pennies on these types of pictures.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

WIZARD OF OZ: Judy Garland, Bert Lahr, Frank Morgan, Jack Haley, Ray Bolger, Billie Burke, Margaret Hamilton—We can run through another month with our receipts on this one. Perfect picture and delightful entertainment. This brings out those "twice-a-year" individuals. We have very few small children but they were pretty well frightened. Watch that angle. Running time, 101 minutes. Played December 8-9.—W. V. Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

WIZARD OF OZ, THE: Judy Garland, Frank Morgan, Ray Bolger, Bert Lahr, Jack Haley, Billie Burke, Margaret Hamilton—Not being an authority on fantastic dreams and fairy tales, I feel inclined to pass up the task of reporting on this. There is much of beauty in it (which justifies the color) and we had no trouble in selling it to children but just about one-half of our regular adult patrons were not present. As far as our box office knows anything about it, it's not a super-product, not because it is not good but because we could not sell it. Running time, 101 minutes. Played December 9-10.—Dr. G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

Paramount

DEATH OF A CHAMPION: Lynne Overman, Susan Paley—It has been some time since we have seen Lynne Overman and we were glad to welcome him back to our screen. It isn't much of a picture but very interesting and drew some good laughs from the patrons. How about it, Paramount, giving Overman good parts as in "Union Pacific" and giving him credit he so richly deserves? Running time, 67 minutes. Played December 6-7.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

DISPUTED PASSAGE: Dorothy Lamour, John Howard, Akim Tamiroff—Very good picture played to small business. Running time, 90 minutes. Played December 10-12.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

DISPUTED PASSAGE: John Howard, Akim Tamiroff, Dorothy Lamour—I manage to see a great many films before I play them so a report now would help more than a report later. The title might mean anything so stress the idea of a great surgeon plus the war in China. The picture should draw the arty and at the same time impress the others. It probably won't break any box office records. Running time, 90 minutes.—W. V. Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

DISPUTED PASSAGE: Dorothy Lamour, Akim Tamiroff, John Howard—A pretty good show to only average Sunday business. Too many clothes on Lamour and she ceases to draw. Give her more like "Hurricane" and "Her Jungle Love" and this gal does very much alright at the boxoffice.—Warren L. Weber, Ritz Theatre, Stafford, Kansas. General patronage.

HONEYMOON IN BALI: Fred MacMurray, Madeleine Carroll, Allan Jones, Helen Broderick, Akim Tamiroff—A nice little comedy that was all talking and nothing on the screen to see. The star of the picture was kept in the background and we saw very little of him. That was Akim Tamiroff. Running time, 95 minutes. Played November 29-30.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

OUR LEADING CITIZEN: Bob Burns, Charles Bickford, Susan Hayward—Who would ever think Bob Burns could put over a picture like this one. It is not a special of any kind but a type of picture dealing with plain working people and the troubles that are facing us today. Give it a chance. Its returns may surprise you. Excellent. Running time, 88 minutes. Played December 3-5.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

OUR LEADING CITIZEN: Bob Burns, Susan Hayward—This is not the type of picture for Bob and we were unable to sell it to our customers, although it is a very good show. This is the type of picture everyone should see but don't want to. Running time, 88 minutes. Played November 18-19.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

STAR MAKER, THE: Bing Crosby, Louise Campbell, Ned Sparks, Linda Ware—Bing's pictures are getting increasingly unpopular here as the box office clearly shows. I still say they should have left Bing in westerns such as "Rhythm on the Range," which, in my opinion, was his best picture. For some reason Paramount's top pictures have been my bottom ones with the exception of "Union Pacific." Running time, 94 minutes. Played December 2-3.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

STAR MAKER, THE: Bing Crosby, Louise Campbell, Ned Sparks, Linda Ware—Best Crosby show for some time but for some unknown reason did not do any business on it. Men don't go for Bing and they took the ladies along with them to see another movie. Running time, 92 minutes.—Don Bloxham, Palace Theatre, Exira, Iowa. General and rural patronage.

Principal

TARZAN AND THE GREEN GODDESS: Herman Brix—Played this a week before Xmas with Kenos as opposition and stores open, but it still did extra good business. It should do S.R.O. anywhere, if they like Tarzan. Yes, Jimmy Davidson, you sold us another box office hit. Thank you.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

DESERT PATROL: Bob Steele, Marian Weldon—We have played a great many westerns but this is the worst ever. Steele rides around the same net he did for two years straight, catches same runaways, same old stuff and is the dialogue bad—oh, boy! Played December 8-9.—Alyce Cornell, Galewood Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

Republic

IN OLD MONTEREY: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, George Hayes—One of the best Autry's. Plenty of action and believable story. More than you can say about most of the westerns. Played November 26-28.—Alyce Cornell, Galewood Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

IN OLD MONTEREY: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, George Hayes—Gene is just like Scotch whiskey one farmer tells us. He gets better each year with age. We think so too at the box office. Play it; it's a mortgage lifter to exhibitors.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

RKO Radio

ALLEGHENY UPRISING: John Wayne, Claire Trevor, Brian Donlevy, George Sanders—For me this will not do too well but for action fans this is a dandy. It is a glorified western when Pennsylvania was the west. If your house likes this type of film, then step on it. There isn't a let up of action from beginning to end. Running time, 81 minutes.—W. V. Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

BACHELOR MOTHER: Ginger Rogers, David Niven, Charles Coburn—This is without question the best and only from this company so far this season. Give it your best playing time and give it the works. You won't be sorry. The title is quite a handicap but I don't see what else they could have called it. Anyway, it's a honey of a show and I wish I could get more like it. The public is fed up on these serious pictures, crime, prison, gangster and war. They want something different to help them forget those things exist and the theatre can do it if they try. Running time, 90 minutes. Played December 9-10.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

BACHELOR MOTHER: Ginger Rogers, David Niven, Charles Coburn—If you haven't played this picture, book it if you can. You will not be sorry. Would like to have more like it. Running time, 82 minutes. Played October 28-29.—Harold H. Meyer, Manito Opera House, Manito, Ill. Small town patronage.

FIVE CAME BACK: Chester Morris, Wendy Barrie, Lucille Ball, Joseph Calleia—Can recommend this one for rural audiences. Good entertainment. Running time, nine reels. Played December 7.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

IN NAME ONLY: Cary Grant, Carole Lombard, Kay Francis—Good picture but not good draw for me. Women find it most interesting but most of them don't have husbands to bring in a college town. Emphasize Cary Grant to attract the men. Running time, 94 minutes. Played November 30.—W. V. Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

THAT'S RIGHT, YOU'RE WRONG: Kay Kyser and His Orchestra, Adolphe Menjou, May Robson, Edward Everett Horton, Lucille Ball—Good print, good entertainment and business above average. Plenty of laughs in this one and our audience enjoyed themselves thoroughly. We can stand more of this kind. Running time, 88 minutes. Played December 17-19.—H. Williams, Stockton Theatre, Stockton, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

State Rights

AMERICAN GANG BUSTERS: I have just recently played the picture "American Gang Busters," a States Rights picture, to a very nice business. It is one of the few "road shows" that is clean and the reaction of the patrons was favorable.—G. S. Aaamoth, Park Theatre, Fargo, N. D. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, THE: Basil Rathbone, Ida Lupino, Nigel Bruce—If an English picture does business in my house, it has to be a "Goodbye, Mr. Chips" or better and this was not a "Mr. Chips." I think the only customers who liked the picture were the kids and the colored CCC boys. My film rental figured almost 60% of the gross on the engagement. Running time, 82 minutes. Played December 15-16.—H. Williams, Stockton Theatre, Stockton, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

CITY OF DARKNESS: Sidney Toler, Lynn Bari—Fair picture; fair business. Running time, 74 minutes. Played December 12.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

DRUMS ALONG THE MOHAWK: Henry Fonda, Claudette Colbert, Edna May Oliver—This is the type picture that draws and pleases as near 100% as possible. Played December 3-4.—C. V. Martina, Rialto Theatre, Albion, N. Y. General patronage.

GORILLA, THE: Ritz Brothers, Patsy Kelly, Anita Louise, Bela Lugosi—A programmer that was enjoyed by all. Did a good business. Running time, 66 minutes. Played November 3-4.—Robert Dittrich, Viking Theatre, Granfills Gap, Texas. Small town patronage.

HERE I AM A STRANGER: Richard Greene, Brenda Joyce, Roland Young, Richard Dix, Gladys George—Fair picture but no drawing power here. Running time, 83 minutes. Played December 8-9.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

HOLD THAT COED: John Barrymore, Marjorie Weaver, George Murphy, Joan Davis, Jack Haley—We played this late but on account of football atmosphere we booked it in for November. This is one of the best of football pictures we have ever seen. Joan Davis was a scream. Played November 18.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

HOLLYWOOD CAVALCADE: Alice Faye, Don Ameche, Stuart Erwin, Buster Keaton—Color fine. People who can remember old Keystone comedies got a big kick out of it but not many of them came out to see it. Picture was milked before we could get a play date so box office not so hot. Running time, 96 minutes. Played December 3-5.—H. Williams, Stockton Theatre, Stockton, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

HONEYMOON'S OVER, THE: Stuart Erwin, Marjorie Weaver, Patric Knowles—Good picture which failed to draw. Plenty of comedy. Was played on the stage as "Six Cylinder Love." Running time, 70 minutes. Played December 10-11.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

JONES FAMILY IN QUICK MILLIONS: Jed Prouty, Spring Byington—Would like to have more of these kind of pictures. The Jones Family always go over good in small communities. Running time, 61 minutes. Played December 2-3.—Harold H. Meyer, Manito Opera House, Manito, Ill. Small town patronage.

LITTLE PRINCESS, THE: Shirley Temple, Richard Greene, Anita Louise, Ian Hunter, Cesar Romero, Arthur Treacher, Mary Nash, Sybil Jason—Although the story is better suited to juveniles, Miss Temple satisfies most of the boys here in her first full color picture. While I must agree with several of my colleagues when they say Shirley is growing up (leaving the "cute" stage), I must disagree with those who contend she is washed-up. She still posseses excellent acting ability and despite the fact she is getting beyond the "cute" stage, I think a good American story will compensate for the lack of prior "cuteness" and permit her to satisfy many a theatregoer. The comedy supplied by Arthur Treacher and the excellent acting of Miss Sybil Jackson and Mary Nash were highlights of the production. Mary Nash was such a good "Amanda Minchin" that the boys here could not resist from "calling her down" for being so very mean to Shirley. This picture will, despite the fact it contains much hokum, satisfy Temple fans and create new Jason fans. Running time, 95 minutes. Played December 16.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

PACK UP YOUR TROUBLES: Jane Withers, Ritz Brothers, Lynn Bari—Pleased the Saturday night fans. Jane did her best but it wasn't enough to carry the load. The Ritz Bros. were too much of a burden. Fox isn't giving this little lady a break. Running time, 75 minutes. Played December 1-2.—H. Williams, Stockton Theatre, Stockton, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

RAINS CAME, THE: Tyrone Power, Myrna Loy, George Brent, Brenda Joyce—A kind of picture the "First Nighters" will send their friends and neighbors the second night to see. Would like to have more like it. Running time, 103 minutes. Played December 13-14.—Harold H. Meyer, Manito Opera House, Manito, Ill. Small town patronage.

RAINS CAME, THE: Myrna Loy, Tyrone Power, George Brent, Brenda Joyce—Excellent but our business was below par. Played November 29-30.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

RAINS CAME, THE: Myrna Loy, Tyrone Power, George Brent, Brenda Joyce—Very good, although Myrna's death at end of picture was a little depressing. However, the checker didn't come back Monday or Tuesday. You guess why not. Running time, 104 minutes. Played December 10-12.—H. Wildiams, Stockton Theatre, Stockton, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

ROSE OF WASHINGTON SQUARE: Alice Faye, Tyrone Power, Al Jolson—A grand picture that did a fair business. T. Power and Faye are quite popular here. Running time, 86 minutes. Played October 20-21.—Robert Viking, Viking Theatre, Granfills Gap, Texas. Small town patronage.

STANLEY AND LIVINGSTONE: Spencer Trac Richard Greene, Nancy Kelly, Walter Brennan, Charles Coburn, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Henry Hull—A picture that would do to show in a church. A very good educational show. Many comments after. Running time, 101 minutes. Played November 25-26.—Harold H. Meyer, Manito Opera House, Manito, Ill. Small town patronage.

STANLEY AND LIVINGSTONE: Spencer Tracy, Richard Greene, Nancy Kelly, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Walter Brennan, Henry Hull, Charles Coburn—A wonderful production which drew a little better than normal business. A credit to any producer. Played November 22-23.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

STANLEY AND LIVINGSTONE: Spencer Tracy, Richard Greene, Nancy Kelly, Walter Brennan, Charles Coburn, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Henry Hull—We try to play only the best and this certainly is one of them. The acting and African sequences are perfect with sepia helping out greatly. The audience was particularly impressed by the natives' singing "Onward Christian Soldiers." Tie in with churches if possible. We had an excellent crowd against much competition. Running time, 101 minutes. Played December 14.—W. V. Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

YOUNG MR. LINCOLN: Henry Fonda, Alice Brady, Marjorie Weaver, Arleen Whelan—One of the best I have played in quite a while. You can't go wrong on this one. Fonda and Brady at their best. Running time, 101 minutes. Played November 24-25.—Robert Dittrich, Viking Theatre, Grandfills Gap, Texas. Small town patronage.

United Artists

FOUR FEATHERS: Ralph Richardson, John Clements, June Duprez, C. Aubrey Smith—This is quite spectacular in spots in the Korda manner. The photography is excellent and the color seems to justify itself. The story is rather complex and it seems to me the viewer is left too much to his own devices in determining what much of the action is about. But, as it has plenty of action, it will be accepted even by those who never find out what it is all about. Running time, 115 minutes. Played December 2-3.—Dr. G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

HOUSEKEEPER'S DAUGHTER: Joan Bennett, Adolphe Menjou—It had its moments of laughter and it tickled many of our patrons. However, I could not see the reasons it deserved such loud laughs. Played December 6-7.—C. V. Martina, Rialto Theatre, Albion, N. Y. General patronage.

KING OF THE TURF: Adolphe Menjou, Roger Daniel, Dolores Costello—Not so hot. A good picture but the stars do not have enough draw for us. Too much drama and not enough action. Running time, 88 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Universal

EAST SIDE OF HEAVEN: Bing Crosby, Joan Blondell, Mischa Auer—Swell. Bing is still tops here. Played December 6-7.—Alyce Cornell, Galewood Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

I STOLE A MILLION: George Raft, Claire Trevor, Dick Foran, Henry Armetta, Victor Jory—Entertaining programmer. Not much draw. Played November 29-30.—Alyce Cornell, Galewood Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

MARS ATTACKS THE WORLD: Buster Crabbe, Jean Rogers—Played this very late but regardless of fact did nice business. Played December 1-2.—Alyce Cornell, Galewood Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

PHANTOM STAGE: Bob Baker, Marjorie Reynolds—We had a little less than average Saturday night business. Average western with compliments from some patrons because of absense of drinking in the picture. Played November 25.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

Warner Brothers

KID NIGHTINGALE: John Payne, Jane Wyman, Walter Catlett—Good picture of the fight ring which did average week-end business. Running time, 58 minutes. Played December 15-16.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

KID NIGHTINGALE: John Payne, Jane Wyman, Walter Catlett—The very lowest half of a double bill. —Warren L. Weber, Ritz Theatre, Stafford, Kansas. General patronage.

NANCY DREW, TROUBLE SHOOTER: Bonita Granville, Frankie Thomas, John Litel—Any of these "Nancy Drew" deserve Sunday playing time. Good stories with grand juvenile troupers. Played December 3-5.—Alyce Cornell, Galewood Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

PRIVATE LIVES OF ELIZABETH AND ESSEX: Bette Davis, Errol Flynn, Olivia de Haviland, Vincent Price—A very fine picture that failed to draw. My patrons do not want the silk pants and knee britches sort of drama.—Warren L. Webber, Ritz Theatre, Stafford, Kansas. General patronage.

ROARING TWENTIES, THE: James Cagney, Priscilla Lane, Humphrey Bogart, Gladys George—An exalted gangster picture of which the public is getting tired. Plenty of action for those who want it but we feel that everyone is getting fed up with this sort or drama. Our thought is borne out by the receipts, which were a trifle better than average. Running time, 104 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

WINGS OF THE NAVY: Olivia de Haviland, George Brent, John Payne, Frank McHugh—Played this late. Was thoroughly enjoyed by my patrons. The young men, many of whom are joining the air forces in Canada, get a good insight of the glories of the flying forces. Good entertainment. Running time, 90 minutes. Played November 30.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

ALL AMERICAN BLONDES: Andy Clyde—The bargain night gang seemed to enjoy this one. Columbia seems to have a corner on good two-reel comedies. Running time, 16 minutes.—H. Williams, Stockton Theatre, Stockton, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

COMMUNITY SING: No. 3, Series 4—Really fine musical entertainment and we had a few comments on this one which is very unusual from my patrons. You won't go wrong on this subject. Running time, 10 minutes.—H. Williams, Stockton Theatre, Stockton, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

GLOVE SLINGERS: Broadway Brevities—Not up to the usual standard for this series, in my opinion, but the bargain night audience got some laughs out of it so everybody was happy. Running time, 18 minutes.—H. Williams, Stockton Theatre, Stockton, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

GORILLA HUNT, THE: Color Rhapsodies—A couple of grins but I could have lived without it. So could you. With RKO and Paramount shy in the cartoon lineup, I have a job playing cartoons each show, as I advertise. I use two cartoons at times as an advertising factor. Running time, seven minutes.—W. V. Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

HISTORIC CITIES OF INDIA: Columbia Tours—A good short but a bad print. These shorts look like washouts compared to MGM's FitzPatricks. Just fair. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

MOOCHING THROUGH GEORGIA: Broadway Comedies—Brothers, this is a real laugh and if you are looking for a comedy, don't pass this up. It's a real laugh.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MOUNTAIN EARS: Color Rhapsodies—Just a colored cartoon. I am beginning to suspect that I have a white elephant on my hands in this series of cartoons. Running time, seven minutes.—H. Williams, Stockton Theatre, Stockton, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

OILY TO BED, OILY TO RISE: Three Stooges—This is one of their best. Even people who do not like the Stooges had to admit that they had to laugh at this. Audience reaction excellent and contagious. Running time, 18 minutes.—W. V. Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS: No. 10—Well received. They always are.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

YANKEE DOODLE HOME: Music Hall Vanities—This actually embarrassed me and was so bad the audience has kidded me personally about it. There are worse ones but not many. When an audience remembers a bad one, it must be pretty ripe. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. V. Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, N. Y. Small college and rural patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BEAR THAT COULDN'T SLEEP: Cartoons—O.K. for a cartoon. They liked it a lot.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

COUSIN WILBUR: Our Gang—This series is slipping badly and this one did not stop the slide. Just fair. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

FOOTBALL THRILLS OF 1938: Pete Smith, Specialties—If your people like their football, here is plenty of it. But for our small community, this was too much of a good thing. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

GOLDILOCKS AND THE THREE BEARS: Cartoons—A couple of good moments in a fair color cartoon. The narration and sound was not good and we have swell equipment. Maybe it was that one print. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. V. Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

HOT ON ICE: Pete Smith Specialties—A short that is sure fire. Mr. Smith takes you to an ice hockey game. Some fun. Running time, eight minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

ONE MOTHER'S FAMILY: Cartoons—One of the best cartoons of the year and it isn't from Disney. Running time, eight minutes.—W. V. Nevins III, Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

QUAINT ST. AUGUSTINE: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—Average travel talk.—E. M. Feiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

ILFORD LIMITED
CINE SALES DEPARTMENT
NATIONAL HOUSE, WARDOUR STREET, LONDON, W. 1, ENGLAND

TAKE A CUE: Pete Smith Specialties—This Pete Smith voyage into trick billiard shots is tops, whether you play or not. Two signs in local pool room brought extra business. I'm surprised Pete neglected humor in expert's bald head. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. V. Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

THEY LIVE AGAIN: MGM Miniatures—Very good and educational but we are rather fed up on watching them use hypos on dogs, mice and rats. What seems to be the matter, Nesbitt? Can't you think of something else that would be more interesting. Running time, 11 minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

TIT FOR TAT: Laurel and Hardy Reissues—There are still a lot of laughs in these reissues but do feel they are worth extra money.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Miscellaneous

ALL IN ONE: These shorts always entertain. Running time, 10 minutes.—Robert Dittrich, Viking Theatre, Granfills Gap, Texas. Small town patronage.

BACK OF THE MIKE: Best of this series. Running time, 10 minutes.—Robert Dittrich, Viking Theatre, Granfills Gap, Texas. Small town patronage.

Paramount

ARTIE SHAW'S CLASS IN SWING: Headliners—Excellent for the younger jitterbugs. Terrific for the older folks. Play it as it may draw and certainly won't keep anyone away. As I run for college students, I delighted them and horrified the faculty. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. V. Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

THREE KINGS AND A QUEEN: Headliners—A fair band short featuring Barry Wood, Dick Todd, Del Casino and, last but not least, Betty Hutton and her little "Dawgie-Dawgie" song. Of the group, she was, as you might expect, the outstanding performer in the eyes of our audience. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

RKO Radio

INFORMATION PLEASE: No. 1—This is just right for me in a college town. It brought some extra business I know for a fact. This series has an excellent one as a starter. The ad libs of the panel are prize items in it. I advertise every short I play. Do you? Running time, 11 minutes.—W. V. Nevins III, Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college and rural patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, NO. 12: The Movies March On—Outstanding in their subjects. Play them. Helps any program. Running time, 20 minutes.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

NEVADA UNLIMITED: Reelisms—Interesting subject which should satisfy, especially the people in the audience who would like to travel and can't. Running time, eight minutes.—H. Williams, Stockton Theatre, Stockton, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

Bluebook School

Conducted by F. H. RICHARDSON

[Based on the Second Revision of the Sixth Edition, Bluebook of Projection]

ANSWER TO QUESTION NO. 6

Bluebook School Question No. 6 was: (A) Describe four methods of providing plate voltage to amplifiers. (B) What filament power supply do amplifiers require? (C) Name and describe four methods by means of which filament power supply may be provided for amplifiers.

Six of the answers were copied almost word for word from the Bluebook. Correct answers, yes, but not quite what is wanted. The Bluebook answer is presumed to serve as the basis of your reply, but the latter should be largely in your own wording to the end that it be evident you understand the matter well enough to express it intelligently in your own language. This is definitely a school. Its first object is to enable owners of the Bluebook of Projection to use it to the best possible advantage, which may only be done by those who endeavor to understand the problem well enough to answer the question in one's own words.

I have selected for publication the answer of a young projectionist in Cushing, Okla.—F. J. Coins. Incidentally, Mr. Coins writes, "I spent four summers of apprenticeship under the expert guidance of Mr. Zachritz, who is a contributor to your department. Upon his advancement I, to my surprise, was selected to fill the position made vacant. It was then I found my purchase of the Bluebook of Projection and consequent study had been very far from a waste of time. Instead it had been a real investment which has paid wonderful dividends. I hope you will not be bored by my attempt to answer the questions. True, they cannot reach the standards set by such men as Mr. Zachritz, Mr. Prater and others, but I dare say some day they will. After all, a fellow has to start somewhere."

Right he is! And here's his first effort:

"(A) There are four methods of supplying plate voltage to amplifiers. One is to use dry batteries to provide plate voltage for small tubes such as are used in P. E. cell amplifiers. However, this method is obsolete. Two other methods, using storage batteries supplying 350 volts, and high voltage generators, are also more or less obsolete. The built-in rectifier is the method now usually employed.

"By this method, line a.c. is supplied to a power transformer located in the amplifier. The a.c. drawn from the high-voltage secondary is rectified, filtered and supplied to the plate of the amplifier. The amplifier utilizing the power supply contains tubes of more than one type, requiring different voltages. The rectifier supplies the highest voltage needed; the smaller tubes drawing their power by voltage drop caused by resistors in the rectifier output circuit.

"(B) Amplifiers require either a.c. or d.c. for filament power, depending upon the type of tube employed. Inductance heaters usually are heated by a.c., whereas the smaller filaments use d.c. Voltage requirements are low—not in excess of 10 volts—with current ranging from ¼ to 3 amperes.

"(C) The method most commonly employed is to use a low-voltage amplifier, which supplies a.c. from its secondary. This transformer is built into the amplifier. It has a 110-volt primary. Other methods—external storage battery, motor generator and rectifier—supply a.c."

Question No. 10

(A) Why are sound systems frequently divided into many different panels and cabinets?

(B) Does such division correspond to technical differences in the nature of the work to be performed?

(C) Divide a sound system into six parts, based upon technical functions of the apparatus.

40 Millions See Federal Films

Forty million persons in Canada and the United States last year viewed the official films produced by the Canadian Government Motion Picture Bureau, according to a report by the bureau, of which Frank C. Badgley is director. The figure is for the fiscal year ending March 31st.

Twenty million persons in the United States saw the films, the report says. There were 3,160 prints in circulation in this country, and 1,700 in Canada.

Further statistics from the Bureau disclose that it produced 50,000 feet of new negative during the year, and obtained 15,000 feet from other sources. Including negatives and positives, the bureau turned out more than 400,000 feet of 35 mm film and 450,000 feet in 16 mm. The latter, the board says, was used largely for non-theatrical channels.

The various departments of the Canadian Government saved $25,000 or more last year in film expenditures, by making use of the Bureau's facilities, the report says.

The bureau's films were distributed to 30 foreign countries. Total expenses were $85,024. Total revenue was $29,049.

New York Ticket Agencies Reject Code

The Associated Theatre Ticket Agencies, representing New York City's smaller theatre ticket agencies, rejected the League of New York Theatres-sponsored ticket code, on Tuesday. The former body is said to claim that the latter should be forced to contribute to the enforcement of the code.

The League met on Wednesday to consider the rejection, and the future of the code. At mid-week, only six theatre brokers, including three major brokers, had accepted the code.

The code fixes maximum rates, for each classification of seats, which a broker can charge the public.

Max Gordon, producer, told the Actors' Equity council on Tuesday that he was dissatisfied with the code; and that brokers should accept complete responsibility for tickets through the medium of "buys." Alternative to this, he suggested setting up a plan under which all tickets would be sold at the theatre boxoffice.

Mahan Promoted

John R. Mahan, formerly salesman for Warner Brothers in Philadelphia, has been promoted to New Haven branch manager. He replaces John Pavone, who remains with the company in New Haven.

Elsa Maxwell Series

Warner Brothers has signed Elsa Maxwell to do a series of short subjects titled "How to Get Fun Out of Life." The first will be "Fun Without Money."

Mexican Industry Worried Over Tax

by JAMES LOCKHART

in Mexico City

The Mexican motion picture industry is afflicted with a bad case of jitters over the presentation to Congress by President Lazaro Cardenas of a bill that provides what many consider the heaviest taxation this country has ever had. This is a levy of from 20 per cent to 45 per cent on excess profits, those that represent more than 15 per cent on invested capital on an annual yield of over 100,000 pesos (about $20,000 at current exchange rates).

American Companies Not Affected

Some sections of the industry are not particularly worried, however, for they hold that the impending tax will not affect them as they have not yet reached the comparatively happy state of reaping as high as 15 per cent profit on investments.

It appears that practically all the American distributors will be immune from the excess profits levy as they are well below the maximum percentage set by the law for profit sharing with the government.

The tax, it is said, will fall heaviest on exhibitors, particularly the big ones. One first run cinema in Mexico City has been averaging profits of around 500,000 pesos a year. In the case of this house the tax will amount to between 80,000 and 100,000 pesos a year.

The new tax is in addition to income and other fiscal taxes that the industry pays. Exhibitors at present pay an average of 13 per cent of their intake in the form of federal, municipal and state taxes. The general opinion is that Congress will pass the Cardenas bill and the tax will become effective early next year.

Production Improves

Production is doing much better here after a considerable depression. Six features are being made in local studios for release next year.

Alfred Zeisler, director, who has worked in America, British and German studios, is here arranging with Mexican producers for the production of three pictures. Work is to start early next year.

Loew's to Re-elect 12 Directors Jan. 16

The annual meeting of the stockholders of Loew's Inc. which was postponed from December 12th is scheduled for January 16th. The only business before the meeting will be the reelection of 12 directors.

The directors include George N. Armsby, David Bernstein, Leopold Friedman, John R. Hazel, Alexander Lichtman, Charles C. Moskowitz, William A. Parker, J. Robert Rubin, Nicholas M. Schenck, Joseph R. Vogel, David Warfield and Henry Rogers Winthrop. Bernstein, Parker and Warfield have been designated proxies for the common stockholders at the meeting.

Thomas To Star

Producers Corporation of America will start production in the near future on the first feature starring John Charles Thomas. A caption in MOTION PICTURE HERALD of December 16 inadvertently listed Erich Pommer as producer of the proposed picture.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor
GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

SEVEN YEARS

The Quigley Awards are seven years old, today—seven, because the Competitions are to continue in 1940.

The Quigley Awards continue in 1940 because for six years they have progressively fulfilled their original purposes: to give the industry a closeup of the consistently effective job done at the box office, to bring recognition to the men responsible for it.

This recognition has long been earned. Awards winners have long been honored, rewarded. Industry heads say so in their acceptances to the 1940 Judging Committee. The man in the field confirms it in welcoming the 1940 Competitions.

The seventh year of the Awards finds showmanship in the ascendant. Mighty promotional plans are afoot to sell the colossals and super-colossals of Hollywood manufacture. As usual, the final job will be done by the man in the field. As usual, the Quigley Awards will furnish the same strong proof that he is doing it.

THE PART OF SHOWMANSHIP

"Gone With the Wind" is a big picture—and the selling job, so far, is bigger.

The "selling" started with the making about four years ago. The beat of David Selznick's publicity drums was never stilled from the day he turned the world inside out in the fabulous search for Scarlett O'Hara, while on the lot Scarlett, herself, was awaiting patiently for the cameras to turn. Every manner of promotional device was used to impress upon the public that here was something to look for. With the picture, at long last, ready for release, new forces of showmanship were let loose, to culminate in the unprecedented coverage of the Atlanta and New York openings.

In the number of tickets sold, "Gone With the Wind" may become the greatest picture yet made. Whether or not it reaches that goal, the campaign that prepared the world for its entrance establishes showmanship at least a jot more firmly as the main motivating force of the industry.

The readers did not wait long to comment upon the situation described by that assistant manager in his letter published here a few weeks back. There was plenty of pro and con, with everyone pointing a finger at everyone else. Whatever comes of it, it is apparent that something is to be done. An industry that can afford four-million-dollar productions can hardly afford $20 assistant managers.

A toast to 1940: More exploitation of pictures—by competent manpower, competently encouraged.

The great boxoffice picture rarely springs full-blown from camera to ticket window. Production may endow an attraction with qualities of potential greatness. The showmanship of the selling job to the public determines if that greatness is made real by the decision of the cash customers.

CONGRATULATIONS, FRANK

Long absent in other sectors, Frank Boucher returns to his old "stamping grounds" as he checks in as division manager for the Schine Bros. circuit, headquartering in Washington, D. C. Charter member of your Round Table, Boucher has often done more, never less, than his share in maintaining the high level of this department's effectiveness.

With Frank goes every good wish. On behalf of the membership, glasses are raised for the biggest kind of a success in the new situation.

Thank you, and you, and you, and you—for the thoughtful seasonal greetings and other holiday greetings, say all of us here to all of you there.

Round Table In Pictures

Well known to Washington is the 100-piece band, which weekly plays tunes for those attending games played by the Washington Redskins-pro gridders and which may be seen above right, promoted by Ray Bell, Loew's publicist for his "Drums Along the Mohawk" engagement. Lads garbed in Indian regalia paraded from stadium to theatre where they performed. Trailing the band were kids from local Boys' Clubs wearing "Drums" Indian headbands.

Vote Machine Used for Lobby Display On Shannon's Poll

As part of the campaign to keep the theatre operating on a full-week schedule instead of three days, as at present, Chuck Shannon reports a Christmas voting plan in this direction for Warners Brookline, Pittsburgh, the Round Tabler's former spot before taking over the circuit's Boulevard. The project, in effect weekly, allowed patrons to express their wishes for rebookings of hit pictures. Shannon gave it a different twist with a regulation voting machine displayed in the lobby where those interested could cast votes. An additional purpose for the exhibition was to acquaint citizens with the operation of the machine. This idea finally sold the County Commissioners on letting Chuck have the apparatus the week before Christmas after the theatreman had written a lot of official letters and had worn out a lot of shoe leather. The tiein was good enough to be carried in the downtown papers.

Vote cards with patron's name, address, phone were distributed in both houses where ballot boxes were placed for those preferring them. Cards also included space for picture choice, which information Shannon intends phoning to voters when booking is made. Names are also intended for the theatre's mailing list. Circus heralds, paid for with merchants' ads on reverse side, listed names of pictures to be voted upon. Heralds also carried space for voter's name, address and phone.

Further publicity was secured on tiein with neighborhood shopping paper which also ran a vote poll and plugged the event on front page. Trailers were run in both houses and announcement made from stage. For a holiday hookin Shannon hung names of pictures selected from lobby Christmas tree.

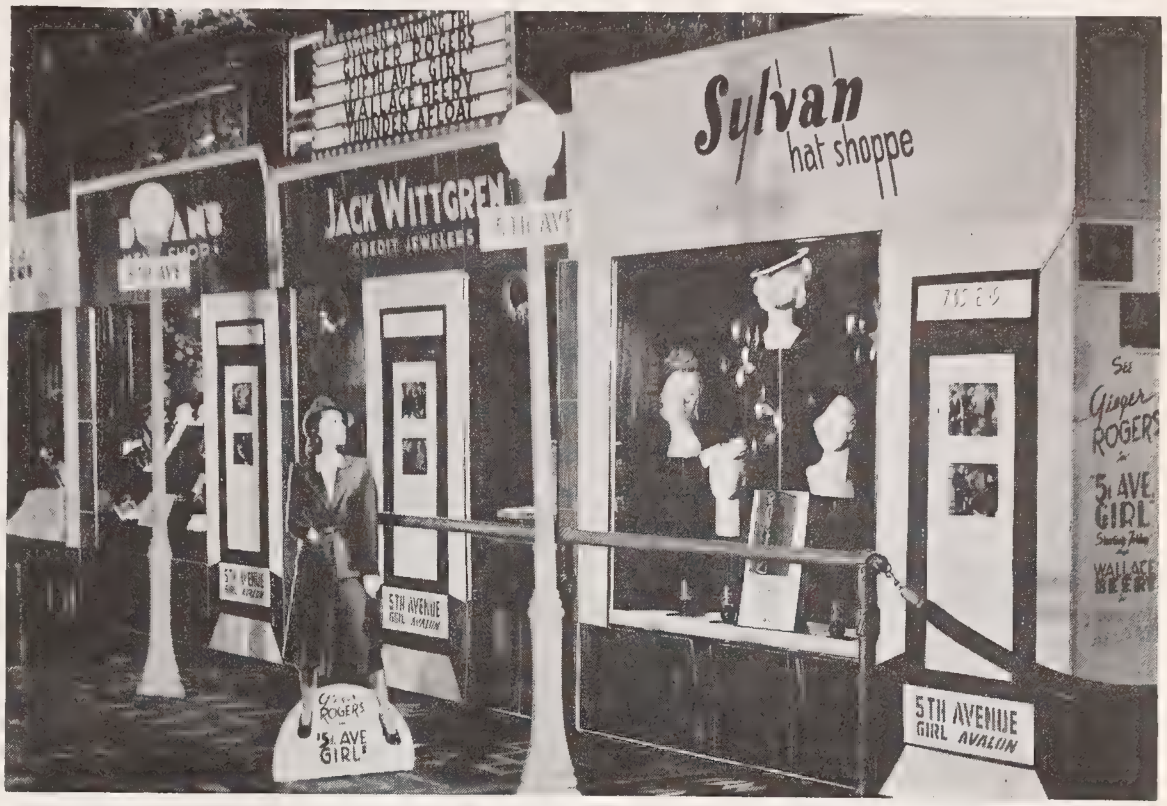
SEASON'S GREETINGS

Mayor Issues Proclamation On Forry's "Cavalcade" Date

To honor his picture, Fred Forry at the Colonial, in Lancaster, Pa., secured the cooperation of Mayor Cary, who issued a proclamation setting aside a "Hollywood Cavalcade Week." Newspapers cooperated, running stories in all of which the picture was prominently mentioned and merchants tied in with displays, ads, etc. Street bally consisting of Keystone cops followed by cameraman and director in another car, covered schools, colleges, industrial plants, football games, etc., ahead of opening. Loud speaker on trailer connected to radio in sedan played musical selections.

For "The Women," Forry tied up local five and ten on a "title hunt," scattered letter cards spelling out title were hung in various departments. Contestants had to locate the eight letters and fill in on blanks provided the various counters on which each letter had been found, guest tickets going to winners. Also featured by the store was an ice-melting contest for which tickets were also awarded to those guessing how long cake would take to melt.

Conner Ties Neighborhood Stores To "Fifth Avenue" Shopping Lobby



Playing "Fifth Avenue Girl" during the holiday shopping season, Marlowe Conner built a Fifth Avenue down the length of the lobby of the Avalon, Chicago, constructed store fronts for neighborhood merchants, who paid building costs and took space in special tiein herald on the picture. Each store measured nine feet by nine, had a window space of five feet by five and one-half. Compo cutout light poles were added for atmosphere. Store doorways were painted in perspective to give a setback appearance with picture stills mounted on the doors. Ushers distributed especial heralds to all women patrons.

English Classes Contacted For "Mohawk" Contests

With unlimited possibilities for cashing in on school contacts, Dick Cruciger, at the Columbia Theatre, in Portsmouth, Ohio, for his opening of "Drums Along the Mohawk," secured the cooperation of English teacher who announced to each of her five classes that guest tickets would be awarded to students writing the best review on the picture. Credits were automatically given as part of their class work. At the conclusion of the four-day run of the picture, the teacher judged the reviews and announced the winners.

Moss Holds Fashion Revue On "The Women" in Lobby

Reporting on his recent exploitations at the Fox Belmont in Los Angeles, Dick Moss with the aid of his assistant, Robert Rederer, arranged a lobby tieup that received considerable attention by staging a fashion revue in conjunction with the advance advertising for "The Women." 20 models were secured from local mannequin school and they paraded, wearing the latest modes appropriately tied to the picture. Another lobby stunt was pulled for "Lady of the Tropics" whereby effective display was erected consisting of tropical furniture promoted from store. Title was spelled out in bamboo letters and background showed enlargement of stars of the picture.

On "Stanley and Livingstone," Moss secured huge map which was used in filming of the picture, this planted in lobby was surrounded by palms, foliage, native shields, spears, helmets, native voodoo drum, etc., etc. While for "Man in the Iron Mask," suits of armor on pedestal, display of foils, fencing masks and jacket were featured and showmen circularized history classes of local schools and French teachers.

Rosy Plants Magic Stories For "Eternally Yours"

With a magic manufacturing plant located locally, much was made in the newspapers with feature story tying in the tricks made by the firm compared with those used in "Eternally Yours," all of which was part of Manager Morris Rosenthal's campaign on that picture's opening at the Majestic in Bridgeport, Conn. Local Magicians Society attended the performance opening night, which was also good for story. Also invited were two couples who had been wedded 50 years and gold bonds were distributed guaranteeing bearers to three hours of glorious entertainment.

For the Pete Smith short "Let's Talk Turkey," Morris created a lobby display consisting of barnyard with well, gate, fence, bird house, etc., with turkey standing on front. Card planted atop carried tiein copy.

Newspaper Coverage Garnered By Saxton for "Housekeeper"

Selling the Baltimore News Post on a contest in connection with opening of "Housekeeper's Daughter" at Loew's Century, Round Tabler Billy Saxton offered cash and guest tickets to those submitting best completed sentences on "She was only a 'housekeeper's daughter,' but," etc. Contest broke several days ahead.

Additional effective tieup was arranged by the showman with prominent camera shop offering gifts to those taking best candid shots of various scenes from the picture, Saxton following through with guest tickets to runnersup. To further increase publicity on the stunt, camera shop paid for printing and distribution of heralds and large window display which was duplicated in theatre lobby.

Theatre voluntarily picketed itself by placing several attractive girls outside house with sign reading "Unfair to debutantes, 'The Housekeeper's Daughter' gets our men," etc., etc. Baltimore Sun broke one of its precedents by featuring an eight column strip consisting entirely of Fabry drawings.

SEASON'S GREETINGS

Board of Education Aids Lampe on "First Love"

For a reported first time, the music department of the Board of Education permitted a theatre the privilege of having a contest in all the music departments throughout the high schools of the city in an elimination contest to find the Deanna Durbin of Syracuse, all of which was part of Gus Lampe's campaign on "First Love" at the Keith Theatre.

Winners appeared at the auditorium of leading department store where finals were held, with two girls tying for first place. Both were given the opportunity of singing over the radio on the store's weekly juvenile hour, this landing plenty of publicity for the picture. In addition, Syracuse Herald ran notices on the contest, photos of winners were used in the Post-Standard and of course the contest was plugged generously throughout schools. Store devoted complete window to Durbin merchandise, entire background built in style of a film with stills from the picture in the squares and cooperating music shop gave window devoted to stills from the picture tied to the Durbin record albums and sheet music with appropriate picture plugs.

SEASON'S GREETINGS

Kirsh's Teaser Gag

In small pay envelopes carrying in bold letters the word "nuts," Dick Kirsh for his date on "The Flying Deuces" at the Aldine in Wilmington, Del., inserted a card to which were pasted two peanuts. Copy on teaser card read "if you think we're nuts, wait until you see Laurel and Hardy in," etc., etc.

Civic Heads Tied To Campaign On 'Drunk Driving'

As to be expected, theatremen are developing many angles of promotion on the MGM short "Drunk Driving" which in all cases reported have won the immediate support of police and civic bodies in drives to reduce traffic accidents. As an instance of statewide cooperation, special screening was arranged for Gov. Baldwin of Connecticut and state police heads by Harry Shaw, Loew-Poli division manager, which brought about a letter for publication urging wide attendance in connection with a safe driving campaign. Jack Simons promoted a "Drunkometer" and other apparatus for driver testing for his showing at Poli, Hartford, and Lou Brown, division ad head, tied in the New England Telephone Company to arrange attendance by all employees.

In St. Paul, Minn., Manager Walter Van Camp and Don Alexander, ad head, not only planted a full page of scene stills with proper theatre credits in the local Dispatch, but also promoted an editorial plus news story.

Clergy Cooperates with Crabtree

The Danville, Ill., Ministerial Association worked with E. E. Crabtree, Publix Great States city manager, to inform all members of the showing at the Fischer, suggesting each minister announce the date during Sunday morning services. On the same campaign, Don Knapp, publicity head, promoted a quarter-page ad for opening day from a group of insurance agencies, the display including pictures of health and safety commissioners, plus their endorsements.

Patrons in Goshen, Ind., were interested in the showing at the Jefferson by Manager Roy E. Hanson by means of a full-page co-op tied to a "safety first" quiz contest. Tickets were offered for the best answers to a group of safety questions topping the page, alongside of an endorsement letter from the Chief of Police.

Wide Newspaper Support

Louie Charninsky topped his campaign in Dallas with a realistic wrecked car in front of the Capitol Theatre and included a couple of dummies borrowed from the highway department for an added touch. An extensive newspaper campaign included editorials, co-op automobile and insurance advertising, publicity headed by a two-column cut and story of Charninsky with the District Attorney, inspecting a wrecked car.

The backing of the police department, insurance companies and WCTU emphasized the highlights of Frank A. Vennett's campaign at the Opera House, Bath, Maine. In addition, Vennett secured daily stories for a week in advance and also a strong editorial on the subject.

In Toledo, Ohio, Wally Caldwell made a tiein with the police and safety council to plant one-sheets on both sides of city waste paper receptacles located on most prominent corners of the downtown district. In addition Caldwell distributed a card with "warning" copy, the heading reading "Stop, look and stay sober."

1940 Quigley Awards Announced as Industry Hails Seventh Year of Theatremen's Competitions

Policy and Regulations Unchanged in New Year Contests Starting on January 1st; Judging Committee Forming

by A-MIKE VOGEL

The swift and certain pace of the Quigley Awards is checked but briefly at this writing to make known to all interested theatremen, and to the executives who lend themselves to the judging, that these unique Competitions are to continue their triumphant course into 1940.

The date of January 1st proclaims to the industry, the seventh year of this theatreman's contest—a project that undeniably has been established by its well-wishers as the one definite outside goal to which Round Tablers aspire.

There is to be no change in policy or regulations for 1940. Due to the unprecedented success of the rearrangements made last year, the Competitions will continue as is. At no time in the history of the Quigley project was enthusiasm as spontaneous as evidenced during 1939. Quality, as always, remained high. But the single idea policy allowed hundreds of theatremen, previously unable, to join in the Competitions.

The 1940 Awards will again honor the "meat" of the campaign, the best single stunts and tieins, etc. The aforesaid "meat" may be most anything in the way of exploitation, advertising and publicity. Entries may include an unusual window display, a space-grabbing newspaper contest, front page story, series of stories, distinctive ad or series of ads, outstanding street stunts.

The preliminary periods will again be in order, which means that all entries received here during each two-week period will be judged for Fortnight honors. Then, as usual, the entries of those elected "Fortnighters" will be considered in the three-month Quarterly Judging periods and voted upon by the Committee for the Quarter-Master Plaques, Medals and Citations.

To repeat, the first Fortnight begins on the first of January, 1940. As usual, no fancy campaigns are necessary. The evidence in itself is sufficient. Do it, prove it, mail it.

The Judging Committee is already forming. First listing of those industry heads who have accepted is noted elsewhere on this page. What the top men have to say about the Awards is to be noted in their acceptances set down on following pages. More judges and further comment follows next week, as will statements from the man in the field.

The Competitions are wide open to all. Everyone starts from scratch. The man in the smallest spot gets the same break as the showman in the biggest city. It's not where you are, it's what you do.

"Notable Contribution to the Industry"

W. G. VAN SCHMUS

Managing Director
Radio City Music Hall
New York

It is a great pleasure to join the Judging Committee for the 1940 Quigley Awards, and I appreciate the honor you do me in extending this invitation.

For the seventh consecutive year the Managers' Round Table of Motion Picture Herald is making a notable contribution to the industry in bringing together the best in exploitation ideas throughout the country. This is bound to be reflected in improved public relations which inevitably result in increased box office returns. The 1940 Quigley Awards provide an opportunity which no theatre man can afford to miss.

OSCAR A. DOOB

Director of Advertising and Publicity
Loew's, Inc.

Thanks for asking me again to be on the Judging Committee for the 1940 Quigley Awards. I would have been very much disappointed if you had not invited me.

The Quigley Awards have become an institution in the ticket-selling end of this business. Your plan to focus attention on the importance of boxoffice promotion has undoubtedly become a vitally important factor.

I am hoping that the Loew managers will show up prominently again among the outstanding showmen "discovered" by the Quigley Awards. Let me know what I can do to help.

NEIL AGNEW

Vice-President
Paramount Pictures, Inc.

I am pleased to accept appointment to the Judging Committee for the 1940 Quigley Awards.

R. B. WILBY

President
Wilby-Kincey Service Corp.

I will be very glad indeed to be on your Committee of Awards in connection with the Managers' Round Table.

A. W. SMITH, JR.

Eastern Sales Manager
RKO Radio Pictures, Inc.

Answering your letter of December 12th, I shall be very happy indeed to serve on the Judging Committee for the 1940 Quigley Awards. I consider it a most pleasant duty to serve on your Committee.

JOHN W. HICKS, JR.

Vice-President
Paramount Pictures, Inc.

This will acknowledge receipt of your letter of December 11, and I appreciate very much the honor bestowed upon me. I have always felt that the Quigley Awards sponsored by the Motion Picture Herald go a long ways toward stimulating theatre grosses of pictures, and also in bringing justifiable recognition to the men in the field.

JOE VOGEL

Loew's Theatres
New York

I shall be pleased to serve on the Judging Committee for the 1940 Quigley Awards.

Minnesota Amusement Men Stimulated by Awards

I shall be very happy to serve on your Judging Committee for the 1940 Quigley Awards.

I have been a most interested spectator this year in the Quigley Awards Contest because our managers have made a determined effort to be well up among the leaders in this year's Contest.

It has been interesting and gratifying to note that while our managers have always done an excellent selling job, the inspiration of the Quigley Awards Contest has spurred them on to extra activities that have certainly reflected themselves in the grosses of our theatres.

LEON NETTER

Paramount Theatres Service Corp.
New York

Thanks for your letter of the 11th inst., inviting me to be one of the Judging Committee for the 1940 Quigley Awards. Shall be very pleased to accept the appointment.

VINCENT R. McFAUL

President
Buffalo Theatres, Inc.
Buffalo, N. Y.

I will be very glad to act on the Judging Commitee for the 1940 Quigley Awards.

NED E. DEPINET

Vice-President
RKO Radio Pictures, Inc.

Of course, I will be delighted to again serve on the Judging Committee for the 1940 Quigley Awards, and I will be glad to talk to you about the good resulting from these awards.

W. F. RODGERS

General Sales Manager
Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures

Thank you for the invitation. Be assured I will be glad to serve.

It is pleasing indeed to note that the Quigley Awards are again announced, as I know of no better means as a stimulant to aggressive showmen, and I am sure that this method of recognizing outstanding showmanship contributes in a great measure to building gross receipts.

JOHN JOSEPH

Director of Advertising and Publicity
Universal Pictures Co., Inc.

Coming from the field, myself, I continue to realize (despite Hollywood) the importance of the work done by local managers everywhere. Their judgment in utilizing or adjusting New York or Hollywood campaigns to their individual situations always has a great influence upon local grosses. Awards of the Quigley nature draw attention to the fine work done and the stimulus of such recognition keeps men in the field on their toes.

"Awards Create Better Theatre Grosses"

Cohn Credits Project for Better Showmanship

As a close observer of what the Managers' Round Table is doing in educating exhibitors to the value of showmanship, I have long felt that not enough credit has been given to MOTION PICTURE HERALD for this constructive effort.

The educational campaign conducted by the Managers' Round Table for the last seven years has done much to drive home to exhibitors the realization that a one-sheet and a lobby display do not represent the sum total of showmanship. More than this, the competition inspired by the Quigley Awards, as well as the details of the campaign submitted, are stimulating in their appeal to those exhibitors who lack a knowledge of showmanship. Finally, the Quigley Awards present an unusual opportunity for national recognition to the theatre managers who take pride in their ability to put pictures over.—JACK COHN, Vice-President, Columbia Pictures Corp.

IRVING LESSER

Managing Director
Roxy Theatre, New York

I feel it a privilege to accept the invitation extended in yours of December 11th, to act as a judge for the 1940 Quigley Awards.

I have had the privilege of serving on this Committee for the past six years, since the inception of the annual Awards, and when I look back at the early efforts, I cannot help but feel that they were feeble, and from the incentive, strength, guidance and information available through the Managers' Round Table, the campaigns have developed into a fine art.

Those which are submitted for judging are but an infinitesimal few of the multitudes of campaigns that have been developed and advanced, so that I feel these annual Awards have furthered the interests of our industry in spurring managers on through encouragement through the columns of the paper, and through the inspiration given theatre operating companies and their executives.

S. BARRET McCORMICK

Director of Advertising and Publicity
RKO Radio Pictures, Inc.

Complying with your invitation of the 11th, I shall be very glad to accept the appointment to the Judging Committee for the 1940 Quigley Awards, and also to comment for publication on the worth of the Awards in stimulating better grosses and in bringing recognition to the man in the field.

W. RAY JOHNSTON

President
Monogram Pictures Corp.

The Quigley Awards have amply demonstrated their value in building a fuller appreciation of the importance of the exploiteer and his work. You are to be commended for maintaining this worthwhile enterprise.

LOUIS W. SCHINE

Schine Circuit
Gloversville, N. Y.

I will be very happy to accept the honor offered me to be one of the judges for the 1940 Quigley Awards.

HERMAN WOBBER

General Manager Distribution
Twentieth Century-Fox

I have your invitation, and I shall be happy to accept the appointment to the Judging Committee for the 1940 Quigley Awards.

There is an unquestioned value in these annual Awards made by Quigley Publications that is far-reaching in its stimulating effect to bring out the best in efforts and results. I know of no way of developing that type of competition unless recognition is given to those turning in the best results.

RICK RICKETSON

President
Fox Inter-Mountain Theatres
Denver, Colo.

It is a pleasure to accept the appointment to the Judges Committee for the 1940 Quigley Awards.

I have always regarded the Managers' Round Table of the Motion Picture Herald as one of the most constructive forums of showmanship that we have in the industry. The awards serve two purposes: They stimulate competition among managers, develop new ideas and a higher type of showmanship. Secondly, they create better theatre grosses and anything that contributes to a more prosperous industry has a definite place in the exhibition field.

H. D. BUCKLEY

Vice-President
United Artists Corp.

It has been my privilege to have served on the Quigley Awards Committee for the past several years during which time I have observed the work of those men in the field who have entered the competition and it has always been to me a source of gratification to see the fine and intelligent effort reflected in the work of the contestants.

The annual Quigley Awards competition has become an institution in the motion picture business and is a great influence in stimulating the men in the field to greater effort in the merchandising of motion pictures.

Please accept my congratulations for your fine work in this undertaking.

EARL J. HUDSON

United Detroit Theatres Corp.
Detroit, Mich.

I appreciate the honor of your invitation to become a member of the Judging Committee for the 1940 Quigley Awards and I am very glad to accept.

I think the Managers' Round Table Club of MOTION PICTURE HERALD, and the Quigley Awards are important stimuli to theatre managers in all parts of the country. This editorial feature of the Herald gives to advertising, publicity, and exploitation the prominence and frequency of attention which those elements of efficient showmanship merit for their great importance to the sum total of the industry's function in entertaining the public.

LYNN FARNOL

Director of Advertising and Publicity
United Artists Corp.

I accept with pleasure. About the Awards, what I feel is this:

What Pulitzer is to journalism, the Quigley Awards are to showmanship.

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1939-40 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.
